PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

$5 per Year in Advance. T. W. Harrison, Editor and Proprietor. Office, No. 21 Somerset street. Printing of All Kinds. 10 Cents per Week, Delivered.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

PERSONAL.

Miss E. B. Stokes of this city is visiting friends in Philadelphia.

Dr. Comegys Paul of this city is at Chicago enjoying the World's Fair.

Mr. W. L. Brown and family of Philadelphia are at Hotel Netherwood.

Mrs. Charles Dunham of Arlington avenue started for Asbury Park to-day.

Mr. William E. Bilger of Central avenue is returned from an outing at Belmar.

Mr. Charles T. Kissam of Central avenue has gone to the Highlands of Navesink.

Mr. A. C. Yetman of this city is enjoying the breezes from "old ocean" at Asbury Park.

Miss Nellie Winckler of Park place is visiting her brother, Mr. T. J. Winckler, at Asbury Park.

Mr. Edward Van Buren of East Ninth street has returned home after a trip through Massachusetts.

Mr. H. A. McGee and family of Orchard place, North Plainfield, are at the Ramapo House, Moore Island, Me.

Mr. R. S. Miller and family of Park place and Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, have returned home from Yonkers, N. Y.

Mr. John M. Whiton and family of Central avenue start August 3d, for Moosehead, Breezy Point, N. H., to remain during August.

The Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of East Front street, leaves to-night for Chicago, to visit the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mr. A. S. Patterson of East Seventh street have returned from an outing on Long Island. They were at the Mecox Inn, Waterville, L. I.

Mr. William H. Rogers of Central avenue returned to-day from Alleghany county, New York, where his wife's mother is seriously ill. Mrs. Rogers is still there.

The Minneapolis Tribune says, "Chas. B. Brown, membership secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will succeed Mr. Elliot as Bible instructor during the latter's absence from the city."

Messrs. Andrew S. Fritts of Park avenue and A. L. Hinrichs have returned home from Asbury Park. They both attended the race meets of the Asbury Park Wheelmen.

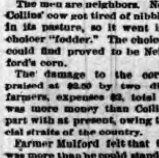
City Judge and Mrs. William A. Coddington start to-morrow for Budd's Lake and Lake Hopatcong, where the Judge will take a much needed rest. The date of their turn, the Judge says, will depend upon how the fish bite.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes started to-day to visit Mr. Frank Gardiner, the cashier of the City National Bank, who is suffering at Asbury Park, with heart disease. Mr. Gardiner is reported a trifle improved, but there is no hope of his recovery.

Ex-City Judge William E. Codington and his partner Mr. John H. Jackson, have dissolved partnership, on account of Mr. Jackson's continued illness, which has afflicted him for nearly two years. Ex-Judge Codington will continue the business, as elsewhere noted. The partnership has existed about nine years.

THIS COW PREFERRED GREEN CORN.

So It Left Its Pasture for a Neighbor's Corn Field.



VERY farmer for miles around Westfield were interested in a case tried by Justice Nash yesterday afternoon. Many of them ceased their daily toil and came to Plainfield to see how it came off. The most interested of the farmers were Messrs. Mulford and Collins. The former brought suit against the latter for damages he claimed the latter's cow had done to his corn.

The men are neighbors. Not long ago Collins' cow got tired of nibbling at grass in his pasture, so it went in search of choicer "fodder." The choicest the cow could find proved to be Neighbor Mulford's corn.

The damage to the corn was appraised at $2.50 by two disinterested farmers, expenses $3, total $5.50. This was more money than Collins cared to part with at present, owing to the financial straits of the country.

Farmer Mulford felt that the damage was more than he could stand, so he took the aforesaid cow "down in search of pastures green," as bounty until Collins should pay the money.

In court Mr. Mulford claimed that Mr. Collins' line fence was defective. This Mr. Collins undertook to prove was not so, and he produced the man who built it "thirty years ago."

Finally Judge Nash decided there "was no cause for action," and the farmers went back to their work.

Hiram Voorhees Dead.

Hiram Voorhees, a painter, whose terrible fall on Saturday last, was told in these columns, died of his injuries in Muhlenberg Hospital last night. He was a member of Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., which will probably have charge of his funeral. He was also a member of No. 2's engine company.

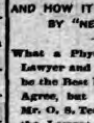
The Weather.

On Wednesday warmer, clear weather will prevail, with light westerly winds, shifting to southerly and on Thursday, warmer; fair weather.

THAT WEE WORD "HOPE"

AND HOW IT HAS BEEN DEFINED BY "NEWS'" READERS.

What a Physician, an Editor, a Lawyer and a Minister Declare to be the Best Definition.—They Don't Agree, but the Majority Favors Mr. O. S. Teale's Whose Definition the Lawyer Says is no Definition at all.



MANY replies have been received and it is not at all an easy task to decide which is the best of twenty-five or thirty definitions of that little word "hope." So that it might be done fairly, and in a most thorough manner, typewritten copies of the list were made, omitting senders' names, a copy being sent Dr. W. C. Boone, Editor A. V. D. Honeyman, Lawyer John Van Winkle, and Rev. Dr. Yerkes, for their opinion of the following, selected from a large batch of answers received, because they alone complied with the conditions:

1. Anticipating uncertainty.
2. Something to live for, and something to die by.
3. The soul's restorative.
4. Desire for good, expecting to obtain it.
5. God's solace to mankind.
6. Looking forward to something.
7. To desire with confident expectation of good.
8. Life's buoy.
9. The soul's anchor for time and eternity.
10. Inspirative—That state of feeling which exists in the heart of the dreamer as he sees his name stand at the head of the list every night.
11. The enemy of despair.
12. A delusion.
13. That which keeps a man out of the lunatic asylum.
14. An invisible encouragement for something we wish to obtain and of which we are in doubt.
15. An agreeable anticipation of the future.
16. The bankrupt's capital.
17. The soul's self cure for all its ills.
18. That which accomplishes by expectation.
19. An anticipation of realization.
20. An anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast.—(Bible.)
21. Expectancy.
22. Wish.
23. Chance.
24. Faith's sanguine weaver of brightly colored, prospective joys.
25. Delicious expectations.
26. The feeling you have when fooling around a mule's heel.
27. Life.
28. That which lessens the pangs of illness and death.
29. The lazy man's motto.

The gentlemen were entirely disinterested in the result and knew not who was the winner even when they had made their choice.

One of the gentlemen, with his copy of the definitions, made a personal and most thorough research among well-known authorities of many ages, going back even to the origin of the word. The search was most exhaustive. The meaning of words used in the definitions was also looked up, and it would be most interesting did space permit, to give the details of the search and show how far into the depths of learning we may go to find the meaning of words which are commonly used by all English speaking people in this nineteenth century.

Dr. W. C. Boone's Decision.

"I consider No. 5, 'God's solace to mankind,' the best definition, in a spiritual sense, of the word 'hope,' as it expresses the creature's dependence upon the Creator—the source of all hope."

Editor A. V. D. Honeyman's Choice.

I decide on number 8 first and number 5 second.

My reasons for selecting "Life's buoy" as the best definition of the word "hope" (from those submitted to me) are:

First, because I think it more correctly expresses the use of hope, and conveys a better idea, to the mind, of that word as a permanent source of inspiration than any other of the definitions submitted. A buoy out in the water is always in sight; if it be a bell buoy, it has to it a melody ever sweet to a drowning man and of perennial speech. It is a figure which I like, both in its conception and expression.

Second, the brevity of the expression is also of importance. All definitions should be brief, and this, to me is of great merit.

As the second choice, I like the grandeur of the idea, and, in a religious sense, it is quite correct as well as beautiful.

What Lawyer Van Winkle Says:

The greatest faults of the competitors were that some gave excellent definitions that were not original and others gave original phrases that were not definitions, correctly considered.

For instance, in the first one, the word "anticipation" means, according to Webster, "a previous view or impression of what is to happen" and therefore positively contradicts the last word of the sentence.

Webster defines hope as "A desire of some good accompanied with an expectation of obtaining" or "a belief that it is obtained."

"An expectation of something which is thought to be desirable," and to go to the original Latin it will be seen that the Andrew's Latin-English Lexicon in defining spe, which is the Latin for hope, says:

"The expectation of something desirable," thus showing that many of the definitions though correct are not correct, answers No. 4, 7, 12 and 21 being similar.

The Apostle Paul's definition of "hope," as mentioned in the Bible, says it is "An anchor to the soul sure and steadfast," consequently answers No. 9 and 20 are not original, if 16 is a definition at all. [Dr. Yerkes says that No. 20 is rather a result of hope.]

Numbers 1, 15 and 19 speak of "hope" as an anticipation, and according to the meaning of that word are incorrect definitions of hope.

Only certain phases and results of "hope" are defined in answers 2, 3, 5, 8, 10, 11, 13, 14, 16, 17, 23, 25, 26, 27 and 28 and states what hope does, not what it is.

It was remarked that answer number 25 was surely from a girl. She evidently had "delicious expectations" and "hoped" they'd be fulfilled. While No. 29 was probably submitted by some one "to the manner born."

Lawyer Van Winkle's decision was in favor of No. 14 as the best and most original.

Answer No. 5 deserves honorable mention. It was given thorough consideration but was unanimously declared to be incomplete. A person ignorant of the meaning of the word would not be clearly enlightened by it.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes' Opinion.

The 7th and 18th are in my opinion the best definitions of "Hope." The 18th is perhaps the better of the two. Most of the definitions refer to the effect of "Hope" or to something related to "Hope." The 7th and 18th more nearly define what "Hope" itself is.

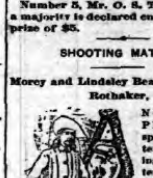
Many answers were received too late for consideration by the judges, but are worthy of mention, and possibly had they been received earlier a prize-winner might have been found among them.

30. A lamp of light.
31. A tonic for the mind.
32. The sunlight of the heart.
33. A priceless gem which illuminates the mind.
34. Man's substitute for a knowledge of the future, and the special monopoly of youth.

Number 7, Mr. O. S. Teale, having a majority is declared entitled to the prize of $25.

SHOOTING MATCH.

Morey and Lindsley Beat Smith and Rothaker.



NUMBER of Plainfield sportsmen attended a shooting match, yesterday, on the Olmsted Club grounds.

Messrs. Morey and Lindsley defeated Charles Smith and J. Rothaker in a pigeon match. Morey killed 45, and Lindsley killed 39. Smith 44, Rothaker 43. Total 87. Neaf Apgar was referee; Jacob Pentz, scorer; and Al. Heritage trap puller. Smith killed 24 out of his last 28.

SUPERINTENDENT ORLEMAN NOW.

He Has Been Appointed to Take Mr. Passmore's Place.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Street Railway Company held yesterday afternoon, Foreman John Orleoman was promoted to superintendent in place of Mr. Passmore, resigned.

BREVITIES.

—The Central will run special trains to "Eldorado" to-morrow.

—Peter Lexon, a bicyclist, was fined $1 this morning for riding a bicycle without a light last night.

—The case of Allen vs. Miller, on contract, was postponed yesterday by Justice Mosher to August 18.

—A young man was fined $3 this morning by Judge Coddington. He was arrested for drunkenness.

—The Central Railroad has issued a guide book, descriptive of the country along the line of the road.

—Justice Nash, this morning, issued summons in the contract case of Calhoun vs. Conover, returnable August 11.

—The case of Anna Fisher, colored, who was charged with selling games, was adjourned to day to August 17.

—They say that the letter carriers' "retreat" is to be painted and lettered "Letter Carriers' Rest." Vroom has the contract.

—John Lynch and John Goodwin, who were arrested for fighting on Sunday, July 23, were tried this morning. They were both adjudged guilty and fined $3 apiece.

Installing Officers go to White House.

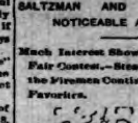
Odd Fellows held sway at White House last night. The officers were installed by District Deputy Tallman and staff. Among those present from Plainfield were: Charles W. Tallman, Edward C. Morse, Thomas Young, Theodore J. Kurzhals, Jr., Joseph Shepard, John H. Carney, Edward H. Chevely, Ely Odam and Simon Mantz. White House Lodge members were delighted by Messrs. Carney, Young, Odam and Young, with songs, recitations and speeches. They were completely carried away with "the Dutchman."

The installing of White House Lodge officers finishes one of the most successful installing periods in the history of Odd Fellowship. Mr. Tallman is receiving congratulations on every hand for his excellent work.

A VERY MERRY RACE.

BALTZMAN AND VROOM MAKE NOTICEABLE ADVANCES.

Much Interest Shown in the World's Fair Contest.—Steadfast Friends of the Firemen Continue to Help Their Favorites.



BY the way that Fireman Vroom is pressing forward, it seems that he intends to hurry some of the head men before the contest is over. He has made a perceptible gain to-day. The leaders continue to increase the total and the line is still unbroken by any startling change. "It looks," said a bicycler last evening, "as if someone is laying low for a big spurt, the way they do in bicycle racing. "Some fellow may say nonsense about and take the lead."

Alert Hose Company's favorite, ex-Chief Saltzman, remains at the head of the list and every day increases his advantage.

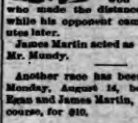
AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

Egan Beat Mundy by Four Minutes Last Night.



PROFESSIONAL racing is on the increase. The latest event took place last night between James Egan and Charles Mundy from Mr. David Smalley's house on Sixth street to Westfield and return, for $25. Mr. Smalley was starter. The race was won by Mr. Egan who made the distance in 38 minutes, while his opponent came in four minutes later.

James Martin acted as pacemaker for Mr. Mundy.

Another race has been arranged for Monday, August 14, between James Egan and James Martin, over the same course, for $10.

For Pensioners.

Pension Agent Loveland has sent out the following circular or order:

The pensioner must exhibit his certificate every time (he or she) receives a voucher. If certificate has been lost, a permit must be had from Commissioner of Pensions, and that must be attached to voucher and mailed to him, otherwise no payment can be made.

Pension Agents will take notice and act accordingly.

JUNE'S WEATHER.

It was a Month of Unusual Heat and Humidity.

HEAT and humidity reigned in June.

The following is contained in the report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Weather Bureau:

PLAINFIELD.—The month of June will long be remembered as one of usual heat and humidity. And yet when a glance is made at the readings of the thermometer for the month as compared with that of last year, it will be found that it was not so warm after all. The highest temperature for the month, 100 degrees, was recorded on June 20, and the lowest, 46 degrees, on June 5. The monthly range was 52 degrees, and the mean maximum and minimum temperatures were 79.0 and 58.7 degrees, and the mean temperature for the entire month was 70.5 degrees. Last year the mean maximum and minimum temperatures were three degrees higher, and the precipitation was 2.84 inches more. The total precipitation for the entire month was 2.33 inches. The heaviest fall of rain took place on June 26, 1.05 inch falling in 24 hours, and on nine days of the month .01 or more fell. Thunder storms were recorded on June 4, 16, 21 and 26, and the prevailing direction of the wind during the month was east. Six days of the month were clear, sixteen partly cloudy and eight cloudy. JOHN KNOLL.

A HORSE-WHIPPING CASE.

How a Man and Woman Were Lashed by Another Woman.

A New York paper this morning contained a half-column of a horse-whipping case said to have taken place at Fanwood.

After having been thrown out of their wagon by an upset a man and woman stood "patching" things up when a wagon in which two women were seated, drove up. The account says:

"Before it had entirely stopped, one of the women jumped from the wagon and sprang out. As she touched the ground she reached for the whip socket and took the long whalebone whip it contained, and without speaking a word, began to lay it over the shoulders of the man who had been in the accident. The sharp, bending whip came down six or seven times on the head and shoulders of the woman before she could obey the injunction of the man to "jump in and go." She finally jumped in and drove off. The man had been the only one to speak thus far, and when the first woman drove off he and the woman with the whip stood face to face for a full half minute without a word. Then, again without a word, she began to ply her whip, this time on the man.

After he had done so she desisted, and with a final "Oh!" turned and stepped into her buggy. The man in the case said he lived in Parkway. This was the only attempt that the woman with the whip was his wife, he went to the depot and took a train.

16,000 ON THE BLACK LIST.

Meeting of the Business Men's Retail Protective Association.

The Business Men's Retail Protective Association of New Jersey held their semi-annual meeting in Newton, Sussex county, last Wednesday. J. W. Beach of Jersey City, presided. The secretary reported that there was a branch of the association in nearly every city and town in the State, and there were delegates present from every association. He also reported that there are on the black list of the association the names of 16,000 people who do not pay their bills and are known as "dead beats."

The Legislative Committee was instructed to renew the fight on the Widows' Property bill at the next session of the Legislature and try and secure its passage.

Peal Agrees to Pay Up.

Before Justice Mosher, the case of Cooper, vs. Peale came up this morning. The suit was brought by Cooper to recover $8.50 owed him by Peal. Lawyer Hance appeared for Mr. Cooper. As Mr. Peal promised to pay the amount claimed and the costs of court, the suit was dropped.

Had to Finish Their Journey on Foot.

Sunday Thomas Burns and Johnson Barber hired a tandem bicycle to ride to Florida Grove. When about a mile this side of the Grove, the "head" of the machine broke, and the riders were compelled to walk the remainder of the way. They came home by train yesterday.

Mr. Fosgate Discontinued his Suit.

When the case of Fosgate vs. Smith was called this morning by Judge Coddington, Lawyer Walter L. Hetfield, counsel for Mr. Fosgate, moved that the suit be discontinued. The Judge discharged the jury and the action was discontinued.

Afraid of Lightning.

Many people become greatly frightened at the sound of thunder, or the sight of a vivid flash of lightning. Many ladies become hysterical, and nervous people have been known to get violent headaches from the shock. The actions of "brave people" at the first way to frisk on such occasions are very often ridiculous and tend to make cowards of children who might be easily trained not to lose their heads if they were but shown a good example. Nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of every thousand the thunder storms pass by without the electrical bolts having struck within miles of the frightened person. If there really was any disaster the persons who do not use their will power to keep cool and sensible, would be the very ones who would run about like "chickens with their heads off" and be the most injured.

In a thunderstorm the damage is done before the person has time to get frightened, for the wrapping a blanket about one's head, or rushing into a dark closet, does not prevent the next flash from striking Mother Earth somewhere.

Lightning is very beautiful to look at, and if half the frightened people would stand at a window during the next storm and watch its antics they would get over their unreasonable fright.

A horse that becomes frightened easily is worthless. It can be cured by being made accustomed to the "fearful object" to which it afterwards gives no notice.

Takes Advantage of the Sixty-Day Clause.

The Dime Savings Bank of this city decided yesterday to take advantage of the sixty-day clause in the law and notified during the afternoon, some to draw money for use in business, and several to draw money for use, but were refused payment. This action was brought about by the action of some of the New York Savings Banks, for over 30 days there has been an uneasiness among depositors, and it was deemed best to stop all chance of a run.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Schools of Forestry In Europe.

In nothing can the old world teach the new more effectively than in the care of forests. Before it was too late Europe learned that if her woods were all cut away the rivers and streams would dry up and the earth would become a barren waste unfit to raise even sagebrush. So in time the governments took action. In Italy the laws are so strict that a man cannot cut down a tree upon his own farm without permission from the government inspector.

Forestry laws of some kind we must come to in America. We must in particular save untouched the wooded heights around the sources of streams. Certainly, too, in time we shall have something which resembles the schools of forestry in Europe. It is a matter for either the state governments, the United States government, or both, to take in hand.

Austria-Hungary has a well perfected system of forest preservation and of training in the science of forestry. Thanks to these, 29 per cent of her area is still in woodland, though this region has been settled since the beginning of modern history. Forest supervision in the empire is under control of the minister of agriculture. A whole army of foresters, professors, guards and inspectors is under him. They must be regularly trained for their places, and when once they are admitted to the service promotions follow as in the army.

There are three grades of forestry schools—primary, middle and a university. The would be forester studies through the whole course in each as if he were fitting himself for the profession of law in America. In Germany forestry education is considered so important that 6½ years are spent in the course of study before the student is considered a competent professor of his science. In Italy the forestry course is three years. The branches of study in various European schools are mentioned in The New England Magazine by Henry Lambert. In Austria—

The course of study includes mathematics, geometrical exercises, field engineering, measuring of wood, cut and standing, of earth and excavations, drawing, natural history, geology, mineralogy, zoology and game as distinguished from other animals. The practical work includes felling timber, numbering and piling it, planting and replanting forests, draining, protection against insects and fires, charcoal making, sawing lumber and hunting. The forest laws must be studied, and the most important committed to memory. Students are also taught the use and value of all building materials and kinds of forest roads, also surveying the banks of streams and similar work.

Just what is a policeman's duty as a witness at the trial of a person whom he has arrested is an interesting question at present. Naturally it seems that after a policeman arrests an individual and takes him to prison the officer's duty is done, unless he is called on to give evidence in court. In that case it is his place to give his testimony neither for nor against the prisoner, so far as his own personal feeling goes. He has no more interest personally in convicting an arrested man than the state's attorney has. But in many recent cases, notably that of Miss Borden, the police seemed determined to prove the individual guilty. In several instances they have raked up the person's past record during most of his life and assured the court that he has committed other misdemeanors, implying, so to speak, that a man who would steal a horse would certainly also commit a murder. It is not right. It is deceit. It is the court's business to prove the prisoner guilty if he is so. The police have no right to take a hand in trying a prisoner.

Some technical purists are calling the turn on people who say "the United States is a nation," alleging that it is bad grammar, and that we should say "the United States are a nation." Well, we won't do it. The United States is one country—one and indissoluble—and it is altogether proper to use the singular verb after the nominative "United States." You can think of it as a collective noun, if you wish, and ease your grammatical conscience in that way, but the United States is our country. Those purists would like to have us say "those molasses" probably.

There is one point that ought to weigh very seriously in all considerations of annexing or not annexing Hawaii. That is, that if these islands should pass into the hands of any other nation, as they certainly will do if the provisional government now established there loosens its grip, then the United States would have no naval or coaling station at all in that part of the Pacific over which the great lines of traffic pass. Another nation would certainly take away from us Pearl river harbor on the island of Oahu, which is now ours under treaty with Hawaii.

The rooster that lays eggs is on his rounds again. He was in Georgia when last heard from. He is probably hunting that Ohio cow which gives black milk. The oddest thing about these stories is that there are people who believe them.

Have you read President Cleveland's last speech? If not, here it is: "Applicants for office will only prejudice their progress by repeated importunity and by remaining in Washington to await favor."

What the Pope Has to Say to the Nations.

WHEN STRIKES ARE JUSTIFIABLE

The Encyclical Deals Largely With the Social Problem—Men Have a Right to Property and a Right to Work—Advice to Representatives of Capital and Labor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The World print today the following from Rome:

The pope has been engaged for some months upon an encyclical to all the rulers in Christendom.

As previous encyclicals have shown, his holiness has the labor question very near to his heart. He has long had a lively hope that before the end of his pontificate he could be instrumental in bringing about a better condition of the masses of the people and a friendlier feeling between the capitalist and the operative. It is said that this encyclical will be sent to each of the various Christian powers in the language of that power, and not to all in Latin.

Among other things the pope says: Property is an essential element to social order for the preservation and development of human life, and the divine law has declared property sacred and inviolable—"cursed be he who removeth his neighbor's landmark."

But the poor have, nevertheless, a right to be assisted by the rich, not by indiscriminate almsgiving, but by preparing such employment for them as will be useful. "If a man will not work, neither shall he eat." But if he have no work it is plainly the duty of those who can do so to provide it for him.

This legitimatizes property. No so called right has any sanction if not sanctioned by God, and no usurpation of others' rights can expect the blessing of heaven.

The Social Question.

The social question should be placed on a religious basis if we would obtain at once a philosophical and a practical solution of the difficulty. The divine decree is that man shall eat bread by the sweat of his brow, and the apostolic injunction declares that if a man will not work neither shall he eat.

A strike can be justified only as a means of defense, when an individual's interest is attacked. Never can it be justified as a collective arm of aggression.

Man has a natural right to live and to work. As a means of procuring a living he has a right to remove every obstacle to his work and to get the value of his labor. And therefore when his labor is neither productive nor remunerative he has a right to refuse to continue it.

But an individual right cannot be transformed into a collective right, nor can an arm of defense be changed into an arm of aggression to cause a means of good to degenerate to a means of harm. Such aggressive strike is not reciprocal between operative and operative, but an instrument of attack upon the proprietor and property.

The operator on strike is a passive and dominated instrument, not an intelligent and free being. While his action lessens the capital of the employer it puts no money in his own pocket.

The struggle against illegal coercion is one of the glories of the Catholic church and this, as well as the welfare of the people, should always be uppermost in the minds of every government.

If the discontented operative is to be detached from anarchic socialism, his wants must be understood by his rulers, who must not leave to unscrupulous agitators the monopoly of social reform.

Nor should it be forgotten that many who range themselves under the banner of socialism repudiate everything illegal in the programme of anarchy, seeking only those things which regard the resolving of the urgent difficulties of economical and political reform, demanded by the exigencies of society. The chaff must be separated from the wheat and just demands must be satisfied if a still more terrible upheaval is to be avoided.

Anarchy Threatens Us.

Nor should this danger be considered improbable when we see the rapid strides anarchic socialism is making. The demonstrations which have taken place and the tumults and riots which have followed are most grave symptoms of the situation and call for the serious attention of the most astute economists and lawmakers, who must acknowledge that democratic socialism has ripened into a power of which it is necessary to take count, and in the face of which it is incumbent to adopt wise and prudent tactics in order to bring about continuously those economic reforms which are favored by equity, justice, mercy and religion.

The right of protecting the operative, whether in the factory or in the field, should be admitted. And for this purpose the maximum of labor as well as the minimum of labor should be fixed. The hours of labor should be arranged, giving due attention to days of rest and abstention from labor.

Institutions should be founded and maintained for the sick, the old, the feeble and for those who are unavoidably unoccupied, while punishment should be meted out to the drones of society.

Laws have been made almost universally for the protection of women and children laboring in factories and elsewhere, but in how many cases have those laws been enforced? Inspectors of work should be appointed everywhere, whose duties should be to see that these laws are not infringed.

Thus the blessing of heaven would rest upon nations, and a more calm and equitable state of things might be expected.

Found a Dead Stowaway.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The steamer Pawnee, which arrived from Georgetown, S. C., via Wilmington, N. C., reports finding the dead body of a negro stowaway in the port coal bunkers. He was buried at sea.

Certificates Amounting to $27,972,000 Out.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The total outstanding issue of clearing house certificates has now reached $27,972,000. This is the largest amount ever put into circulation, beating the records of 1873 and 1890.

A Shoe Firm Assigns.

AMESBURY, Mass., Aug. 1.—The Amesbury Shoe company has made an assignment to its treasurer and George E. Gale, cashier of the Amesbury National bank.

Plate Glass Workers' Strike Ended.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 1.—The Irwin plate glass strike is ended. The old men agreed to go to work at a 5 per cent reduction.

FRENCH DIPLOMACY.

How England Is Quiet, France Will Bring Siam Sharply to Terms.

BANGKOK, Aug. 1.—The uneasiness among the people here, far from lessening is increasing. Seven more French gun boats have arrived at Kok-si-Chang, making a total of 13 now there. The intentions of the French are awaited with fear and apprehension.

Rear Admiral Humann, commanding the French squadron, has issued a second blockade notice, to take effect three days from Saturday. He will order the British warships Palias and Swift, mowing lying off Bangkok to go outside the blockade limits. M. Pavie, the French minister resident, has gone to Saigon, and Rear Admiral Humann is under direct orders from Paris. Unless the French government is opposed quickly, an attack on Bangkok seems certain. The trading community is surprised that Humann is still allowed a free hand.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—The ambiguous tone of the cabinet council in accepting Siam's surrender has excited much comment. It is generally understood that this tone was adopted for the purpose of soothing later national susceptibilities. It is stated on high authority that France intends to take decisive steps to insure Siam's carrying out the terms of the ultimatum. The blockade of the Siamese coast will be continued, it is said, until France's demands are satisfied. The French naval force present in Siamese waters is believed to be sufficient to make the blockade effective.

A prominent Paris merchant, who owns warehouses in Bangkok, in an interview expressed the opinion that decisive action is necessary to restore the prestige which France enjoyed in Siam after the adoption of the commercial treaty of 1893. French trade has recently declined heavily, he said, in consequence of English and German encroachments and intrigues to destroy French influence.

He believed that the strong tone of the ultimatum would tend greatly to restore the influence of France in Siam.

The general opinion here is that the issue of the controversy is a triumph for French over English diplomacy. It is believed in the diplomatic circle that there will be no disagreement between France and England in the delimitation of the frontier. It is also believed that China will adopt her customary course and not meddle with the matter.

Labor Fight on the Lumber Docks.

ASHLAND, Wis., Aug. 1.—The trouble between the union and nonunion men at the lumber docks in this city culminated in a fight, in which a number on both sides were injured. The union men attacked the Shores' dock, which was guarded by the chief of police, sheriffs and deputies. A fierce fight resulted, in which a number of the union men were badly clubbed and one shot, but not fatally. The men finally succeeded in reaching the boats and put the nonunion men to rout. About 20 of them were arrested on charges of rioting. Immediately after dinner the proprietors of the different sawmills headed by Cochrane, Alderman Payne and ex-Mayor Durfie, went to the Shores' mill and began assisting Shores to load the lumber on his boat. It was a curious sight to see rival lumber mill owners shoving lumber, and the striking union men made no attempt to molest them. It is feared that the man who was injured in the riot will die. His assailant has been held.

A Tornado Broke the Drought.

WHEELING, Aug. 1.—The long drought which has prevailed throughout this section of the state was broken by a terrific thunder and rain storm which swept over the entire region from west to east. Over 500 telephones were burned out in this city. At Caldwell, O., a few miles from here, there was a waterspout which was followed by a terrible tornado which accompanied the rain. The handsome Presbyterian church was completely wrecked. The steeple fell across the street, crushing into the residence of James Kannells, wrecking it. The Noble County National bank building was also wrecked. The opera house, a newspaper office and several other buildings were badly damaged.

Veterans Denounce Hoke Smith.

LANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 1.—Seventeen Grand Army posts of Lancaster county met here and speakers denounced Secretary Hoke Smith in severe terms. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the policy he is pursuing on the pension question and calling a halt on his methods. The action of the meeting will be presented at the approaching national encampment in Indianapolis.

The Colonia Getting Into Trim.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The cup defender Colonia, from Rogers' syndicate boat, returned from Newport. She will go on the drydock in the Erie basin for a thorough overhauling before meeting the Vigilant and other cracks in the trials that will decide which of the new vessels will have the honor of defending the America's cup.

The Cholera In Naples.

ROME, Aug. 1.—The government still suppresses telegrams concerning the cholera in Naples. The truth is known despite municipal co-operation in denying the facts. Probably the situation is far worse than has been reported, especially in view of the notoriously unsanitary condition of the city.

Cremated the Tramp Too.

LAFONT, Ind., Aug. 1.—A barn on the farm of Simeon Benton was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $40,000. Nine horses were cremated. A tramp, who is believed to have fired the building for revenge, was smothered by the smoke and his body was burned.

Waterspout Had Torn Away the Track.

MONCLOVA, Mex., Aug. 1.—A wreck occurred on the Mexican International railroad near Monclova station. A waterspout had washed away several rods of track, and the east bound passenger train dashed into the gap.

Riot at the Mines.

DULUTH, Aug. 1.—A riot is in progress at the mining town of Virginia in the Mesaba range, and four ringleaders are in jail. The trouble is believed to be caused by delay in payment of wages at the Franklin mine.

The Maharajah at Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 1.—The Rajah of Kapurthala, India, with one of his wives and a suite of attendants, arrived here. They go to Chicago on Wednesday.

Iron Strike Continues.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—The iron strike continues, with more enthusiasm on the part of the workers, as a result of the Youngstown meeting.

Phonograph Works Reducing Hands.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 1.—The Edison Phonograph works are reducing their force. The works are almost completely shut down.

SILVER MEN WELCOMED

Mayor Harrison Greets Them When the Convention Opens.

THEY ARE VERY MUCH IN EARNEST

With One Purpose In View, the Boosting of Silver, the Pastime Are Likely to Be Harmonious—Plenty For a Big Crusade.

A Secret Movement.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—The national silver convention is now in full blast. It was called to order by Hon. A. J. Warner, and a speech of welcome was made by Mayor Carter Harrison. The business of the convention was then taken up in earnest.

Those who expected the convention to go to pieces on the shoals of partisanship underestimated the deep feelings that actuate most of the delegates. Populist, greenbacker and the free silver man seem to be united on one programme—that the repeal of the Sherman purchasing act must be insisted to the last unless there be coupled with it an act for the free coinage of silver or for a greater volume of currency.

The greenbacker and the Populist, who believe that the fiat of the government is as potent to make a dollar out of a strip of green paper as it is to make a dollar of 70 cents of silver, are of course not particular whether the legislation to be substituted for the Sherman act shall be free coinage or government greenbacks, but for the sake of showing a solid front against the common enemy, the monometallist, they will unite with the free coinage men in concerted resistance to the Cleveland policy unless a greater volume of currency is provided to meet the stringency of the financial situation.

In this programme are found united the Republican congressman, Bartine of Nevada, the ex-state Silver Dollar Mayor of Ohio, the Populist Kolb of Alabama and all their respective followers, and their name is legion.

The Silver Men's Programme.

It is apparent even now that the work of the convention is not to end with the sine die adjournment of Wednesday. Anyone give committee will be appointed to carry the fight to Washington and state committees will be named to work up public sentiment in the various states. Then a campaign committee is to be named and to this committee is likely to be intrusted what is really the most important work of the free silver crusade. Its work will be secret, and it is expected it will labor to enlist the assistance of the unemployed everywhere. Mass meetings nightly for all the weeks to come during the Summield trials are to be held by the unemployed and poverty stricken in every city of the land, and resolutions are to be there presented and a petition drifting upon congress to pass a free coinage bill.

This is to be followed by another important move. The proselyting of labor leaders is to be undertaken by the silver men, and thosesilver men, who well know how subservienlty the average political demagogue bends the knee to the demands of power, will approach the labor men and lawmakers who passed the alien labor law and the Chinese exclusion bill to hearken to the voice of the people and demand the volume of circulating medium until the wants of the country are relieved.

They Are Crusaders.

It is to be a great moral crusade, a wakening of the American people to the popular demand becomes so strong that "the voice of the people will be stronger than the voice of gold," the Populist puts it. The men who are behind the free silver fight are in earnest, and their members and the marked personality and intelligence of most of their leaders give it greater significance to the gathering than that attending any similar convention in the past. Over 1,000 delegates assembled for deliberation at the New Tacoma hotel, a national convention.

Some of the most prominent men in the convention are ex-Senator Thomas M. Patterson, General Warner, Senator Lee Mantell of Montana, Senator George Shoup of Nevada, Congressman Willis Sweet of Idaho, Senator William M. Stewart of Nevada, Congressman Marion Cannon of California, Colonel Sumpter Lee of Alabama, Senator Dubois of Nevada, Congressman W. W. Bowers of California, Captain R. F. Cobb, Colonel P. J. Bowman, Warren Reese, A. T. Goodwin and Zell Gaston of Alabama, Herman T. Aubenock of Illinois, chairman of the Utah delegation and national executive committee; George F. Washburn of Massachusetts, Congressman Bartine of Nevada, Governor Toole of Montana and ex-Governor Routt of Colorado.

Sherman Law Not Complied With.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—For the first time since the passage of the Sherman silver law the treasury this month failed to buy the full quota of 4,500,000 ounces of silver. The total purchases for the month was 2,986,000 ounces, leaving a shortage 2,114,000 ounces.

The silver men indicate a purpose to precipitate a silver discussion on the first working day of the extra session of congress by a resolution of inquiry as to whether or not the secretary of the treasury has not exceeded his authority in refusing to purchase 4,500,000 ounces of silver in July as provided by the Sherman law.

Cotton Mills Close.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Aug. 1.—Lawrence now feels the first blow of the business depression. Notices were posted in the Atlantic cotton mills stating the entire mills will close next Saturday for a month or "until the market brightens." The Atlantic mills employ 1,200 people and had a weekly payroll of $9,000.

SILLY RUNS ON BANKS.

New York Savings Institutions Crowded With Depositors.

WOMEN WANTED THEIR MONEY

People With Small Sums Got Scared and Hastened to the Banks to Get Their Savings—Foreigners Were Hard to Reason With—Some Did Not Like to Take Gold.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—As all of the banks have an unusual number of nervous depositors with their money. More than three-quarters of these are women. At the east side banks, where the depositors are mostly foreigners, the run is heaviest.

There is no alarm among the savings banks officials over the situation. They all declare that they are more than able to meet with their cash balances the demands that will now be made upon them. They expect that the excitement among the ignorant depositors will subside by the end of the week at least.

This confidence on their part is warranted by the actions of depositors at the banks. At many of the banks the amount of money paid in did much to offset what was drawn out. At one of the largest banks the amount deposited was almost one-half as large as the amount drawn out.

So far as known, all the savings banks in the city except two or three put the time clause into effect before the day closed.

There were strange scenes around the banks during the day. At the Emigrant Industrial Savings bank, in Chambers street, there was a crowd of from 300 to 400 depositors all day. The great majority of them were women, and a very large percentage of them were Italians. The bank had not availed itself strictly of the time clause, but they paid the small depositors in full.

They Objected to Gold.

At this bank, as at all the others, the officers had clerks out among the depositors explaining to them the foolishness of their fright, and these emissaries induced scores of those who had come to get their money to go away without it. All those who insisted on drawing as much as they could were paid half in greenbacks and half in gold. It was a somewhat remarkable fact that nearly all objected to the gold and asked that it be exchanged for the paper money.

At the Franklin Savings bank on Eighth avenue the crowd of depositors who wanted to withdraw their money was very large. The time clause had there been posted. President Archibald Turner said that he thought the excitement would all be over in three days. He said as it was confined only to the poorer and more ignorant depositors.

The Broadway Savings institution, the Irving Savings institution and the East River bank had only about 12 time notices served upon them and no great rush of people at any time during the day. The Harlem Savings bank had a crowd, but the drafts exceeded the deposits for the day to the amount of only $18,000. Everybody was accommodated with all the money he wanted if he could show a good reason for withdrawing it.

How a Run Started.

There was published in a Jewish paper on Saturday morning that the "Neb. State bank," meaning the Nebraska State bank, had closed its doors. This caused a senseless run on the State bank at 378 Grand street, which was busy all day.

The Polish and Russian Jews, who are the depositors in the Grand street State bank, do not know what "Neb." meant. They came to the conclusion that it was a typographical error and that the bank referred to was their bank, and when it was opened there was a rush of depositors to draw out their money. It was impossible to reassure them, so the officers simply paid out every account that was called for and refused to stand a run.

About all of the Brooklyn savings banks insisted on the rule requiring notice of the withdrawal of deposits, but only in case of demands for over $200, and smaller sums were paid out freely.

There were crowds before the windows of nearly all the banks when they opened for business, but there was no evidence of panic. There were complaints heard of the enforcement of the 30 day notice rule, but there was very little excitement, and the special policemen who were detailed at the banks had nothing to do but to keep people in line.

PEARY'S HARD LUCK.

Had Difficulty In Getting Dogs and May Be Frozen In Next.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Aug. 1.—Mail news of Lieutenant Peary and his expedition received from Labrador is very unsatisfactory. The Falcon arrived at Battle Harbor on July 16 after a very rough and dangerous passage from St. John's. She was swept by heavy seas, which did considerable damage.

Lieutenant Peary spent two days at Battle Harbor to enable him to repair damages and to give his animals a chance to recuperate. While there he tried to purchase dogs, but failed. He then sailed for Turnavik. Exorbitant prices were asked for dogs there, so the lieutenant decided not to purchase. He visited Hopedale next, and there the same thing happened.

While at Hopedale he contemplated killing his donkeys. He intended to visit the more northern ports of Labrador for the purpose of getting dogs, though the delay would seriously endanger the success of his plans.

It is now considerably after the time when he should have sailed for Greenland with good prospects of success. The season is getting late, and the chances are that he will be unable to reach Bowdoin bay, and the summer may be frozen in and he unable to get clear until next year.

"It is the mind that makes the man," said Watts, but modern ethics deny this, and give the credit to the tailor. It is questionable, however, if either are right.

Food has some claims in this respect, therefore those parents who would build up the physique of their children pay strict attention to their diet. Children are all fond of pastry; for this to be healthfully prepared, must be used as a shortening. It is Recommended by the best Cooks.

COTTOLENE

Consult your physician upon its healthfulness.

What Randolph's Glycerole of Arnica IS

and What It Will Do

GLYCEROLE OF ARNICA is a liquid preparation scientifically prepared, a beautifier per se, and not a cosmetic, as it is NOT a powder, but so exceedingly beneficial and absolutely imperceptible, except in the delicate fragrance and youthful glow which it imparts to the skin.

GLYCEROLE OF ARNICA will remove TAN and SUNBURN, PIMPLES or BLOTCHES, and make your hands and face smooth and soft as a baby's.

Invaluable in the Nursery and for gentlemen when yachting, bicycling, after shaving etc. Put up in Sprinkler Top Bottles. Delightfully perfumed. Prepared exclusively by

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

A BABY ELEPHANT.

Its Cutest Trick—Mahomet Dines Politely and Pets the Kitten.

Rosie, Amalki, Eliza and Mahomet are the names of a troop of four trained elephants that have performed in various parts of the world. The eldest, Rosie, is 6 years of age, which is very young for an elephant, you know, and the youngest, Mahomet, is only 4 and is therefore quite a wee affair a thing. They are all highly accomplished, for one can dance, and one can play the drum and another the organ, but the palm must be awarded to tiny Mahomet, who besides doing all these things can eat his dinner in very gentlemanly fashion.

Look at our picture, "Mahomet having his dinner." Is it not funny? And it is funnier still to see that wee baby elephant kneeling a bell impressively for some one to come and attend to him. Mahomet's tastes are dainty. A nice sugar coated cake is his great weakness, followed by a draft of milk. When the meal is ended, Mahomet is given a coin, which he solemnly presents to the waiter.

A Princess Who Ran Away to School.

"Mother mine, may I go down to the village and learn my lessons with the others?" Fancy a princess wanting to go to school with peasant children! But that was just the little Liesel (Elizabeth). She was never happier than when she was with her playmates in the village romping in the sunshine or teaching them in a make believe school of her own, for her great desire then, you must know, was to be a schoolmistress. Such a clever, bright, frolicsome little miss was this princess, with her ever smiling face!

This particular morning she was very weary of the gloomy German castle. Her merry nature made her long for companions. So out came that extraordinary request. And as the Princess of Wied, her mother, was busy with the other wee ones of the house—and did not pay any attention to her a—sel took this silence to mean consent.

A few minutes later the village schoolmaster was surprised to see the door of his school suddenly open and a little girl of about 10, whom every one recognized as the princess, place herself among the scholars. Knowing very well the simple, unaffected life of the great folk up at the castle, he said nothing and allowed her to remain.

The school was then having a singing

you want a good

HORSE AND CARRIAGE.

To get the best Carriages, you should examine our fine stock. Don't forget, either, that a nice Lap Robe and Whip are necessary to a good outfit. At our place they cost but little, and we have many grades. Suppose you give us a chance to show them to you? We have also plenty of Fly Nets, which your horse will be very thankful for.

season, which was just the one thing Liesel most enjoyed. At home, where there was always some illness, the children had to be quiet, keeping all their fun and noisiness till they could get away into the fields. Now here was an opportunity to sing out, and sing out the princess did, so much so indeed that a tiny mite of a girl who stood near became jealous of the sweet voice and the master's consternation clapped her hand over the singer's mouth.

"You must not sing so loud!" she cried, while Liesel struggled to get free. "Be quiet, I tell you!"

At that moment the door was once more flung open, and this time a servant in livery hurried in. The princess had been missed, and her mother, remembering the childish request, had let thought herself of the school. So back again to the dreary old castle went little Liesel, to be scolded for her naughtiness in running away.

Now that the princess has grown up and become queen of Roumania she has had to give up her early ambition to be a schoolmistress. But her love for children still remains, and under the name of Carmen Sylva, which is famous the world over, she has found time to write for the young folk of her kingdom many wonderful fairy stories.

The Eskimos.

Among the many instructive as well as interesting shows at the great Columbian exhibition in Chicago is the Eskimo village, where the exhibits of the peculiar people called Eskimos may be studied. Here are to be seen the men, women and children who at home live in snow huts and subsist on the flesh of reindeer, seals, whales and sea birds.

The Eskimos are superior to their Indian neighbors in personal courage, and they have made a great advance in civilization. They can make light and swift canoes of skins, which they manage with great address, and they have sledges which are drawn by dogs over the winter snows. At the exposition they appear in their native dress, and the cut here presented is a good likeness of an Eskimo boy at the Chicago exhibition.

An Observant Little Girl.

The other day a little girl of 7 was watching her mother and a dressmaker during the interesting process of trying on a gown. The sleeves, as a matter of course, received much attention. At luncheon said the little maid to the dressmaker, "Miss Blank, I'm going to make you a pair of sleeves." The dressmaker thanked her, and the little girl added, "Yes, and then I'm going to hitch a dress on them." And that is about the way it is done now, remarks Golden Days in telling this little anecdote.

The Entrance to the House.

The vestibule and doorway of a house, even its porch—piazza, if it has one—are as indication of the character of its inmates.

I have not generally found that the word "Welcome" emblazoned in red on the mat or framed and hung in the vestibule, with "God Bless Our Home" over the parlor door, beforehand any real welcome or was blood positive that there was a home to bless. But there is no disputing the air of simple elegance and dignity that is given to a house by a spotless, clean exterior. The spotless doormat, lettered with the name of the place is most attractive, and if the name be well chosen gives a sense of savory of finding welcome and hospitality within that the above legends fail to impress us with.

A stately palm, a flowering daisy or a handsome cape lily in a glazed jardiniere may be very effectively placed on the steps or piazza, but do not let the glazing of the jar form a hideous contrast to the painting of the house and do not range jardinieres up either side of each step in alternate shades of yellow and red.

Small tubs or pails painted dark bronze green of porcelain of the same shade harmonize with almost any scheme of house painting and do not detract from the plant as brightly colored ware does.

If there is ample piazza room, awninging hammock, chairs, large and small floor cushions and an inexpensive rug, footstools, a small table, pillows and a matting paper holder hung against the side of the house, combine to form a retreat that it is hard to surpass outside of a tropical climate.

Bright hinges, door bell or knocker are always pleasant to look upon, and next to these one's eyes fall upon the curtained window in the door. This, whether of swiss or scrim, edged with lace or of silk or silkoline, must be fastened top and bottom by a slender brass rod. Tapes soon give an air of untidiness.—New York Recorder.

The Woman Traveler.

The lady traveler is an outcome of the last 20 or 40 years, and the lady explorer of even a shorter period. Men still hale can recall the time when Miss Bird's experiences in lands no more remote than Iceland were the amazement of stay at home folks, and when Lady Franklin's ceaseless journeys with her adopted daughter Miss Cracroft were more talked about than nowadays, when the female tourist is met with in every land from Lapland to New Zealand. Swift steamers and palace cars have robbed the more beaten tracks of any terror—or any hardship, indeed—and the stories of one bonne compagnie sent forth a dozen more eager to imitate or surpass her achievements. Wherever she goes the lady traveler has a way of making herself amazingly at home and obtaining comforts which are denied to the sterner sex.

In Tobolsk in Siberia we hear of the English governess. The Russian princes were brought up under one. Another has recently narrated her experiences in Egypt, and more than one could tell tales which the male traveler never heard of about life in Fez and the city of Morocco. The actress or the opera singer, who is even more adventurous, may perhaps take a more practical view of the rounds she makes. This city has "no money" in it, that one is remembered by the diamond bracelets in the dressing room she received on the stage. Quite in the Andes is to the prima donna a memory of endless encores, Bangkok of empty houses.—London Standard.

Adaptability of American Women.

Wherever we meet the American woman

—and we must her everywhere, in the ranks of the English peerage and of the highest European aristocracy as well as in more modest conditions—we are struck with that marvelous adaptability in which even more one the sign of the superiority of a race or of a species. It is revealed notably by that good humor with which she accepts the annoyances and inconveniences that every class of medium implies and which put the best characters on trial. She submits to them without effort and without bitterness—she is, further, prepared for them by her education and does not expect to find everything easy.

Then the necessity of manual labor does not seem to her like a degrading mission. At most only one or two generations separate her from the time when her grandmother kneaded the family bread in the primitive settlements. These stories are familiar to her, and the lessons derived from them are not discouraging nor humiliating. She is the daughter of a race of emigrants who have become a great people through work, energy and determination. She has in this air her command a whole treasury of traditions from which she draws not without pride.—C. de Varigny in Popular Science Monthly.

The Perfect Female Form.

Nothing is more truly artistic than the simply outlined oval of the perfect female form. It is but slightly depressed at the waist, the line of the hips is where the shoulders, there is not an angle from top to toe. It is as different from the outline of the fashionable "well set up" woman, with her squared shoulders and angular hips, as a horse is from a camel. We call the high belted empire dresses artistic because they preserve this oval better than the longer waisted ones. The Venus de Milo has no belt line. When the weight rests equally upon the feet and the body is held upright, the smallest measurement of the waist is about where the modern belt is placed. But let the body bend to one side, and the point of intersection of the hip and side muscles will be as much as inch above the former belt line. This is why field laborers, even to the slenderest young girl, are "short waisted." For hygienic reasons the belt should never be placed below this point, and by thus shortening the straight under arm seam by an inch the beauty of the uncorseted waist is materially aided.—May H. Kern in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Clever French Girl of 1870.

In the Franco-German war of 1870 the Uhlans in particular played havoc with the French wires. On arriving at a village they would ride up to the telegraph office, cut the connections and carry off the apparatus, or else employ it to deceive the enemy. They were outwitted, however, on one occasion and by a woman. Mlle. Juliette Dodu, a girl of 18, was director of the telegraph station at Pithiviers, where she lived with her mother when the Prussians entered the town. They took possession of the office and in the course of the two months confined them to their dwelling on a higher floor. It happened that the wire from the office in running to the pole on the roof passed by the door of the girl's room, and she conceived the idea of tapping the Prussian messages. She had contrived to keep a telegraph instrument and by means of a derivation from the wire was able to carry out her purpose. Important telegrams of the enemy were thus obtained and secretly communicated to the subprefect of the town, who conveyed them across the Prussian lines to the French command.—New York Weekly.

Her Weak Point.

She was up in every science, and had placed at grim defiance all the intellectual giants that had gone before.

She had gone through Vassar speeding, and no thoughts domestic heeding, she had learned so much by reading that she couldn't take in more.

She had studied art and fiction, and the subtle laws of friction, and had polished up her diction till it shone with light lustrous.

She had pondered on divinity, and lectured on the Trinity, her talks upon Infinity were said to be luminous.

She had strolled with devotion all the currents of the ocean. She could talk with great emotion on the pedigree of rocks.

And for hours her brain would wheedle on the history of Tweedle, but she used a crochet needle when she darned her husband's socks.

Nothing to Get Mad Over.

A man about forty-five years old, having three new scythe stones tied up with a string under his arm, got aboard the train at Smith's Center, and as he passed down the car to find a seat, a passenger, who was considerably younger, called out:

"Waal, I declar', but who expected to see you here! How are ye, Jim Tompson?"

"Oh, toler'ble well, considerin," was the reply of the newcomer. "How's all your folks?"

"Able to be around, thank ye. Gettin ready to sharpen up, I see?"

"Ya-as."

"Look here, Jim, I want to talk to ye a bit. Folks is tellin 'round that you'n me is mad at each other an ready to fight."

"Ya-as, I've heard it."

"But it ain't so. I ain't mad, and I don't know what you've got to git mad over."

"Oh, I never thought of gittin mad."

"It's jest the gossips, who want sumpin to blow about. I married Mary Jane Hopkins. We didn't hitch very well and I got a divorce. Then she married you, and that set folks to thinkin we orter be mad at each other. Lands alive! but it would take more'n that to make me mad!"

"And here we be."

"How is Mary Jane now?"

"Fust rate—fust rate."

"Does she git mad and go into hyster ics?"

"Hain't yit."

"Kick any 'bout milkin the cows and feedin the hogs?"

"Not a kick."

"Waal, I'm glad on it. We couldn't hitch, but I ain't got a word to say agin Mary. Somebody had to marry her, an it might as well be you as any one else. Don't you mind what folks say. I ain't mad, nor goin to git mad, jest 'cause you married my old wife. I'm after another, and as soon as I git her you'n Mary come over and stay all day, and we'll make it pleasant for ye."—New York Herald.

In Danger.

It is a prevailing impression that a majority of Englishmen drop their h's, but though such an sweeping statement can be made, the accusation does very well as an occasional missile in time of need. "Why," said a blunt Englishman to an American lady, "I didn't think you were an American. You don't talk through your nose." "And you," she responded sweetly, "are not in the least like an Englishman. You don't drop your h's!"

When the Dean of Armagh was summoned to Whitehall to preach in the Chapel Royal, Dr. Knox called him on the precarious position involved. "Mr. Dean," said he, "you must be very careful when you get to Whitehall. Remember it was there that King Charles lost his head."

The dean went to Whitehall, preached his sermon and returned, and then capped his brother prelates little joke.

"My lord," said he, "I well nigh suffered a worse fate than the king's. The verger in the Chapel Royal understook to instruct me in the proper method of making my appearance. 'First,' said he, 'I take the choir up to their places, and then, after they are seated, I returns for you, sir, and conducts you to the halter.'"—Youth's Companion.

Difficult Task.

Many idioms of the English language possess a striking and picturesque significance which from long and constant use is often lost of. Occasionally, however, unusual association brings it out with clearness and force.

Two women were discussing a young man of their acquaintance whose father had been a distinguished member of the bar and a useful member of society.

"For my part," said one, "I think George is very bright and capable. I am confident he will succeed."

"Yes," replied the other, "he is undoubtedly a worthy young man, but I don't think he has head enough to fill his father's shoes."—Youth's Companion.

A Great Secret.

Lucy—I'll tell you news! Wetherby Witherspoon is secretly engaged to Miss Nimbly!

Mamie—How do you know?

Lucy—Well, Miss told Florence, Florence told Margery, Margery told Ada, Ada told Clara and Clara told me. Now be sure and don't tell anybody. It's a dead secret.—Yankee Blade.

The Reason Why.

Charlie—I pity you, Jack, when I see your creditors pushing you. That is a trouble I never had.

Jack—No. You probably never had any credit.—Kate Field's Washington.

Tired from Head to Foot.

FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. Why? Because nearly all of us have a condition of the blood. The cause? The neglect of the foot. We have known severe cases of so called rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, weak joints, backache, (so familiar to females) disappear in a few days by the use of Anti-Tire. Get up good circulation, healthy action, see how quick your headache and aches will vanish. One foot bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 15c. Family size, 25c. All druggists. Send 15 cents in stamps for trial package.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

65 per Year in Advance. E. W. Harrison, Editor and Proprietor. Office, No. 21 Somerset street. Printing of All Kinds. 10 Cents per Week, Delivered.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

FELL INTO A HOLE.

One of the Men Injured while Stringing Trolley Guide Wires.

Yesterday, a man named Keyzer, one of the men helping to string the guide wires for the Plainfield Electric Street Railway Company, on Somerset street fell from the top of a ladder, alongside one of the iron poles, to the ground, receiving serious injuries.

At the foot of the pole from which Keyzer fell, was a hole dug for the large electric light pole. The hole was five feet deep. Keyzer fell partly into this hole and this was responsible for his injuries. When he landed one leg was in the hole and the other out, terribly twisting and wrenching his body.

The injured man was taken to the Arlington Hotel, where he boarded. He is a married man and has a wife and five children. His home is in Paterson.

Later he was taken to his home by Mr. Wright.

PERSONAL.

Miss Estelle Taylor is quite ill at her home on Manning avenue.

Master George Badger of Fanwood is enjoying the sea breezes at Asbury Park.

Mrs. M. A. Mulford of Sandford avenue is at "The Waverly," Ocean Grove.

Mrs. William Tallamy of East Sixth street is visiting friends in Readington.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford of Seventh street have gone to Lake Placid, N. Y.

A little daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Schroder of Grove street Sunday night.

Mr. J. T. Harman and family of Eighth street have gone away for the month of August.

Mr Herbert B. Brooks of West Seventh street has gone to Small Point, near Bath, Maine.

Mr. A. A. Wright and family of Park avenue have gone away for the balance of the Summer.

Miss Lottie Cortell of Manning avenue returned last night from a pleasant outing at Manasquan.

Miss Annie Combs of Bordentown is visiting the family of Mr. William H. Combs of Linden avenue.

Miss Minnie Smith of West Front street has returned home from a visit with friends in New York State.

Mr. Robert Connolly, formerly of this city but now of Patchogue, L. I., is visiting old friends in Plainfield.

Miss Amelia Beekman of East Third street started to-day to spend a week visiting relatives in Jersey City.

Miss Ella Stetson of Philadelphia, who has been visiting Mrs. Sturtevant of Orchard place, has returned home.

Mr. Augustus Wilson of Fourth street entertained the members of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, last night.

Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Groendyke of Mercer avenue are home again after an enjoyable outing at Lake Mohonk, New York.

Mrs. A. M. Saunigan, her son and his wife of Craig place, started to-day for Ocean Grove to remain until the middle of September.

Mrs. Walter Irving Clarke and son of Westervelt avenue, accompanied by her mother, started to day for Asbury Park, to remain during August.

Mr. and Mrs. Rider of Dunellen, who have been spending a portion of the Summer at the "Oriental," Manhatta n Beach, are home again.

Mrs. Trewin, daughter of Mr. George R. Rockafellow, is convalescent after a serious illness of several weeks at her home on West Second street.

Among Plainfielders registered at Asbury Park hotels are: Geo. S. Clay, Miss Lizzie Galoo, Mrs. C. Anderson and son, Rev. Mr. Love and daughter.

Mrs. Congo, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Sharkey of Park place, left yesterday for "Center Moreiches," L. I., where she will spend a six weeks visiting with friends.

Mr. Fred. Hui of Somerset street went Sabbath Monday at Manasquan. He says that Hammil station, a place kept by Mr. Deike, a brother of H. Deike of Plainfield, is the best place he has found yet. He had good luck catching blue fish.

The first of "Uncle Sam's" employees in this city to take a vacation is Letter Carrier Charles B. Stephens. During his absence James Mullen will attend to the route. Mr. Stephens will spend his "leave of absence" rusticating at Lake Hopatcong.

Rev. Father John Stafford, who has been for some time past assistant priest of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church in Jersey City, has been appointed by Bishop Wigger vice-president of Seton Hall College. Father Stafford is a native of Paterson, and about nine years ago graduated from Seton Hall. He went from that to the American College in Rome, where he took high honors and won several medals from his excellence in the studies of moral theology and philosophy. After his return from Rome he was sent to St. Mary's church in this city, whence he was transferred to Jersey City.

Rev. Cornelius Gardiner Bristol, son-in-law of Dr. Lowrie of Park avenue, has just accepted a unanimous call to the rectorship of "The Church of the Good Shepherd," Hartford, Conn. Mr. Bristol has been in the ministry about four years, all of which has been given to the Second Church of St. Alban's at Danielsonville, Conn. During that time he has collected and built the new and beautiful stone edifice the congregation now occupy and which is to be consecrated by the Bishop on Thursday, August 17. The Hartford conregation are to be congratulated on their choice.

THE GOOD OLD TIMES.

AS TOLD BY AN OLD TIMER, STILL ABOUT.

A Country Tavern Keeper, and Some of His Exploits in this Vicinity 75 Years Ago.

I.

(Special Correspondence.)

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:

In the rather antique quiet village of Piscataway city with its hundred or more inhabitants, situated on the northern slope of the Raritan valley in New Jersey, there was a number of rather remarkable people, but perhaps none more so than the old tavern keeper who flourished there more than a three quarters of a century ago. His real name was Christian Eoff, pronounced Christayan Ove. He was a man of great wit and humor and withal of sterling integrity, abounding in the confidence of those who knew him. The village at that time was quite a thoroughfare, being in near the center of the State of New Jersey. Farmers in the northern and western counties, as well as many from Pennsylvania, passed through the village, enroute to grain markets at New Brunswick, N. J. Many of the patrons of the old tavern were accustomed to over for meals and lodging. The old tan lady being a superior cook, and tidy housekeeper, was of itself a great advertisement, far and near, and although it was the days before temperance societies were in vogue, yet there was no drunkenness tolerated, and the tipplers were denied over indulgence, and soon learned that Christayon was too much for them. The best people in the village and surrounding neighborhood (including the preacher or dominie as he was styled,) held two or three parties at the old tavern annually, when a sumptuous dinner or supper was provided. There was a farm connected with the tavern, and "Neen and Cuff," colored, two slaves, were kept busy sowing and reaping, during Summer, and providing wood fires in Winter. They were two jolly darkies and were well contented. But enough of this: I wish to speak more particularly of Christayon's shrewdness. Miss Betsy B., a domestic in the family, but treated as an adopted daughter, succeeded one April morning, in a trick, and said April fool to the old gentleman, who immediately replied, "I will get even with you before you go to bed."

Sometime during the day, he shaped a long white Mercer potato into the form of a tallow candle, and left it where it would be found. In the dusk of the evening he sat by the kitchen fire, in company with his wife and family, and had quite forgotten about its being the first day of April by this time, when Christayon gently remarked that he was about time to light the candle." It was before 2000 foco matches were invented, and to light a candle was to hold it to a live coal of fire. Betsy reached for and found the potato instead of the candlestick and chimney. Taking a pair of tongs she seized a live coal of fire, and began blowing, and continued until her breath was quite spent. "Why, what's the matter with the candle, I can blow no longer," said Betsy. "Why, Betsy, it is the first of April, and you have certainly been very foolish to blow so long."

But his love for practical joking took form more especially in the interest of the neighborhood, as a detective, and one or more who fell into his clutches. Stealing watermelons was not a new idea seventy-five years ago, and to discover the perpetrators in their baffled the skill and ingenuity of all who had been robbed of their best fruits. Finally Christayon set his wits to work. During the time when melons were about ripening, there was a certain man that would come to his house and seem to take the evenings very leisurely. He set about the plan by talking about water melons and finding out who had the best patches in the neighborhood, and he soon ingratiated himself into their confidence, and proposed to become one of their party, advising them, however, to go at just dark, but keeping on a time when the moon would give them most light and when they could better discover those who might be watching their grounds. Agreeing upon a time they all met at the tavern, at the best patch. After helping themselves to a fine melon or two, being cautioned to keep their voices low, and all being still, they suddenly beheld a man approaching. They all started to run when a gun was discharged, and Christayon fell. They could not hear to leave their old friend to suffer and die alone. Halting, they returned, carrying him in that "not knowing that it was a put-up job by the old tavern keeper and Betsy, the owner of the land, but it stopped their watermelons.

Speaking of Neen, or the old slave, I well remember hearing him tell of an adventure with the devil, whom he styled the "old boy." He said that coming up a certain hill one very dark night he met the "old boy" who came up right behind him. Quick as a flash he said "get out ob de way." I never did you any harm. "But he didn't budge." "I said, get out ob de way," with his hands and horns and tail. His eyes was like fire. I tell you I was skeered. The "old boy" struck him wid me cane, and all at once he was gone, so I went on home and what do you think, I found me cane so far as cane had struck him it was jet black, and I can prove it by de cane yet." The negroes were very superstitious in those times, believing in witches, and many other ludicrous things, among others that certain articles of earth had power over others to do them harm, and they were called "root negroes." But to return to Christayon, he abounded in sport sometime. Having some choice breeds of fowls a wealthy neighbor applied for a setting of eggs of those fowls, for which he agreed to pay as high as twenty cents a piece, in order to secure the same kind of valuable stock. Christayon selected the eggs with great care in order to play a good joke on his customer, by giving him fifteen beautiful pullets, and only not a single obliging cock. The customer expressed great pleasure, but on his return home with his chickens, his disappointment, and chagrin, when the eggs were hatched and the chicks began to mature it was found that they were all roosters. Many a hearty laugh they enjoyed over the joke when it was explained, and a satisfactory number of pullets given in exchange for the crowers.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

Colored Men to Have a Race.

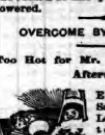
WHEELMEN are anticipating a big time with several colored men. They are arranging a race between a number of them who have never ridden a bicycle. The race is to be over the Fanwood-Scotch Plains course. The date has not yet been decided upon.

At the last meeting of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs the Plainfield Bicycle Club of this city was admitted to membership. This club is one of the largest wheeling clubs in the country, having more than 250 members. The association is now composed of twenty-four clubs, with a total membership of about 2,500.

"The Elizabeth Journal ten-mile trophy road race for the championship of Union county, takes place on Saturday at the Elizabeth-Cranford course. The entries this year are from only the Elizabeth Athletic Club and the Elizabeth Wheelmen. From present indications the record of last year (29.50) will be lowered.

OVERCOME BY THE HEAT.

Too Hot for Mr. Sutton Yesterday Afternoon.



EAT overcame Mr. Sutton, a driver for Loomis & Rice, yesterday afternoon, while he was delivering a load of coal at Mr. Wm. Sharkey's blacksmith shop, on Emily street. As he began to unload the coal he was noticed to stagger. Mr. Sharkey thinking he was tired paid no attention to it, but in a few minutes Sutton fell helplessly into the bottom of the wagon.

A number of men in the shop at the time helped to take him out and placed him in a cool, shady place in the rear of the shop, where after a short time he revived and was able to resume his work.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Catcher Rafferty Will Take Fritz's Place.

The Crescents will have the team of the Woodbridge Field Club as opponents next Saturday. It is a hard matter to get teams here that can beat the gilt edged team that represents Plainfield, but the Woodbridge team may give them a hard tussle. The famous Browns and several College players are with them.

Manager Keller has secured catcher Rafferty to replace Fritz who has gone to the Pennsylvania league. Rafferty is said to be a strong player and is expected to strengthen the team.

BREVITIES.

—City Common Council meeting Monday night.

—The Borough Council will meet in regular session next Friday evening.

—Marsh, Ayers & Co's workmen are requested to meet at the shop to-night at eight o'clock.

—Staff Captain Annie Keith, from Scotland, now in charge of the 125th training garrison in New York, will speak at the Salvation Army to-morrow night.

—The members of Queen City Lodge, No. 223, I. O. O. F., will meet at their lodge room, to-morrow, at 12.15 o'clock, for the purpose of attending the funeral of the late Hiram Voorhees.

—A horse belonging to Mr. Samuel Taynor was taken with colic, on Chatham street, yesterday afternoon. It was unhitched and placed in Mr. Ruff's lot. The horse suffered terrible pains until it died last night.

John B. Gable Visits His Old Home.

John B. Gable appeared in town again last night. He went around among the firemen, whom he used to associate with and later went to the home of Mrs. Gable, when, she says, he threatened to steal his children, and also attempted to strike her. Mrs. Gable went to a justice of the peace this morning to get a warrant for his arrest. The justice refused to issue the warrant.

A Scotch Plains Man Loses a Horse.

A short time ago Mr. Miller of Scotch Plains bought a horse. He turned it out to pasture nights. Friday morning when he went to look for the horse it was gone. Mr. Miller says he thinks some one has taken the animal out during the night. The horse is a bay with a white spot in the forehead, and is lame in the right front leg.

Settled Out of Court.

Recently Carsley Bros. brought suit against Miss Annie Miller for money which they claimed was due them for work.

The case was sent down for trial today before Justice Mosher. Before the hour for trial the matter was settled out of court.

The Weather.

On Thursday warmer, fair weather will prevail and light westerly winds, shifting to southerly; and on Friday, fair, warmer, more sultry weather and southerly winds.

OVER NINE LAPS AHEAD.

MR. SALTZMAN CONTINUES TO INCREASE HIS LEAD.

Mr. Smith has not Given up Hopes of Going to the World's Fair, and Makes an Excellent Spurt—The Others Hold their Positions.

OTH leader Saltzman and Foreman Smith have quickened their paces somewhat during the past hour, while the other firemen keep advancing sufficiently to hold their positions. Fireman Newman has managed to pass a few competitors.

Rumors of something very interesting are predicted to happen before the week is out. Watch THE NEWS for particulars.

A FUNNY ACCIDENT.

Caused Much Fright and Amusement, but Whose Fault was It?

DOGS more surprised and frightened than two were last night never were seen. It occurred this way. An Irish setter pup, not yet old enough to cut its eye-teeth, nor keep out of the way of the professional dog catcher, was standing in the middle of Somerset street at the intersection of Emily street, about six o'clock. Its ears were propped up and it had a brave, self-satisfied expression until a bicycle rider dashed noiselessly and closely by. The suddenness of the thing terrified the animal and it ran at full speed toward Race street.

A fraction of a second before, another pup, of doubtful breed, while killing time on Race street, had its curiosity aroused by the actions of an unoffending cat a few hundred feet away, and started in a hurry, decided to run and join it's friend, the cat.

The two animals rushing from opposite directions toward a corner, were somewhat excited, and knew not of each other's presence. They collided at the corner with terrific force and both were hurled back several feet, bruising numerous parts of their canine anatomy.

Still more terrified and excited, when they recovered from the shock, they turned and rushed almost headlong for several minutes and then quickly ran away in opposite directions.

Bystanders, who witnessed the unusual happening, were greatly amused and one ventured to remark "I wonder what those dogs thought struck them."

THE BANK HAS NOT SUSPENDED.

Statement of the President of the Dime Savings Institution of Plainfield.

The following communication is from the New York Tribune of to-day:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE:—Sir: I read with regret this morning in your paper an article referring to the Dime Savings Institution of our city, viz., Plainfield, N. J., which stated that this bank had closed. In other words, you would seem to indicate that the bank had been suspended. This might be, "bankrupt," from the calls made upon it by depositors.

Permit me to say that this is an entire misrepresentation of the condition of the Institution.

Recognizing the fact that during the month of July nearly one-sixth of the deposits would be withdrawn, and a small amount of deposits had been made in the mean time, and in view of the action taken by the savings banks of the city of New York, it became evident to us that we should have to avail ourselves of the intelligent depositors of our institution.

The manager of the bank met on Monday morning and simply advised themselves of the article of the by-laws which provides that we may give notice for further withdrawals of money. I am pleased to say that the bank exists to-day with deposits only a few days before and gave us what we had reason to expect—a proper certificate showing a very prosperous example to the bank In no wise has the bank closed, nor has it suspended, except so far as has been the action of the different banks in the State of New York and other surrounding countries.

I regret exceedingly that your paper should have published such a communication, which seems to be one written by some one who had the desire to strengthen or support or defend the institution, but seems to have given you what might be his own peculiar personal ideas.

Please bear in mind one thing; that in receiving communications in reference to these matters, personal prejudice rules into the matter to a very large part of the communication sent to you, and which becomes a matter of public interest and concern.

I am happy to say to-day that the bank is in a first-class condition, with a very healthy balance in private banks to its credit, and will open its doors to every

EDITORIAL NOTES

A True Democracy.

Not everybody has the thought of the difference between a true democracy and a representative government. In a true democracy the people themselves govern. They vote on laws and measures to be passed, and themselves elect such officers as are necessary. In a representative government the people elect representatives who make, or are supposed to make, such laws as are needed and transact other public business. It will be seen, therefore, that the United States is a representative government, not a democracy.

The trouble with a representative government is that its representatives are apt to forget the interests of those who elected them for their own interests and to represent only themselves. The definition of a public office in the mind of a practical politician is a place created to give a living to the politician.

The only trace of a really democratic government among civilized nations to-day is to be found in Switzerland in the two legislative features known as the initiative and the referendum. In the initiative, so called, a body of private citizens may prepare laws and propose them for enactment. The referendum is, however, more important because its adoption has been seriously proposed in other countries. W. D. McCracken mentions in The Cosmopolitan magazine that it is a survival of the ancient Swiss landsgemeinde, where all voters assembled, and opening the meeting with solemn prayer, in a few hours had transacted all the public business necessary for the next year.

Under the Swiss referendum all laws of great importance are referred to the whole body of voters for their rejection or adoption. Sometimes the voters themselves, or a body of not less than 30,000 of them, demand by petition that a measure shall be thus referred. Again the legislative body decides that a law shall be thus referred. Then it is published, and copies thereof are distributed among voters. Ninety days are allowed to pass. If in that time 30,000 voters, or eight cantons, have not petitioned for a popular vote on the bill, then it becomes a law without the popular vote.

What a boon to our country it would be just now if the silver and tariff questions could thus be settled on the referendum principle by vote of the whole people! It would be a marvelous inducement to voters to study into the real merits of both questions.

Why do people starve in cities, asks a correspondent of the New York Sun, when within easy reach by rail in both Arkansas and Missouri are yet thousands of acres of government land to be had for the settling on them? They are not the richest lands, the correspondent admits, yet they are rich enough to raise "milk, butter, vegetables, fruit, chickens, pigs and corn." Fuel grows upon the land. The climate of the hill lands of Arkansas, where these government lands are, is one of the most healthful in the world. The correspondent tells us also that if settlers do not wish to take up the wild lands and subdue them there is still left between Springfield, Mo., and St. Louis an abundance of deeded land which can be bought at from $2.50 to $7 the acre.

Much of the government land is within 100 miles of St. Louis. As to the fertility of the soil, one may recall what the French gardeners say—that the farmer makes his own soil, and that they could raise a rich crop upon a city pavement in a short time. At Harrison, Ark., is a government land office where entries can be made.

Colonies might be formed from the respectable laboring classes of cities and the unemployed everywhere who would welcome this opportunity for homes and independence. If our American poor had somebody who would do for them what Baron Hirsch's managers are doing for the Russian Hebrew immigrants in New Jersey many such colonies would soon be flourishing, and the plethora of unemployed workingmen would be relieved.

Reed Relois is hard to please indeed. He tried to commit suicide because his sweetheart would not marry him. Friends labored with him and brought him back to life. Then, in order to keephim from dying it few hours longer, his girl said she would wed him and did so without delay. But before the honeymoon was over the ungrateful fellow told a friend that matrimony "was not what it was cracked up to be" and took a dose of poison on that account. Once more he was pumped out and set upon his feet. What he will next try to kill himself for is uncertain. His last reason was a most frivolous one. Suppose everybody who discovers that matrimony is "not what it is cracked up to be" should commit suicide?

The Russian government has accorded one right to women, which, it is to be hoped, will never be acceded by the sex in America. It is the right to have women's smoking compartments attached to railway cars. If anything would tend to break men of the smoking habit, it would be the sight of their wives, mothers and best girls sitting tilted back enveloped in a cloud of tobacco smoke in or out of a railway car.

BLOOD, CRIED DONNELLY

And the Silver Men In Convention Howled Applause.

POWDERLY SPOKE OF STARVATION.

All Day and Part of the Night the Delegates Had Talked of Silver, and They Are at It Again This Morning—Committee on Resolutions Appointed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—The second day of the silver convention opened briskly. There is much before the silver men to be done, for during the first day and last evening they hardly more than got under way.

The afternoon session was held in Central Music hall, a building capable of seating over 5,000 with comfort. Allen W. Thurman of Ohio was made permanent president amid great applause. While the notification committee was out, and the committee on credentials was awaited, Robert Schilling of Milwaukee wanted to hear a speech from Governor Waite of Colorado, but the chairman declared the motion out of order, pending permanent organization.

Committee on rules and order of business was then chosen, and the roll of states called for the appointment of the committee on resolution. Mr. C. B. Thomas of

ALLEN W. THURMAN.

Colorado urged that each state name three members of this committee, one member from each of the three parties, but Paul Vandervoort of Nebraska objected. "I hope," said he, "that party differences will not be recognized in this convention."

A Committee Suggested.

Mr. Fletcher of Colorado said that when this convention adjourned it would be charged that it was under the domination of one of the two great parties. In order to obviate that the Colorado delegation had thought it wise to ask that one member be selected from each of the three great political parties in the several states.

Ex-United States Senator Reagan of Texas arose, and in response to loud demands mounted the stage. He said:

We are here for the purpose of trying to relieve the country from its present embarrassments and place it on a footing of prosperity. I understand we are here as Democrats, without reference to any distinction of political parties, but as citizens of the great republic to unite our voices for the restoration of silver for the purpose of arresting the rule of the gold men and bondholders and for the purpose of restoring to the country the blessings of prosperity from which we have been driven by improper legislation. The moment we introduce partisan questions in this convention we thrust before it a matter which is going to cause strife and confusion and impair the work of the convention. I appeal to this convention to go on with its duties and declare its purpose of restoring to this country gold and silver coinage as it existed before 1873, and restore the prosperity of the country and afterward take care of our party affiliations.

The sense of the convention was so overwhelmingly with Mr. Reagan that Mr. Vandervoort withdrew his motion. The roll of states was called.

A list of vice presidents was announced, one member being selected from each state and the question of preparing an address to the people and a memorial to congress was after some discussion referred to the committee on resolutions.

At this point Chairman Reagan and the special committee escorted the new president, Allen W. Thurman, to the stage. After the applause had subsided Mr. Thurman thanked the convention for the honor and made a strong silver speech.

When Mr. Thurman concluded his address loud calls for Powderly brought him to the platform after a proposition from an excitable delegate from Nebraska that a committee be appointed to draft a memorial to congress and address to the people of the country had been overwhelmingly sat upon. The labor leader said that he was present in response to hundreds of letters from his brethren in the west who could not come themselves, but wanted him to voice their sentiments. Seventy-five thousand Knights of Labor were standing on the brink of ruin, 10,000 alone were idle, and 50,000 more in the east would be if utterly fruitless effort to demonetize silver, for the existing danger was not one confined to any particular section. The country should be able to make its own currency without any dictation from the money of the world. It was time to shake off the shackels that these had fastened upon the limbs of the American people. If there had been any time in history when it was necessary to be deliberate, that time was at hand. Every Knight of Labor throughout the country who was there in sympathy with—and they were all—was in favor of free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

Donnelly's Talk of Blood.

Mr. Powderly concluded amid applause, and then the entire convention, as one man, shouted for Ignatius Donnelly, and the Sage of Minnesota in his half carried and half rushed to the platform. He spoke for over an hour, eliciting repeated enthusiasms and at times raising dangerously over an inflammatory line. He said that this convention meant that the people were rising without distinction or party in defense of the imperiled interests of the nation. Representatives from every party and sentiment, from rock ribbed conservatives to advanced radicals, Republicans, Democrats, People's party men and Prohibitionists were all singing the same song—all here in defense of the rights of the white metal, that were imperiled by European conspirators.

"Every man who believes that John Sherman is a statesman, a patriot and an honest man, hold up your hand," he commanded. Not a hand went up.

"Now, I want every man who thinks he has done more harm to the country than war, pestilence and famine to hold up their hands."

A forest of hands were extended upwards and there was great cheering.

"But this is not a personal question," continued Mr. Donnelly. "It is a great national issue. You cannot write down the incalculable injustice that this policy is producing. Look in Colorado, 30,000 men, business men, industrious men, seeking only honest toil and yet swarming the streets of Denver, with the assessed value of five thousands and millions. Nothing has been like it since God started civilization on this planet.

"I believe in God, and I do not believe he intends that this republic shall perish, or that the American people shall either be bartered out or become a weapon in the hands of the European money power. I am afraid to take as I feel. If I did I might talk blood and bullets. The conspiracy is more cruel and more iniquitous than has ever confronted the minds of men. Was there anything wrong in Governor Waite's reference to 'Blood and Bullets?' [Loud cries of 'No.']

"I say that if these members of other continents are determined with their iron heel to tear down and trail in the dust the banner of liberty—then I say that before that banner of liberty is crushed to tatters let it be drowned in the blood of the whole people." [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. Donnelly concluded with a declaration that there must be no compromise and no turning back.

The Night Session.

In the evening Central Music hall was again crowded to the doors by friends of silver, who assembled to listen to speeches by Senator Stewart of Nevada and Congressman Bryan of Nebraska.

Senator Stewart spoke first. He referred to the closing of the mints in India to silver coinage by the British government, pointing out that the action of the English people was almost simultaneous with that of President Cleveland in calling the extra session of congress. The senator said that it looked very much as if it were a prepconcerted arrangement of both governments to demonetize silver.

Congressman Bryan spoke for fully two hours, holding the attention of the audience to the last. His arguments were to the effect that the present financial crisis was not caused by the silver legislation now on the statute books.

The committee on resolutions of the silver convention met at the Palmer House, and organized by making ex-Senator Reagan of Texas, chairman, and Robert Schilling of Wisconsin, secretary. A subcommittee, consisting of Senator Reagan, Congressman Bryan of Nebraska, Thomas M. Patterson of Colorado, ex-Congressman Bartine of Nevada, Ignatius Donnelly of Minnesota, George Washburn of Massachusetts and Mr. Manning of Alabama was selected to draft the resolutions and report to the general committee.

Say Corrigan Has Been Called.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—It is stated in well informed quarters that Archbishop Corrigan has left the city secretly for Rome, which he was summoned some time since by the pope. The archbishop, it is said, has not gone by any steamship from this port, but has taken a northern course and will cross the Atlantic from Canada. It is believed he will sail or has sailed from Quebec.

Girls Who Wanted to Die.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Emma Hahn and Tillie Diehl, two good looking girls of Summit, N. J., went out on a mountain near the town on Monday afternoon with the avowed intention of committing suicide. They carried a bottle of laudanum with them, but only Emma took a dose. The other became frightened and ran away and summoned help. Emma will recover.

Levy Charged With Embezzlement.

FAR ROCKAWAY, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Abram Levy, retail boot and shoe dealer of 133 Duane street, New York, who recently failed for $40,000, was arrested here on the charge of embezzling $2,000. The arrest was preferred and the warrant sworn out by Hastings & Gleason, boot and shoe jobbers of 289 Broadway.

Depositors Drove Him Off.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 2.—G. C. Trumpff, president of the Mobile Savings bank, which suspended a week ago, has disappeared, and his son says his absence is due to the persecutions of depositors and deputy sheriffs who have been serving garnishee papers on him.

Found His Family Murdered.

CADDO, I. T., Aug. 2.—On his return to his home, Willis Combett, a full blood Chickasaw Indian, found his wife and little baby lying dead in the yard, with one bullet hole in the head and three more in the body of each. There is no trace of the murderer.

Thirty-five Horses Burned.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 2.—Fire destroyed the stock yards, old horse and mule market. Thirty-five horses and 30 sets of harness, six cattle cars and one carload of hay were consumed.

CONSULTING ABOUT HOUSE RULES.

Rulers Will Not Be Applied Unless There Is Actual Necessity—The Senate Must First Solve the Question of Contested Seats—The Senate Patronage.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The members of the house now in Washington are still in the dark as to the date of the democratic caucus, which is necessary to perfect a scheme of organization of the body. Mr. Robinson of Louisiana, one of the secretaries of the Democratic caucus, has wired Representative Holman, the chairman of the caucus, asking for authority to call the caucus for Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

The lists at the house postoffice show very few new arrivals of representatives. For this reason the contest for the house offices lacks vitality, and the various candidates who have opened up headquarters in true convention style have been rather lonely.

Regarding the House Rules.

Representative Catchings, the leading member of the house committee on rules, is called on Mr. Crisp almost daily for some time. He has always been Mr. Crisp's lieutenant upon the floor and his valued adviser in private, so it was at once assumed that he had been called into consultation respecting the committee assignments and the house rules.

Mr. Catchings shares Mr. Crisp's views respecting the length of the special session. Abolishing the rules, he feels that while there is urgent necessity for the adoption of some rules for the government of the house very soon after the house is called to order, there is no proper reason for any radical revision. Under the old rules, when the majority really desired to reach a vote upon a pending question, the result could be attained either with a special order or rule from the committee on rules. The practice, he thought, had lost none of its efficiency and was still available. If changes are to be made in the direction of cloture, they will be made only after mature consideration and an exhibition of the actual necessity of the case.

It is impossible that there will be a caucus of the majority of the senate this week. Senator Gorman, the chairman of the Democratic caucus in the senate, has taken up his quarters at the Capitol, but he has not yet given the issue of a call consideration. It will of course be necessary for the Democratic senators to get together and decide upon a question which will probably be the first to engage serious attention in the senate—namely, the right of admission of the three senators from the northwest, whose titles have been challenged, but Senator Gorman feels that there is no need for haste in the matter, and the caucus will probably not be held before the middle of next week.

The Senate's Patronage.

Senator Gorman, Sergent at Arms Bright, and Secretary of the Senate General Cox had a long conference at the Capitol, and it is supposed the subject of the distribution of patronage under the two officers who take hold on next Monday was considered. The question of how soon the offices would be distributed, made the reply to the effect that the senate was a body that moved slowly, and much depended on its action.

It is known, however, that all Republican clerks and officials who are absent from the city have been advised not to return until the senate Republicans had not yet canvassed and determined who they wanted to remain as the representative of the minority. There is consequently much uneasiness among the minor officials as to who will be retained as the favored few.

The senators present in the city are as follows: Call, Cockrell, Gorman, Harris, Martin, Mills, Mitchell of Oregon; Pugh, Quay, Vest, Voorhees and White of Louisiana.

Senator Vest of Missouri arrived from the west and at once plunged into a mass of mail that was waiting his arrival. He declined to discuss the matters that would come before congress. Of the length of the session he had no doubt but that it would be a long and continuous one.

FINANCIAL RELIEF.

National Banks Have a Plan to Increase Their Circulation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—A new and unexpected element of relief has been injected into the financial situation. United States bonds have reached such a low figure that the national banks see their way clear to make a profit by issuing circulation against them. Arrangements have therefore been made by some of the more prominent banks to increase their circulation from the minimum limit at which it now stands to such an amount as will materially relieve the present tension. It is estimated that $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 will be so added to New York's supply of currency within a very short time.

Orders have already been placed with the comptroller of the currency for part of the new bills, and some of the banks have bought their bonds preparatory to depositing them in Washington. Among the banks that are named as interested in the movement are the Gallatin, Fourth, Merchant, First, New York and Park.

The senseless runs on the savings banks in this city and Brooklyn were not repeated and there is a feeling of confidence generally.

The failures in Chicago in the provision trade, including the big one of John Hately, had but little effect upon the Produce Exchange in this city.

The sheriff received an attachment for $120,000 against Thomas S. Bullock and Victor A. Wilder, contractors, of Wall street, in favor of Colin Campbell for commission in raising $600,000 to carry along the Monterey and Mexican Gulf Railroad company.

Time Limit Not Necessary Yet.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 2.—The bankers of this city have determined not to enforce the time limit on withdrawing money unless such action should become absolutely necessary.

St. Paul's First Bank Failure.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 2.—The Seven Corners' bank in this city, a state institution, with $100,000 capital, suspended. This is the first bank failure in St. Paul in more than a year.

AN ATTACK ON FOSTER.

Serious Charges Made Against the Ex-Secretary.

SAY HIS FAILURE WAS DISHONEST.

A Cincinnati Paper Turns on the Ex-Governor—Charges Him With Fraud and With Leading a Double Life and Says He Ought to Be Sent to Prison.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 2.—A profound sensation exists here over a long article in an extra edition of The Times-Star, the leading afternoon newspaper of Ohio and one of the most careful and conservative journals in the country. The article charges ex-Governor Charles Foster, whom it has always sworn by, with being deserving of the stripes of the convict, and intimates that if a way to punish him can be found it will be done.

Among other things, the editorial articles says: "An examination of the affairs of Foster & Co. is likely to disclose to a deluded public what a consummate confidence man Charles Foster is. He is the prime bunkoist of the north western portion of Ohio. Not only Mr. Foster, but his partner and clerks were engaged in the occupation of looting the deposits of Foster & Co.

"It is a strange commentary on public life that this man, who stood at the head of the treasury department, and whose duty it was to enforce all laws for the protection of depositors in national banks, should himself be at the head of a private banking institution, and be the chief purloiner of the bank's funds.

Should Go to the Penitentiary.

"If Mr. Foster were amenable to the laws that he, as secretary of the treasury, was called upon to enforce he would go to the penitentiary."

The special dispatch giving occasion for this editorial comes from Fostoria, and is evidently based on information obtained from the assignee, T. Greene Bond, who with leading a double life, pretending to be honest, while all the time deliberately robbing his depositors.

In a statement it shows that Foster was overdrawn in his own bank, without any security whatever, $196,321; that his partners and clerks were also overdrawn; that the accounts of all concerns in which he was interested were overdrawn; that a mysterious woman, known only as Mrs. M. Carter of New York city, is overdrawn $9,361,97; and the article intimates that she will appear in a sensational light soon.

The total overdrafts of the bank are $230,235.79, to say nothing of its further liabilities, while its total assets are only $94,491.62.

The entire article is taken up with the affairs of the bank alone, but further disclosures are promised in certain real estate deals of a more disreputable character. The dispatch says experts are at work looking into Mr. Foster's affairs, and intimating that if it be possible criminal proceedings will be instituted. Foster's delay in filing a statement is severely commented on, and he is charged with scheming to induce creditors to accept even less than the little that is known of his resources would indicate they would receive.

Say He Betrayed His Friends.

A chapter is devoted to the manner in which he secured money from friends up to the last moment and even after the assignment papers had been sent to the county seat. He allowed one aged man to lose every dollar and caused the collapse of the North Baltimore bank, when a single word of warning would have saved both, with alight, if any, loss to Foster.

In Mr. Foster's behalf and in suspension of judgment it is urged by his friends that he was in a position where a nod of his head to Wall street would have made him rich and averted the personal calamity that overwhelmed him almost as soon as he left the post of secretary of the treasury.

Circumstances show that he was absolutely honest in his public career, and that, however much he may have suffered from personal misfortunes or caused his friends to suffer, he never took advantage of his opportunities as secretary of the treasury to make a dollar for himself. And this, his friends declare, is a complete vindication.

Many of his devoted adherents contrast his career in the great office with a predecessor of his who did not go into bankruptcy when he left the office, though his connections were far more diverse and extended even into Wall street itself.

It is to be feared that there is more or less politics in this attack upon Mr. Foster, in his days of misfortune. The complications of Ohio politics at this date are such that anything is to be expected.

SIAM'S HUMILIATION.

The Supplementary Demands of France Conceded.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—A council of the ministry was held at the palace of the Elysee M. Dewelle announced that Phya Vadhana had signified his government's willingness to concede the supplementary guarantees demanded by France.

These supplementary guarantees, which include the temporary custody of the river and port of Chantiboun, and that Siam shall not establish military stations in certain named places near the Cambodian frontier or within a certain distance of the Mekong river, were contained in a note handed by M. Develle, which reads as follows:

The delay of Siam in accepting the ultimatum presented by the French minister resident at Bangkok, M. Pavie, the representative of the republic in imposing heavier conditions. Being desirous, however, to give further proof of the sentiments of moderation by which she has been constantly actuated, France will content herself, as an indispensable guarantee for the practical execution of the clauses of the ultimatum, with occupying the river and port of Chantiboun until the complete evacuation of the posts established by the Siamese on the left bank of the Mekong river. Further, for the purpose of re-establishing friendly relations happily re-established between France and Siam, and for preventing a conflict in the reign of Lake Tadengan, France undertakes to maintain no military forces in Battambang and Angkmour, and in the locality situated within a radius of 25 kilometers on the right bank of the Mekong river starting from the Cambodian frontier. Siam will only maintain the police forces necessary for the repression. Moreover, Siam will maintain warships or armed boats on the waters of the great lake or on the Mekong river.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—In the house of lords the Earl of Rosebery, secretary of state for foreign affairs, read the text of the first ultimatum and of the supplementary ultimatum sent by France to Siam and accepted by the latter country. He added: "We have signed an agreement in Paris establishing a neutral zone in Indo-China."

Dwyer Was Very Much Knocked Out.

OSSIAN, Ind., Aug. 2.—A hammer and tong mix was fought here in the opera house by LaBlanche, the marine of California, and Dwyer, the champion middleweight of Cheyenne, for a purse of $500. LaBlanche severely punished Dwyer for three rounds, when he laid him out unconscious with a terrific righthander on the jaw, winning the fight.

A Princess' Rhone.

Among shoes for evening wear in the trousseau of the Princess May, whose marriage with the Duke of York is the great event of English society at present, were made after her own instructions a pretty pair of light blue brocade, with pompadour floret sprays. The variety of shades in these shoes includes pink satin, coral satin, embroidered in bright jewels; pale blue, heliotrope, together with pink morocco, and many in shot tints well blended. The white shoes are a most tempting display. The white satin are enriched with pearls, iridescent beads and jewels; the white kid with gold and pearl butterflies and jewels, and others are covered with white ribbons. Many display rare old paste buckles. Bronze is evidently in favor, and some are sandaled with 4-button straps.

Princess May shows a special predilection for light colored tan shoes, and a charming pair of Russian leather appear in the Oxford form. A tan shoe with a perforated band round also appears in the trousseau.

The slippers are of the Turkish shape, low on either side. Some are made in white kid lined with satin, some in pink trimmed with fur. Bronze is combined with pale blue, and some are of white satin with swandown.

Among the boots are a new make of Russian leather light tinted balmorals, coming high up on the instep, and some in patent leather and French kid, buttoned, while others are entirely composed of Russian leather.

Novel Dress Materials.

English tailors are making jean dresses in almost every color, but the sparrow's egg tint is one of the favorites. These bathing gowns are mostly arranged as skirts and coats with large sleeves fulled at the seam beside the arm, the collar reaching up behind. Blue denim is also coming into use as revers and borders on duck and holland suits.

THE HOUSEHOLD

THE SILVER ALWAYS CLEAN.

A Plan For Obviating a Much Letter Day In the Household Calendar.

Now that silver embodies all that is chic in the shops of the fashionable, whether for the table in particular or for rooms in general, a word or two about the care which should be bestowed upon it may not come amiss. This care is apt to be looked upon as demanding an abnormal amount of labor, which is indeed the greatest mistake in the world. Some people run away with the idea that the proper treatment of plate is embodied in a periodical and most tedious process of lengthy brushing, rubbing and polishing.

To obviate such black letter days, a systematic course must be adopted, for regular and frequent attention is the secret of bright looking plate. Indeed some housewives pride themselves on the fact that their silver never undergoes the traditional "cleaning" at all, and that, unless things are greasy or stained, the boiling soapsuds are all that is required to arrive at the desired result. An indispensable item to remember is that no material ought to be treated in any way likely to scratch it. Wash the articles in boiling water in which any good soap has previously been dissolved, rinse in hot clean water, and last, though by no means least, dry at once briskly and finally rub with a leather. If this were conscientiously done every time any silver is washed after use, there would be less dissatisfaction on the subject. But of course some extra attention is required for different treatment. Dishes, acids and certain articles of food at times play havoc with the dainty appearance of silver. Then some good silver powder or simply a little whiting should be mixed with alcohol or water, being rubbed smooth and thoroughly dissolved, so as to form a sort of cream paste devoid of hard lumps that scratch. Rub it on with a rag, let the article dry thoroughly and then brush with a curved brush, being careful to leave no trace of powder in the chasing, etc. The amount of drying to which the articles are subjected will facilitate the final polishing. This should be done with a soft leather. All the implements used must be kept for that one purpose alone. Much will of course depend on the cleanliness of the leathers. No good results can be obtained if they are in the least damp or greasy. The preparations must be chosen with care. Stains that refuse ordinary treatment can be touched up with spirits and polished again and again. Spoons, forks, etc., must be held in the hand. It is a bad thing to lean them on the table while polishing them, as many do, for it bends them and destroys their shape.

Teapots should not be put to soak in water, as it would loosen the ivory handle which protect the handle; nor should this utensil ever be put away with the lid closed down, or a very disagreeable musty flavor will characterize the next brew of tea it would be fragrant beverage. Chased things need special care and are rather more trouble to clean.

A Pretty Crochet Pattern.

Make four loops or picots of nine chain each, nine single crochet, three picots of nine chain each, nine single crochet. Fill each of the four loops in the same manner for second round, which has papers on pansy flower, copies written in excellent style.

But (with the exception of a few individual women who have made their literary reputations) there is a large number of newspaper work, which includes leader writing, reviewing and miscellaneous literary articles, is not in the hands of women at all, whose main interest is in connection with paragraphs and articles about social functions, the shops, fashions, cookery, home decoration and reports of lectures, meetings and the like. Women who write successfully upon cookery and art decoration requires a certain amount of technical knowledge, and women who are well up in these subjects find a ready market and very good prices for their literary wares.

Carried on legitimately—that is to say, without pretending brilliancy—there is a very suitable and desirable field for the feminine pen. But—and this brings me to the second part of my inquiry—can such be said in praise of the work of the ordinary lady journalist, which involves the constant wear and tear of reporting, night work, severe physical strain; which necessitates, if she is to get on, an astounding exhibition of audacity and push, and which perpetually compels her to place her natural timidity and reserve and unaggressiveness in the background; which includes the interviewing of persons who are not gentlemen and the formation of promiscuous acquaintances, and which, above all, forces her to write about worthless trivialities which, if she have any better sort of aspiration or literary taste, she heartily despises?

As a set-off against these disadvantages it must be admitted that a woman possessing the usual average intelligence and quickness, even if her education be of the most limited kind, can make a very fair living out of this sort of journalism, while a woman with decent ability, with good education and a facile pen and a quick eye, can make double the income earned by her scholarly sister, who has graduated at Newnham and passed a high school teacher—which is only another way of stating that journalism is the one profession, women or men, in whatever fix enemies like to call it, in which the work of men and women is paid for at precisely the same prices.

So far as I know, the real genuine life of the woman journalist has yet to be written and would afford interesting and fresh ground for a female Thackeray, if she only could find one. What is to hinder some enterprising press lady dear not herself give us her experiences and "betray the secrets of the prison house!" We might then get a solution of the problem that has puzzled a good many of us, as to the reason that certain ladies, whose scholarship is as evident as their shyness, are in the happy position of realizing large incomes.—Author.

Cheap Picture Frames.

A wise young woman who was the fortunate possessor of more good pictures than she could afford to frame bought a piece of pulp board at a printing office and made a mat about five inches wide for a charcoal picture. She cut the board very carefully with a sharp knife, and after tacking the picture on the wall the mat was put over it and secured with a small tack at each of the four corners. To relieve the plain look she fastened a red ribbon across one lower corner with brass headed tacks and slipped five or six photographs under the ribbon and the edge of the mat. The effect was only ten cents and the effect remarkable. A steel engraving may be framed in the same way.—Chicago Herald.

TO ENJOY LIFE

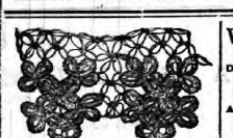
HORSE AND CARRIAGE.

To get the best Carriage, you should examine our fine stock. Don't forget, either, that a nice Lap Robe and Whip are necessary to a good outfit. At our place they cost but little, and we have many grades. Suppose you give us a chance to show them to you? We have also plenty of Fly Nets, which your horse will be very thankful for.

L. M. FRENCH,

CARRIAGE MANUFACTURER. 34, 36, 38, 40 SOMERSET STREET.



LOOP LACE.

In the second round make eight single crochet; fill each picot with 15 single crochet.

After filling all picots, make five chain; fasten the two loops opposite each other, together with a slip stitch. Make five chain; fasten; under the five chain make four loops of five chain each; fill these five chain with ten single crochet. The figures are put together with a row of double quirpure, finishing with a row of double quirpure for the straight edge, says Good Housekeeping, from which this attractive design is reproduced.

Frying, Braising and Stewing.

The ordinary process of frying is rarely understood. Food is made greasy and often indigestible because the fat is not as hot as it should be and the pan not deep enough. The fat must be smoking hot—about 400 degrees Fahrenheit. Experience will soon teach a cook that the required temperature is reached when a bit of bread browns in a few seconds if placed in the kettle. A thin coating is thus made on oysters, croquettes or whatever is being fried, and all the juices and flavors are kept within. But the fat outside not being able to penetrate it. The same practice should be followed with boiling, broiling and roasting. If the fire is very hot at first, the albumen of the entire surface of the meat is coagulated, and the fluids are thus inclosed. The heat may then be gradually lessened and the interior of the meat allowed to cook more slowly. In braising and stewing, the meat is covered with a liquor of vegetable or animal juices and cooked slowly in a vessel, with a closely fitting cover to prevent evaporation. The reason for this is more clearly understood when if is remembered that in making soup the meat is always to be put in cold water.

Forced Eggs.

Boil 6 fresh eggs 12 minutes. When cold, halve them lengthwise, take out the yolks, pound them perfectly, first by themselves, then with 3 ounces of good butter, a seasoning of salt, cayenne and nutmeg or mace, a large teaspoonful or more of minced parsley and the yolks of two raw eggs. Slice a small bit off the whites to make them flat, fill them smoothly with the yolks, form a small dome in the center of the dish with the remainder of the mixture and lean the eggs against it, placing them regularly around. Set them into a gentle oven for 10 minutes and send them quickly to table.

Orange Cake.

Two cups of sugar, 3 cups of flour, nearly 1 cup of milk or water, yolks of 5 eggs and whites of 4, well beaten; 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in three or four cakes and spread the icing between and on the top. The icing is made with the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth, adding powdered sugar until almost too stiff to stir; then add the juice and a little of the grated rind of an orange. The icing is quite soft after the juice of the orange is added, and it flavors a cake nicely.

WOMEN JOURNALISTS.

DO THEY TEND TO LOWER THE DIGNITY OF THE CALLING?

A Pertinent Question—Are Women Writers to Blame for All the Silly Stuff That Appears in So Called Society Papers?—A Good Word for Them.

Those who look upon the present condition of the press with unalloyed satisfaction, and who consistently maintain in the face of anything in the way of proof or evidence that the influence of women in journalism, as in everything else, is necessarily a good one, will probably regard the situation from the optimistic point of view only.

Those, however, who prize that vigor and virility of sentiment and writing which characterizes the best masculine pens; who deplore the personalities, gossip and feminine tone which find so prominent a place in many of the papers; who value style and scholarship and humor, all of which stand a chance of being neglected, if not lost, will see reason for regret that so much of the literature of the day is written by women. Nowhere, in the opinion of the present writer, can this deterioration and demoralizing influence be seen to greater advantage than in the society papers, which, however, it is only just to say, are as much read by men as by women.

There are a large number of so called high class society periodicals, the greater part of which consists of the vulgarest gossip and personalities about the conversation, mode of life and movement of persons who are in the sense of the word "society;" who have distinguished themselves in no legitimate way, and often in no way at all outside existing, and whose "smartness" or fastness or money alone makes them the object of this rubbishing tittle-tattle. While, however, a good portion of this literature is as harmless as it is stupid, the same cannot be said of the very latest development of feminine enterprise in the press which seems likely to have a flourishing existence before it.

This takes the form of a "lady's letter," and is written ostensibly by a lady of fashion to her correspondent that is having recourse to the vilest and most contemptible of disreputability, but some way beyond it. She purports to give an account of her week's doings, which generally include a visit to made halls and other places not usually considered classic ground for decent women. Somewhere or other there is one "Charlie" or "Jack" in town, and this accommodating husband invariably figures in the description so as to give the thing presumably an air of propriety, lest any harmful person peruse some of this bare, flippant, worthless stuff now becoming so general and ask himself whether it can have anything but a vicious effect on the brainless young persons (it is to be supposed they are young) who read it every week.

But even if these society papers are left out of account it must be apparent to any one who has an intimate acquaintance with current newspaper literature that the wishy washiness strain is far too predominant, and that the hysterical and emasculate attitude taken up in some quarters on certain social and other questions is a direct result of this feminine influence. Of course a large amount of respectable journalism is done by women, and is read by women, and the proof of this is to be found in the existence of well written and ably conducted papers, and in the successful launching of the new paper for women, which has papers on pansy flower, copies written in excellent style.

But (with the exception of a few individual women who have made their literary reputations) there is a large number of newspaper work, which includes leader writing, reviewing and miscellaneous literary articles, is not in the hands of women at all, whose main interest is in connection with paragraphs and articles about social functions, the shops, fashions, cookery, home decoration and reports of lectures, meetings and the like. Women who write successfully upon cookery and art decoration requires a certain amount of technical knowledge, and women who are well up in these subjects find a ready market and very good prices for their literary wares.

She Was Kinder Than Her Kind.

The landlady of the boarding house had let him come in to the kitchen table, and she had set before him a piece of beef and a pitcher of water. He was pretty hungry and went for the beef vigorously, but it resisted all his efforts. After wrestling with it in vain he laid down his knife and fork and poured out a glass of water, which he proceeded to sip slowly. The lady watched him for several minutes.

"Aren't you hungry?" she said kindly.

"Yes'm," he replied meekly.

"Then why don't you eat that beef?"

"You will excuse me, mum," he said in a helpless tone, "but really I am too weak to do any hard work, and I thought mebbe I might get enough nourishment and strength out of this water to tackle the beef when I got rested."

Some landladies would have whacked him with a broom handle, but this one didn't; she gave him a plate of cold hash and a spoon.—Detroit Free Press.

Helping the Needy.

He was hard up and wanted money so badly that he finally concluded to deposit a handsome diamond ring in the hock shop.

"Can I borrow $100 here on a diamond worth $250?" he said to the proprietor.

"Lemme see the stone," demanded the money lender.

It was handed over and examined.

"Well?" inquired the applicant.

"I guess you can have it."

"Thanks. What are your rates?"

"Ten per cent. a month in advance. That is, I take out the interest and give you the balance."

"I don't care how you do it; all I want is the money."

"You say you want $100?"

"Yes."

"How long?"

"Blamed if I know, but a long while, I should think."

"For a year?"

"No, not that long; say about ten months," and the applicant hummed "I want a situation" in a low key as the money lender was making his calculation on a sheet of wrapping paper.

"That's all right," finally said the money lender. "You can get the ring when you call with the money."

"But where's my hundred?" asked the astonished applicant.

The money lender has absorbed it," responded the money lender, with a placid smile: "Ten months, you know, at 10 per cent in advance. Didn't you say you wanted a hundred for ten months? I think you did. There's your ticket. Thanks. Call again, please. We are always glad to assist the needy."

The applicant was dazed for almost seven minutes, then he walked out and hunted up a policeman.—Detroit Free Press.

Dictated.

She was a sweet, young girl. She knew that he had come to propose, and therefore she was very careful to act as though she did not know it.

He was a very matter of fact man who had made his money by getting the best of other people whenever he could in business, and he had certain fixed habits and a tendency toward economy in position. Upon discovering himself alone in a room with a sweet young girl he thought himself in his office with his typewriter. Nevertheless he had put off getting the better of another man in order to call and propose, and he knew that he intended to propose right there. This is how he did it:

"Miss Nellie Setemup (comma) 185 Gladison avenue (comma) New York (period) (Drop a line) My Dear Miss Gladison (colon). Went Back to First Principles.

The car driver was singing a hymn.

"I am glad," said the benevolent looking old gentleman standing on the front platform, with a smile, "to notice that there is one man at least who does not think it necessary to resort to abuse and hideous profanity in order to drive a team of mules."

The driver continued to sing:

In this vile world a friend to grace,
To help—

The off mule set its ears back and began to shake its tail.

The driver looked to see if his whip was in place. It was. He began again:

In this vile world a friend to grace—get up!
To help me on—get a move on you!

The mule jogged on at a slightly accelerated rate of speed, and the driver resumed his singing:

In this vile world—g'long!—a friend to grace,
To help me on to—

Whack!

In this vile world—whack!—a friend to grace,
To—whack!—help me on to—

"Gaul darn that dog blamed—whack—off mule to dog gone nation! Daddiedy dig bang his everlasting picture to—Whack! Whack!—Louis and back! Blast his—whack!—blamed old hide!"

But the horror stricken old gentleman had got off the car.—Chicago Tribune.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

ALMOST AN ACCIDENT.

Mr. Allaband's Narrow Escape at the North Avenue Station.

WHILE the C. Y. M. L. excursion train was standing at the North avenue station this morning it came near being the cause of accident. The train was standing in the side track and the engine was standing at the end of the platform, thus shutting off a view of incoming trains.

Policeman Corse stood on the tracks and stopped several people from crossing in front of passing trains, which he could see approaching though they could not.

Two trains leave the station within two minutes of each other for New York each morning. One at 7.58 and another at 8 o'clock. The 7.58 had just pulled out when the other train came up behind.

Special Officer Allaband started to cross toward the freight house. He was about to step directly in front of the engine of the right of way train when Policeman Corse saw his peril, and shouted at him. At the same instant another man grasped Allaband and held him as the engine went by. An eye witness said afterwards "It seemed just like saving a drowning man. Allaband was so badly frightened that he caught hold of the other man with both hands."

BREVITIES.

—Mr. P. M. French is having a new flag at lewalk placed in front of his mill on Somerset street.

—The work of stringing the trolley wires was begun to-day. The cross wires were finished yesterday.

—The C. Y. M. L. excursion to Highland Beach took out seven cars filled with happy excursionists this morning.

—The colored Free Masons of this city left this morning to accompany the excursion of colored Free Masons up the Hudson.

—The Rev. Mr. Hand will preach at the camp meeting at Vail's grove, Friday night. The camp will break up Sunday, August 6th.

—Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, held a meeting last evening, to complete arrangements to attend the funeral of Fireman Voorhees.

—The Sunday school of the German Reformed church will have their annual excursion to Papiac, (Boynton Beach) next Tuesday, August 8.

—A stage load of Plainfield-ites drove to Fetterlow's Hotel, in Washington Valley, last evening, where they pleasantly spent the evening dancing, and singing.

—Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, at their regular meeting last night, accepted the invitation of Miantonomo Tribe to attend their reception Friday night.

—Street Commissioner Meeker's men are changing the culvert at the corner of Watchung avenue and Third street in line with the street, since it has been widened.

—Mr. John Daley has had a new board walk laid in front of his property on Manning avenue. Mr. Daley since his purchase of the place has greatly improved it.

—Mr. George Fehring while unloading the rails for the switch is to be laid on Watchung avenue for the cars from the Somerset street line, had one of his hands badly bruised.

—To-night, at the Salvation Army barracks, Capt. Annie Keith of the women's training garrison at New York, will conduct a special meeting. The Army invites all to attend.

—Westfield holds the record for big excursions. Plainfield sent out 24 cars recently when the Baptists went to Asbury Park, but the Westfield went three better, and had 27 cars filled.

—The members of Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, will hold a special meeting to-night in the parlors of Gazelle Engine Company. Important business is to be transacted and all members are requested to be present.

—An agent for an installment house called at a customer's house in the borough yesterday to collect or take the goods. He did neither. While he was talking to the mother the son ran down the street and escaped with the goods.

—Chief Grant has received word to look out for Michael Joseph Tracy and John Fitzpatrick, who are wanted in Toronto, Canada, for robbing the government. They are both young men and have small moustaches. $500 reward is offered for their capture.

—A particularly timely article is Mr. W. T. Stead's contribution to the August Review of Reviews. It consists of late Admiral Tryon and the "Victoria" disaster. Mr. Stead of all the journalists of England has shown the most active interest in the British navy. He writes with the keenest pleasure and with the most vivid interest and charm upon all subjects connected with the sea forces of Her Majesty. His sketch of the career of the late Admiral Tryon is one which will probably attract wide attention.

Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of real estate in the borough were duly recorded in County Clerk's office between July 21 and August 1:

GYPSIES ENCAMPED AT CAMPBELL'S

Chief Lovell and His Daughter Among Them.

TRIBE of gypsies who have been camped at Waverly, near Newark, and who have attracted so much attention by the the elopement of the chief's daughter, whose name was Lorvil, with her brother-in law, whose name is Evans, are camping near Campbell's Club House, on Park avenue, now.

Chief Lovell's scheme to entrap his daughter and Evans, who fled to Canada and were married, was a shrewd one. He sent out word that he would forgive the couple if they would return. As soon as this reached the ears of the elopers they immediately returned to Asbury Park, and camped with a band of gypsies there.

Word was sent to Chief Lovell of the couple's return, and he soon had the satisfaction of having Evans behind the bars, in a Newark jail.

TO ENLARGE ITS PLANT.

Extension to be Built by the Plainfield Electric Light Company.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company has decided to enlarge its plant, and for that purpose has purchased the house corner Second street and Madison avenue.

The company will build a new boiler room, oil room, and extension to the engine and dynamo room. Mr. John P. Emmons, the builder, has been awarded the contract.

PERSONAL

Miss Lillian Fritz of Park avenue is visiting friends in New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Murray have gone to Chicago, to visit the World's Fair.

Mr. Rosbmore of Grand avenue has returned home after his Summer outing.

Mrs. A. C Vail of West Eighth street is at the Indian Harbor Hotel, Greenwich, Conn.

Mrs. L. H. Depew of Franklin place and Miss Everist left to-day for Schooley's Mountain.

Mrs. Isaac Pangborn and her daughter Miss Louise of Rockview avenue are at Asbury Park.

Miss Caroline S. Graham, of Ridgefield, Coon., is visiting Miss Ida Musgrave of Mercer avenue.

Mr. B. H. Moore of Grove street is at Edgewood, Green county, N. Y. for the month of August.

Miss Ellen McDivitt of Park avenue sailed yesterday for Ireland, to spend a month at her old home.

Mr. P. C. Staats of Dunellen has been appointed a fourth class postmaster to replace Postmaster Harold.

The family of Mr. S. St. J. McCutcheon of Rockview Terrace started to-day for Saranac Lake, Franklin county, N. Y.

Miss Anna Raybert of Brooklyn, N. Y., is visiting in North Plainfield as the guest of Miss Clara Fleming of Willow avenue.

Mr. Richard Totten, formerly of this city, but recently of Newark, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Edward Terry of Grandview avenue.

Mr. Walter McGee and family of Rockview avenue will start to-morrow for Windham, Green county, N. Y., to be gone during August.

Mrs. J. H. Ackerman of West Seventh street, Mrs. Marion Ackerman, and Mrs. Wills of La Grande avenue started yesterday for an outing.

Mrs. Edward Maurer of this city started to-day to visit "old ocean" and enjoy its breezes. She will be at the Pine Grove Cottage, Bradley Beach.

Saturday, Captain Frank L. C. Martin of Park avenue, will start for Chicago to attend the national race meet there, which commences August 12.

The family of Superintendent Bond of the Boys' Club started to-day for an outing of probably two months. They will first go to New Haven, Conn, and later will spend some time in New Hampshire.

Messrs. A. L. Hinrichs, of the Crescent Wheelmen and R. Williams start to-night for Chicago, to attend the international race meet to be held there next week. Mr. Hinrichs has entered in some of the events.

The funeral of the late Hiram Voorhees took place this afternoon from the First M. E. church. The employees at Marsh, Ayers Co's showed their respect for their fellow workman by attending in a body. The members of Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2 and of Queen City Lodge, No. 228, I. O. O. F., also attended.

Ran a Nail Into Its Foot.

Yesterday, as the family of Lawyer Northrup of Crescent avenue was out driving in the vicinity of Westfield, their horse stepped on a nail which penetrated its foot. The horse became very lame, and it was with difficulty it traveled. They finally reached home and the horse was taken to Mr. Hedden's stable on West Fourth street where the nail was extracted by a blacksmith. The animal's foot is quite sore yet to-day.

THE PACE QUICKENS.

FIREMAN MARTIN LESSENS MR. SALTZMAN'S LEAD.

Only Three Weeks More, and the Most Popular Fireman will be Preparing for Chicago.—A Good-Natured Contest and Everybody Hustling.

BEHIND the quiet demeanor of the firemen who lead in this Word's Fair race there is much studying and planning, as in a game of chess. The man who is the best general in marshalling and controlling his forces, will undoubtedly win the coveted trip.

It is particularly noticeable too, that all the firemen are good natured and friendly toward each other. It is to their credit, and the winner will have the best wishes of his competitors.

To day Fireman Martin has received the largest number of votes and lessens the distance that has been between him and the leader, ex-Chief Saltzman. Many others keep adding to their count, too, so that they'll be in at the finish, which is now but a few weeks away.

In sending coupons observe the following rules:

Give your votes in by noon, if credit the same day is desired. Votes received in the afternoon are held until the next day. All coupons are cancelled, by perforation, when received. Be sure and get The News every night.

"Dar's Trouble in the Household."

Charles Soucoker of Prospect place, who was recently arrested on complaint of his wife, who claimed that he beat her and who was released to appear for trial on August 17, is again in trouble with his "spouse," so it is said. Last night she had the goods moved out of the house, and it is inferred she will give up housekeeping.

Mrs. Soucoker told Chief Grant she other day she was afraid to go back to the house for fear her husband would kill her. She also said she was going to give up housekeeping and leave her husband.

Policeman Kiely Off His Beat.

Policeman Kiely is absent from his beat to-day and many inquiries are heralded at Chief Grant as to the cause. The chief's reply invariably is: "He is on his vacation. He started to-day for Highland Beach on the excursion and will to morrow visit Sheepshead Bay and other points of interest."

The Weather.

On Friday slightly warmer, clear weather and fresh southerly winds will prevail; and on Saturday, fair, more sultry and warmer weather, followed by rain in the late region.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

Important Invention of a New Market Man.

WITHOUT using a chain bicycles are to be propelled in accordance with a patent invented by Mr. N. C. Frazer of New Market.

For the past ten years Mr. Frazer has been devoting considerable of his time to experimenting and of late years has turned his attention to bicycles and a method of propelling them without use of chain. Much studying and planning, as in a game of chess. The man who is the best general in marshalling and controlling his forces, will undoubtedly win the coveted trip.

It is particularly noticeable too, that all the firemen are good natured and friendly toward each other. It is to their credit, and the winner will have the best wishes of his competitors.

LAYING PROSTRATE UNDER A TREE.

A Young Girl Found Unconscious Near Summit.

Lying prostrate at the base of a large oak tree near the top of Overlook Mountain, about half a mile from Summit, Evelyn Hahn, a pretty 17-year-old brunette, was found late Monday evening in an unconscious condition. John Brennan of Summit, who discovered the girl, supposed at first that she was dead. He found beside her an empty bottle labeled "Laudanum." A close examination showed the girl was not dead, and after a futile effort to restore consciousness she was conveyed to Mrs. Shine's house, a short distance away.

Up to a late hour Tuesday night the girl had not regained consciousness, and serious doubts of her recovery are entertained.

Pump Works Foundries Closed.

The foundries of the Worthington Pump Works of South Brooklyn, which are in Elizabethport, were shut down indefinitely last evening, thus throwing 600 men out of employment.

This action was precipitated by a strike of the molders and coremakers against a reduction of 10 per cent. in their wages.

An Excursion to Eldorado.

Last night the Central Railroad Company ran a special excursion to Eldorado, thus affording Plainfielders an opportunity of witnessing the performances of "King Solomon," presented with elaborate scenery and in which 1,400 men and women appeared.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Nine German Man-of-War's Men Killed.

BERLIN, August 3, (Special.)—A disastrous explosion of a large grenade, measuring 28 centimetres in diameter, occurred to-day on board the German armor clad steamer Baden at Kiel. Lieutenants Oelsner and Zembsch, and seven seamen were killed, and seventeen persons were injured.

The Navahoe "Not in it."

LONDON, Aug. 3, (Special.)—The yacht race for the Town Prize took place to-day off the Isle of Wight, and was won by the Satanita, which beat the Valkyrie by eight minutes.

Rough weather compelled the American cruck yacht, Navahoe, to withdraw from the race, disabled.

Killed a Supposed Robber.

PORT RICHMOND, S. I., Aug. 3, (Special.)—Adam Froelich, a produce dealer, was shot and killed at 3.30 o'clock this morning by Policeman Edward Wells of the Richmond county force.

The man had been acting suspiciously and failed to surrender when ordered.

A Big Failure.

CHICAGO, August 3, (Special.)—Lazarus Silverman, a well-known private banker, suspended to-day. Liabilities, $500,000. Assets, much more.

THE MEAT MEN COMBINE.

The Wholesale Butchers of New Jersey Adopt a New Credit System.

The market men are discussing a movement which has been started by the wholesale butchers of this State for a new system of credit which will secure to them prompt payment from the retail dealers. A meeting of the wholesale meat men was held in this city a week ago, and the preliminary organization was effected. All over the State the wholesalers are talking of joining the combine.

The project is to furnish no retail butcher with meat who has not paid his last week's bill. This rule has been generally practiced by individual wholesalers, but its effect amounted to nothing because the small butchers could stop dealing with the wholesaler and buy of another. Under the new system if a butcher owes one wholesaler a week's bill no other wholesaler in the combine, and every wholesale butcher of Elizabeth without exception is in it, can furnish him meat until he pays his old bill.

The combine has also decided to engage counsel for the collecting of bad debts, all sharing alike in the legal costs.

Feeding Horses

Horses almost invariably eat too much much hay, says a writer in the American writer in the American Agriculturist.

A daily ponderous ration for their horses, but throw down a forkful of hay almost every time they enter the barn. As a result, many of these horses are eating from morning till night, to the manifest disadvantage of the hay mow, and the manifest disadvantage, also, of the horses, whose bodies becomes distended, skins dry, and coats rough, while the digestive organs are thrown out of gear, so that the animal's whole system becomes impaired.

* * * * * * *

"A small ration of hay fed with regularity three times a day, and a suitable grain ration carefully incorporated with it, with water twice a day, and a thorough grooming, will make a spiritless, rough-coated horse with distended body, in four weeks or five, a much more alert, handsomer and vastly more efficient animal. The grain ration should be of ground or cracked corn, and ground oats or bran, the grain being mixed with the hay, so that the hay and grain will have to be eaten together, as it has been found that in this way the grain is much more fully digested. As to the amount of grain that shall help make up a ration, that must depend on circumstances and the ability of the owner to provide the grain, or, perhaps better, his inclination to provide the grain, and also the work which the horse is called upon to do. The thing of chief importance is to get farmers to discard a part of the hay ration, and substitute for this discarded hay at least its value in the more condensed nutrition of corn, oats, or bran; it is rest will naturally follow. Corn has too much oil to be fed alone."

Knocked the Chimney Over.

Work has been begun on the new hose tower for Warren Engine Co. This noon while the men were at work on it, one of them let a timber slip. It fell, striking Mr. Humble's kitchen chimney, knocking it down. The chimney fell with a crash, frightning a number of people, who thought it was a man that had fallen from the tower.

Sons of Temperance Day.

Sons of Temperance day at Boynton Beach will be one week from yesterday. One of the features of the day will be the organization of a division at Woodbridge.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

Again the Rainfall has Been Deficient.

OR the week ending Monday, July 31 the observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report that in all sections of the State the temperature and sunshine have been above the weekly average, and that the rainfall has been greatly deficient and quite badly distributed. These conditions, coupled with the hot, drying winds, which prevailed, have very seriously affected all growing and maturing crops. Corn, in all sections, is reported rolling very quickly evaporated the little moisture received from the showers on the 26th and 29th.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.—The warm sunshine and high winds have dried up the soil, so much so, that seed and field corn, cucumbers, lima beans and potatoes will not be a heavy crop. A steady rain is greatly needed. The light showers on 26th and 29th were of little benefit.

PETER C. JOHNSON.

A Raritan Whyo Killed by a Coal Train.

James McGarry, one of the Raritan Whyos, was literally chopped to pieces by a coal train yesterday afternoon near Dunellen. He was attempting to board the coal train to get to his home when he slipped and fell under the wheels. Fully forty cars passed over his body.

McGarry was a blacksmith by trade. He was about 22 years of age.

Atchison Economizing.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad Company, in pursuance of its retrenchment plan, laid off more mechanics yesterday. There was a rumor of a 10 per cent. reduction in wages and salaries, but this has not been confirmed, the general officers being in Chicago in consultation with President Reinhart who lives at Nethorwood. This per day was passed and no explanation made.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Siam.

Since 500 years before Christ Siam has been known to history. It includes in its area about 240,000 square miles and has a population of 10,000,000. The country itself and its people are like a leaf cut from the histories of Herodotus and Xenophon and pasted into the story of the latter part of the nineteenth century. From the time Siam was first known to modern history it has been engaged in a struggle with the Laos country people and other wild and fierce tribes on the northeast. In 1826 the king of Siam conquered the Laosians so the extent of forcing them to be tributary to Siam. The Siamese government is an alleged constitutional monarchy, but in reality is despotic. One writer says the Siamese are too polite to oppose the will of their sovereign, whether he violates the constitution or not.

Siam is not powerful enough to subjugate entirely the wild tribes on its northeast boundary. Three centuries ago Pegu began to decline. Tonquin and the region around the edge of Siam. Whatever western civilization has been pioneered upon the surface of things in Siam is mostly due to France. That country is, moreover, quite able to exterminate the Laosians and the other tribes that rebel periodically against the Lord of the White Elephant. Therefore it is not strange that she has been waiting many years for a pretext which will enable her to seize the tract on the northeast of Siam for herself and lessen if possible even the kingdom of Siam on that side. Seven years ago the French governor of Indo-China declared that the proper boundary for Siam was a chain of mountains which constitutes the watershed between the rivers Menam and Me-Kong. This would diminish Siam by one-third.

While Siam holds a sort of suzerainty over Laos at present, she herself is under the protection of China and pays a tribute to that country. It is a sort of Chinese puzzle—a ball within a ball. This explains the interest of China in the trouble between Siam and France. The soil of Siam is extremely fertile. It resembles Egypt in many respects. Rice is the principal cereal, and it is grown upon fields which are inundated annually by the Menam, the Nile of Siam. Tropical fruits are produced in great abundance. And if anybody wants to hunt big game and dangerous game Siam is one of the few spots on the globe where this can still be done.

It Was a Pretty Fight.

When a British citizen talks about Americans being undignified and of the unseemly scenes that sometimes take place in our congress, and also of "disgraceful proceedings in Colorado," just read to him the following little extract from the cable dispatches on the night of the closure of debate concerning the Irish home rule question in the house of commons. Two facts stand out prominent in the general fuss. One is that Tim Healy got his silk hat smashed; the other is that Colonel Saunderson, the champion of the Ulster kickers, got a black eye:

Curses, yells of hate and gross insults were heard on every side. John Logan (Liberal) ran down to the first Opposition bench and began upbraiding Edward Carson, a Tory. As he shook his fist under Mr. Carson's nose, George Wyndham and William Fisher jumped to the assistance of their fatally collaborated friend. Mr. Logan by the neck, threw him to the floor and then and there pounded him under a bench. Somebody smashed Tim Healy's high hat down over his eyes. Healy tore off the hat and dashed into the mêlée on all fours. Arthur Pure fast as Mr. Hanbury, still shouting that the chairman must name Mr. O'Connor, was trying to get by. Mr. Hanbury was knocked over a bench by the force of the collision before Mr. Healy got to him.

A free fight now broke out at the top of the gangway. The center of it was William Redmond (Parnellite, who had taken advantage of the general license to push over Colonel Saunderson, the champion of the men of Ulster. Saunderson resented and at once took on the Parnellites. Blows were struck right and left. Members fell and were picked up by their friends to fight again. The whole space between the front benches was filled with a struggling, cursing mass of members, striking, clawing and upsetting each other.

Not only did it not hurt the Duke of Veragua's feelings to propose to raise a fund in America for his benefit, but his brother, the Marquis de Barboles, wants his share of the fund too. He complains that he, too, came to America when his brother did and likewise squandered a large amount of his available cash on his and that he is out many thousand dollars. He doesn't see, therefore, does Barboles, why he shouldn't be included in the American benevolent fund. Apparently Americans need have no fear that the blue blood of Spain will boil with indignation over the proposition to accept alms to keep intact its azure line. Those sensitive gentlemen who feared this might be the case don't know blue blood.

There are pluck and industry enough in the soul of every American citizen who has met with losses in the present panic to pull himself together and go on again. If he uses the experience he gained in his last knock, it will enable him to weather future ones and become a richer, wiser, happier man than he was before.

The financial ability of the Jewish race is apparent at a first glance at the correspondence of the international monetary conference. The president of the conference is Monsieur Levi. Now Rothschild devised the plan of the nine between will and wife.

FOR FINANCIAL RELIEF.

Congressman Johnson Will Introduce a Bill.

RESULTS OF MONEY STRINGENCY.

In the East the Factories Are Closing and the Savings Banks Are Adopting the Time Rule—In the West There Are Failures and Excitement.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Congressman Thomas L. Johnson will present to the coming congress a financial bill which is made public in a letter to the Cleveland chamber of commerce. The letter reads:

GENTLEMEN—Believing that the financial pressure now existing demands prompt and adequate relief, I propose on the first day of the coming session to introduce in the house of representatives the following bill:

An act to permit the exchange of United States bonds for treasury notes:

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, That any holder of bonds of the United States may, after the passage of this act, deposit such bonds at the treasury of the United States, or at the office of any assistant treasurer of the United States, and receive therefor their face value in treasury notes of the United States, as described in the act of July 14, 1890. Such bonds shall be held as a special deposit to the credit of the party depositing them, and during the time they are so held shall draw no interest, and shall be returned on the order of the party depositing them on the payment of their face value in United States currency.

Sec. 2. The secretary of the treasury shall make such regulations as may be necessary to secure to the government the payment of interest on such bonds during the time they are held as a special deposit, and he is hereby authorized to issue treasury notes to the amount needed and to provide for the cancellation of an equal amount of such notes out of moneys said bonds to their owners, and a sum sufficient to carry into effect the provisions of this act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Sec. 3. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. Johnson's Argument.

The repeal of the Sherman act, which I confidently anticipate, while it will allay fears, of any change in the measure of values, will do nothing directly to increase the medium of exchange. On the contrary, by stopping the issue of treasury notes for silver, it will lessen the supply. The only resource left open to meet the need for money, yet proposed with any hope of the necessary consent, is that of permitting the national banks to extend their issue to the face value of their deposited bonds. But this, while certain to arouse dispute and consequently cause delay, would increase the currency only some $17,000,000.

The bill I send you, allowing all holders of United States bonds to turn them into money, for such time as they may be willing to forego interest, offers a simple and immediate and sufficient remedy for the abnormal scarcity of money. Beyond the bonds deposited to secure the national bank circulation there are outstanding $400,000,000 government bonds, largely held by financial institutions.

The possibility of at once converting United States bonds into money would entirely do away with such danger and at once end the financial stringency. It is not so much the amount that would be converted that would tell, but the amount that could be converted, if there was need.

The government would run no risk. It would merely exchange interest bearing obligations into noninterest bearing obligations, with a saving, for a time, of interest.

There would be no loss of the selling value of bonds to the holders and no permanent expansion of the currency, for as soon as money came to be hoarded, became normally abundant again, borrowing rates would fall, the price of bonds would rise, and it would be to the interest of the holders of the deposited bonds to reclaim them and return again to the treasury the money issued on them.

I introduced into the last congress a bill intended to add to our currency system the elastic feature of an interconvertibility of bonds and treasury notes. The bill I now propose applies the same principle in a way better adapted to meet the exigency that has now arisen and to avoid matters over which there might be dispute. Believing that it offers a simple, prompt and unobjectionable remedy for most pressing evils, and desiring its consideration by my constituents and the general public, I thus lay it before you in advance of presentation.

Chicago Board of Trade Failures.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Prices boomed on the board of trade in the face of three fresh failures. Excitement for a time was at fever heat. One collapse was that of the most prominent grain carrier in Chicago, if not in the entire country—C. D. Eggleston & Co. The other failure smashing were George G. Parker & Co. and Thomas Bregg. The new failures, however, including that of Eggleston, grew out of the collapse in pork and lard corners.

Nothing definite can yet be given with regard to the extent of Tuesday's failures. The liabilities of the Cudahy-Fairbank-Wright combination, as represented by closed out trades on 'change, are estimated at $1,000,000 to $1,200,000 over and above the margin deposits.

The Gold Reserve Intact.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—For the first time since April 20, 1893, when the gold reserve fell below the $10,000,000 mark, the reserve has been made intact. The gold in the treasury exclusive of that held as a basis for gold certificates amounts to $100,791,409, of which $78,000,000 is free gold. This gold has come into the United States from Europe, Mexico and the West Indies, much of it being the gold sent out from the United States during the late spring and early summer months. Information received here in treasury circles indicates that $10,000,000 in gold is now on its way from Europe to the United States, and most of this, it is expected, will find its way as usual into the treasury.

No Money In Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 3.—The mill situation has reached the strangest condition ever known in the history of the local cotton industry. Several treasurers of mills have received notices from their banks that there was difficulty in paying checks in currency. Substantially the notices say that the banks will hereafter honor no checks in money, but will endeavor, as far as possible, to the care of deposits already made. The effect of this action will be wide-spread, and may call for a total suspension of operations on the part of the mills.

Factories Shut Down.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Chelsea jute mills of Brooklyn were closed for an indefinite period. Eight hundred skilled operatives were thrown out of employment.

COLLEGE POINT, N. Y., Aug. 3.—The Empire rubber works at this place have decided to shut down three days each week. The works employ over 1,000 men and women.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 3.—The Appleton Manufacturing company was closed for one month. The Milford shoe factories will work four days per week until further notice.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 3.—The Barkerville mills will be shut down Saturday night and the Belair a week later.

Banks Enforce the Time Rule.

ALBANY, Aug. 3.—The Albany Savings bank, which on Monday announced that it would pay its depositors only that requiring notice, has decided to take advantage of the 60 days' clause.

HARTFORD, Aug. 3.—The four savings banks in this city require notice of 90 days to withdraw deposits.

MILFORD, Mass., Aug. 4.—The Milford Savings bank posted notices this morning requiring 30 days' notice of withdrawals.

DEDHAM, Mass., Aug. 3.—The Dedham Institution for savings requires 30 days' notice for the withdrawal of deposits exceeding $50.

New York Banks Have Cash Enough.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The officials of the savings banks, this city, declare positively that there is no necessity among them to dispose of government bonds in order to replenish their cash reserves. At most of the banks it is stated that there is an abundance of cash on hand to meet all prospective demands.

The Sulzbacher-Gitterman Failure.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—William Sulzbacher and Henry Gitterman, composing the firm of Sulzbacher, Gitterman & Wedels, importers of woolens, of Worth street, made an assignment. Their capital was estimated at only $250,000, and their credits rating was shaded at Bradstreets.

Receivers For National Banks.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The comptroller of the currency appointed receivers of national banks as follows: Jeremiah Mahoney, receiver of the First National bank of Ouray, Colo.; Thomas A. Marlow, receiver of the Montana National bank of Helena.

Only One Bid.

BOSTON, Aug. 3.—City Treasurer Turner, on opening proposals for a $1,500,000 city loan, found but one bid. The advertisements for the loan occupied prominent places in the newspapers for several days past, and circulars were sent to all the banks.

Gold For This Country.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Six hundred and twenty thousand pounds in eagles and bar gold were sold by the Bank of England for the United States.

A Receiver For the Rio Grande Southern.

DENVER, Aug. 3.—T. E. Jeffrey, president of the Rio Grande, was appointed receiver of the Rio Grande Southern.

An Alabama Bank Closes.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 3.—The First National bank did not open its doors.

HARRISON'S CAMPAIGN.

It Is Already Well Under Way Out In Indiana.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Aug. 3.—From some of L. T. Michener's friends here it is learned that he has taken charge of Harrison's campaign for the nomination for president in 1896 and will work systematically from Washington. Log cabin and sycamore clubs are now being formed all over the state with Harrison solely in view.

The Harrison club got out circulars, and obtaining a large number of rooster pictures, such as Democrats use in case of elections, on the hour Friday night pasted them on the windows of Democratic and laboring men. The placard bore this statement: "These are the good times you voted for; now vote for Harrison and have no work, factories closed, no money."

The flight is to be started at once and Indianapolis, the state central committee is to open its offices for this purpose and the machine worked for all there is in it.

Charges Three With Conspiracy.

AVON-BY-THE-SEA, N. J., Aug. 3.—Henry Wackenhausen, proprietor of the Buckingham hotel here, Edward M. Kline and Henry Flammer were arrested charged with defamation of character and criminal conspiracy. The warrant was preferred by Robert P. Bell of Newark, N. J. They were arrested last week on a warrant charging him with misappropriating funds, which were the proceeds of an entertainment given for the Home for Crippled Children.

Carlisle at Gray Gables.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Aug. 3.—Secretary Carlisle arrived at the president's. Secretary Carlisle, Secretary Lamont and possibly others will leave here Friday afternoon and take the Fall River steamer Puritan at Fall River. On arrival at New York Saturday morning they will be conveyed to Jersey City, where a special car will be in waiting to take them to Washington.

Cubans Back In Cuba.

HAVANA, Aug. 3.—The Spanish steamer Julia, which sailed recently from Key West with a number of refugees back to Cuba a number of poor Cuban families that had sent a petition to the government asking permission to enable them to return to their native land, arrived here. She had on board 361 Cubans.

An Enforced Weekly Holiday.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—To reduce expenses and at the same time obviate the necessity of discharging any of its large City employees, the Pennsylvania railroad company has ordered laying off all shop hands and road workmen outside of those employed on the running of trains one day in each week.

Labouchere Compliments Rosebery.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—In the house of commons Mr. Henry Labouchere complimented Lord Rosebery upon his evasive-like attitude throughout the whole Siamese affair, and expressed the hope that Lord Rosebery would follow the same course in regard to Egypt.

Corbett Will Train at the Pines.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 3.—Pugilist Jim Corbett has finally decided to go into training here for his fight with Charley Mitchell. The American champion signed a four months' lease of the farm owned by Russell Hullick on Banks' Deal lake, near Loch Arbor.

Charged With Embezzlement.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 3.—Moses P. Smith, collector of taxes of South Orange, has been arrested on a complaint by Charles E. Brish of the township committee, charging him with embezzling funds of the township amounting to $13 00.

SILVER MEN GOING HOME

An Ironbound, No Compromise Platform Adopted.

BIMETALLISM THE ONLY CREED.

A Populist Proposition Convulsed the Convention During Its Last Moments—The Night Meetings Were Dismal Failures. Delegates Hurrying Out of the City.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The silver men have met, the silver orators have spoken at great length and with much force, resolutions expressing their views have been adopted, and they have adjourned. The closing scenes of the convention were lively.

The report of the committee on resolutions contained 1,500 words. It stated that bimetallism is as ancient as history; that gold and silver were made the money basis of the country by George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, indorsed by Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Jackson, and that silver was stricken down without any previous demand from any political party, in a measure through the efforts of the European moneyed classes.

The preamble continues as follows:

To supply the lack of currency the banks of the principal cities were compelled to substitute for money unknown to the laws, called clearing house certificates, and consequently the great crops now being gathered demands a vast amount of currency which the banks are unable to furnish. Under the present laws and conditions the daily press is clamoring for the repeal of the act of July 14, 1890, called the Sherman act, although the repeal of that act means the stoppage of the issue of more than $2,000,000 of money every month, thus shutting off the supply of the bulk of the money of the country in the midst of the terrible conditions which surround us, and ignoring the fact that to halve the balance left between the debtor and the creditor classes the supply of currency must increase side by side with the increase of population and business, and in this ratio the growth of population is at the rate of about 22 per cent every ten years, while the increase of business is much greater.

Therefore, in view of all these facts, we declare, That, that there must be no compromise of this question. All legislation demonetizing silver and restricting the coinage thereof must be immediately and completely repealed, by an act restoring the coinage of the country to the conditions established by the soundness of the fathers, and without which no act can be passed without complaint from any part of our people. Every hour's delay in undoing the corrupt work of Eyster Boyd and our foreign enemies is an insult to the dignity of the American people, a crime against the country and an act of contempt to place us again under the yoke from which George Washington and his compatriots rescued us.

We protest against the financial policy of the United States being made dependent upon the varying policies of any foreign government, and assert the power of this nation to stand on its own feet and legislate for itself upon all subjects.

Second—We assert that the only remedy for the unendurable financial trouble it is open the mints of the nation to gold and silver at equal terms at the old ratio of sixteen of silver to one of gold.

They wound up by saying that the Sherman law is not responsible for the present financial conditions to the extent claimed.

A Crusading Committee.

For the consideration of the convention, back not as a part of the platform, the committee added and reported the following, which was unanimously adopted:

The committee further recommend that this convention immediately appoint a committee, composed of one member from each state and territory, to be selected by the respective delegations, which committee shall confer with the American National Bimetallic league jointly, devise a plan and to provide ways and means for thoroughly organizing the people for the impending strife from the final demonetization of silver and the adoption of a single gold standard.

The platform was briefly explained by Chairman Reagan, who then moved its adoption, as a matter of form. A loud protest from the picturesque Carl Brown of California. The California delegate objected to the second clause of the resolutions, wherein it is affirmed that the mints should be opened to gold and silver to be the basis of all money. This met the unanimous approval of the Populists, and for a moment it seemed that Mr. Brown's amendment would stop the convention.

After some spirited pleadings Mr. Brown withdrew his amendment, but Scott of Kansas demanded that Donnelly quote the section of the constitution that declared gold and silver to be the only basis of money. Great confusion ensued, the delegates endeavoring to howl Scott down, but that gentleman was persistent. Donnelly quoted in justification of the interpretation the restrictive section of the constitution, which prohibits any state from making anything but gold and silver legal tender for the payment of debts.

The Silver Leaders.

Cyclone Davis of Texas finally proposed an amendment to the clause in question, which was accepted as satisfactory to all. It struck out of the second clause of the platform the word "basis" and inserted in lieu thereof the words "standard of value." Then Mr. Reagan moved the amendment, and it was finally accepted by the committee and unanimously adopted, to the great triumph of the original objectors, Scott of Kansas and Brown of California. On motion of Mr. Reagan the resolutions were then adopted by acclamation.

On motion of Congressman Bryan of Nebraska the selection of Chairman Warner of the Bimetallic league, delivered on Monday, was adopted as the address of the convention to the American people.

At the instance of Mr. C. S. Thomas of Colorado the convention extended a unanimous vote of thanks to President Thurman and other officers of the assembly. Cyclone Davis of Texas got the floor long enough to read a dispatch in an evening paper stating that Secretary Carlisle had been in conference with New York bankers on Wall street to see what they desired done to meet the present crisis.

Mr. Bryan offered a resolution asking the secretary of the treasury to also receive a delegation from "the people" to hear what they thought should be done in the present crisis. The resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote, intermingled with cynical exclamations of Secretary Carlisle for his "betrayal of silver."

On motion of General Warner of Ohio the convention adjourned sine die.

There was a conglomeration of ideas, a scarcity of workingmen and a conspicuous absence of the silver congressional leaders at the open air mass meeting, or rather meetings on the lake front at night.

There were plenty of speakers, but they did not confine themselves to the money question. Some of them were Populists and single tax advocates, and they brought forward their doctrines as the remedy for the financial and commercial troubles of the country. Mrs. Kline said prohibition, woman's suffrage, free silver and free trade were the remedies for all existing evils.

Tired out by the long speeches many delegates took early trains for home last night, and more went away this morning.

WHOLE BLOCK BURNED.

The Fire Which Was Once Subdued Broke Out Unexpectedly.

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Fire was discovered in W. S. Barbour's grocery store, on Warburton avenue, and after fighting it for a short time the firemen left, thinking it was extinguished, but several hours after the flames broke out afresh and soon communicated to the adjacent buildings.

Before the firemen were on the scene again the flames had made such progress that the whole block of wooden buildings from Main street to Dock street was burned. The fire was in the business portion of the city, which narrowly escaped being entirely destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $100,000. The heaviest losers are John Coppotti, silk manufacturer, and Leslie Saunders, who owned several of the burned buildings. The storekeepers lose about $50,000 between them, the remainder falling upon Coppotti and Saunders.

FOSTER'S DEFENSE.

He Says an Investigation Will Not Hurt Cleveland.

FOSTORIA, O., Aug. 3.—The statement of Mr. Gormley, assignee for Hon. Charles Foster and Foster & Co., shows that Mr. Foster had overdrawn his personal account to the amount of $150,000.

On being asked for a statement, Mr. Foster admitted the overdraft of his account, which he accounted for in the fact of large investments in Fostoria. He admits that he has suffered loss in other directions. The statement of his personal affairs will show that he has now more than $800,000 of his own securities pledged for the indorsements of the bank.

He courts any investigation that can be made and assures his friends that nothing can be developed inconsistent with the character for integrity which he has always borne.

MR. CASE'S COMPANION.

It Is Alleged That She Was an Adventuress.

THE STEAMSHIP DISAPPEARANCE.

Mrs. Beaton of Burlington, Ont., Identified as the Woman Who Posed as the Daughter of the Wealthy Old Carriage Builder Who Was Drowned off Chincteague.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The World prints the following story today:

When the Old Dominion line steamer Guyandotte, from Norfolk, came to her dock here on the evening of Friday, June 30, her commander, Captain Walker, reported the mysterious disappearance of one of his passengers. A half distracted woman paced the deck and between her sobs told the officers of the ship that the missing passenger was her aged father, Cicero Harrison of Jackson, Mich., a cousin of ex-President Benjamin Harrison. She was Mrs. Mary Oliver, his widowed daughter, she said, and her father had been traveling in search of health. She also gave out that he was a carriage maker and had retired with a fortune in 1883. Next day Mrs. Oliver herself disappeared.

The World has found Mrs. Oliver. She is the wife of Malcolm Beaton of Burlington, Ont., and is not related to Cicero Harrison. In fact the missing Guyandotte passenger was Cicero Harrison Case of Norfolk, and not Cicero Harrison of Jackson, Mich. The old man was in the hands of a clever adventuress, who had obtained from him large sums of money, and who undoubtedly knows more about his death by drowning than the police have been able to find out.

The story of Mrs. Oliver, who masqueraded as the daughter of Mr. Case, is extraordinary. When confronted by a World reporter at her home in Burlington, Canada, she denied her connection with the Cicero Harrison mystery.

Yesterday The World sent to Burlington the same reporter who had talked with her as "Mrs. Oliver" on board the Guyandotte on July 1, and he positively identified the woman.

She Knew Him In Burlington.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beaton's connection with Cicero Harrison Case forms an interesting story, covering a period of five or six years, when she and her family occupied a house on the farm of old man Case, who then lived in Burlington.

The old man, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Catharine Wallace, and his granddaughter, left Burlington for the sunny south, where he had extensive interests in a gold mine, on Oct. 8 last. They went to Norfolk and settled in Brambleton Ward, a suburb of that city.

Before they had been in Norfolk many days a strange woman appeared in that city and stopped at the boarding house of Mrs. William Smith, on East Main street. The next day she located Case, but instead of calling on him she sent a note, appointing a time and place for an interview.

The old man called to see her, and the following day the two left the city together for a trip to North Carolina. At least this is what the old man told his daughter. He did not, however, tell her that he was going with a woman, and until the present time Mrs. Wallace is ignorant of the identity of the woman who led her father to his death.

After an absence of a week the man returned alone. He was greatly excited and was for several days there.

On Monday he left with "Mrs. Thompson" for Boston on the steamer Providence. They returned on Tuesday, quarreled and separated at Norfolk. The old man drew out the balance of his money—about $900—gave his granddaughter $200 and his watch and went on board the steamship Guyandotte. A woman, who gave her name to the purser as Mrs. Mary Oliver, also went on the same boat. On June 30 a. m. the next morning, while the boat was off Chincoteague, Case disappeared. It was then that "Mrs. Oliver" made her statement about the black log vanishing $100,000.

How She Was Discovered.

It was not until several days after his death that the identity of the old man became known, as unusually bad luck seemed to covered her tracks. Now it is believed that she used her young babe for the purpose of blackmailing the old man, and when she found no further use for the little one she made away with it. It was probably with part of the money which she secured from him that the she purchased the store and building at Burlington last week. On every trip she made to the southern states she returned with considerable money.

It was the purchase of the building lot above mentioned which led to the discovery of the woman's identity. On Monday she sent a notification to William Oliver of Burlington, from whom she purchased her building lot, stating that she had taken possession of the property. To this letter she signed her name Elizabeth Beaton.

When a World reporter found her yesterday at her home in Burlington she denied ever having seen him before.

Mrs. Beaton, alias Oliver, alias Thompson, is about 40 years of age, and has unprepossessing features. She is about 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds; has black hair, piercing gray eyes, exceedingly large hands and long fingers. Her nose is large and her face is covered with freckles.

MONKEY'S BITE.

It May Prove Fatal to Sadie Sharpe of Coney Island.

CONEY ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Sadie Sharpe, a performer at West Brighton, is seriously ill at Gallgen's hotel, suffering from the effects of monkey bites. The woman attended the matinee performance at Bullock's concert garden on Sea Beach walk, and induced the snake Dodo, a trained monkey, drink a glass of beer.

The animal drank half of the contents of the glass and then refused to drink any more. Mrs. Sharpe insisted upon the animal's emptying the glass, when he seized the woman's right hand in his mouth and chewed it, lacerating it severely.

After the monkey was made to release its hold the woman fainted. She was carried to a drug store, where her wounds were cauterized and dressed. She was then removed to her home in the hotel, where she was attacked twice with convulsions. It required five men to hold her in bed. One wound is in a bad place, the artery between the forefinger and thumb being opened. The doctor fears blood poisoning will set in, and does not think Mrs. Sharpe will recover.

BROOKLYN'S SCANDAL.

Another Arrest Made in the Tax Rebate Stealing Case.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 3.—Lieutenant Colonel Selden C. Clobridge of the Fourteenth regiment was arrested as an accomplice of John Cutts in the theft of tax rebates due to property owners from that city. Collector Swan says he is convinced that Cutts had confederates. They may have been clerks in my office, and they may have been tax searchers.

It was said that Colonel Clobridge was arrested on a confession that Cutts made to Bagnarell. Cutts, the accused man, goes so far as to say that if he is not dealt with leniently he will make disclosures that will implicate city officers high in authority.

Colonel Clobridge is a man about 40 years of age. He is a resident of the Twenty-third ward and a well known politician. The system of paying the rebates disclosed the fact that if Cutts is guilty of the larceny of money in the cases his name is connected with he is also guilty of having committed perjury almost 400 times since he began operations.

A Plow Man For The World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A sensation was created in The World office last evening when Colonel Charles H. Jones walked into the editorial rooms and assumed direction of the paper. The New Dress Linens.
Linen fabrics for summer costumes have come into such favor that "the stylish linen color" is an expression used in the shops to denote other materials with flax colored grounds in light gray and tan shades. Among the unbleached natural dyed linens probably the most popular choice is smooth cloth, which may be called linens like hopsacking. Next this is a twilled linen or drilling of excellent body in corn tints sold for 50 cents a yard and thought worthy of being used in dark moire or satin. The glazed linen or holland, when of very fine quality, makes excellent suits with a long coat and skirt to be worn with a stiff linen shirt front or a soft shirt waist of silk or cheviot. At very exclusive houses importations of soft finished linen crash come not only in the natural flax, but also in red, butcher's blue, green and mustard color. The fancy is to trim these bright linens with white duck bands, rows, collar, etc., while black is used in the same way on the natural colored linen. Vesting of heavier linen than that used for white suits comes in basket weaving in tea green, serge, or red with checks, lines or tiny square blocks of dark brown or black.—Harper's Bazar.

Smart Summer Bonnets.
An extremely coarse straw is the right thing to get if you want something very smart in the way of a hat. A lovely example is in black trimmed with pink roses only. Pink straw hats are becoming and need but little in the way of ornament to make them wearable. A white straw is a fashionable adornment and are just as naturalistic as any of the flowers worn. A rather absurd style of trimming in vogue now for hats consists of a couple of small feathers or two pert bows, with upstanding ends placed at opposite angles in front.

THE IMPORTANT FACTORS IN THE PRESERVATION OF HEALTH.

The Use and Abuse of Poultices—An Old Fashioned Recipe For Rest—Hands and Finger Nails—Physical Perfection In a Woman—The Best Kind of Exercise.

There are five great factors concerned in the preservation of health. First and foremost must be placed education, using the word in its widest sense, to include physical development, moral training and mental culture. Too little attention has hitherto been paid to education from the point of view of health, but recently the importance of hygiene has been more fully recognized. A right system of education so trains the mind that it is eager to occupy itself with some pursuit at all times and thus people are prevented from falling into idle habits, which not only waste time, but give the imagination opportunity to conjure up all sorts of fanciful disorders.

We all know the hysterical, nervous, delicate girl who is only so because she has neither work nor occupation. Educated girls who lead useful lives do not suffer from hysterics, nor do workmen's wives in general, because both these classes have their time fully and profitably occupied. An interesting point worthy of notice is that the criminal class, taken as a whole, is uneducated, and it has been shown that a distant relation exists between ill health and crime. Hence the importance of the preservation of physical health for the preservation of moral health, and we thereby recognize that health itself has a distinct moral value.

The second factor in personal hygiene is the regulation of food and drink—the regulation not only of the quantity but also of the quality. This last point is often neglected, but is of supreme importance to children. A common mistake is to force children to take food which is distasteful to them. It must not therefore be inferred that children are to have whatever they like best, but when a child shows a great distaste for, say, mutton fat, the best way is to make the fat into suet pudding, which in all probability will be readily eaten. Violent prejudices which are conceived in early life, owing to the want of thought on the part of parents or guardians, often remain fixed and cause trouble and annoyance in after life. The quantity of food we take ought to depend greatly on our work. A man who has a resting mouth should eat as much food as when he is engaged in laborious work.

Thirdly, the functions of our different organs require to be exercised and encouraged. It is not necessary to do more than mention the value of mere cleanliness and care of the skin. A dirty skin means that more work is thrown upon delicate internal organs, especially the kidneys, and the working power of the whole body is thus lowered. In this connection the hygienic clothing of the body must be mentioned. Regularity of the action of the bowels must be secured. Many unpleasant illnesses arise from want of care in this respect. The importance also of a suitable amount of sound sleep cannot be exaggerated, for however important regular and sufficient exercise may be, ample time for rest and recuperation is equally important.

This brings us to the fourth point to be considered—exercise, the essential requirement of which is regularity. It is surprising to note how all our organs become accustomed to regular and constant exercise and rest. Regularity in the time of going to bed conduces to sleep. Regularity in meal times conduces to most efficient digestion, and regularity in the amount of exercise is attended with less fatigue and more benefit than exercise of varying amount taken irregularly.

Lastly, there is the question of occupation. Certain occupations are necessarily unhealthy. Others are unhealthy on account of the badly ventilated rooms in which they are carried on. The delicacy of many shopgirls is often rightly attributable to this cause, especially when the lungs are affected. Personal hygiene teaches the precaution which must be taken by those engaged in unhealthy occupations, the scrupulous cleanliness to be practised by workers in lead, the outdoor life which, as far as can be, must be adopted by those who work in confined rooms and offices. It also teaches that want of occupation is also unhealthy and leads to premature death.—Cassell's Magazine.

The Use and Abuse of Poultices.

Physicians are often surprised at the ignorance of patients concerning the use of poultices. The trouble arises from a wrong idea as to the curative action of a poultice.

In general, poultices are primarily localizers of inflammation. They act by softening and stimulating the tissues with which they are brought directly in contact. The fact that their value lies in the amount of heat and moisture which they radiate to these tissues is the reason, probably, for their application by the laity in every case where heat and moisture may happen to be indicated as necessary.

Take, for example, two cases—a poisoned wound and a finger swollen by muscular strain. It is manifest that these two cases are not parallel, though in both the application of heat is indicated as a remedy.

In the case of the poisoned wound, we have the presence of a foreign substance in the tissues. This sets up a local inflammation, which by means of the circulation tends to spread and become general. We place a poultice over the affected part, and immediately the application of the heat brings to it a fresh supply of blood containing numerous leucocytes—white corpuscles—whose business it is to make war upon all foreign matter with which they may come in contact, and pus is formed. This finds a proper escape through the softened tissues under the poultice and with it comes the poison.

In the case of the swollen finger, on the other hand, we have a simple irritation, and what we need in the way of treatment is just enough heat to draw a renewed supply of blood to the wearied part for its nourishment. But we do not wish as in the first case to confine the heat long enough to stimulate the leucocytes to activity, as in that event we should only have made a bad matter worse, with an abscess to take care of.

The desired result may be obtained by simply plunging the finger into water as hot as can be borne for a short time or by rubbing on a stimulating liniment.—Youth's Companion.

An Old Fashioned Recipe For Rest.

There is one great need of humanity—particularly of feminine humanity—that is at last receiving well deserved although tardy recognition and consideration. Much is now said and written about the great need of rest and relaxation of the mind. The tremendous, rushing strain of the life of to-day calls imperatively for an effort to the tension of daily existence as a necessary sequence of overexertion, and therefore we have "rest cures," massage treatments, "quiet retreats" and a host or other new remedies for overwrought bodies and brains that were never dreamed of 20 years ago. The disciples of Delsarte believe in repose morally and mentally, as well as physically—and it is a sign of the times that the serious combination of his philosophical and sentimental calisthenics is received with as much favor and practiced as universally.

"Do you remember old Dr. L——?" asked a woman of society the other day. "He believed in what is now called 'rest cure' years and years ago. I remember very well a formula he gave me when I was first married, which was practically the same thing affected. Personal hygiene teaches the precaution which must be taken by those engaged in unhealthy occupations, the scrupulous cleanliness to be practised by workers in lead, the outdoor life which, as far as can be, must be adopted by those who work in confined rooms and offices. Her hips will measure from 6 to 10 inches more than this, and her waist will call for a belt from 22 to 26 inches.

The arms of the perfectly formed woman will end at the wrist bone. So that she can rest her elbow on a table while standing erect, and her forearm should extend to a point permitting the fingers to mark a point just below the middle of the thigh. Her neck and thigh should be of about the same circumference. The calf of her leg and ankle should be of the same. Her hips should be about as long as a line drawn from her chin to her finger tips, or about one-half her height, say from 3½ feet to 4 inches to 4 feet 6½ inches. She should measure from her waist to her feet about a foot more than from her waist to the crown of her head. Her ankle should be from 12 to 14 inches around, her head erect and on a line with the central plane of her body, and her feet should be of a size and shape to conform with her hands.—New York Advertiser.

The Best Kind of Exercise.

Now, why not be exercised? The Turkish bath is one step in that direction, and the "floor rest" is another.

Any woman who is fortunate enough to command the services of a lady's maid or who can call in an attendant at stated times or can secure the co-operation of one of her own family can receive exercise instead of exercising. When a long and hard day of social or serious duties is before or behind her, this royal way of resting the muscles and stimulating the respiration is good and most efficacious.

Have a warm blanket or druggist, kept especially for this purpose, spread smoothly on the floor. Then get into loose garments and place yourself at full length on this hard bed for half an hour's manipulation.

While you lie as limp and indifferent as a rag baby your attendant, whom you have previously instructed, gently rolls and kneads your limbs, arms and drops and twists and swings your arms and legs.

The head—the body's fifth limb—receives much the same treatment that is given the legs and arms, but should be handled with special gentleness.

Your own duties consist in first assuring yourself that your breathing is full, free and controlled by the diaphragm, and then in surrendering yourself to a nirvana-like indifference to all things.—Marianne McCann in New York Press.

Women as Gossips.

I have a friend, an easy going mortal, who always says to me when I am heading for trouble in her own social circle: "Now, my dear, what is the use of that? You can't reform the world." Well, probably I cannot, but it would be an immense gratification to do a little reforming among the ranks of gossiping women.

Idle women, women in small towns and women in boarding houses will gossip sometimes with no intent to harm, but so often the tongue wags maliciously, the owner taking delight in the mischief making. It is a blight on the name of woman that some should have such slanderous tongues, and it behooves our sex to be up and doing, in such a reformation. One remedy for the evil is to keep the brain well stored with the thoughts of good deeds. Draw inspiration from high minded writers of prose and poetry; keep well posted on leading current topics, and above all avoid petty malice and envy.

If Mrs. Jones runs over to tell some scandal of Mrs. Brown, don't repeat it and try in the gentlest way to make Mrs. Jones think she is mistaken on her estimate of Mrs. Brown, and you will feel better for having done a kindly act. Try this prescription for awhile and see if the mind does not feel elevated.—Good Housekeeping.

The Art of Graceful Walking.

It would seem sometimes that the art of graceful walking might be numbered among the lost sciences, so few women master the accomplishment, or even acquire any approach to perfection in this exercise, which is the foundation of all others. Many women do not go, but propel themselves along by means of their feet, but that is not true walking. An English authority says: "The body should be held erect, the shoulders down, chest extended and the leg moved from the hip, the whole figure above being immovable. The movements from the hip will be the cause of bad walking, combined with the discomfort of tight shoes and high heels, which turn the figure in a most ungraceful manner. A short, brisk walk is beneficial, while a tramp of miles results in utter weariness."

How to Be Healthy and Beautiful.

The girl who wants to be a young lady all her life should make it a rule to go to bed early, to get up early and to sleep alone. It is a chaste habit manifested in regularly aired and annually made over. She doesn't want a pillow, and never, never, never a comfortable one. The pillow is a thought to hinder perfect respiration and to spoil a pretty back, and the cotton quilted cover is to be used to obstruct ventilation. Blankets and quilts are loosely woven. They allow the excretions from the sweat glands to escape; comfortables do not. On account of the quality of the blanket batting which skin is heated, the perspiration does not evaporate readily, and in consequence the lungs, intestines and kidneys are forced to do extra work in getting off the waste material.—New York World.

To Preserve Flowers.

A flower cut from its stem in the early morning outlasts two snipped after the sun is upon them. When a rose is put in water, immerse only the stem, and in wearing the same stately flower pin it on lying downward rather than up if you want to keep. To freshen wilted violets, put a drop of camphor in the water, and to revive a handsome bouquet sprinkle the flowers and plunge the stems into very hot water, with also a flavor of camphor in it. Take out after a few moments and dip the ends of the stems into boiled sealing wax. This treatment will make the bunch good for easily one more day.—New York Times.

Nice Words For a Newspaper Woman.

In the course of a year we meet with a great many bright women—there is none other brighter than Kate Field. She is in the best sense a superior woman, both in intellect and large of heart. What she has to say she says well, for she is a thinker. Moreover, she has wit and humor of the best kinds, always timely and never harsh. She has never written or spoken a dull word. She is optimistic and sensible and earnest and forceful. The world is better for having her.—Eugene Field in Chicago News-Record.

Tying the Bonnet Strings.

One bright eyed, dark skinned woman has a novel way of arranging her bonnet strings, a way peculiarly original. They are brought down and under the chin, crossed and carried round to the back of the neck. Where they cross in front they are passed through a gold slide from which hangs one handsome, brilliant gem, gleaming and glistening on her fair neck, her dress being usually finished with a turnover collar in a very small front V.—Exchange.

Directions For an Emetic.

It is frequently asked how much mustard should be given if it is desired to make a patient sick in case of croup or poisoning. A tablespoonful of ground mustard to a tumbler of warm water is the rule. Salt is almost as efficacious as mustard if the latter is not at hand. If the first tumbler has no effect, give more and drink the hot water without with a teacher.—London Tit-Bits.

A Hammock In One's Room.

It is becoming something of a fad for the young lady of the day to have strong hooks in the woodwork of her room and to hang her hammock for her siesta to con over the pages of the last novel. So much attention is now given to the picturesqueness of the negligee that so pretty a touch of eastern modes could not be omitted. But who shall deny its comforts as even a better raison d'etre?—House Furnishing Review.

Jean Ingelow at Home.

Miss Jean Ingelow, the poetess, is 63 years old and lives quietly in South Kensington. She is said to be still a hard worker, believing that perseverance makes the better part of genius. One of her best known poems, "Divided," was suggested one day when she found herself on the edge of a brook too wide to cross.

What Women's Ills Come From.

Half the ills that woman is heir to come —so say the doctors—from the fearfully high pressure at which they live nowadays. Headache is a universal complaint, and every woman who has headaches at all has them in distinct varieties known only to herself, and they arise chiefly from overstrain.

Literary, but She Smokes.

Miss Emily Faithfull, the well known English apostle of woman's work, lives in the dreariest part of Manchester. She is an inveterate smoker of cigars, which alone relieve the asthma from which she suffers. The queen has a high regard for her and has given her a literary pension.

The "funny men" of the press don't judge women right in one respect. A sensible girl doesn't want her lover to spend his money too freely, even for flowers and candy. Women are natural economists; have to be.

No ailment of a child should be considered too slight to look after. While never alarming him, every symptom of derangement should be considered and treated until it disappears.

A Slight Error.

He came into the counting room and left an advertisement to the following effect:

"Ten lady typewriters wanted; state wages. Apply by letter to A. B. & Co."

Then he went out, and four days later he came back.

"What's the matter with the paper?" he asked the clerk.

"Nothing that I know of."

"Did you put that ad. of mine in?"

"Of course. Didn't you see it?"

"No; I haven't had time to look it up, but I haven't had a single reply. Are you sure you put it in?"

The clerk got down the file and turned to the "wants."

"There it is," he said, whirling the paper around so the advertiser could see it.

He read it over carefully and his face lighted up.

"No wonder I didn't get any answers," he said curtly.

"What's the matter with it?" asked the clerk, hauling it around before him.

"Read it," commanded the advertiser, and the clerk read:

"Ten lady typewriters wanted; state ages. Apply by letter to A. B. & Co."

The clerk apologized, made the correction and next day the advertiser received ninety-nine replies and they are still coming.—Detroit Free Press.

A PARALYTIC STROKE.

AN OLD MAN FALLS IN THE STREET.

Mr. George Giles of Scotch Plains Taken Ill in This City.—In His Fall the Back of His Head Struck a Door Sill.

Mr. George Giles, about sixty-five years old, and old resident of Scotch Plains had a paralytic stroke on West Front street this morning. He fell down and the back of his head struck on the door sill of Charles Smith's saloon, stunning him. He was carried into Mr. Smith's place, and later regained consciousness so that he could sit up. Dr. Field examined him and gave permission to move him to the home of his daughter on Fifth street.

Mr. Giles, it is said, is subject to fits and has once before had a paralytic stroke.

Before he fell, this morning, Mr. Giles was walking along seemingly as well as usual.

Mr. Harry MacDonald has sold his valuable trotter to Mr. Van Boskerck of Somerville street.

Miss Grace H. Hall of New Brunswick is visiting her Cousin Miss Mary Thorn of East Second street.

Miss Anna M. Garretson of Millstone, who has been visiting at New York, is now visiting friends here.

Miss Jennie Randolph of East Fifth street started to-day to visit her sister who lives at Perth Amboy.

Mr. C. I. Ames and family of Crescent avenue are in the Adirondacks enjoying the exhilarating mountain air.

Miss Clara Staats of Somerville has returned home after a visit with her uncle, Mr. W. J. Burnett of this city.

Edward Hann, son of Letter Carrier Hann, of East Fifth street, has returned from a visit with friends at Flemington.

Rev. Mr. Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, has returned from a visit with Isaac Stryker, at Belle Mead.

Mrs. B. G. Randolph and Miss B. A. Randolph of Westerveit avenue are at Sandusky, Ohio, on there way to the World's Fair and the far west.

United States Express Agent Mills has moved his family to this city from Brooklyn. They have taken the house at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

Mr. A. J. Steward died at his home on East Fifth street yesterday, in his 66th year. The funeral services will be held in the First Church of Christ Sunday, August 6th, at 2.30 p. m.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Leland of Grandview avenue sympathize with them in the loss of their little year-old daughter, Sadie, who died yesterday. The funeral services will be held to-morrow morning at 10.30 o'clock.

Druggist Frederick A. Miller of South Second street died this morning, after an illness of seven months with heart and lung trouble. Mr. Miller had been in the druggist business for about thirty years. He moved here from Paterson five years ago and began business near the Potter Press Works, where he continued up to the time of his illness. He was born near Westfield.

Disorderly Young Men from Evona.

On Saturday night some young men from Evona passed through Front street about midnight. They were rather the worse for drink, and as often the case, acted in a very disorderly manner, amusing themselves in pulling pickets from the fences along their path. Several of the residents are very much incensed over the affair and claim that they know who the young men are and will have them punished for it when they come in town again.—Call.

Heavenly Rest Sunday School Picnic.

The Trustees of the Church of the Heavenly Rest take the Sunday-School on their annual picnic, to-morrow to the grove at New Market, where boats have been engaged. Three stages have been hired to carry the party. The "Women's Friendly Society" will join them, and go at the same time.

A Wheel "Dished."

The street railway tracks on Front street caused another accident yesterday. Early in the afternoon as a wagon was being driven along that thoroughfare, one of the wheels was "dished" in the driver's attempt to drive out of the track.

BEAT THE HILLSIDE CLUB LOST

A Handsome Silk Banner was the Trophy in the Tennis League.

The Bergen Point Club of Bayonne is highly elated over the victory of its representatives, Sydney L. Smith and Howard, at the interclub championship meeting. At the close of the series on Saturday, July 29th, the Bergen Point players stood last in the race, having been beaten by Post and Strong of the Jersey City Tennis Club and Walz and Simmonds of the Hillside Tennis Club. At this meeting Smith and Louis A. Ayres formed the Bergen Point team. The following Saturday, with Smith and Howard as their representative team, the Bergen Point Club scored two straight victories, defeating Post and Strong of the Jersey City Tennis Club and the Hillside pair, the West brothers. Last Saturday they repeated the dose, which gave them the championship by four victories to two defeats. A handsome silk banner was awarded to the victors as a trophy.

A YOUNG MAN NEARLY DROWNED.

He was Rescued by Another Young Man who Happened by.

At Peltville dam, yesterday afternoon, a young man came near being drowned. He ventured out too far, and unable to swim went down. But for the prompt assistance of a young man who was near by at the time, he would undoubtedly have drowned. As he went down for the third time he was caught and pulled ashore. Both young men came near going under as the drowning one fastened a death grip on the rescuer and prevented the free use of his hands for a short time.

BREVITIES.

—There are 7,757 G. A. R. men in this State.

—The Bee Hive has a new announcement to-day.

—The Borough Council will hold a regular meeting to-night.

—The city cornet band spent yesterday at Papiac, returning last night about nine o'clock.

—Between seven and eight o'clock this morning an axle of a butcher wagon broke on Pearl street.

—The last Wednesday in August has been selected as the date for the celebrated Smith family picnic.

—Justice Nash to-day rendered judgment in the case of Laire vs. Stelle in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount sued for.

—The members of Plainfield Engine Company, No. 3, held a special meeting last night to take action on the resignation of John Burns. It was accepted.

—Because Chief Grant assigned Policeman Lynch do do duty on the boulevard the other night he became angry and threw down his club and left the force.

—The members of Osmenie Tribe, No. 107, Improved Order of Red Men of Elizabeth will pay a fraternal visit to Miantonomah Tribe, of this city, to-night.

—The works of the Standard Gas Fixture Company at Bound Brook, employing fifty hands, has reduced its time to three days a week. The company has a large stock of goods on hand for which there is at present little demand.

—Mr. Meyers, a Westfield man, had a runaway on South avenue, Wednesday, and was thrown out, the wagon falling upon him. He crawled out from the wreck and caught the runaway steed before realizing that he was hurt.

—The Linden Banjo Quartette, consisting of Edward Williams, Geo. Williams, James Pangborn, Alfred Huff and John Gaut will go to Rozelle on the 18th, where they will meet the Hilford Banjo Club of Elizabeth to give banjo entertainment at the house of Mr. Stockton of Rozelle.

Getting his Gun Ready.

Mrs. John Gable's father, Peter Langenbaum, was up watching late last night to prevent Mrs. Gable's children being stolen away by their fat-eared friend whom she some time ago obtained a divorce. Mrs. Gable says she applied to Justice Nash for a warrant for Gable's arrest to keep him away from her premises and from annoying her, but could not get one, probably because the Justice did not consider the circumstances warranted it. Now Mr. Langenbaum says that if Gable comes prowling around the house again after dark he will shoot him.

Driving out "Cholera."

A man left a swill wagon standing at the corner of Park avenue and Front this morning. The stench from the contents of the barrels was terrible, and a big cloud of flies hovered around them. Policeman Giese told the driver the would have to get out of town with his load, immediately. The man did as he was bid and the flies went with him. The policeman is speaking of the matter, said; "such stuff is enough to cause cholera."

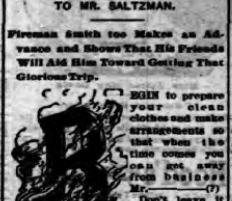
An Injunction Served.

An injunction has been served on the Mayor and Counsellor of the borough to show cause why the borough should not be restrained from cutting down the poles of the Plainfield Company. Monday at 10 a. m., is the time fixed for a reply. A hearing will be given in the Chancellor's Chamber, at Jersey City, at that time.

MR. MARTIN'S BIG GAIN.

HIS FRIENDS HELP HIM NEARER TO MR. SALTZMAN.

Fireman Smith too Makes an Advance and Shows That His Friends Will Aid Him Toward Getting That Glorious Trip.



BEGIN to prepare your clean clothes and make engagements so that when the time comes you can get away from business Mr. (?) Don't leave it until the last moment for then you probably won't be as free from excitement as you are now. You will be so delighted to think that you are the most popular fireman in this Queen City of New Jersey, and the fact that every one of Plainfield's 18,000 population know who and what you are, that, on such an auspicious occasion, you are very apt to forget some little things you would like to have along with you when you reach the "Windy City of the West."

Those who have been to the World's Fair declare that they will remember it throughout their lives.

"Leave no stone unturned" that will enable you to get there and you'll never regret it" was the remark of one who had "done" the exposition thoroughly.

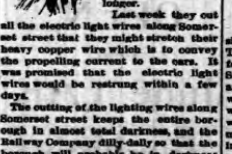
Complaints About the Dilatory Trolley Company.



THE Plainfield Street Railway Company may soon find themselves in trouble again if they continue to keep the long suffering people of the Borough in darkness much longer.

Last week they cut all the electric light wires along Somerset street that they might stretch their heavy copper wire which is to convey the propelling current to the cars. It was promised that the electric light wires would be restrung within a few days.

The cutting of the lighting wires along Somerset street keeps the entire borough in almost total darkness, and the Railway Company daily tell us that the borough will probably be in darkness for another week.

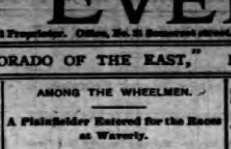
Complaints are made to the North Plainfield Electric Light Company, but they say that the Railway Company is to blame.

The Weather.

On Saturday warmer, more sultry and fair to partly cloudy weather will prevail, with southerly winds, and on Sunday fair, sultry and slightly warmer weather.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

A Plainfielder Entered for the Races at Waverly.



WHEELMAN Walter Gibson of this city has entered for the race of the Riverside Athletic Club Cyclers, to be held at Waverly, Saturday, August 26. He will take part in the one mile novice, one mile handicap, half mile handicap, and five mile handicap. Mr. F. P. Prial is the official handicapper. The track is said to be the finest half-mile oval in the State.

Kyphasis bicyclisticum is a new disease which has appeared with the general introduction of the bicycle, according to a medical journal. "It is an awkward looking name," said a physician, "but not nearly so awkward looking as the young men who straddle the machines with the nose nearly touching the handles and his heels humped like a camels.' Women, as a rule, sit more erect, and are therefore in no great danger of the terrible sounding disease, which a direct result of the attitude assumed by many male riders. The name may be taken as a terrible warning by all bicycle riders."

The team race for the championship on Union county will be run over the Elizabeth-Crawford race course to-morrow. The Elizabeth Wheelmen will be represented by A. F. Calkins, Charles Watson, G. H. Davey, A. F. Holtorichs, D. H. McParland, and the Elizabeth Athletic Club by H. J. Bauer, William Bettes, Charles Brown, Edward Morris and H. D. Saltonstall.

The Crescent Wheelmen have been invited to attend a latern parade of the Montclair Wheelmen next Wednesday night.

Base Ball Notes.

The batting order of the teams to morrow will be as follows:

Woodbridge Field Club—C. Brown, 2b.; Ayers, l.f.; D. Brown, p.; A. Brown, 3b.; W. Brown, 1b.; Summers, s. s.; Callan, c.; G. Brown, r.f.; Cook, c.f.

It is probable that as far as the New Brunswick team is concerned the base ball season is ended for this season. The club started in several weeks ago to play games with Westfield, Somerville, Plainfield and other nines, but instead of receiving good support, they have lost money, and there are several bills yet to be paid. It is likely that on this account no more games will be arranged.—Home News.

Owing to a previous engagement to play at Englewood, Rafferty will not be able to catch to-morrow's game, but will report Wednesday, when the team starts on the trip to Asbury Park. Pitcher Pfaehlil. Jones will fill the place and his many admirers will be glad to see him in his old position. Manager McLaughlin of the Westfields will probably play left field, McIndoe going to first base.

The Fourth Ward base ball team and the East End nine take on the Park avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon, at 2.30. The Fourth Wards have only been beaten three games out of fifteen this season. T. Lyons will captain the Fourth Wards and Fred Winn the East Ends.

Owing to the shifting around of the players, to-morrow's game should be particularly interesting.

Gentlemen should remember that the reserved grand stand is free to the ladies.

The Crescents may play at Elizaville, N. Y., on Friday next.

Popular Pastor.

A suitable and popular nearby excursion resort is Papiac (Boynton Beach). The place has become within the past few years a most popular resort for Sunday-school excursions because there are no disagreeable features connected with it, and children and men and women may visit it without meeting with temptations. Again it possesses many of those attractions, such as bonting, fishing, bathing, and dancing pavilions, which are necessary as all resorts.

WESTFIELD NEWS.

A Grocery Clerk Leaves with Other People's Money.

John W. Davis, who has driven a grocery wagon a couple of years for W. W. Gilby of Westfield went away Saturday, promising to return on Monday. He failed to come back at the time stated but no special importance was attached to the matter until Wednesday when Mrs. Corkright, who had given Davis $20 to hand to Mr. Whitaker to pay her rent, asked why she had not a receipt. Mr. Whitaker said that the money had not been given to him. Inquiry revealed the fact that Davis had made preparations to leave Westfield for good. He procured clothing from the tailors and give them worthless checks, and also bought shoes in the same way. Wherever he could get a friend to cash a check for him he did so. Altogether, including Mrs. Corkright's rent money, he secured nearly $300 before leaving town.

The Board of Health, through its secretary, John M. G. Marsh, caused the arrest of Captain Hickel for throwing the carcass of a horse in Branch Mills Brook. The arrest was made under the sanitary code. Judge Collins fined Hickie $20 and costs. Under a law passed at the last session of the Legislature, the fine of $20 and costs in this manner is punishable by a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for two years. The board will probably prefer charges against Hickel before the next Grand Jury under this law.

Half Rates and Fast Trains to Chicago Fair via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The popular excursions to Chicago which are being run by the Pennsylvania Railroad seems to furnish exactly what the people want. The first two trains were well patronized, and as the vacation season is now well advanced the remaining excursions will undoubtedly attract a much larger number of passengers.

A decided improvement in the train schedule, which accelerates it so as to deliver the passengers in Chicago at an early hour the following afternoon, places the special train almost on an equality in the matter of speed with the best express trains.

The special trains are composed of the standard coaches for which the Pennsylvania Railroad is famous. Only one night is passed on the road, and the arrival in Chicago is so timed as to give abundant opportunity for engaging quarters before nightfall.

The dates of the next excursions are August 12th and 26th. The special train will leave New York 10 00 a. m., Jersey City 9.13, Philadelphia 11.30, Fraser 12.09 p. m., Downington 12.33, Parkesburg 12.41, Lancaster 1.25, Conewago 1.57, Harrisburg three p. m., arriving in Chicago early the next afternoon. The excursion rate, good only on the special train and valid for return within two days, is $20 from New York, $18.25 from Philadelphia, and proportionately low from other stations.

No one should fail to visit the Fair with such facilities at hand.

—The annual re-union of survivors of the 26th New Jersey Vols. will be held at Red Bank, Wednesday, Sept 6th, 1893. The committee are making a arrangements for an enjoyable day.

PICKING UP A LIVING.

How a Silent Street Urchin Caused an Excited Crowd to Gather.

A small freckled-faced urchin picks up a pretty good living at the crowded railroad stations of Asbury Park and attracts considerable attention.

He was seen by a bystander on the North Asbury Park depot platform yesterday. The boy was on his knees with his face touching the boards, and for several minutes had been intently looking through the crevices. As is customary on such occasions, the bystander's curiosity was aroused and he asked the lad if he had "lost anything?" After a lapse of several moments the boy replied, without raising his head. "Naw," and immediately stretched himself out flat on his stomach and began a series of twisting movements with his body that would have done credit to a professional contortionist. A crowd soon gathered, among whom were several Plainfielders, and the curiosity was intense. It was whispered among the crowd that Captain Kidd's buried treasure had been discovered, also that a $6,000 diamond had been lost rightthere. Others said many things equally absurd, and excitement ran high. Meanwhile the youngster continued his wriggling and paid no attention to the crowd which kept increasing in numbers, so that the entire platform was blocked. A train was allowed to pass by that should have been signalled by the stationmaster, and even those who intended leaving town forgot their purpose until too late.

That boy paid no attention to what was going on but was busily poking at some invisible object for several minutes. Then he arose and removed from a slit in the end of a bamboo cane a silver half dollar, remarking with much glee, "I'm in luck to-day, that makes a dollar and ten cents I've found this morning."

The crowd became suddenly silent and when the boy had finished gazing at the coin and noticing the date, he looked about but the crowd had slunk away and disappeared.

Struck and Killed by a Train.

Andru Helfen and his son John, eight years of age, were walking on the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks at Bound Brook, Wednesday night when a fast freight overtook them. The father saw it in time to escape, but the boy was struck and thrown down the embankment. He was dead when picked up.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

How He Built His Great Fortune.

The stories of how poor boys displayed pluck and perseverance and became the architects of their own fortunes and finally died millionaires and got into books as an inspiration to all other poor boys to go and be the architects of their own fortunes have always profound fascination for poor and ambitious young people, as well as for the rest of the world.

We know such a story that has never been told. It shows how a man can become very wealthy from an exceedingly poor beginning, poor in many ways. Once there was an Italian who came to this happy land of freedom determined to be rich. He did not care particularly how he got so, butrich he resolved to be. Like so many other men who are bound to be rich, he picked up the first thing he found. It happened to be a hand organ, a secondhand, wheezy one at that. But what signifies a wheeze more or less to the architect of his own fortune? The brave Italian walked with the organ strapped to his back. Wherever he found a group of young ones, there he unstrapped his music and let its dolorous strains vex the air till the children's mothers and fathers and all the boarders were driven half crazy and paid dozens of coppers to get rid of it. In that way he laid the foundation of his fortune.

On good days like Fourth of July, or at times when he happened in front of houses where anybody was ill or was trying to write poetry, the kind people who pitied themselves because they had to listen to his music shelled out handsomely, and in the evening when he went to the corner grocery to get his copper cents changed into silver and paper money he showed for his day's earnings sometimes $10 or $11. This made the grocery man declare that he himself was going to start out and grind an organ too. The newspaper man who lived over the grocery said he would also. But they never did.

At last came the happy day—the day when industry and frugality were rewarded. He had slept in a hole in the wall and eaten things that we don't wish to describe very particularly, but he had saved his dimes and nickels. He resolved to end his wandering life and open a permanent business. He did so, beginning in a very humble way at first, as was proper for the man who was determined to be self made. He hired some of his compatriots to follow up the great city dumping grounds and extract therefrom fragments of paper and clothing that had outlived their original intention. Then he sought to be the man who was carving a fortune. The compatriots toiled for him daily, and he waited, knowing that the mills of the gods grind slowly and that it would be some months before he could have still more base hirelings at his beck and call.

But his progress was rapid on the whole. Now he is the greatest merchant of rags in that whole section of country. He bought real estate not a little and profited by the unearned increment. His children belong to the Four Hundred. He is able to dictate to the city just what streets shall or shall not be run through his part of town. He is also able to give large sums of money to the party every presidential year. There is even talk of electing him to a certain high office in his state.

This story shows how a man who is determined to be rich may rise from a humble organ grinder to become a millionaire and go into politics.

America has many curiosities, but not many ruins, except moral ones, and no patron saint at all. This last defect will be remedied, however, in the course of a few years. His holiness Pope Leo has announced in this jubilee year of America that he will canonize Christopher Columbus, and Chris will thenceforth be the great saint of this new world. He will be the newest saint of any, considered in the light of a patron, but he will be just as good for all that as either St. George or St. Patrick or any of the others. The pope has said that he will shortly beatify Christopher. The process of canonization will take place afterward. It is to be hoped that Pope Leo, who likes America so well, will live to complete canonization. It will be necessary to find a new name for Columbus, there being already one St. Christopher.

Hard wood working has attained a beauty and perfection that would have surprised the cabinet makers of a few years ago. America has advanced this industry by the invention of machinery which almost works marvels. An automatically working machine that makes holes for blind nailing in hard wood floors and does it perfectly is one of the late inventions. Another machine has been devised which takes a rough board for hard wood flooring, planes it on both sides at the same time, matches it and turns out a smooth surface finished at the top, bottom and sides.

In these hard times put the best face you can on things. Hold fast to the idea that everything will shortly come right. Croaking and discouragement make evil things worse.

There is one occupation that is never overcrowded and always pays good wages. It is that of skilled cook.

MONEY IS VERY SCARCE.

Employers Are Paying Premiums For Cash.

SOME OF THE FINANCIAL PHASES.

Ex Fall River, the Mills Will Pay Their Workmen In Checks—Frederick W. Dunton, a Nephew of Austin Corbin, Assigns. Gold Coming From Europe.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The overshadowing feature of the financial situation has come to be the scarcity of currency. From all over the country there has been such a continual demand for bills of small denomination and New York has responded so freely to the requests of out of town banks that over the Metropolis itself is suffering from what very closely approaches a currency famine.

For several days money brokers have been offering premiums of from $2.50 to $10 per $1,000 for small bills and under, and the bids were advanced to $20 and $25. Considerable business is known to have been done at these figures. One firm, Zimmerman & Forshay, admitted that they had bought currency in large amounts for customers for use in paying up the coming Saturday payrolls, but where they secured the money they declined to say.

The banks, with one accord, denied that they had parted with any funds for a premium. The source of supply was suggested in the large retail stores up town, whose receipts from day to day are in small bills. Certified checks were offered to them in exchange at premiums ranging from 1 to 2 per cent. How much currency was secured in this manner can only be estimated. The daily receipts at some of these stores must be figured in thousands of dollars.

Some relief is looked for when the gold now afloat reaches here, and more as soon as the comptroller of the currency is able to begin the delivery of the new circulation ordered by the national banks.

St. Paul's Biggest Bank Fails.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 4.—Like a crash of thunder from a clear sky came the announcement that the National German-American bank, an institution which is capitalized for a larger amount than any other bank in St. Paul, would not open its doors this morning. President Lackey of the bank admitted that the report was true.

So far as can be learned no other bank will be affected by the German-American suspension. The bank has really been forced to take this step by pressure for payments of rediscounts by New York banks.

The city of St. Paul has $65,000 deposited in the bank, and the state of Minnesota $114,000. The liabilities included individual deposits, $1,258,530; due to other banks, $167,169, and due to the state banks, $132,-986.

Mills Will Pay In Checks.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 4.—Owing to the extraordinary dearth of small currency treasurers of the mills are forced to send out more than usual amounts of bank, grocries and other business places to get checks cashed into money of small denominations. The result is that several liquor dealers and other places have displaying corporation checks as souvenirs of a very unusual condition.

Notes relief is expected shortly from New York, but a very little, if any, is hoped for from Boston. The treasurers of some mills are preparing to issue small checks to their help in payment of wages, the understanding being that they will be honored by grocers and others.

Austin Corbin's Nephew Assigns.

JAMAICA, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Frederick W. Dunton, ex-supervisor of the town, formerly cashier of the Corbin Banking company, president of the bank of Jamaica, president of the New York and Brooklyn Suburban Horse Railroad company and the Boynton Bicycle Railroad company, made an assignment. Mr. Dunton is a nephew of Austin Corbin.

Will Sue the Cordage Pool.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Henry Allen & Co., brokers of New street and Exchange place, have announced that they intend to bring suit against the officials of the National Cordage company and the other members of the cordage pool for whom they operated previous to the collapse of the Cordage company.

Gold Importing Scheme Abandoned.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 4.—The project to secure the shipment of $1,000,000 in gold from London direct to Philadelphia has been practically abandoned.

A Run of Over a Month.

STEVENS POINT, Wis., Aug. 4.—After standing an almost continuous run since June 23, the Commercial bank closed its doors.

Shoe Manufacturer Embarrassed.

ROCHESTER, Aug. 4.—Thomas Bolton, a well known local shoe manufacturer of this city, is financially embarrassed.

Bank of England Discount Raised.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Bank of England rate of discount was raised to 6 per cent.

Coroner and Morgue Keeper at War.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 4.—Coroner Jefferis was arrested by Chief of Police Davis on a charge of unlawfully taking possession of the body of Murderer John Hill, who was executed some months ago. He will at once institute a proceeding for damages against Morgue Keeper Powell, who made the complaint, for false imprisonment.

Cut to Pieces by a Reaper.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., Aug. 4.—Mr. Harry Tompkins of Albany was cut to pieces at Lawsville Center by falling under a reaping machine. The horses were stung by bees and ran away.

Vanderbilt's New English Yacht.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The new Vanderbilt yacht Valiant is said to have given complete satisfaction on her trial trip. Mersey yachtsmen greatly admire her.

The Maharajah In Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—The Maharajah of Kapurthala reached Chicago, accompanied by one of his wives and his retinue.

WAS IT CHOLERA?

Three Deaths on a Steamer From Plague Stricken Naples.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Three deaths occurred aboard the Anchor line steamer Karamania, which arrived from Naples with a general cargo and 471 steerage passengers.

July 17 Rosa Buccola, aged 37 years, died and was buried at sea. Aug. 2 at 9 a. m. Giuseppe Pascale Romanello, aged 40 years, died and was buried at sea, same date, at 10:45 a. m. Maria Di Nicola, aged 23 years, also died Aug. 2 and was buried at sea.

Health Officer Jenkins has detained the steamer to determine the cause of death and for examination and disinfection. All the passengers came aboard at Naples. All were well on board.

When a press representative boarded the Karamania the surgeon positively refused to talk on the subject, even when informed that a suspicion prevailed that it was Asiatic cholera. He declared that the health officer, Dr. Jenkins, had full report in the matter and could make it public if he desired. A seaman on the Karamania told the United Press representative that those who had died had violent diarrhea.

A vast quantity of mail has arrived at this port from Italy since cholera first began its ravages there this year. It has been carted to our general post office, handled there by a big army of clerks and then scattered broadcast over the country. No more attention has been paid to this mail than was received from the most healthful foreign city.

ROME, Aug. 4.—Since the outbreak of cholera in Naples more than 100,000 residents have fled from that city. The official reports greatly understate the facts. The report for Sunday last said that there were 19 per cent and 9 deaths. Reliable private advices declare that there were 88 new cases and 26 deaths on that day and 46 new cases and 27 deaths on Monday. The total figures on Tuesday are 19 new cases and 6 deaths. Several cases of cholera have occurred in Rome.

MRS. MEYER DRUGGED.

Her Counsel Says She Is Being Tortured to Force a Confession.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Dr. W. J. O'Sullivan and Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, the attorneys for Dr. C. W. Meyer and his wife, the alleged poisoners, returned from Detroit, where they have been for the purpose of talking to the accused woman.

Dr. O'Sullivan says: "I went to the Harper house and without Chanler to see the reputed Mrs. Meyer. I found two Pinkerton detectives in charge of her. She was very confused, and it was only after desperate effort that she was able to collect her thoughts on the simplest matters. Her condition was due to narcotic drugs or hypnotic influences. The nurse was very reticent.

"The woman had heard nothing of Dr. Meyer, save that he had pleaded guilty and implicated her. All newspaper and other communication had been withheld. The detectives had uniformly misrepresented all that had occurred and threatened even to prevent both her children if she did not make a confession.

"In order to show that they could do that they had removed one of her children, and only let her see it at intervals when they told her that it was failing in health. She denied that she promised to confess or that she had made a statement of any kind.

"She said she was too ill to eat any food because of its effect on her. They even told her just before I entered that I was the attorney employed by her husband to be careful what she said. The house physician of the hospital said she could easily make the trip to this city. He had admitted that he had given her drugs. She protested the innocence of herself and Meyer."

THE BALCONY FELL.

Four Killed and Many Injured at a Yacht Club's Reception.

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—An accident that has resulted in the death of at least three people and injured as many as 15 or 20 others occurred at the boathouse of the Chelsea Yacht club on Broadway, Chelsea, near the Charlestown bridge over the Mystic river.

It was the initiation night of the club house, and there was a large crowd in attendance, including many ladies. A band was playing on the pier in front of the clubhouse, and that pier was filled to the accompany directly over the musicians' heads. Suddenly the balcony gave way, and its occupants fell, carrying upon the pier and many of them into the water.

An alarm of fire was sounded, and the firemen who responded found many floating in the water.

The list of casualties is as follows:

Killed—J. P. Warren, band leader, 139 Pearl street, Chelsea; A. L. Pemberton, musician, Belmont street, Melrose. Mrs. Augusta P. Schuman, 11 George street, Chelsea; Mrs. A. P. Putnam, Chelsea.

Injured—Mrs. Mary Van Vorst, Revere; Mrs. L. E. Barnes, 18 West Third street, Chelsea; Miss Sadie Davis, Chelsea; Thomas Mitten, musician, Cambridge; Mrs. F. J. Lynde, 11 Grove street, Chelsea; Miss Josie Grimes, Miss Fannie Stevenson, Miss Lizzie Hall, Miss Eva Pinnette, ex-Councilman Charles H. Foye, Chelsea; Mrs. Mortimer, 139 Walnut street, Chelsea; Mr. Charles Farley, Fairfield street, Chelsea; Jerry McCarty, 40 Cook street.

The more seriously injured were taken to the Massachusetts General hospital and to the Frost hospital, where their wounds were dressed, while many were able to go to their homes unassisted.

Corbett at Asbury Park.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 4.—James J. Corbett arrived at New Brunswick last night, accompanied by William A. Brady, his manager; Bill Delaney, young Corbett and Joe Corbett, his brother, and Woodward. Corbett will take it easy for two weeks and will then go into training here for his fight with Mitchell. Corbett says the fight will be at Coney Island.

Prizefight at Elizabeth.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—A rough and tumble fight, a duel between a French vocalist and a policeman, a brief strike of ballet dancers, the temporary retirement of a stage manager and a collision between a corypheé and a bicycle were spectacular features not down on the bills at Eldorado on Wednesday night that happened just the same.

Sailed by the Columbus Route.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The yacht Corsaro, Captain Enrico Alberto d'Albertis of the Royal Italian Yacht club and also his city's naval reserve, arrived in this harbor after an interesting voyage from Genoa. Captain d'Albertis left Genoa two months ago and followed the route that Columbus took 401 years ago.

Sister Frances Re-enters the World.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 4.—Sister Frances Antoinette of the Order of St. Joseph, daughter of the late Patrick Rennard, a retired capitalist, who died last May, leaving an estate of about $75,000, has laid aside the nun's habit and henceforth will live beyond convent walls.

SAYS THE FIRE WAS SET.

Alleged Conspiracy In the Chicago Disaster Revealed.

DUGGAN BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

He Says He Confessed That the Warehouse Was Fired to Conceal the Wholesale Stealing of a Gang of Robbers—Sentiment's Day at the Fair.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Evidence of a startling nature concerning the cold storage warehouse fire was taken by the grand jury. The witness was John Joseph Duggan, formerly a Stony Island avenue saloonkeeper and the man who first told of the looting of the cold storage warehouse and its firing by a gang of robbers.

He was flushed and excited with the inquisition he had undergone, but said he had made a clean breast of it all. Continuing to Mr. Duggan there were 150 men concerned in the conspiracy, and he declared that he had given the names to the grand jury. He said that from the opening of the exposition right up to the time of the fire goods were stolen or at least removed from the cold storage warehouse by the wagon load. The wagons used were wagons which, though he had known of water carts going out the gates with tanks filled with hams, bottles of wine and other stock.

"Who removed these goods?" was asked. "Employees of the cold storage warehouse and a gang that lives on Stony Island avenue just outside the grounds."

"Did you give evidence that would implicate criminally the persons who removed the goods?"

"Yes, there'll be a sensation when this whole thing comes out. There are about 150 implicated. I have given the names to the jury."

More witnesses in regard to the affair will be called.

Scotland's Day Today.

Scotland's day at the fair began early in the morning and will continue until late tonight. Many thousands of the sons and daughters of "Auld Scotia" are now on the grounds. The New York building is the general headquarters, and there their various receptions will be held. There was a parade of bare kneed highlanders and 100 or more pipers through the grounds and a meeting in festival hall. This evening a fine programme of Scotch music will be given in festival hall.

Colored people from all parts of the country will visit the fair on Aug. 25, this day having been set aside for the African race. The excursion committee has secured concessions from several railroads, and excursions will be run from Louisville, other southern cities and intermediate points. There will also be excursions from the east and west.

The exercises planned for this occasion will be in festival hall, beginning at 2 o'clock. Sissieta Jones, the Black Patti; Harry Burleigh, a member of the National Conservatory of Music, New York; Sidney Woodward of Boston and Mme. Seiika will be the soloists.

A specially trained chorus of 100 voices, the original Fisk jubilee singers and the exposition orchestra will also participate. There will be scenes from the opera of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," composed by a young negro, Will M. Cook. All the music will be by colored authors.

In the evening Fred. Douglass will preside and deliver the oration. Addresses will also be made by John M. Langston of Virginia, B. K. Bruce of Mississippi, Charles S. Morgan of New York and other prominent colored orators.

Strikers Threatened to Burn Them.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 4.—Mrs. W. C. Chisholm, wife of the cashier of the Minnesota Iron company at Ely, Minn., pale with fear she this morning reached the small children, having left the scene of the Monroe strike to escape the threats of the strikers and possible death. She is prostrated with fear and excitement. She says that several shots were fired into their house at Ely, and that the strikers threatened to burn Mr. Chisholm and his family in the house, but sent his family here. He decided to remain, but sent his family here for safety.

A RELIGIOUS MANIA.

Hot Knob of Money Drove Miss Bardwell to Kill Herself.

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—Mr. William D. Bohler, trustee for Miss Bardwell, who shot herself in New York, says that he does not believe there was any reason for a sensation in the suicide of Miss Bardwell. There was no truth, so far as he knew—and he would be likely to know—in the statement that she was married, nor in the statement that she had quarreled with her brother. She was a quiet, reserved girl, somewhat plain in features and not one who would be likely to attract the attention of men or to seek it.

In fact, she had developed a strong religious feeling which was almost a mania in its tendency, and in connection with that had become of late very despondent without any adequate reason. Some 16 days ago she visited Boston with Mrs. Murray, and this strong characteristic of despondency was then noted in her.

Mr. Lovett, as the man of affairs acting for Mr. Bohler, received the letter from the girl stating that she was going to commit suicide, but giving no reasons for the act. Mr. Wade, to whom the girl telegraphed, had had no former connection with her affairs, but was recently called upon during Mr. Bohler's absence to look after a small legacy left Miss Bardwell by a great aunt —a legacy which was tied up by legal processes.

Miss Bardwell's share of her father's property was $16,000, and out the income of that she lived. She never made any complaint that she needed more, and therefore it is not supposed that money matters caused her any trouble.

Francis Bardwell, youngest brother of the suicide, says: "I know perfectly well, the same as every other member of the family knows, that my sister was out of her mind when she committed the deed. I know she was suffering from mental aberration."

WAR ABOUT A COURTHOUSE.

The Records Unsuccessfully Defended by Rifles and Gatlings.

WHEELING, Aug. 4.—St. George has been the county seat of Tucker county ever since its organization. Some time ago, by a vote of the people, the county capital was moved to Parsons, a new town on the West Virginia Central railroad not far from Elkins. A new courthouse was built, and by order of the court next Monday was the day set for the removal of the county records. There was reason to believe that the citizens of St. George would resist the removal.

A dispatch received from Bretz says that Tuesday night a number of citizens conceived the idea of stealing a march on St. George's postoffice by removing the records during the night. Accordingly a company of 800 men left Parsons to march across the country to St. George.

News of their movements must have reached St. George, for as they were nearing the old courthouse several shots were fired at them from ambush. They discovered that the road was picketed all along, and only the darkness of the night protected them from the shots that came from every side. Further along dynamite mine-bridges were exploded in their path. On several street corners were squads of St. George citizens armed with winchesters. The chances of the removers, however, must have awed them, for they made no move at resistance. It did not take long to gain entrance to the courthouse and take possession of the records, which were loaded into wagons and conveyed over the mountain road and deposited in the new building at Parsons.

The matter is not ended, however, and it is believed that the affair is the beginning of a feud which may result fatally.

ANXIOUS TO DIE.

Dr. Steinner, Having Failed at Farming, Tries to Kill Himself.

ANNAPOLIS, Aug. 4.—Dr. William Steinner attempted suicide on Thursday last by taking laudanum, but took an overdose and got over it. On Saturday he took another dose and had prepared a second quantity, when Mr. Dubois, a resident of West Annapolis, discovered his purpose and took it away from him.

Yesterday he attempted to drown himself in a creek near the Bayridge road. The only cause assigned for these attempts on his life is disappointment at the results of his efforts at farming.

Dr. Steinner is from New York and holds a commission signed by President Lincoln appointing him a collector of internal revenue for one of the New York districts. His daughter, who is a practicing physician in New York, was telegraphed for and is now with him.

Blockade Not Yet Raised.

BANGKOK, Aug. 4.—Nothing has been done yet to carry out the presumed instructions to the French officials to raise the blockade. Residents are still very anxious. The opinion is that Rear Admiral Humann is receiving orders through Saigon, where the forward party is delaying in the hope that events may enable France to increase her demands.

Terrible Boiler Explosion.

WAVERLY, O., Aug. 4.—A report has just reached here of a terrible boiler explosion at Camp Creek, this county, which killed three men—two brothers named Wolfe and John Alexander. The latter was engaged in blow off the right arm of Squire Wallace. The men were busy sawing lumber and let the boiler go dry.

Brooklyn Man Killed by a Locomotive.

LANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 4.—George W. Kirby of Brooklyn, aged 30 years, was walking on the Pennsylvania railroad track at Columbia when he was struck by a locomotive and dragged 300 yards. Both legs were cut off, and his head was badly mutilated. He was dead when picked up.

Chinese Sailors May Be Immigrants.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Chinese Inspector Scharf was informed that 34 members of the crew of the British steamship Glenogle, which arrived from Amoy, were Chinese. The inspector at once took steps to prevent the landing of these men without the leave if they should prove to be immigrants.

Not to Mgr. May Now.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—At the request of Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, Vicar General M. May, pastor of the Most Holy Trinity church in Montrose avenue, has been made a monsignor by Pope Leo XIII.

Professor Coakley Dead.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Professor George Washington Coakley, teacher of mathematics and astronomy at the New York City university, died of pneumonia at his residence, 186 Berkeley place, Brooklyn.

Killed by the Rebels.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A dispatch from Buenos Ayres says that the vice governor of Santa Fe was killed by the rebels.

THOUSANDS ARE IDLE.

In New York There Are 36,377 Unemployed Men.

WILL THERE BE BREAD RIOTS?

Many More Men Without Work Are Coming East—Factories Shutting Their Doors or Running on Reduced Time Schedules. Statistics From Labor Organizations.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The World this morning has a long article indicating that the metropolis will soon be overrun by an army of idle men.

Statistics from 37 trades in New York city are given to show that in these trades alone over 36,000 men are out of work, and it is declared that this represents only a portion of the city's unemployed.

It is stated that thousands are coming here from the west in search of employment and that immigrants are tarrying in New York because of business stagnation in western states. It is also pointed out that the host of idlers is being daily increased by the shutting down of factories, and the claim is made that manufacturers who do not close their mill doors are importing pauper labor.

Western states, it is claimed, feed and forward tramps to New York free of cost, and it is hinted that the statistics may point out bread riots in the near future. The statement is made that Horace Greeley's maxim, "Go west, young man," has been reversed by the silver kings of the Sierras.

Have 5416 Employees.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Aug. 4.—The Carnegie steel plant in this place discharged all employees save except six watchmen. The shutdown is to be for an indefinite period.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 4.—The Granite and Laurel Lake mills will close Saturday night for an indefinite period.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 4.—The Cottrell printing press works at Westerly have reduced their force 100 men and are running only three days a week. The granite works have cut down their forces, and the William Clark thread mill, the Westerly woolen mill and the Walker woolen mill are practically still. About 800 persons in all are out of employment.

HARTFORD, Aug. 4.—The employees of the F. B. Walker & Sons paper mill at Burnside have agreed to a general reduction of 10 per cent in wages in preference to closing the mill.

The William Rogers Manufacturing company, a large silver plating concern on Market street, reduced the daily hours of labor to eight and will shut down on Saturdays.

The New York and New England railroad has already discharged 125 section hands. More at East Hartford will be discharged today.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 4.—The Pennsylvania railroad has reduced the hours of labor in the mechanical department from six days a week of 54 hours per day to five days of nine hours each.

DOVER, N. H., Aug. 4.—The Cocheco print works will shut down Aug. 19 for two weeks or more.

Smelter Strikers Caused Trouble.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Aug. 4.—Trouble occurred at the Arkansas valley smelter when the company announced a reduction of 10 per cent in all wages to take effect at once. About 40 men remained working, but the strikers got together and drove the men who were working out of the smelter. A scrimmage ensued, stones and clubs being generally used, but no one is reported seriously injured, although several were badly pounded up. The plant will be shut down for the present. The captain of the Leadville militia has asked the adjutant general at Denver for arms and ammunition for use in case of necessity.

Yarn Mills Fail and Close.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Aug. 4.—The Woodcock yarn mills of A. Morton Brown & Co. suspended operations, and on five minutes' notice nearly 200 men, boys and women were thrown out of employment for an indefinite period. Soon afterward a levy was made on the property under execution on a judgment for $151,000 which the firm had confessed to William Johnson, trustee for 32 creditors.

The President Off For Washington.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Aug. 4.—The president's last few hours at Gray Gables were spent with Secretary Carlisle. It is presumed that the president read his message over to the secretary, and the latter proffered whatever suggestions seemed necessary. The president, it is understood, sent for Mr. Carlisle to come to Gray Gables before the message was read to his cabinet. The presidential party is to leave here this afternoon by way of the Fall River line for Washington. Secretary Lamont arrived here from Sorrento and joined the party.

Lawyer Struck a Major.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The lie was passed and blows were struck in the cafe of the St. James hotel between Major John B. Powell and Joseph H. Hurst, a lawyer of 2 Wall street. Both are well known men about town. Hurst being a member of the Reform club and Powell a member of the Southern society. Powell lives at the Hoffman House and Hurst at the St. James hotel. They quarreled over a debt. Both were arrested and then let go.

Judge Manbley Married.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Logan E. Bleckley, the venerable chief justice of the supreme court of the state of Georgia, was married to Miss Chloe Herring, a youthful and beautiful daughter of the late William Francis Herring, at the residence of the bride's mother in this city, 243 West Fifty-eighth street.

Judge Barton Suffering From Paresis.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Judge William M. Barton of Paterson was taken to the insane asylum on Ward's island suffering from paresis. For some time past he has been in very poor health, and at present his condition is very precarious.

Roberts Brings His Table Over.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—John Roberts, the champion billiard player of England, who arrived in this city by Frank Ives, the crack American player, for $1,000 a side, has sailed for New York. He carried an English table with him.

Grain Prices Higher in Berlin.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—In consequence of reports from New York showing an advance in the price of wheat, the prices of grain here have generally risen from ¾ to 1 mark.

Cause to Buy Green Goods.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The wave of financial depression swept over Crete, Neb., several weeks ago and caused a scarcity of currency. J. A. Dorse, the city marshal of the town, who owns a big store where everything that country folk usually requires can be purchased, felt the dearth of cash. He had received a typewritten letter from a New York firm of green goods merchants, and he decided to come on and lay in a metropolitan stake. Its name, said the green goods man, got their box of green paper away from them and saved his money.

Troubles In Native Vineyards.

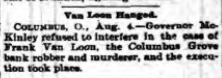
ROME, Aug. 4.—The efforts of the government to stamp out phylloxera in northern Italy have led to serious conflicts with the peasants. The minister of agriculture ordered the destruction of vineyards. Troops have been sent to the scene of the disturbance.

An Indian Election.

CADDO, I. T., Aug. 4.—The election resulted in a victory for the Locke party on all national officers, but members of the council will be considerably mixed. A free fight took place, and the streets were full of drunken, fighting Indians.

Van Loon Hanged.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 4.—Governor McKinley refused to interfere in the case of Fielding Van Loon, the Columbus & Ohsco bank robber and murderer, and the execution took place.



FANS FOR FULL DRESS.

Charming Effects In Feathers, Flowers, Chiffon and Muslin.

Never does a graceful woman appear more graceful than when using a fan, a pleasure which seems more chic and engaging. The lady of dignified mien and statuesque appearance thus employed has an added dignity. The flirt makes eyes with deadliest effect, and even the ugly woman is improved, for she is able to conceal some of her ugliness. Not only is there art in using the fan, but in selecting this weapon of womanly warfare.

There is no lack of variety, and in making a choice one may feast one's eyes upon floral designs, lovely lace, rosy cupids and illustrated classic legends. On a fanciful and pretty fan may be seen a wreath of flowers at the top, on which sit two cupids, one holding up to admiration a coin, while other cupids carry or pursue the silver disks, some of which are lofted about, adding much to the effect of color which the design affords.

Colored wood mounts are quite the thing, and a very pretty fan has a mount in sky blue wood, picked out with gold, in harmony with the covering of grenadine leaves ornamented with gold spangles and gathered satin ribbon. Our second fan shows a mount of yellow lacquered wood and a painted leaf in maize colored grenadine, bordered with coquilles, tufts of forgetmenots and colorful bows.

Ostrich fans of very large size are fashionable. They consist of 16 full plumes mounted on sticks of tortoise shell or mother of pearls. The small French fans painted with landscapes in water colors also find favor.

Fans for a young girl's toilet, however, must not be of a costly kind. Good form requires simplicity and freshness in every accessory of her dress. A pretty fan for a debutante is made of white or spangled gauze, and on each stick are sewn bunches of the same flowers used in the trimming of the gown. When shut, this fan has the appearance of a huge bouquet. Another girlish fan is of sheer white muslin, with narrow white satin ribbon lightly sucked in rows from stick to stick.

A style which is extremely popular has ruffles of chiffon gathered on every stick. The effect of this fan when in motion is most graceful.

FEW IN THE CAPITAL.

The Friends of Silver Are There, and They Are Active.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Never before, perhaps, have there been so few members here within three days of the assembling of congress. Not more than 25 per cent of the representatives are in town, and they appear to take little interest in anything save the Sherman act.

Friends of silver are not idle, even if there are comparatively few of them in the city. Colonel Oates of Alabama declared that he believed the Sherman act would be repealed unless a suitable substitute was given in its stead.

Mr. Bland arrived and was soon looking up members and getting a good grip on the situation. "The Sherman bill cannot pass either the house or the senate," said he. Mr. Springer says he believes congress need not remain here longer than 10 days. In that time he thinks the law could be repealed, the committees appointed and the members started out of the city again.

Little Boy Shot a Little Girl.

FOUCAULT'S PENDULUM.

Demonstrating the Invariability of the Plane of Oscillation of the Pendulum.

When the table is cleared for dessert, you can, with the assistance of an apple or even an orange, repeat the celebrated experiment of Foucault which was performed beneath the dome of the Pantheon in Paris in 1851.

Pierce your orange with a wooden toothpick so that the ends project. To one of these ends attach a thread, and you have your pendulum. The other extremity of the thread is to be knotted and a pin passed through the knot, which in turn is thrust into a cork. The cork is supported on a tripod of forks. Set upon a dish or plate. Now oscillate your pendulum, having first reculated the length of the thread in such a way that the lower end of the toothpick nearly touches the base of the plate and therefore leaves its mark in the little heaps of powdered sugar at either side, which are intended to represent Foucault's circles of sand disposed about the point of the pendulum.

The plate represents the earth. As long as the plate remains in one position your pendulum will strike the sugar at the same point and plow a single furrow. If now, to imitate the rotation of the earth, we slowly turn the plate upon its axis without interfering with the pendulum (of course the forks and cork will follow the plate), we shall observe that the direction of the pendulum is not in the least changed, but that as the plate turns and in proportion as it turns a new furrow is cut every time by the toothpick in the sugar.

In quite a simple, practicable manner, then, we have demonstrated the invariability of the plane of oscillation of the pendulum, which is the principle that guided the well known experiments on a gigantic scale of the French philosopher Foucault.

Artificial Silk From Wood.

Two methods have become known of late in France for manufacturing silk from wood—that of Chardonnet and another of Du Vivier, both of which in reality are based upon the same contrivances. If one pours nitric and sulphuric acid, not particularly concentrated and in a limited quantity, upon cotton consisting of cellulose (woody substance), one receives a kind of weak gun cotton that placed into a mixture of ether and alcohol becomes a mucous mass known as collodion. Exposed to the air this mass becomes solid again by volatilization of the ether and the alcohol. The two French chemists caused pieces of wood a mass similar to collodion that placed in water becomes solid nearly instantaneously. From this mass under water threads are spun that are called artificial silk. But, says the New York Herald, it is a well known fact that artificial products always are inferior to natural products. This is also the case with the artificial silk just described. It is glossy, it is true, but it differs in some degree from natural or genuine silk, particularly by its combustibility. It burns with a brighter flame than silk proper, wool or even cotton.

Smokeless Powders.

Smokeless powders, The Times-Democrat assures its readers, are not absolutely but only comparatively smokeless. Ignition or explosion is always attended with a faint bluish puff, but it is so slight and so evanescent that it can only be seen at a short distance and almost immediately disappears. The United States navy department has invented and uses a smokeless powder of its own known as the "navy M N compound." Like the English cordite, it is of twisted macaroni form and possesses great stability, changes of temperature, even violent ones, scarcely affecting it perceptibly. It is also perfectly safe to handle, its chief drawback being that its "ballistic strength" is not as great as that of some European powders.

One of the Manlike Apes.

A rare and interesting animal to the naturalist is the Bornean gibbon, a native of the great island of Borneo in the East Indian archipelago.

A BORNEAN GIBBON.

The gibbons are associated with the anthropoid or manlike apes from the fact that they are tailless, frequently walk erect for a considerable distance and from other affinities in structural detail. They are extremely delicate and easily tamed and show much attachment to their keepers. The color of the Bornean gibbons is ashy gray throughout except on the chest, the insides of the arms and thighs and a triangular patch on the crown of the head.

An Easy Test For Sewer Gas.

Saturate unglazed paper with a solution of an ounce of pure lead acetate in half a pint of rainwater, let it partially dry, then expose in the room suspected of containing sewer gas. The presence of the latter in any considerable quantity soon darkens or blackens the test paper.—The Engineer.

A HALF-DOZEN

TRADE MAKERS!

THAT YOU NEED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

Leave Plainfield and you hear of dull times. Funny you don't hear of that around here—only busy times as we are out after the business, and if we can't sell goods for people will tell us why.

Have you heard of our sale of 25c. Muslin Underwear for ladies? There are Night Dresses, Skirts, Chemises, Drawers and Corset Covers. Never made for a quarter, but that is all we ask for them.

And then our 50c. line is something great. There are Hamburg Trimmed Night dresses, Skirts and Drawers that the ladies never saw equal for more than a dollar, and we sell them at a quarter more price.

A Hosiery Bargain—And only for a few days we will sell a Hermsdorf Dye Stocking for ladies, that cost to import, 50c. a pair, for 25c. a pair.

Corset Clasps—Something new. You can extra fine half steel in tans. Best ever made, and the price, 25c., is a low one.

Tumbler Ideas—and Novelties—We picked up a lot of Table Linen at a price that will sell them as quick as we bought them. One lot at 25c., one at 37c., and one at 50c.

Granite Ironware Sale—If you are a housekeeper you will be interested in this sale. No further. If are made, and the prices are just what you pay for Tinware. There are many other bargains in this department that we are anxious to sell, and they go for little money.

A BIG SHOE BARGAIN!

We have picked up a lot of

Ladies' : White : Canvas : Oxford : Ties,

worth at least $2.00 a pair. Our price 98c., to clear them out.

Buy quick, as this one lot is all we will have.

WHITE, of Plainfield,

THE HOUSEHOLD

DECORATIVE NEEDLEWORK.

Favorite Materials and Attractive Designs For Several Popular Articles.

Fine linen cloths for a dutch tea tables are decorated with exact reproductions of portions of the designs on tea services, the colors used in working them matching those on the china.

Three cornered cushions to hang on the backs of chairs are embroidered in floral patterns and finished with a frill of silk.

A beautiful bedspread is of the white jean, with artistically drawn design of wild roses. A pretty effect is afforded by pierced holes for centers of bunches of daisies on a nightdress case of white linen.

Yacht quilts and large square cushions and blotter covers of house flannel are worked prettily in shades of blue crewels.

There is a fancy at present for colored linen worked in slits or lac thread and clipped apart between frames, blotters and cushions, coverlids and work bags, sideboard and tea cloths. A blotter worked with white roses and deep green leaves of sprays of the jasmine on orange linen; frames of a peculiar gray blue, with sprays of mimosa or the wattle blossom; quilts of light brown linen with a bold design in yellow; workbags or cushions in a pink shade, with a design in cream, are all effective combinations.

Some of the fashionable worked cushions of today have the entire cover of velvet, velveteen or pongee silk, with the worked square for the front inset on by a silk cord placed in and out of the eyelet holes and attached to the cushion. The eyelet holes are placed near the edge at distances. This is often done with oriental embroideries.

A Homemade Refrigerator.

An ice chest constructed at an actual outlay of a few cents and which did good work both as to economical use of ice and in the preservation of food, is described and illustrated in The Country Gentleman.

Two dry goods packing boxes were secured, one considerably smaller than the other. The size of the inner box will represent the capacity of the ice chest (it is to be remembered when choosing a box for this purpose), while the outer box should afford a space three or four inches all around the the box to be placed within. It should also afford two inches of space between the bottom of the inner box and its own, and two inches also between the cover of the inner box and its own. All these surrounding spaces, except that above the inner box, are to be filled with dry sawdust. The interior of the inner box should be painted white, for if left in the natural wood butter and some other articles placed in it may have a decidedly woody taste.

So far the ice chest has cost just a trifle, but now it will pay to spend a little for a galvanized iron tray to fit exactly into the bottom. Bore a hole in the middle of this tube in one end, as shown in the cut, of sufficient length to pass down through the bottoms of both boxes, which will carry off all water from melting ice. The tube may be made of tin, or even sheet iron, in which case it should be well painted, both within and without, to prevent rusting.

Chests placed in the inside of the inner box and shelves made of slats inserted one above the other, with a space of one inch shelf diversity over the low, an 18 inch in one end of the box. A thick cloth cover kept well drawn over the top of the outer box will help to keep the ice from rapid melting.

Novelties in Silver and Glass.

Ice pails for champagne have the favorite broken raised edge and are banded with two lustrous lines. Other ice pails have raised bands of ornaments on dull metal.

Fresh shakers are in dull metal and with no ornamentation.

The latest ginger ale receivers are leaf shaped in frosted metal.

The large round sweet jars intended for rooms have large bits of carnelian and transparent quartz set in the covers.

Old fashioned low candlesticks with extinguishers are in vogue.

Berry dishes of cut glass have silver handles.—Jewelers' Circular.

Frozen Cherries and Cherry Pancakes.

Sweeten a quart pitted cherries with the same measure of sugar and let them stand till the juice is drawn out. Then still the sugar dissolves, then add a quart of water and freeze. If canned cherries are used, take less sugar.

Stew some cherries with a little water, white wine, sugar and cinnamon; cover and let them steam soft. Strain off the juice and put the cherries between two pancakes and strew sugar and cinnamon over.

Blackberry Cordial.

Use only the ripest berries. To 2 quarts of fruit put a quart of whisky and let it stand 24 hours, then bruise and strain through flannel. To every quart of liquor allow a quarter pound of loaf sugar, a quarter of a well bruised ginger and the rind of half a lemon. Let it stand five days, then strain and bottle. Seal the corks.

Tomato Toast.

Cook two or three onions with four large tomatoes. Let stand to settle for five minutes, then replace the juice with a generous half cupful of sweet cream. Add a bit of butter, pepper and salt. Pour while hot over golden brown slices of well buttered toast and serve without delay.

Lemon Custard Pie.

Grate the rind of a lemon and squeeze the juice on a teacupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of flour mixed together. Beat to a froth the yolks of 3 eggs and stir into the sugar, flour and juice, and bake in a plate lined with paste.

Raspberry Cream.

Put 6 ounces of raspberry jam to a quart of cream; pulp it through a lawn sieve; add to it the juice of a lemon and a little sugar, and whisk it till thick. Serve it in a dish or glasses.

A SIMPLE TALE.

But It Wasn't So Simple When He Told His Wife.

If there is one thing more than another calculated to throw a man into a gnashing-of-the-teeth and tearing-of-the-hair condition, it is his attempt to give the wife of his bosom an account of some ordinary affair, to which she listens after this fashion:

He—Oh, my dear, I must tell you something Jack Burroughs told me today.

She—Where did you see Jack Burroughs?

He—Oh, we went to luncheon together, and——

She—How did you happen to go out to luncheon together?

He—Well, we didn't exactly go out together. I met Jack at the restaurant, and——

She—What restaurant?

He—Calloway's, and Jack——

She—How did you happen to go to Calloway's? I thought you always lunched at Dragwell's.

He—I nearly always do, but I just happened to drop into Calloway's today, along with Jack, and——

She—Does he always lunch at Calloway's?

He—I'm sure, my dear (a little sharply), that I don't know. He does or not. It makes no earthly difference if——

She—Oh, of course not. (Hastily.) I just wondered if he did, that's all. Go on with your story.

He—Well, while we were eating our soup, Jack——

She—What kind of soup?

He—Oxtail. Jack said that——

She—I thought you disliked oxtail soup?

He—Well, I don't care much about it, but——

She—How did you happen to order it if you didn't care for it?

He—Because I did. (Severely.) But the soup has nothing to do with the story.

She—Oh, of course not. (In a grieved tone.) I never said that it did. I don't see why you should get cross over a simple question. Go on.

He—Well, while we were eating our soup, Lawrence Hildreth and his wife came in, and——

She—They did?

He—I have just said so.

She—Well, you needn't be so cross about it.

He—They came in, and——

She—Is she pretty?

He—Pretty enough. Jack bowed and——

She—Does he know them?

He—Well, now, do you suppose he would have bowed if he hadn't known them? I declare if I——

She—How was she dressed?

He—How should I know? I never looked at her dress. What I was going to tell you was that——

She—Did they sit near you?

He—Yes, at the next table. And while they were ordering Jack said that they——

She—Couldn't they hear him?

He—Do you suppose (fiercely) that Jack would have no more sense than to let them hear him talking about them. Look here, now——

She—James, if you can't tell a simple little incident without getting into a passion you'd better keep it to yourself. What did Jack say?

He—He said that Mrs. Hildreth's father was opposed to the match, and——

She—How did he know that?

He—Great Cæsar! There you go again!

She—James, will you please remember that it is your wife to whom you are speaking, sir!

He—No other woman could drive me raving, distracted, crazy, asking silly questions about——

She—James!

He—Every time I try to tell you anything you begin, and you——

She—James (rising with dignity and saying stiffly), I do not propose listening to any such insulting remarks, and——

He—You never listen to anything. That's the trouble. If——

She—When I ask you a simple question you——

He—I'd say "simpler!" You've asked me a million "simple" questions in the last half hour, just because I was going to tell you that Jack Burroughs said that——

She—I do not wish to know what Mr. Jack Burroughs said. If you cannot tell it respectfully, I shall have my dinner sent to my room, since it is so painful for you to eat with an idiot! (Retires scornfully, while he narrowly escapes an attack of apoplexy.)—London Tit-Bits.

The Orchestra Stopped.

The poetic looking man with long hair and the woman with pale blue eyes were especially interested in the love passages of the play. They sighed deeply and exchanged soulful glances every time the heroine and her best fellow had any trouble.

Worldly people in the immediate vicinity were convinced that the man with long hair and the woman with pale blue eyes were really married.

The curtain descended upon a thrilling scene wherein several pairs of devoted hearts, rudely held apart by dire and distressful circumstances, were severally reunited.

"R-r-r-rum-r-ta-tat-tat."

The leader of the orchestra had waved his baton and the drums was responding with vigor. The man with the long hair and the woman with the pale blue eyes were conversing earnestly. With ineffable tenderness they gazed into each other's faces.

Worldly people in the vicinity felt sure the man and the woman were speaking in violent terms of endearment.

"Root-ti-ti-toot-too-root."

The trombone had suddenly discovered clear sailing ahead and was snorting boisterously.

"Tant-a-ra-ra-rum."

The cornet had started late, but was making a notable spurt.

The long haired man leaned closer to the blue eyed woman.

Worldly people in the vicinity were fully assured that he was talking very loud, and hoped in their hearts the orchestra would stop without warning.

"Ta!"——

"Root"——

"Tant"——

The leader had thrown both arms frantically into the air. The drum, the trombone and the cornet knew what it meant. Clamor was instantly succeeded by silence. The worldly people held their breaths.

"I tell you crowbars can't"——

The man with long hair paused, lowered his voice and proceeded with his conversation.

Only the worldly people were disappointed.—Detroit Tribune.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR AUGUST MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

Councilman Connelly Resigns—Bills Presented—The Electric Light Company's Explanation for Leaving the Borough in Darkness—Other Business.

The Borough Council held a regular meeting last evening, Mayor Saunders presiding. All the members were present, except Councilman Howell. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

In a communication Warren Engine Company presented for its confirmation the name of W. A. Wilson as a member of the company. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

The Edison Electric Light Company, through its secretary, gave a reason for not having the streets lighted for several nights, that the Plainfield Street Railway Co. was changing the poles, although the said company had promised not to interfere with the lights. The Electric Light Company had repeatedly started its dynamos running, but was compelled to shut down as the wires were found to be disconnected.

Mr. Connolly tendered his resignation as councilman, stating that his business made it impossible for him to give the attention to borough matters that he felt he ought to. He had considered the matter carefully and hoped the Council would accept it. On motion the resignation was received and laid over.

The following claims were presented:

A statement from Borough Magistrate Crossley stated that $44 had been received by him for fines during the months of May and June.

Collector Spencer's monthly report was presented and ordered placed on file.

The Clerk read his monthly report, showing that he had received $47.50 for licenses and $10 on the Duer street macadamizing account.

Mayor Saunders asked if there had been a good money received from the impounding of dogs. Marshal Pangborn reported that he had been unable to secure a dog catcher until yesterday, when one promised to report for duty Monday. He said he had killed five dogs at the request of the owners. The Mayor suggested that it was the proper time to go at the work vigorously.

The Clerk reported that there was a balance on hand of borough money, at the first of August, of $1,362.78. This included all accounts. Mr. Neal suggested that hereafter in making out his reports the clerk balances each account as it stands.

The Mayor said Mr. Neal's suggestion was a good one, and instructed the Clerk to hereafter make out his reports in the manner suggested by Mr. Neal of the Street Committee.

Mr. Neal reported that Mr. Serrell had informed him that the wiring for the street railway on Somerset street would be finished by the middle of August. The chief delay has been in changing the poles of the electric light company. He also reported that some work had been done on Somerset street by the Street Railway Co., but that they had not yet done as much as was promised.

The work of macadamizing Chatham street is about completed. The work has been delayed somewhat because the men had to wait for stone. In the matter of macadamizing Duer street from Emily street to Greenbrook road, Mr. Neal said he didn't see how it could be done, at present, because of the small amount of money to the credit of the road account. He reported that he had received $10 from Mr. Mohl, $10 from Mr. P. M. French and $10 from Mr. Van Winkle on account of the Duer street macadamizing.

Mr. Edwards of the Stationery Committee reported that the committee had spent all but $4 of the $100 appropriated for their use in the purchase of a safe, table, etc. The report was received and filed.

Rock avenue, Mr. Neal stated, had been repaired at a cost of $266.50, half of which was to be paid by the township.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Mayor and Clerk to execute a warrant for $100 in favor of Mr. D. L. Hulick, the first payment on the hose tower.

The resignation of Mr. Connolly was accepted with regret.

Mayor Saunders said he had been served with a notice in reference to the moving of the poles of the Plainfield company out of the borough, requesting him to appear in the Chancellor's chamber at Jersey City, Monday, Aug. 7, to show cause why the Council order that the Borough Counsel be present. The motion was made and carried.

Council took a recess of ten minutes. Upon reconvening the Mayor said that the secretary of the Edison Electric Light Company was not satisfactory. The Council did not look to the Plainfield Railway Company for light, and it was the Electric Light Company's fault that the borough had not been lighted. He recommended that the matter be looked into.

Council adjourned to meet Friday, August 21.

THE PIPE OF PEACE.

SMOKED IN MIANTONOMO'S HANDSOME WIGWAM LAST NIGHT.

The Rooms Elaborately Decorated.—The Ladies of Iona Council Also Present.—The Tribes from Elizabeth Entertained.

SINCE the organization of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, it has not held such a great "pow wow" as that of last evening. It took place in their rooms on West Front street. Members of Leola, Osceola, and Opechee tribes, from Elizabeth were present and thoroughly enjoyed the generous hospitality of the Plainfield tribe and Iona Council, No. 45 with about fifteen members was also present.

The Edison Electric Light Company, through its secretary, gave a reason for not having the streets lighted for several nights, that the Plainfield Street Railway Co. was changing the poles, although the said company had promised not to interfere with the lights. The Electric Light Company had repeatedly started its dynamos running, but was compelled to shut down as the wires were found to be disconnected.

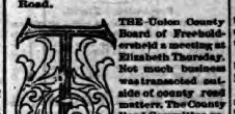
TIME TO CALL A HALT.

MR. HUBBARD SAYS REGARD IN TO COUNTY ROADS.

Not Money Enough Now to Improve the Roads Already Adopted, He Says.—Nevertheless the Springfield Road was Adopted as a County Road.



THE Union County Board of Freeholders held a meeting at Elizabeth Thursday. Not much business was transacted outside of county roads matters. The County Road Committee reported that they had inspected the whole system and found in their judgment in fair condition, excepting some parts of North avenue in Union, Cranford and Westfield townships; St. George's avenue in Linden township; Morris avenue in Summit, and part of Mountain avenue near Springfield.

The County Roads Inspector at present is at work on North avenue in Westfield township, which the committee found in bad condition, as the last winter's frost had disturbed the pavement so that 500 lineal feet of renewal is necessary. The committee further reported that they anticipate that before cold weather sets in to have all the avenue in good repair. The adoption as a new section of the county road system the Springfield road from Union avenue in Cranford to Mountain avenue in Springfield was discussed.

The Committee of the Whole recommended its adoption, Mr. Scudder offered the resolution to adopt the road.

Mr. Hubbard of this city spoke in opposition. He said he did not wish to be regarded as an obstructionist, but it looked to him that it was time to call a halt in adopting roads when there is no money with which to improve the roads already adopted. There should be a halt in the adoption of roads of this character.

Mr. Hunt of Cranford said this road when improved would become a benefit not only to Cranford, but Westfield and Springfield and other sections of the country. If the Plainfield people were not ignorant of the location of the road they would understand the desirability of improving it.

He also said a syndicate of capitalists had bought a large tract of land in the vicinity of the road, and if it was adopted by the county would grade and have other connecting roads, so that great public benefit would occur.

Mr. Moore opposed the adoption of the road because there was no money in the $50,000 worth of roads already adopted and not built. He knew some Cranford people who were not in favor of the adoption of the road.

Mr. Howard said a delegation of Cranford people had waited upon him in opposition to the road. Mr. Hunt said in every community people will be found who oppose everything. The men who oppose this road are about a dozen who live at Republican corners. At the former meeting there were only seven opposition votes. Mr. Donohue favored the adoption of the road, but was afraid the believed money spent on county roads is always well spent. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 11 to 4. Messrs. Hubbard, Hunt, Kyte and Moore voting in the negative.

Feminst Canadian Annexation.

We are always glad when a subject of a monarchy or empire makes himself familiar with our republican system of government and our constitution. It is with due respect, therefore, that we are disposed to listen to the statement of Hon. Peter Mitchell of Montreal that Canadian statesmen had made a careful study of our constitution and modeled their own government upon it. Then says Hon. Peter, says he: "Something like a hundred years of trial had disclosed many defects in your democracy. We in Canada located those defects, avoided them and thus turned your test period to profit."

Mr. Mitchell knows the Canadian government system is better than ours because he himself helped to frame it after "locating the defects" in the American system. Then he proceeds to say that the sentiment of Canada is dead against annexation to this country and that any prominent Canadian official who would dare advocate it would be committing political suicide.

If Mr. Mitchell knows as much about Canadian annexation sentiment as he does about the constitution of the United States, he is a wise man indeed. He says that while nothing will induce Canada to be united politically with us, yet nevertheless she wants our tariff modified, and if she cannot get this done in the direction of reciprocity by congress then she "may have to confine the reduction of tariff to states that will reciprocate." This wise Canadian statesman, who avoided the errors of our system when he helped frame the Canadian government, evidently thinks each separate state of this Union makes its own tariff. We are pained to be obliged to point out this break and ask the Hon. P. M. to read the United States constitution once more.

Rajah Rajagan of Kapoorthella.

From the northernmost part of British India in the Punjab comes to us to visit our World's fair his royal highness Jajat Jit Singh, rajah rajaoot of Kapoorthella, one of the most loyal of British princes. They say he has an income equaled only by that of some of the princes in the "Arabian Nights." Moreover, one of his wives—his fourth—is with him, and she is the first Indian princess who ever visited America. But the gentlemanly reporter, who cannot tell a lie, declare that she cannot be called handsome.

We welcome, rajat Jit! If you have as much money as they say you have and are going to spend a good chunk of it at the World's fair, Chicago will think you are the greatest Indian prince that ever was. You can learn some things from us, and we can learn some from you. If you stay a little while among us and take pains to be instructed, you will learn in America the richest and most extensive vocabulary of slang that ever any one country possessed. You will also learn how good are pumpkin pie and corn roasted in the husk. You will learn to know the science of reportorial interviewing in such perfection as nowhere else exists.

As for us, we can learn from you how to speak the English language properly and in a musical voice. Perhaps some anxious and worried married men may discover, how you manage to get on comfortably with a varied assortment of wives, where they find it difficult with only one.

The Italian authorities appear to have been suppressing news of the presence of cholera in Naples. It would be strange if cholera should not appear in Naples if that disease existed anywhere within 10,000 miles of the town, for Naples is the filthiest place in the civilized world. It is doubtful indeed if Naples can be called civilized. Ethnologists say the admixture of heathen negro blood from the north coast of Africa is strongly marked in the lower classes of Neapolitans. At any rate, the city is most offensive to refined eyes and nostrils in spite of all the beauties that nature has lavished thereabouts. That cholera should be in Naples and scarcely a case of it anywhere else in Europe outside of Russia is clear proof that where lack of sanitation is there the pestilence delights to ravage.

It has been found that coal loses by evaporation and wearing away when it is exposed to weather. This is true of both hard and soft coals, but more especially of the soft varieties. In course of a not very long time bituminous coal has been found to have lost one-third in weight and to have only half the value of freshly mined coal for gasmaking purposes. Persons who leave quantities of coal exposed in open yards are therefore subjecting themselves to serious loss.

A man has made the thrilling discovery that the glass coverings for incandescent electric lights need not be pear shaped, but can be made in any design an advertiser's fancy paints. Already the saloon man is putting up in front of his place rows of electric lights incased in beer bottle shaped bulbs.

From living cells only can new life be produced, says Professor Virchow. Cells beget cells; life begets life. "The cell is not only the seat and vehicle of disease, but also the seat and carrier of individual life."

.O KEEP CHOLERA OUT.

Every Precaution Being Taken at New York.

KARAMANIA'S PASSENGERS HELD.

Cholera Suspects Quarantined on Swinburne Island—Another Ship From Naples Loaded With Emigrants Expected. The Disease Still Rages In Naples.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The passengers of the steamship Karamania, which arrived from Naples and reported three deaths at sea, are quarantined today on islands in the lower bay, and will be kept there until the health officer is satisfied that no cholera cases will develop among them.

When Dr. Jenkins, with his deputy, Dr. Tallmadge, last visited the Karamania's passengers, all were well on board.

The health officers then visited Hoffman and Swinburne islands. Owing to the extensive repairs in progress on Hoffman island the passengers were taken to Hoffman island first, where they bathed, and then sent to Swinburne island for observation. Arrangements had been completed to isolate them while bathing and on Swinburne island. One ward will be strictly isolated for patients should new cases develop.

HEALTH OFFICER JENKINS.

The Anchor line people sent provisions to the boarding station. They were taken on the steam launch under charge of the health officer's employees.

Inspector Williams detailed eight men to the Anchor line pier. Twelve boys and they reported for duty this morning. The Anchor line people had some trouble in securing barges or boats to transfer the passengers.

Each Case Must Be Inspected.

Dr. Edson, health commissioner, sent out this order:

Charles F. Roberts, Sanitary Superintendent:

You are hereby directed to have the chief inspector of the inroad of contagious diseases have all localities where cases arise from disorderly houses super visited forthwith, and a written report of the facts covering each case forwarded to put myself in possession.

N. E.—In case of adult deaths from these causes and in all suspicious deaths material for bacteriological study will be required.

In his report to Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine hospital service, Dr. Jenkins gave a detailed account of the cases on the Karamania.

It appears that the Karamania sailed from Naples four days before Assistant Surgeon Young, who was on the watch there for the Marine hospital service, got the information that cholera had appeared in the city. The fact that no deaths or pronounced cases have occurred on the vessel since the 31 inst. is encouraging, but nevertheless every precaution will be made by the health officer to make sure that the disease had disappeared before the passengers are landed. The baggage will be disinfected by steam, and in every other respect the vessel will be treated as if the deaths on board actually occurred from cholera, whether they did or not.

In his official mail report to the Marine hospital service, under date of July 10 which has just been received, Surgeon G. B. Young gives some interesting information concerning the outbreak in that city and the movement of the steamship Massilia. July 19 he cabled the news of ten fatal cases of cholera widely scattered. Sunday, July 16, a case with choleraic symptoms occurred at Portici, a suburb contiguous to the city on the south, and early Monday another. Both were specially fatal. At about the same time two cases occurred in the "Mercato," which is one of the poorest wards, and the worst in the city. By a piece of unusually good fortune Surgeon Young says the result of the bacteriological examination was communicated to him. Comma bacillus was found, the observer being a bacteriologist of distinction. The cases had no history of contact and were all in the persons of residents.

Another Naples Ship Coming.

The information reached Dr. Young just as he had completed the preliminary examination of the Massilia, which sailed on the 20th of July with about 800 emigrants. The steamship is bound for New York and her passage will be about 18 days, so that in the ordinary course of events she will reach New York about Aug. 8.

Dr. Young says at once investigated and found that only about a half dozen of the passengers had arrived in the city when cholera was discovered. The precautions he took with regard to the passengers by the Massilia have already been stated.

Under date of July 24 Assistant Surgeon B. W. Brown of Genoa advises the hospital service that the North German Lloyds company have provided a steam disinfecting chamber at that port and that it was successfully used in disinfecting some of the baggage of emigrants on the steamship Werra, which sailed from Genoa July 19 with 907 persons on board and bound for New York. The Genoa papers, he says, report cholera at the following towns in northern Italy: Busto, Cuneon, Allessandria and Novi. To be on the safe side he instructed emigrant agents that all persons coming from these towns would have to remain in Genoa five days before sailing and that their baggage must be steamed.

Fourteen Deaths In a Day.

HOME, Aug. 3.—The Tribuna states that between Thursday noon and Friday noon 20 new cases of cholera and 14 deaths were reported to the authorities in Naples.

Coal Yards Burned.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Fire in the yards of Kinnear Veeder, coal dealer in Dock street, and the yards of Veeder, Laffan & Ackerman burned over nearly an acre of space.

THOUSANDS MORE IDLE.

In Buffalo There Are About Twenty Thousand Unemployed Workmen.

BUFFALO, Aug. 5.—Nearly every branch of industry in this city is affected by the general depression. The building trades is especially dull. Manufacturers find remittances so slow they cannot afford to keep their shops running. A careful canvass of the city leads to the belief that it is a very low estimate to say that between 15,000 and 20,000 mechanics, artizans and building trades workmen are out of employment.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Aug. 5.—The Bodwell mills in North Andover will shut down Aug. 12 for two weeks.

EASTON, Pa., Aug. 5.—The Lehigh Valley also will be run five days a week.

READING, Pa., Aug. 5.—All the shops of the Reading railroad have reduced the time to five days a week.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 5.—The King Philip and Shove mills will close down next week.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 5.—I. D. Hogues, Son & Co., manufacturers of silk twist, etc., will run on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays only until times get better.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 5.—The ribbon weavers in the employ of Levy Brosmat decided to strike against the reduction of 10 per cent in their wages. The firm immediately issued an order closing the mill for four weeks.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 5.—The Stewart knitting mills will employ only half of the usual force, throwing 175 hands out.

THEY WILL BURN HIM.

Mob After a Negro Who Murdered and Cremated His Wife.

TEXARKANA, Tex., Aug. 5.—Henry Armour, a negro who lives in the suburb known as Sweampoodle, quarreled with his wife Fannie. Both had been drinking through the day, and the quarrel continued to a late hour. Finally the woman fell asleep, and the husband went out, procured a heavy bar of iron and returning struck the woman with it, splitting her head open and spattering her brains.

He piled bed clothing over her body, and saturating the mass with kerosene set fire to it and then left.

Lucy Moore, who lived in the other end of the house, witnessed the horrible affair, but was powerless to interfere, as Armour had locked her in her room. As soon as he was gone Lucy gave the alarm, and neighbors burst open the door and extinguished the fire, but not until the body had been badly cremated.

The officers and a great many negroes are in pursuit of Armour, and if found it is believed the negroes will insist on burning him at the stake.

TILLMAN SAYS SHOOT.

He Is Going to Arm His Liquor Spies to Prevent Interference With Them.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 5.—The treatment accorded to Governor Tillman's dispensary spies in the streets of Charleston has made the governor angry. He has announced that he is going to arm the constables and intends to give them instructions to shoot ball and buck shot into the crowds. Just as the newspaper men were about to leave the executive chamber Governor Tillman walked over to a cabinet and opened a drawer, in which was a lot of bells.

Just as the reporters were going out Governor Tillman said, pointing to a small wooden bell: "That is a call for constables."

It was suggested that Governor Tillman was trying to scare people, and he promptly replied:

"I'm going to issue orders for the first one of the men to shoot when he is struck. I'm not going to allow the state constables to be made dogs of by the barkeepers and their followers."

Mrs. Hayes Coming East.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Inspector McLaughlin received a telegram from Detectives Von Gerichen and Trainer announcing that they were on their way to New York with Mrs. Hayes, wife of the alleged poisoner, Dr. Henry C. W. Meyer. They will arrive at the Grand Central depot this afternoon. Mrs. Meyer is accompanied by her little son and her newly born babe.

Hard Fighting at La Plata.

VALPARAISO, Aug. 5.—Hard fighting is accompanying the siege of La Plata, where Governor Costa of the province of Buenos Ayres is gradually getting a stronger position with the capital by the revolutionary troops who are investing the city. During these engagements 400 men have been killed and 1,000 wounded, while yet more have been raised, and the situation at La Plata has not changed.

A Stock Operator's Suicide.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Driven to a condition of hopelessness by the overwhelming upset of his resources, with the roots of 99 years upon his head and no prospects for the future, Nelson Vankirk, a well known operator in grain and provisions, shot and instantly killed himself.

Killed While Stealing a Ride.

BUFFALO, Aug. 5.—Frank Miller, a tramp, whose destination appears to have been Rochester, was killed near Wende station while stealing a ride on the New York Central "flyer."

Heavy Wheat Shipment.

MONTREAL, Aug. 5.—The shipments of grain out of this port from the opening of navigation until the end of July amounted to 12,007,000 bushels, the largest on record.

SAYS THEY STARVE HIM

Pastor Smith Rises Hungry In His Pulpit.

HIS FLOCK DISPUTE HIS WORDS.

They Say He Has a Home and a Nice Lot of Chickens—His Salary Has Not Been Paid, He Says—A Sensation In the Pulpit of a Connecticut Church.

NEW CANAAN, Conn., Aug. 5.—The Rev. F. A. Smith of Silver Mine, Conn., has caused a sensation in the town. From his pulpit he informed his congregation that he and the members of his family were starving simply because his salary was not forthcoming.

After preaching a good sermon and giving out the regular church notices the Rev. Mr. Smith startled his hearers by saying:

"I come to you this morning with an empty stomach. I have not had a mouthful to eat today because I could not get it. There is not even a crust in the cupboard.

"For over a week I and my family have lived entirely upon blackberries and bread. The reason my family is not here this morning is because they have no shoes to wear. I do not ask charity, but only that you pay me the salary that you agreed to that I may not starve."

He Startled His Flock.

This startling announcement of course created a sensation in the little congregation at once. Deacon William Lane, the only male member present, at once arose and took the minister to task for bringing a sensational upon the church by thus publicly announcing his private affairs from the pulpit when he ought to have come to him privately as the trustee and he would have helped him.

Mrs. Robert Gick, who is one of the stewards of the church, sprang to her feet also and said she did not see how a man could ride around all the time with a fine horse of his own and be in a starving condition. The person replied that not one penny of the salary went toward the keep of his horse, as that was self supporting, but he failed to tell in what way.

The Rev. Mr. Smith has a wife and daughter to support upon a $500 salary and declares he cannot pay for that small sum.

Deacon Lane, when called upon by a reporter, said:

"We have hard work to support a preacher here, but Mr. Smith said he could stay here another year, for he had a house rent-I don't see how he can be in a starving condition when he has over 100 chickens, which he has to feed and care for besides his horse. At a special meeting held the other night we offered to pay him his salary and give him a vacation until next October, when his year runs out, and he agreed to take it, and we collected the money, but the next night he refused to take his salary in advance or take a vacation, but said he would stay here until October."

From the minister to the church, Mrs. Joseph Guthrie, it was learned that up to Aug. 1 the church owed the minister just $3.46, after deducting $23.25 for a grocery bill and $25 for coal, which the church's carriage, which the church became responsible for.

The secretary handed the $3.46 to the preacher on Wednesday and has accepted it.

Pastor Smith's Story.

"I have been here two years next October," said the Rev. Mr. Smith to-night, "and have labored hard to build up the church and instruct the people in the ways of righteousness.

"What I said in the pulpit was only the bare truth, and if it hurts any one I can't help it. Had I accepted their invitation to take a vacation and leave the church, I would have myself liable to church discipline, which says no preacher shall drop his church without permission of the president.

"I have preached here for five months and only received $15 in cash, and for two long months without receiving a penny, so of course I had to get into debt.

"I won't say they are trying to starve me out, but it looks that way."

There are many persons in the church who do not believe Rev. Mr. Smith to preach to them, and are not slow about entering their opinion of him, and say that if he insists upon feeding them with the bread of life he will have to live on bread and blackberries, so far as they are concerned.

She Is Starving Herself.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Annie Smith, a mysterious woman, was found starving to death in her humble room at 308 South First street, Brooklyn.

For two years the roof has sheltered a mystery. The neighbor women have gossiped and guessed and watched the spare, black clad figure of Annie Smith going down the stairs at the break of day, according them at its close.

In an assault Friday morning the mystery was unveiled off to St. Catherine's hospital in Bushwick avenue, and there she is a mystery still. The hospital doctors have tried to get her to tell her story. The white robed sisters have gone to her bedside and made every effort women can make to learn from her what is hidden behind the dark tresses of Annie Smith.

She simply smiles and shakes her head. Beef broth, brandy and milk—all the milk forms of nutriment which hospital nurses are famous for—she refuses to have held up to her. She opens her eyes, shuts her lips tightly against all potions and smiles and shakes her head again.

Annie Smith is deliberately, wonderfully starving herself to death. Through stages of delirium she has borne her purpose in hand. In rational moments she thanks the sisters in a way made for their kindness, but of her story—not a single word.

Feeding New Wheat to Hogs.

WABASH, Ind., Aug. 5.—Farmers in this vicinity have begun to feed their new wheat to hogs. They claim that with corn at 30 cents a bushel it is cheaper to fatten swine on the wheat, which is worth less, taking the chances of a possible advance in wheat in the future.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

The President Starts in the White House Again Tonight.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—President Cleveland and party are expected to arrive here this afternoon. The president left Pall River last evening after a full day's rest at Gray Gables. Secretaries Carlisle and Lamont were with him.

When it was time to be driven to the little flag station, Gray Gables, the president and Mrs. Carlisle took carriage and Colonel Lamont and Skipper Wright the other. The president was attired in a dark suit and wore a derby hat and boutonniere. Mrs. Cleveland did not accompany them to the depot.

The presidential party boarded the regular 8:30 a. m. o'clock steam boat train from Woods Holl, on which came Attorney General Olney, and occupied a special Pullman car tendered by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The first stop was at Buzzard's Bay, where a number of people were in waiting. To the repeated bows the president bowed and smiled.

At Fall River Mayor Coughlin boarded the train and went as far as the dock. When the train stopped there, the mayor stepped off. Mr. Cleveland he left the car and accompanied him to the boat. There were several hundred at the wharf, and as the president passed along cheers were given, and there was a general clapping of hands. The president acknowledged the reception by lifting his hat and bowing. On reaching the steamer Puritan, he immediately went to his stateroom, and as he passed along the ladies and gentlemen gave him a warm reception.

Mr. Bland Has a Bill.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—As soon after congress meets as it becomes practicable Mr. Bland, the leader of the silver forces in the house, will introduce a bill embodying the views of the silver men. It will provide for the repeal of the Sherman purchasing act and substitute therefor the free coinage of silver at the present ratio of 16 to 1.

THE LAKE GEORGE DISASTER.

Nine Summer Guests Drowned by the Sinking of a Yacht.

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y., Aug. 5.—The steam yacht Rachel sunk with 29 summer guests on board, and nine were drowned. The yacht struck on a sunken pier just as it was about to land the party at the One Hundred Mile Island House wharf. The following is a list of the drowned:

Miss Hattie L. Hall, Brooklyn.
Miss Edith Harding, Hoboken, N. J.
Miss Bertha Benedict, Montclair, N. J.
Miss Henrietta M. Barton, Jersey City.
Mrs. J. H. Mitchell, Burlington, Vt.
Frank C. Mitchell, 19 years old, son of Mrs. Mitchell.
Miss Lizzie Corley, Burlington, Vt.
Miss Clara Black, Burlington, Vt.
Miss Lizzie Clark, Bridgeport, Conn.

Young Mr. Benedict, son of the wealthy New York jeweler, who was on the boat, is an expert swimmer. He tried to save his sister and dived for her once. Frank Mitchell, aged 19 years, of New York city, lost his life trying to save his mother, who also was drowned.

The following is a list of the other people who were on board the Rachel and were saved:

Mrs. M. E. Hall, Miss M. Eleanor Hall, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Benedict, Harding Benedict, Montclair, N. J.; Miss Maud Brown, Frank Brown, Albany; J. H. Mitchell, Mrs. Whitcomb, Samuel A. Manson, William Manson, Burlington, Vt.; John A. Manson, Paul Manson, M. Manson, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Hannibal Allen, Pilot Claude Granger and Engineer Briggs.

Sent His Father to a Madhouse.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Henry Schlichte, proprietor of the Manhattan, 21 West street, Brooklyn, had a quarrel recently with his son, Henry Schlichte, Jr., 19 years old. The youth went to the commissioners of charities office and swore his father appeared to be insane. Without any medical examination or further testimony the hotel keeper was whisked off to the Flatbush insane asylum last Wednesday morning and was kept there until a lawyer procured his release Thursday afternoon.

Latimer Jones Sued For Divorce.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The meteoric career of Latimer Jones, the young man who startled the financial world in 1890 by his exploits, was recalled in the superior court when his wife, who was the beautiful Miss Colwell, daughter of Louis Colwell, president of the Colwell Lead company, appeared to institute a suit for absolute divorce. Jones has not resided here for several years. His present address is supposed to be in London, where he is living with his second wife.

The Fireworks Exploded.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5.—During the street parade of an outdoor spectacular show a wagon loaded with fireworks exploded. The crowd filled the street to the line of parade. Following the explosion cries of pain were heard, and when the police and firemen succeeded in dispersing the surging mass of excited sightseers three boys and a boy were found prostrate and bleeding from wounds.

Two More May Die.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—Two of those injured by the collapse of a veranda on the Chelsea timbboulevard in a procession Friday are at the Frost hospital. One of them is Miss Sarah Davis, aged 20, who came from Ohio a few days ago to visit Miss Josie Grimes. She has no relatives in this part of the country. Miss Grimes is also at the Frost hospital.

The Blue Fleet Victorious.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The sham battles between the two fleets that have been maneuvering off the Irish coast ended with an engagement off South Stack. The red fleet, under command of Vice Admiral Fairfol, was defeated by the blue fleet, commanded by Rear Admiral Fitzroy.

Says the Jubilee Is Not a Failure.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—Arthur Binney of Sewart & Binney, designers of the Jubilee's rival, the Pilgrim, denied the story to the effect that the Jubilee had proved a failure.

A Reporter Is Missing.

HARTFORD, Aug. 5.—Thomas H. Hastings, a reporter for the Hartford Telegram, has been missing for about a week, and nothing is known of his whereabouts.

Mr. Moffet Died Abroad.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Mr. C. S. Moffet, the president of the Lackawanna Iron and and Steel company at 52 Wall street, died at Edinburgh.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—Governor Russell is going on the New York Yacht club cruise.

SMALL BILLS WANTED.

Money Brokers Doing a Big Business In Selling Cash.

MANY FAILURES IN THE WEST.

A Big Chicago Dry Goods Firm Goes Down With Two Millions Involved—New York Flooded With Counterfeit Bills—Savings Banks Will Get the Gold.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The extreme scarcity of currency is called even more emphatically to public attention in this city today than it was yesterday. The efforts of corporations and firms, both big and small, here and elsewhere, to obtain a sufficient supply of small bills to meet their payrolls have caused a regular scramble for funds. As a result the money brokers and bullion dealers are doing a thriving business, buying and selling gold and silver coin and notes of small denominations just as they would any article of commerce.

Zimmerman & Forshay estimated that they handled $1,000,000, and several other firms did an active business. These dealers experienced less trouble in getting the money than they did earlier in the week. This is explained by the fact that retail dealers, who require cash in cash, have learned that they can make a new profit by selling their currency to the brokers. They get their pay in large bills or certified checks, which they deposit instead of the money taken in during the day.

Some of the money brokers have advertised in the newspapers their willingness to pay premiums on small funds, and others have sent circulars to retail business houses offering from ¼ to ¾ of 1 per cent for currency. They sold the money thus obtained at an average of about 2 per cent, reaping a neat profit. Their customers came from all over the country, and money was shipped by express for payrolls as far as Chicago.

It has been learned that a large share of the gold now coming to this country—probably $6,000,000 or $7,000,000—will find its way directly into the savings banks. The latter, it seems, have sold bonds to dealers, who paid more than the national banks offered.

The Walker Failure.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—James H. Walker & Co., dealers in general dry goods and one of the largest and best known firms in the city, confessed judgment in Judge Winter's court on a note for $1,695 in favor of Edward Noe.

Shortly afterward the rumors of the past few days to the effect that the company was embarrassed were confirmed in the formal petition for the appointment of a receiver.

The partners differed as to the receiver named, and an issue was made at once. So far as developed the suspension of business as indicated by the application for a receiver involves $2,000,000.

It was announced in court that a large number of Walker & Co.'s creditors, principally from New York, would arrive in the city. These will be consulted as to the appointment of a third receiver. A general meeting of all the creditors will be held one week from today.

Counterfeit Bills In Circulation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—John P. Brooks, chief of the United States secret service in this city, is very much alarmed over the circulation in this city of a number of counterfeit $5 bills. He is receiving daily hundreds of complaints from persons who have been victimized. The bill, as described, bears the vignette of the late General Grant. Two men, Ciro Rainer and William Kuehne, are in the custody of the United States authorities charged with offering them.

Bank Runs In Indiana.

MUNCIE, Ind., Aug. 5.—The Citizens' National bank of this city failed to open its doors on account of the rapid withdrawals. Hundreds of depositors congregated. The depositors of the Delaware National, Farmers' National and Merchants' National banks then commenced to draw out their money. The run continued until evening. Heavy deposits are being made today by wealthy citizens to save the remaining three.

Bayard on the Situation.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 5.—In a private letter just received Ambassador Bayard says:

I am looking somewhat anxiously to the meeting of congress and hope there will be no faltering in the resolve to maintain the gold unit of value. So far from appreciating the intrinsic value of silver bullion, I believe the cessation of storage and accumulation of stock will help its market price, for this commodity as it would help any other commodity.

The St. Paul Panic.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 5.—The West Side bank, capital $150,000, closed its doors. The comptroller of the currency has appointed Daniel W. Ulser of this city to take charge of the German-American bank as acting examiner.

Oldest Bank In Providence Suspends.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 5.—The State bank of this city closed its doors. It is not a national bank, and it has a paid up capital of $77,000. The bank was one of the oldest of the state banks and was instituted in 1800.

The Paris Beings Money.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The American line steamer Paris, which left from Southampton for New York today, took 146,000 sovereigns, consigned to American houses.

Wisconsin Bankers Fail.

SPARTA, Wis., Aug. 5.—M. A. Thayer & Co., bankers, made an assignment at Colby. The Exchange bank closed its doors.

Suspected Chicago Highwayman.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Charles Allen of Pittsburg and a man named Gautier were arrested on susp cion of having waylaid and fatally shot J. C. McIntosh for his money. Allen was arrested near the World's fair grounds, having on his person a revolver with one cartridge empty.

On Tank Street by Lightning.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 5.—During a heavy storm at Coraopolis, Pa., a tank containing 35,000 barrels of oil was struck by lightning and fire set ignited. It is still burning fiercely, but no damage to surrounding property is apprehended.

Died at Asbury Park.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 5.—Rachel Estey, widow of William W. Estey of Philadelphia, died at the residence of Rev. George W. Evans of Ocean Grove.

This Bank Was Burned.

PRINCETON, Minn., Aug. 5.—Fire destroyed the First National bank building, a hotel and six business houses.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Johnnie and His Friend.

Johnnie's friend was not very good looking. At least nobody thought so but Johnnie. He was very awkward, too, and his voice was not the least bit musical. Some even laughed at Johnnie for having such a friend and told him his friend had no common sense. But Johnnie didn't care for that; he liked his friend, and his friend liked him all the same, and many a good turn they used to do for each other.

When John was in a great hurry to go anywhere, he would jump on his friend's back, and immediately his friend would start right off with him and trot along as peacefully as could be and go wherever Johnnie wanted him to. But if anybody else tried to have him carry a stranger Johnnie's friend was not so obliging. He would allow no one on his back but Johnnie, and Johnnie could do anything with him he pleased. If anybody else got upon his back, he would kick and prance about until he threw them off, and then he would stand and look at them as much as to say, "I know who my friends are, and I do not care to put myself to any trouble for anybody else."

Now this is not exactly the golden rule, is it, children? But Johnnie's friend knew nothing about the golden rule, and you see he wasn't obliged to, for he was not a little boy or girl. He was simply a little donkey, and he behaved just as well as he knew how. He was Johnnie's friend because Johnny was kind to him. Now, children, you see what made him friendly to Johnnie. It was because Johnnie was friendly to him and always stood by him and took his part, and so he did the same for Johnnie. In this he simply exemplified the old motto:

Remember this and bear in mind,
A constant friend is hard to find,
And when you find one kind and true
Leave not the old one for the new.
—Christian at Work.

An Eventful Birthday.

On one particular birthday morning Ned felt very jubilant, for his presents consisted of an airgun, candy, rubber boots, a bean shooter, a whip, a toy boat, football and some very gay hued horse reins with jingling bells all over them.

He started out to have a good time. He waded in the brook with those boots (which papa had thought would be useful going to school on rainy days) until he walked on a sharp stone and cut a big jagged hole in the toe of one of them. The water ran in, of course, and wet his shoe and stocking. He abandoned the boots on the shore.

Just before lunchtime when playing football by himself in a field the ball went down a hole, and Ned went after it. But that ended Ned's fun. He no sooner stepped out when there was a buzzing sound, and out flew, as he afterward told his mother, "just 1,000,000 bees and hornets." When a few minutes later mamma was administering cold cream and a lecture, he said:

"Yes, I'm really sorry about the boots, and I don't know what became of the ball, because I had to run away from the bees, and I left my bean shooter near the hothouse and broke two panes of glass, mamma. I hope the plants'll be all right, and I'm not sure, but I think I killed Mr. Burnham's cat with my gun. I took it for a rabbit. Casio has the horse reins around his neck, and my boat got stuck under the bridge. I think all that candy made me sick, I feel so bad. The cold cream's splendid, mamma. Will I have to go to bed—on my birthday too? Well, I've had an elegant time this morning, anyway."—New York Advertiser.

Women in Finland.

Those chatting a few days ago with a lady who had been making a short stay in Finland, said she told me several very interesting facts about the women over there. They seem from her account to do a good part of the work of the community. Among the lower classes they drive the mail carts, sweep the streets, mend the roads and row the boats. They do not, however, with a few exceptions, serve behind the counters in the shops. I expressed my astonishment, which was increased rather than diminished when my informant said that men were preferred because they were thought more civil! This fact is all the stranger because the women as well as the men are remarkable for their evenness of temper. Little pinheps do not seem to cause the irritation which they do here, and the children grow up happily free from slaps, shakings and cuffings.

Among the better class of Finns the women work quite as hard as they do in the lower. In the banks there are far more women than men clerks. The same thing is noticeable in the bureaux de change. In the postoffice and in state offices women are in the majority. Women teach trades to the cripples and to the blind and industrial arts to the little boys and girls who attend schools established for that purpose. They are also splendid linguists, partly because their love for books and limited literature of their own and also because their own language is no use to them when they travel, as it is spoken by no people but each other. I should not care about Finland fashions, however. A black silk dress is the orthodox garment for old and young and is worn either at a coffee party or a wedding, no dainty ornaments being allowed.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Punishing Children.

I will not say that the punishment of children can be dispensed with in every instance. No possible rule can apply to all cases, since different natures must be a law unto itself. At the same time striking a child should be employed only as the very last resort, whereas now it is used as all too many persons look upon it as a first. Kindness and firmness, when brought together, form the best basis for a child's education. Mothers should learn to control their actions. Fathers must allow reason to have fuller play. The process may seem a little more tedious, but the result, when reached, will be worth it all. Instantaneous correction may seem to be achieved by punishment, but the effect is not lasting. Girls are shamed by it; boys grow hardened under it. We need only apply the lessons that come to us in after life to this question to reach the best solution.

Kindness, firmness all close; firmness of character cements lifelong friendships; sympathy wins us all. And as these elements appeal to us as we have matured, so do they, and even more strongly, appeal to the more responsive nature of a child. A boy should never find weakness in him to excite his contempt, nor a girl should never find anger when she has a right to find mercy. And as for our little maidenings in childhood we sought mercy and pardon, but not our children's, to-day, and because we are parents find no other than we ourselves sought and hoped to find. As we wished should be done unto us at one time in our lives, so let us now do unto others, that they in turn may likewise do unto those who follow us.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Medieval Young Lady.

The young women of the medieval ages learned their lessons with their governess, practiced their lute, went to church every day, received visits from old soldiers and other gents and worked wonderful hangings for the cold stone walls. And there were from 70 to 100 yards of material in a lady's hangings. They could also spin fine silk and linen and ornament with needlework their best day veils and dresses. The less interesting forms of sewing were left to the army of old ladies and young women who attended on the noble maidens and their lady. They all knew how to ride and fly a hawk, to read the romances and poetry of the day, to play, to beguile the long hours with chess, tric-trac, draughts, and the youngest of them began to shuffle and deal the new invented "cayppe" or "naibs," the first playing cards.

They could pluck or brew virtuous simples, bind a broken limb or nurse a fever. They could amuse the convalescent with endless tales of the Round Table, with the legends of Charlemagne, and with lives of the saints no less interesting and romantic. Most of them could read aloud some novel of Clastmaker or Meliadus. They must, I think, have been blithe, charming, capable companions for the lives of many of the long country house. On the whole, with its constant undercurrent of chivalry and religion, there was an effusion which left its women delightful, tender of heart and generous, if, alas! with little moral strength to resist the more seductive errors of the heart.—Contemporary Review.

The Editress of The Queen.

Miss Lowe, the editress of The Queen newspaper, is one of the most successful women journalists in the world. Her personality is but little known, for her portrait has never been reproduced, and she has a great dislike to any form of self advertisement. Miss Lowe has certainly refrigiven the editorship of the great paper which she has conducted so successfully for close on 20 years, it boasted of only a very small circulation, and was about in a dying condition, but it has shone in a field where it now counts many rivals. The editress of The Queen does most of her work in her pretty Kensington house and only comes to the office when she is weak, but she has her finger on the pulse of every department of her paper and makes it a rule to read and perused every proof, even the advertisement pages, before the journal is sent to press.

Miss Lowe is the only lady journalist whose organ has ever directly recognized in a professional sense. Most of the princesses have at some time or another contributed to her pages, and their royal mother has more than once through them sent a gracious message to the lady who watches over the destinies of her namesake.—Yankee Blade.

Washing Dishes Properly.

There is a knack in washing dishes properly, and it requires neatness and skill, though many persons look upon it as merely child's play. It is always best to dispose of the cooking utensils and coarse ware first, and washing the rest in clean water will leave the hands less grimy. Rinse and wipe the hands before wiping the dishes. You may think this takes too much time, but if you consider how much nicer your hands will be kept it will repay you.

After the dishes are washed brush out the sink and rinse the disholoth well in cold water. Then it will never grow musty or sour. Wash the hands in tepid water with good castile soap. Rinse and wipe carefully, especially the nails. Follow these directions, and your dishes will be clean and sweet and your hands none the worse for the work.—Housekeeper.

EDSALL'S.
In order to reduce stock before moving to the new Babcock building we will offer at greatly reduced prices, about 250 articles of
FOOTWEAR.
All good reliable goods, on which we give the same guarantee as if you paid full value for them. Most of these goods we have marked down to the cost of manufacture or below. This is the first opportunity ever offered in Plainfield to buy good reliable goods at such prices, but we take this method of reducing stock, as we prefer the cash to moving goods.

HIS HOT TEMPER.

But He Had a Forgiving Heart, So He Went Back.

"Excuse me," he said respectfully, "but would you spare me five minutes. I want a little advice on an important matter, a very important matter, in fact it's vital."

He had a meek and careworn look, and the man whom he had accosted felt sorry for him and stopped as if he were willing to give me any advice which was in his power.

"I see," said the man who wore the saggard expression. "I'm in trouble; it's a domestic trouble—with my wife, you see."

"Oh, yes, you had unpleasant words with her."

"Yes, that's about it."

"And now are you sorry?"

"You bet I am."

"And you want to forgive her?"

"Er—well, you see, it ain't that so much that I'm worried about. I'm willing enough to forgive, but I'm not so sure about her being willing."

"I suppose she has pride?"

"Maybe you'd call it that, but I don't—not just exactly pride," with great stress on the pride. "You see she runs the house; she owns it. And runs the shop she owns that too. She's a pretty smart woman and I haven't much head for business, so she runs the whole concern. Well, sometimes she has a temper. I don't know why. I'm sure I am the most humble man in the world, but she has got a temper; there is no use denying it. This morning she got mad. She allowed that I wasn't much of a husband. She said that I had never done any work since we were married, and that she did not believe that I ever would. She was sick of supporting me. Yes, she was unjust enough to put it that way. She reproached me with what she called my worthlessness. I tried to be patient with her. I don't believe in being severe with women. I always was kind to them. But when she forgot herself so much as to order me out of the house, then I must confess that I lost my temper, too. A man can't always be forbearing, no matter how gentle he is by nature. I am afraid I answered her sharply. And then she took me by the arm and dragged me out, and pushed me off the steps, and slammed the door in my face, I felt that patience and meekness had ceased to be a virtue. I told her that I could not stand such treatment even from my wife. Then when she stopped out that I'd have to stand it, and that I couldn't come back into that house again until I had made up my mind to do some work. I lost my self restraint entirely, and told her she would never see me again. And here I am, you see."

"Um," said his new friend thoughtfully. "I see."

"Now, it's a pretty serious fix to be in. I haven't any place to sleep. I haven't had anything to eat since breakfast, and I don't know what I'm going to do. Of course I'm willing to forgive her. I don't want to be too hard with her. Perhaps I was a little hasty. I'm willing, you know. The best of us make mistakes. I'm perfectly willing to go back and tell her that we'll let bygones be bygones, but what is worrying me is how to approach her. If she's in a bad temper I may forget myself again and be led into saying something harsh. How would you advise me to go about it?"

"I think I'd just go to her and say you'd try to do better."

"You would, eh?"

"That seems to be about your only way out of the difficulty."

"You think I'm right to swallow my pride, don't you?"

"In this case you seem to be right."

"You don't think it would be undignified to go back?"

"Perhaps not."

"You would forgive everything, would you, and try to bear with her failings?"

"I think if I were you that I should."

"Well," with a doubtful sigh. "I guess I'll try it. Patience is more to be encouraged than anger, I always was a forgiving man. Thank you, for your advice. I guess I'll be starting home; it's about supper time."—New York Tribune.

He Burned His Diamonds.

It was in the smoker of a parlor car. Four drummers on a five dollar a day allowance were telling tall stories of lavish ness in spending money.

"I knew a man who gave a waiter a ten dollar bill for a tip," said one.

"That's nothing," said a second. "I knew a man who invited his friends to dinner and put a hundred dollar bill under the plate of each one for a surprise, and do you know where the surprise came in?"

"No," chorused the other drummers.

"Where?"

"Why, at that point in the proceedings when the guests discovered that the hundred dollar bills were counterfeit."

"Ha! ha!" laughed the chorus.

"That's good that, boys, eh?" said Drummer No. 1. "Reckon it puts the drinks on me. Well, give your orders and we'll listen to the next lie."

"Gentlemen," said a weak voiced, mild mannered representative of the shoe trade, "I had a brother who used to amuse himself by burning diamonds out of his rings and burning them up."

The weak voiced man paused and the drummers gulped down their drinks, each trying to think of some way of crushing this outrageous little liar.

"Bet you five to one he never burned a diamond," exclaimed one.

"Bet you four to one diamonds won't burn."

"Bet you three to one he never knocked a diamond out of a ring."

"Bet you two to one your brother never had a diamond."

"I'll take odds you never had a brother."

"Gentlemen," murmured the weak voiced drummer in even a weaker tone than usual, "I accept all your bets, the unit being five dollars. Here is my roll," and he pulled forth a well stuffed wallet. "Kindly put up yours."

The drummers "put up" in silence. Then their mild mannered comrade continued:

"Gentlemen, my brother is the professor of chemistry in Stevens institute. Every year in the course of his lectures he is allowed fifty dollars for the beautiful and interesting experiment of carbonizing a diamond by heat. In order to make this experiment more impressive my brother buys the diamond in advance and has it set in a ring, which he wears conspicuously during the previous lectures. Then when the day comes for carbonizing the gem he loosens it from its setting before the class and burns it to a dead and worthless mass of black charcoal in an alcohol lamp flame. I assure you the experiment, as my brother performs it, is well worth seeing, and I will have trouble you for twenty-five, twenty, fifteen, ten and five, which makes seventy-five dollars in all. Thanks!

"You will now see, gentlemen, the advantages which even a drummer may derive from having received a liberal education."—New York Herald.

HE DROPPED DEAD.

MR. GEORGE SMOCK'S SUDDEN DEATH.

He was as Well as Usual when He Arose Sunday Morning.—His Heart Failed Him and He Fell to the Floor.

Mr. George Smock, father of Mrs. Penfield, who resides at the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street, dropped dead yesterday morning.

Mr. Smock was 67 years old, but was very active and was as well as usual Saturday night. Early yesterday morning he arose and built the fire in the kitchen range as was his custom and then went out and down in the sitting room.

Mrs. Penfield, shortly after seven o'clock, went to him and said: "Papa, breakfast is ready." He replied, "I feel a little sick here," laying his hand on his stomach, "if I had a little peppermint I would be all right."

He then started to go upstairs it is supposed after some peppermint.

Suddenly Mrs. Penfield heard a noise as if some one had fallen. She rushed upstairs and found Mr. Smock lying on the floor. He expired just as she reached his side.

Mr. Smock was born at Green Brook, in Somerset county, and followed farming all his life, giving it up at his daughter's urgent request to come and live with her at her husband's death, about four years ago.

Mr. Smock was a very prosperous farmer and owned one of the most valuable farms in this vicinity.

His wife and Mrs. Penfield, the only daughter, survive him. Mr. Smock's two sisters—Mrs. Voorhees of New Brunswick, and Mrs. Stout of Iowa—are living.

TWO BLACKSMITHS FIGHT.

And Both Were Arrested by Policeman Frederickson.

Two blacksmiths came to blows in Crowley's hotel on East Front street, Saturday night. Both men were arrested by Policeman Frederickson. They gave their names as Marley and Perrine. The Mayor set down next Monday as the date for trial.

The trouble arose, it seems, over a report that Mr. Marley was going to discharge Mr. Perrine, who works for him. Perrine heard it and this caused the "rumpus"

Their Buggy Upset.

Last night a buggy, in which two men were seated upset on Front street in front of Caspar's Hotel. In turning around the front wheel in some manner got fast in the car tracks. Both men were thrown out. Neither was injured. Several spokes were broken out.

BADLY BEATEN BROWNS.

THE WOODBRIDGE FIELD CLUB SHOULD CHANGE ITS NAME.

The "Browns" Would be More Appropriate as Half of the Team is Composed of Players of That Name.—Crescents Win 17 to 0.

HERE was a notable increase in the attendance at Saturday's ball game on the Crescent Oval, between the Crescents and Woodbridge team. There was also a number of visitors from Woodbridge.

Umpire Daly was absent, so Manager Keller did the umpiring. The "Browns" would be a more appropriate name for the team from Woodbridge. The catcher was a Brown, a Brown did the twirling, and first and second bases were covered by Browns. 4 Browns. The Crescents "did them up Brown"—5 Browns. Another Brown was booked to play, but failed to put in an appearance.

The change in the Crescents' infield—Young behind the bat and Heckman playing first base—did not lessen the team's strength, as Jones caught an excellent game. His throwing to bases was perfect, and not a man stole second on him. It was the first time he has played behind the bat in two years. Heckman covered first base as well as he did third. Splendid work was done by both Keenan and Turner. The score:

Base Ball Notes.

Murphy was released Saturday by Manager Keller, who says "Murphy has not got himself in proper condition to play ball, it is to be regretted, but he has no one to blame but himself." Heckman will, hereafter cover center field.

The Crescents will leave for Poughkeepsie Wednesday on the 6.59 train. Rafferty will catch and McLoughlin will play left field, as McIndoe can not get away from business.

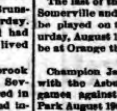
The Crescents have arranged games away from home for the next two weeks with the following clubs: Aug. 9, Poughkeepsie; Aug. 10, Fishkill; Aug. 12, Catsouss, at Hackensack; Aug. 16, Middletown; Aug. 17, Asbury Park; Aug. 19, Orange Athletic Club.

Umpire Daily, who was sick Saturday, will umpire the remainder of the games here this season.

The last of the series of games between Somerville and Westfield will probably be played on the Crescent grounds, Saturday, August 19th, as the Crescents will be at Orange that day.

Champion James J. Corbett will play with the Asbury Park team in their games against the Crescents at Asbury Park August 19th.

At Popular Pajsac.



THERE is not a more popular salt water resort in New Jersey than Pajsac, (Boynton Beach), for small pic nics and family excursions. It is growing more and more popular every day. This year it is open on Sundays. There, families who wish to enjoy the salt air, may spend a quiet day. The bathing facilities are also spoken of as the best.

The grove is a temperance place, making it all the more desirable. Its closeness to Plainfield is often taken advantage of by wheelmen. Several rode there yesterday from here among them were Messrs. Oscar Terry and James Martin who rode home from there in one hour and fifteen minutes.

Dolefal Report of the Peach Crop.

Two hundred and fifty replies out of 300 inquires sent out to the largest peach-growers of New Jersey substantiate the report that unless rain comes soon not half of the usual amount will be shipped. With a full crop, Hunterdon County yields 1,500,000 baskets.

WORLD'S FAIR VOTES.

THE LINE OF RACERS TO-DAY REMAINS UNCHANGED.

Mr. Salzman Not Only Holds His Lead but Increases it and His Friends Feel Confident of Winning the Trip for Him.

BEAUTIFUL buildings, and enormous ones at that, form but a small part of the World's Fair Exhibit. An English traveller has figured that side from the hundreds of outside attractions, and only spending five minutes at each object, it would take over eight years to see all there is to be seen at the World's Fair. Even the Midway Plaisance is omitted from that estimate. Mr. Saltzman's friends think he will be the fortunate man to see all he can of the wonderful things and enjoy the many extras which go to form this trip.

He has not only remained at the head of the least of competitors but continues to gain.

In sending coupons observe the following rules:

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

If the Cholera Comes.

New York, Aug. 7. (Special.)—Dr. Cyrus Edson, Health Commissioner of the City of New York, will say in the forthcoming issue of the American Druggist & Pharmaceutical Record. It is to be regretted that some of the newspapers resort to sensational head lines, and thus unnecessarily alarm the public in connection with contagious or infectious diseases. While much good is accomplished through leading the people to observe the laws of sanitation in their own persons there is also much harm done through unreasoning fear and nervous dread which is caused by these sensational methods. The mere fact that the Kaiserania was detained at quarantine yesterday should not be a source of great alarm, for never in the history of this country has its sanitary condition been so good.

Cholera has been generally prevalent in the interior of Russia and in Asia ever since last year and has been known to be epidemic in the south of France since March of this year. Its existence in Naples has recently come to life, though it has not yet become epidemic there. The north of Europe has been free of cholera since April when some cases occurred in Emrlet, one of the northern provinces of France. I have said that the sanitary condition of the United States in general is excellent, and this is more especially true of the large cities. Since the great source of infection is the water used for drinking, it is around this that the most stringent safeguards should be thrown. This has been fully recognized in the larger cities and thanks to the energetic work of the various boards of Health, there is little or no cause to fear as to impure drinking water. Sojourners at summer resorts, however, should exercise particular caution, as the water used at these temporary places of residence is frequently contaminated, not at present with cholera germs, but with other germs of diseases which may weaken the system so as to afford a lodging place for cholera germs should these be introduced later. That the health authorities of this city are able to combat the disease, even should it reach this country, a contingency which I scarcely class among the possibilities, was amply demonstrated in the way that the few cases were handled which appeared here last year, and further it may be said that the sanitary condition of this city now is better than it was then. There are just three points to bear in mind: First: that cholera can only be taken into the body by means of food or drink. Second: that even if taken into a healthy stomach cholera germs are harmless, as the acid gastric juice at once kills and digests them; Third: that they are certainly killed when submitted to the boiling temperature.

Bearing these facts in mind, every person may face the problem if the cholera comes with equanimity, feeling assured of his ability to care for himself.

THE SEASIDE BIBLE CONFERENCE.

A Large Number of Plainfielders Attended Last Year.

Judging from the number of Plainfielders at the conference last year the following will be of interest here:

"The Inter-Denominational Summer Bible Conference will commence in Educational Hall, Asbury Park, Aug. 11th, 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., to be continued in session ten days. Last year quite 2000 persons were in attendance first and last upon the exercises of the conference. The following are a few of the speakers and teachers who will be present: Dr. William H. Green, president of Princeton Seminary, Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, Dr. James H. Brooks of St. Louis, Joseph Cook, L. L. D. of Boston.

Royal Arcanum Flourishing in New Jersey.

Grand Regent S. J. Kellmann, of the Royal Arcanum, in official circular No. 2, which was issued to-day, expressed his pleasure at the excellent work being done, which may, if maintained, exceed the record of previous years. Three new councils are reported as under way.

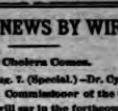
Grand Secretary Alberts, in his report for June, shows that 122 members were admitted in this State during the month, 1 reinstated, 2 withdrawn, 14 suspended, 4 died and 16 rejected. Total membership, 9,715. There are now 90 subordinate councils in New Jersey.

Thieves at Flemington.

Burglars broke into the residence of John Dalrymple, a farmer near Flemington, Saturday night. They carried away over $100 and a lot of silverware. Mr. Dalrymple had been collecting the day before and had deposited his money in a closet downstairs. There is no clue to the burglars.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club Won the Journal Trophy.



WESTFIELD avenue, near Elizabeth, was packed with people Saturday afternoon to witness the six mile bicycle race for the Union county championship and the trophy presented by the Elizabeth Journal. Many Plainfielders attended.

The race was contested by teams of six men each from the Elizabeth Athletic Club and the Elizabeth Wheelmen, and lined up as follows: Elizabeth Wheelmen—A. F. Calkins, G. H. Davey, D. H. McFarland, C. Gilbert, F. C. Gilbert, A. G. Drake.

Elizabeth Athletic Club—Wm. Bettner, Charles Brown, A. N. Lazarus, Edward Morris, H. L. Saltonstall, and H. R. Wemple.

The start was made at 5.30. "Charley" Brown, the crack sprinter of the Elizabeth Athletics, set the pace, being closely followed by H. R. Wemple, who was one of the substitutes. The course was from Elizabeth to Cranford and return.

To the surprise of the crowd the Wheelmen got badly beaten by 16 points. The total number of points scored by the Elizabeth cyclers was 47, as against their opponents 31.

Elizabeth wheelmen will hold a ten-mile open handicap road race over the Elizabeth-Cranford course on election day.

The Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers will hold a twenty-five mile road race on August 19, open to members of any New Jersey club. The medals have been received by Captain Kiely. They are the handsomest ever raced for in Plainfield.

Great preparations are being made by the Union County Roadsters for their seventh anemonth race meet to be held on their new quarter mile track, Rahway, Labor Day.

—Attention is called to-day to White's shoe department announcement.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Journalistic Symposium.

There is considerable to think about in the papers on journalism contributed to The Forum by Messrs. J. W. Keller, president of the New York Press club, John Gilmer Speed and C. R. Miller, editor of the New York Times.

Mr. Speed has selected for his topic, "Do the Newspapers Give the News?" No, they do not, in effect answers the writer, more particularly the New York newspapers. He says, "If the New York newspapers ever recorded history accurately and with any appreciation of the significance of the events occurring, they do it less now than heretofore, for everything is so covered with the millinery of sensationalism that none but the wisest can detect the truth beneath." Mr. Speed may be taken as authority on this question perhaps, for he has lived in New York long enough and contributed matter enough to New York journals to know what he is talking about. These papers now on Chicago even the Chicago journals in the amount of gossip and scandal they print, he thinks.

Mr. Miller addresses some pungent remarks to newspaper critics. One observation is to the effect that if newspapers were run on the lines laid down for them by critics who demand only exalted themes they would be tough reading. They would indeed. Mr. Miller also informs us confidentially that the number of nice people who do not care a rap about the silver question, the tariff or the proceedings of congress is really much larger than their highly educated fellow mortals suspect. Yet these pay for their paper and have a right to demand what they want. That so many of them do demand athletic sports is a good sign.

Mr. Keller takes up the subject from the point of view of the remuneration of the journalist. His picture is a melancholy one on the whole. Three thousand a year is the highest pay a newspaper writer can hope to get unless he is exceptionally fortunate. That sum is a large city is less than half what it would be in a small place. Most newspaper men wear out or die before they are 50 years old and are shoved aside to make room for ambitious youths, who enter on their work full of life and enthusiasm. In this day the business office dominates the editorial department. The writer is wholly at the mercy of the capitalist. Therefore 90 per cent of the men who enter journalism leave it before they become old, making of it only a stepping stone to something else that pays better.

The Hard Times.

Senator Hawley says the American people are peculiarly prone to distrust and suspicion, and they question everything. They doubt even the evidence of their own senses. This is probably one reason for the panic that is now on. With gold coming over from Europe, with silver in small quantity being shipped to Europe, with most of the railroads of the country earning excellent dividends, with good fruit and crop prospects for the country in general and with no important election to disturb the even current of finances, yet bank after bank closes its doors, wheat and silver have been lower than ever before, and stocks have gone down till they are out of sight, that, too, although the substantial ones are paying their dividends as regularly as if they were worth 200 cents.

It is hardly claimed that bear speculators for their own purposes have fostered and inflamed the native distrust and suspicion of the American disposition and are working it for all it is worth, while they shrewdly buy in property after property to sell it again when times get good. Their machinations can only be met properly by the optimistic spirit which is determined to wait a little till the clouds roll by and then pick up and go on again as though nothing had happened.

They are claiming almost as much for the new compound litho-carbon as used to be claimed for aluminium. They say it makes a paint impervious to weather or barnacles; that it can be applied to clothes and will make them absolutely waterproof and cause no odor to attach to them, as India rubber unfortunately does; that it can be used in a japan coating or paint which heat cannot crack or blister, and that iron bridges, roofs and other exposed iron and steel surfaces varnished with it will never rust. Furthermore it makes a perfect insulator and as such will be valuable in electrical industries. Finally, if you bend an iron surface that has been varnished with litho-carbon—though you double it over flat across the middle—this wondrous new varnish will not split off or even show any crack. We could be induced to believe the rest of this fairy tale perhaps, but we draw the line on that last statement.

One of the interesting things to be seen in Fresno, Cal., is a V shaped flume 52 miles long for sliding lumber down from the Sierra Nevada to the plains below. The water is supplied mostly from a lake near the head of the flume, but it has additional feeders, and when they are turned on in full force the timber is shot down the chute at a speed to make one's head swim.

The latest things to straw hats is the head of President Cleveland.

THE SESSION ON.

The New Fifty-third Congress Meets Today.

READY FOR THE MESSAGE.

Crisp and Stevenson Are the Men Who Hold the Gavels.

The Senate and House Are Convened In Extra Session and Are Ready to Legislate the Financial Troubles Out of Existence—Intense Interest Exhibited by Congressmen and Spectators—Galleries Thronged—Sole Faces on the Floor.

WASHINGTON, AUG. 7.—For the twelfth time in the history of the United States congress was convened at noon today in extraordinary session. On the floor of the house of representatives was the usual bustle and stir which always mark the first few days of the session. In the galleries were packed as many spectators as could crowd in, while within the hall suppressed excitement which pervades the whole Capitol building and the city itself, in fact.

In the senate there were less noise and more gravity of course, but the existing interest of the occasion made itself apparent to some extent.

The session was opened with prayer by the senate's new chaplain, Mr. Milburn.

SPEAKER CRISP.

Its two principal officers—Mr. Cox, the new secretary, and Mr. Bright, the new sergeant at arms—also represented the changed political complexion of the body.

All the committee clerkships underwent political changes during the extra session in March, and most of the appointees under the prior secretary and sergeant at arms have only had their official decapitation postponed, not averted.

The first business in order after the senate was called to order was to administer the oath of office to three senators and Mr. Cox, the new secretary of the senate. The senators who took the oath are Mr. Perkins, who succeeds Senator Stanford; Mr. Pasco of Florida, who has been re-elected after serving ad interim under a gubernatorial appointment and Mr. Quay of Pennsylvania, who was not present during the last extra session and so has not yet qualified. As soon as notice was received from the house that it was organized a committee was appointed to wait upon the president and notify him that congress was ready to receive any communication he might care to make.

This called forth the message explaining the president's reason for convening congress in special session and suggesting legislation to cure the ills from which the country is suffering.

The House Convenes.

The house was called to order by Clerk Kerr, who had been selected by a caucus of his party for re-election, but who would nevertheless have performed that duty under the law as the holding over clerk of the last house, even if he had not been chosen for re-election. He called the roll he looked upon nearly 100 new and untried men. Many familiar faces were absent.

The usual resolution notifying the senate that it had been organized and was ready for business was then sent to that body, and three members on the part of the house were named to act as a joint committee to wait upon the president. This afternoon will probably be occupied in the biennial drawing for seats.

The history which the extraordinary session will make for itself will probably justify that title in more senses than one. Convened for a single specific object—the repeal or modification of what is popularly known as the Sherman act—it will not be restricted to that bare programme, but will have in connection with it to legislate on the whole subject of finance, including probably a thorough revision of the tariff. These two subjects, distinct and yet connected, will supply material enough to occupy the attention of congress for many months to come.

While the house has the great advantage of being guided and controlled by experienced leaders and debaters on both sides of the chamber, it also contains many members entirely new to its proceedings.

Its presiding officer, Vice President Stevenson, when he took the gavel on the 4th of March last from the hand of the retiring Vice President, Mr. Morton, had had no familiarity with the rules of a legislative body except that derived from his service in the house of representatives during two congresses, but during the six weeks of the extra session he presided with dignity and ability. In the coming session, when exciting conflicts may be anticipated and when parliamentary rulings may have to be prompt, sharp and decisive, Mr. Stevenson will have a reliable substitute to call to the chair in the person of the president of the senate pro tempore, Mr. Harris of Tennessee.

New Faces in the Senate.

The state of California had today two new men in the senate to look after her interests—Mr. White, who succeeded Mr. Hearst, and Mr. Perkins, who has been appointed by the governor to fill the place of Mr. Stanford. Kansas has joined to her Populist senator, Mr. Peffer (on whom neither political party could rely for support on any question), another man appointed from the Populist ranks, but on whom the Democrats can rely—Mr. Martin. Kentucky has a new senator, Mr. Lindsay, elected to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Carlisle's resignation. Louisiana has one in Mr. Caffery, who took custody last January the seat made vacant by the death of Mr. Gibson. Massachusetts has one in Mr. Cabot Lodge, who succeeded Mr. Dawes on March 4 last.

Nebraska has one in Mr. Allen, elected in place of Mr. Paddock; New Jersey one in Mr. Smith, elected in place of Mr. Blodgett; New York one in Mr. Murphy, elected in place of Mr. Hiscock; North Dakota one in Mr. Roach, against whose right to preside such a decided stir at the extra session; West Virginia one in Mr. Camden, who, however, served a former term in the senate from 1881 to 1887, and Wyoming one in Mr. Mitchell, who, like the vice president, has had two terms' experience in the house of representatives.

In addition to these new senators there are the old others, as to whose admission the question was left undecided at the close of the extra session, and this question, therefore, will be first to be settled and decided. The point in regard to them is whether a state legislature, having been in session and having failed to elect a senator of full term, has the power to elect afterward to fill a vacancy, the vacancy existing at session, before any legislative subject can be disposed of.

The Party Leaders.

But it is to the old leaders of both political parties in the senate that the public now looks for action. Foremost on the Republican side is Mr. Sherman, who gave his name to the act now the object of so much condemnation—an act which he has defended as a compromise measure and which he is now willing and anxious to see repealed.

He will probably be supported in whatever position he takes on the silver question by such able adjutants as Allison, Aldrich, Frye, Hale, Hawley, Hoar and Morrill, and he will be as ably antagonized by such Republican senators as Jones of Nevada, Teller, Wolcott and Stewart.

There are quite as many experienced debaters and parliamentarians on the Democratic side, including Senators Gorman, Gray, George, Harris, Morgan, Pugh, Vest, Vance and Voorhees, but they will all range themselves, not on party lines, but on their individual and state views of financial policy.

The torrid heat of the capital at this time does not incite to active exertion, so the senators are not likely to sit many hours daily nor to hold daily sessions at the beginning. If, however, the senate is disposed to go earnestly to work from the start, it has before it, as already stated, the privileged question of the right to seats of Senators Mantle of Montana, Beckwith of Wyoming and Allen of Washington. Should the Republicans insist upon a disposition of these cases nothing else can be done until they are passed upon.

Another privileged motion pending is Mr. Hoar's resolution touching Senator Roach's character, with Mr. Gorman's substitute, and still another is Mr. Chandler's resolution of a similar nature concerning Senator Power. So far no line of policy has been defined by either party upon these subjects, and it is probable that in both the senate and the house the parties will caucus during the week to agree upon their respective plans of campaign.

The onlookers from the galleries today saw some familiar faces which have been missing for some years restored to the halls of legislation.

Chief among them is homely Joe Cannon of Illinois. When once again in his favorite attitude, with one foot on the chair in front of him and his hand to his elbows, he points his skinny dexter finger at the speaker, he is sure of a hearty welcome from political friend and opponent alike.

Mr. Updegraff of Iowa, whom Sunset Cox used adroitly to put forward to fight Republican privileged battles in Mr. Cox's back after an absence. So does grizzled, earnest Governor Gear of Iowa.

Mr. Money of Mississippi, who was assistant postmaster general under Cleveland's first administration, returns to try for his old position as chairman of the committee on postoffices and postroads.

Talbot of Maryland, a former congressional conspicuous on the naval committee, will seek a similar assignment in this congress.

Henry W. Blair of New Hampshire, persona non grata to China and the senate, will now have the opportunity of airing his eloquence on his educational bill on the house side.

Veteran Dan Stickles of New York returns to the legislative field which he left many years ago.

Two other New York men of other politics, James S. Sherman and John Van Voorhis, resume congressional togas.

Silver haired Grosvenor of Ohio, after saying away for one congress, again looms up to worry his political opponents.

And Joseph A. Scranton of Pennsylvania, who secures in and out of congress every alternate two years, finds this is not one of his "off" years.

There will probably be little done in the house the first week, owing to the non-existence of committees.

The final vote on the repeal of the Sherman silver purchasing law of 1890, which from today on will be the mark against which will be directed many flights of eloquence and many shafts of sarcasm.

The Sherman Law.

As act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of treasury notes therefor, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, That the secretary of the treasury is hereby directed to purchase from time to time silver bullion to the aggregate amount of 4,500,000 ounces, or so much thereof as may be offered each month at the market price thereof not exceeding $1 for three hundred and seventy-one and twenty-five hundredths grains of pure silver, and to issue in payment for such purchases of silver bullion treasury notes of the United States to be prepared by the secretary of the treasury in such form and of such denominations—not less than $10 nor more than $1,000—as he may prescribe, and a sum sufficient to carry into effect the provisions of this act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Sec. 2. That the treasury notes issued in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be redeemable on demand, in coin, at the treasury of the United States, or at the office of any assistant treasurer of the United States, and when so redeemed may be reissued, but no greater or less amount of such notes shall be outstanding at any time than the cost of the silver bullion and the standard silver dollars coined therefrom, then held in the treasury purchased by such notes; and such treasury notes shall be a legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, within the limits of the United States, except where otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract, and shall be receivable for customs, taxes and public dues, and when so received may be reissued; and such notes when held by any national banking association may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve. That the secretary of the treasury shall each month coin 2,000,000 ounces of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act into standard silver dollars until the first day of July, 1891, and after that time he shall coin of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act such amount from time to time as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of the treasury notes herein provided for, and any gain or seigniorage arising from such coinage shall be accounted for and paid into the treasury.

Sec. 4. That the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the requirements of existing law and the regulations of the mint service governing the methods of determining the amount of pure silver contained and the amount of charges or deductions, if any, to be made.

Sec. 5. That so much of the act of Feb. 28, 1878, entitled "An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar, and to restore its legal-tender character," as requires the monthly purchase and coinage of the same into silver dollars of not less than $2,000,000 nor more than $4,000,000 ounces troy of bullion is hereby repealed.

Sec. 6. That upon the passage of this act the balances standing with the treasurer of the United States to the respective credits of national banks for deposits made to redeem the circulating notes of such banks and all deposits thereafter received for like purpose shall be covered into the treasury as miscellaneous receipt, and the treasurer of the United States shall redeem from the general cash in the treasury the circulating notes of said banks which may come into his possession subject to redemption, and upon the requisition of the comptroller of the currency that such notes have been received by him, and that they have been destroyed and mutilated, and that no new notes will be issued in their place, reimbursement of their amount shall be made to the treasurer. Under such regulations as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe, from an appropriation hereby created, to be known as national bank notes redemption account, but the provisions of this act shall not apply to the deposits received under section 3 of the act of June 20, 1874, and the treasurer shall keep in his lawful money with the treasurer of the United States a sum equal to 5 per centum of its circulation, to be held and used for the redemption of its circulating notes, and the balance remaining of all deposits made to redeem the notes of each month be reported on the monthly public debt statement as debt of the United States bearing no interest.

Sec. 7. That this act shall take effect 30 days from and after its passage.

Approved July 14, 1890.

The President's Day of Rest.

President Cleveland spent Sunday at his country home in company with Secretary Lamont. In the course of the afternoon Secretary Gresham arrived on and had a short talk with the president. The weather was exceedingly hot, and the gentlemen found the shade thereof that blew over the heights much more agreeable than the almost stifling heat that prevailed in the city.

Vice President Stevenson reached the capital from his home, Bloomington, Ills., and sought the quarters at the Ebbitt House occupied by him when he came to Washington last March to be sworn in. He spent Sunday quietly at the hotel and in the evening went out for a short time.

Rev. W. N. Cleveland of New York, brother of the president, preached in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church. The president did not come in from the country to hear him, but Secretary Gresham, Postmaster General Bissell and Private Secretary Thurber were in the morning congregation.

FAIR VISITORS WRECKED

Smash on the Lake Shore Railroad In Ohio.

THREE KILLED, MANY INJURED.

Professor Emerson of Amherst College Among the Victims—Chicago Baseball Club in the Sand—Sleeping Coaches Crashed Into a Freight Engine.

FREMONT, O., Aug. 7.—A terrible wreck occurred at Lindsey, a small village of about 500 inhabitants eight miles west of this place, on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern. An engine and three sleepers were badly demolished and three people killed outright, while fully 25 were more or less badly injured.

The wreck was caused by the collision of a west bound passenger train and east bound freight. Passenger train No. 9, the Pacific express, left here about 10 minutes late. The train consisted of an engine, baggage car, two express cars, three coaches and five sleepers. The coaches and sleepers were all well filled with people, many of whom were on their way to Chicago.

At Lindsey, the next station west of this place, the train passed a local freight, No. 74, which had been sidetracked to await the passing of train No. 9. The train was running at full speed and passed safely until the sleepers neared the switch, close to the freight, when the first three sleepers jumped the track and ran into the engine of the freight. The engine was wrecked and the sleepers crushed like eggshells.

A Frightful Awakening.

As the sleepers were filled with passengers, it seems a miracle that all were not instantly killed. The scene that followed the collision was heartrending. The groans of the dying, the shrieks of the injured and the hissing of escaping steam combined to add horror to a night that will long be remembered by those who witnessed it.

Work was at once begun to render aid to the injured and those who were imprisoned in the wreck. The disaster was immediately reported, and an extra, composed of an engine and coach, was made up at this place. Drs. William Caldwell, F. U. Hilbish, M. Steaman and F. B. Mack had in the meantime been summoned, and the party at once proceeded to the scene of the wreck.

The sight that greeted them was terrible. The track for some distance was covered with debris, beneath which several persons were imprisoned. Legs, hands and arms protruded here and there from beneath the ruins. The dead were Engineer Edward Lafferty of the local freight Charles Spane, a brakeman on the same train, and Porter Robertson (colored) of the sleeper Erie of Chicago.

On the arrival of the medical party the injured were at once taken care of, with the united efforts of the physicians of this city and Drs. Wolland and W. L. Steirwalt of Lindsey.

About 15 of the injured, who had received wounds of a less dangerous character, after receiving surgical attention, proceeded on their westward journey on that part of the same train which had escaped damage. The others who received serious injuries were taken to the Hotel Nichols and private residences, where they are now receiving the best of care.

The Dead and Injured.

The seriously injured are as follows:

Professor Emerson, Amherst college, Gloucester, Mass.; chest injured; will die.

J. A. Hamilton, Pittsburg; injured internally, perhaps fatally.

Porter Stevens (colored), New York; extent of injuries not known.

Porter Pelham (colored) of the sleeper Orinoco, Chicago; injured internally, very serious.

A. H. West, Chicago; badly cut, not serious.

Center Fielder Ryan of the Chicago Baseball club; bad cuts.

Catcher Kittridge of the Chicago Baseball club; cut about head and body.

E. K. Fisher, Ravine street, Alleghany City, Pa.; left foot cut off.

Three killed outright were:

Ed Lafferty, engineer on local freight No. 74, residence at Elyria, O.; married and leaves a widow and four children.

Charles Spane, brakeman on freight; residence at Clayville, N. Y.

Porter Robertson (colored) of the sleeper Erie; residence at Chicago.

Professor Emerson and Porter Pelham are now in an unconscious condition, and their deaths are hourly expected.

Sixteen Tramps Reported Killed.

DANVILLE, Ills., Aug. 7.—Train No. 44 on the Peoria and Eastern railroad, while pulling up a grade coming into Danville, broke in two parts upon a trestle one-half mile long and 75 feet high. An east bound freight dashed into the first section at full speed.

The middle span was completely destroyed and also 25 cars of grain, two caboooses and the engines. Engineer O'Connor had a very narrow escape.

It is reported that 15 tramps were under the train. If so, they were probably killed. Two hundred men worked all day clearing away the debris in search of bodies. Only one was found, that of a brakeman Stone.

Charles Jackson, a tramp, was seriously injured. He claims that he and 17 other boxcaboons were loading their way out in a grain car and that all the others are killed and that their bodies are at the bottom of the creek. Hostlery was created intense excitement, but as only the body has been found it is believed that he is mistaken.

Said Mass but Did Not Preach.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn celebrated mass in St. Finbar's Roman Catholic church at Bath Beach. Crowds flocked to the church. The mass being "low," it was read, not chanted, and only two tapers lighted the altar. There was no sermon whatever. It was believed that the clergyman would address the congregation, but he simply read the ritual.

Another one of what is thought to be typhoid fever has occurred at the New York state building at the World's fair, the victim being George H. Stevens, auditor of the New York state exhibit.

LYNCHERS KILLED.

The Conrad Boys Shot Four of the Crowd Who Came to Hang.

CONYDON, Ind., Aug. 7.—In Boone township, this county, a large crowd of men went to the house of William and Ed Conrad for the purpose of lynching the two boys, who were suspected of killing their father last winter. The young Conrads had received notice sometime ago if they did not leave the neighborhood they would be lynched. Upon this notice the boys armed themselves with shotguns and revolvers and awaited their coming.

The boys secreted themselv[illegible] inside their house when the crowd sig[illegible]d and fired into them, killing John Tu[illegible]nicks and William Wiseman, after which the crowd dispersed, and before they could command themselves they were again fired into, and Edward Houston and Isaac Howe were instantly killed and William May was fatally shot.

The mob numbered about 100 men, and those killed and wounded are the best in the township. The two Conrads escaped. Intense excitement prevails throughout the southern part of the county. The Conrad boys have always been regarded as vicious and worthless.

A RACE TRACK MURDER.

One of Lorillard's Stable Employees Found With a Knife Cut In His Heart.

EATONTOWN, N. J., Aug. 7.—John Chew, an employee of Pierre Lorillard's stalls at the Monmouth Park race track, was brutally murdered there. The murder is alleged to have been committed by S. P. Donovan, also an employee of Mr. Lorillard, but who is better known as "Snip Donovan."

The murder was committed with a knife, which was thrust into Chew's heart, inflicting a wound nearly six inches long and severing the sixth and seventh ribs.

Chew lived long enough to cry out, "Oh, oh, oh! Murder, murder!" and then dropped dead about 80 yards from where he had received his wound.

Donovan was immediately put under arrest and later taken to the county jail at Freehold. Bail has been refused him.

At the preliminary inquest Watchman Radcliffe testified that Donovan had frequently threatened to murder Chew. Donovan has a very bad disposition and is easily angered.

The Alaska's Narrow Escape.

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 7.—The Guion line steamer Alaska, Captain Murray, from New York July 31, arrived here after a most eventful voyage. The Alaska encountered for the entire passage. For four days and nights the whistle sounded almost continuously, and the vessel was kept at reduced speed. It is stated by some of the passengers that at 11 o'clock Sunday morning the Alaska narrowly escaped running on the rocks on the extreme west coast of Ireland, owing to the dense fog prevailing at the time.

Fatal Fall of Two Children.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Bartholomew and Thomas Crimmins, aged 6 and 9 years respectively, children of Patrick and Margaret Crimmins, who live in rear rooms on the top floor of the five story tenement house 204 West Sixty-first street, fell out of a window to the yard, and both were killed.

HIS NECK TWICE BROKEN

Harry Richardson Is Still Alive, Though Paralyzed.

A DIVE CAUSED THE ACCIDENT.

He Jumped From a Springboard Into Shallow Water—His Head Hung Down When He Was Taken Out—Not Expected to Live.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Harry Richardson, an accountant for the Fidelity and Security company of this city, dislocated his neck while bathing at Bath Beach, L. I., Saturday afternoon, and is now lying at the point of death in the Homeopathic hospital in Cumberland street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Richardson is conscious and can speak, but his body below his chest is paralyzed, and the physicians have no hope of his recovery. They say he may live for days, weeks or even months, but that he cannot recover.

Mr. Richardson has lived with his wife, mother-in-law, son and daughter at St. Nicholas avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, this city. He is 49 years old. Since July 1 he and his family have been at the Hamilton villa, Bath Beach. It was his custom to come to the city every morning.

Dived Off a Springboard.

Saturday was a half holiday, and Mr. Richardson remained at the villa. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon he decided to take a swim. The water was not more than five feet deep, but Mr. Richardson thought it deep enough to dive.

He went to the end of a springboard and turned a backward somersault into the water. He swam ashore, and climbing upon the boards dived off head first.

None of the other bathers was watching Mr. Richardson. His little daughter Ethel saw her father splash into the water and noticed that he was a long time coming to the surface. When he finally came up she saw that something was the matter and immediately gave the alarm.

Three swimmers hastened to Mr. Richardson's assistance. He came up and then floated with his head hanging downward and his back elevated. His limbs hung limp. Thinking that he was drowning, his companions carried him to the shore. They supposed he had swallowed water, and they rolled him on a barrel for several minutes.

Dr. Searle of the Marine and Field club was summoned and on examination found that Mr. Richardson's neck was dislocated. Dr. Lewis, the family physician, who happen to be at the beach, arrived with him.

Mr. Richardson was carried into the villa, and the two physicians succeeded in setting his neck. It was then decided to remove him to the Homeopathic hospital, and yesterday morning he was taken there in a health department ambulance. In transferring Mr. Richardson from the stretcher to cot in the hospital his neck was again dislocated, and the doctors had some difficulty in resetting it.

Neck Twice Dislocated.

Mr. Richardson's body below the region of the heart is paralyzed. He can eat a little food and can move his arms slightly. He says he is troubled with a constant pain at the point of fracture, and has expressed the fear to his attendants that his neck had not been properly reset.

Mr. Richardson told his friends when he had recovered from the first effects of his shock that he thought his neck was injured the first time he dived into the water. He said that he landed with great force on his back, but did not notice anything wrong. But just before he made his second leap he felt as if he was paralyzed. The doctors said they could not determine which fall broke his neck, though they were inclined to his theory.

RESERVOIR BURST.

Four Persons Overwhelmed by Millions of Gallons of Water.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 7.—The great reservoir of the Portland Water company, on the eastern promenade, burst, letting loose its 20,000,000 gallons of water in the short space of about 15 minutes.

The immense body of water dashed upon the two houses occupied by the families of Michael Lappin and Dennis M. Conley. The buildings were crushed as if they had been made of cardboard, and four persons lost their lives—Mrs. Dennis M. Conley, Miss Agnes Conley, Miss Mamie Conley and James Moseley.

The flood also tore up the street to the depth of 6 feet, the water going down the steep bank into the cove. The bodies of the four victims were recovered. The break is supposed to have been caused by a leak around the overflow pipe.

The reservoir cost $125,000, was designed by J. H. Shedd, the Providence engineer, and was built under his supervision. The damage to the reservoir is about $25,000.

Lightning Killed Two.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 7.—Fred Zeigling, 27 years old; Lizzie Topel, 6 years old; Ernest Coppel, 47 years old, and John Mahan, 14 years old, all of Brooklyn, were struck by lightning at the corner of Berryman street and Hageman avenue. Zeigling and the girl were instantly killed, and John Mahan was severely shocked and knocked unconscious to the pavement. The father of the girl, Ernest Topel, received a shock on the leg.

THE CRICKET SHOP

JOURNALISM.

The First Printed Newspaper—The Oldest Newspaper in the United States.

The first printed newspaper, according to Thorne, was that for the following statistics, was The Gazette, published in Nuremberg, in 1457, and the oldest paper extant is The Wiener Zeitung ans Hispaniens und Italien, printed in the same city in 1554. Other countries followed Germany in issuing printed newspapers in the following order: England, in 1622; France, in 1631; Sweden, in 1644; Holland, in 1656; Russia, in 1703; Turkey, in 1827. The first American paper consisted of three pages of two columns each and a blank page and was published in Boston Sept. 25, 1690, under the name of Publick Occurrences, Both Foreign and Domestic, but it was immediately suppressed. In 1704 the Boston News Letter appeared, printed on one sheet of foolscap paper. It flourished for 72 years. The oldest newspaper in the United States is the Weekly Massachusetts Spy, published at Worcester, Mass. This paper was established at Boston March 3, 1771, by Isaiah Thomas, the historian of American printing. It was removed to Worcester in 1775, where it has been issued continuously ever since.

The total number of newspapers published in the world at present is estimated at about 43,000, distributed as follows: United States, 17,000; Germany, 8,500; Great Britain, 6,000; France, 4,022; Japan, 2,092; Italy, 1,400; Austria-Hungary, 1,200; Asia, exclusive of Japan, 1,000; Spain, 886; Russia, 805; Australia, 762; Greece, 600; Switzerland, 450; Holland, 300; Belgium, 300; all others, 1,000. Of these about half are printed in English. The whole number of periodicals published in the United States in 1887 was 16,810. The whole number of copies printed during the year was 8,497,354,000. The first printing office in the United States was established in 1639, the first political newspaper was published in 1783, the first daily paper in 1784, the first penny paper in 1833 and the first illustrated paper in 1853.

What Is Menthol?

The popularity of the menthol pencil has caused the uninitiated to ask, What is menthol? Menthol is a solid crystalline body which separates from oil of peppermint on standing. It has the odor of peppermint, melts at 108 degrees F. and evaporates unchanged at a higher temperature. Its use as a local application in neuralgia in China and Japan goes back into the dateless ages. It is not known when or by whom menthol crystals were first brought to the notice of European druggists, but it is said that it was used on the continent at the end of the last century. About 1864 a consignment of it was received in London under the name of Chinese peppermint oil. It was also sold in Paris, in the small red labeled Chinese bottles, and to eastern travelers, as "Po Ho oil." The commercial history of menthol dates from 1878. In four years menthol crystals were the rage of the season and began being carried about in the cone shape now familiar to most persons who are in possession of the modern civilized nervous system.

Who Invented the Steamboat?

It is asserted that facts show that Samuel Morey of Fairlee, Vt., was the first man who ever invented, built and run a steamboat. There is a vague impression that Morey made some sort of an attempt to run a steamboat on the Connecticut river at Fairlee, but it is not generally known that besides his experiments there at his own home he ran a steamboat from Hartford to New Haven, and that he built at Bordentown, N. J., a larger boat, which he ran between that place and Philadelphia. A model of his boat was exhibited in New York city, and his invention attracted the attention of Robert Fulton, the Livingstons and others who were studying the problem of steam navigation. Fulton indeed made practical application of the invention to commercial use, but Morey, the Vermonter, was the original inventor beyond any question, states a Vermont exchange.

Quotations Found.

"Earth is crammed with heaven, and every common bush afire with God," is from "Aurora Leigh," by Mrs. Browning.

The line, "Good and the light of all my life gone with her," is to be found in Longfellow's "Golden Legend." The words are supposed to be spoken by Prince Henry when the heroine Elsie is about to sacrifice her life for his sake.

"The only way to get rid of your past is to get a future out of it," is a quotation from a sermon by the late Phillips Brooks. Tennyson was the author of these lines:

> Let there be thistles—there are grapes:
> Of rain I sing, there comes the rain!
> Ten thousand broken lights and shapes,
> Yet glimpses of the true.

A Custom In Spain.

A correspondent from Spain calls attention to the fact that the custom of having no seats or pews in church still continues in Spain. Each person has a rush bottomed sort of priedieu chair, called in Spanish a reclinatorio. The name of the owner is painted on the back, and all the chairs are kept in the sacristy or stacked in a corner of the church. Most heads of families send their servants on Saturday evening to arrange the chairs for Sunday morning.

Trademarks.

There are reasons for believing that trademarks are as old as the industry of mankind. We are told that ancient Babylon had property symbols, and the Chinese claim to have had trademarks 1,000 years before Christ. Gutenberg, the inventor of printing, had a lawsuit about a trademark and won it as early as 1360. The English parliament has authorized trademarks for many years past, and the laws of America have also protected them.

Johnny Reb.

Johnny Reb, the sobriquet given by the soldiers of the Union army to Confederates during the late war of the rebellion, is said to have originated in a colloquy between pickets. The Confederate soldier objected to being dubbed by the Union soldier as a Johnny Bull in allusion to the countenance given by Great Britain to the cause of the seceding states, but submitted to Johnny Reb without protest.

Kismet.

"Kismet," or "kismat," is an oriental word taken into the fold of the English language. It is a variation of the Turkish quismet and the Hindoo and Persian qukmat and dates back to the Aryan qutsma. It means "lot in life" or "destiny" or "fate" and is one of the most significant and romantic words in literature.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE USEFUL TOAD.

How He Obtains His Supper and at the Same Time Aids the Farmer.

As may be seen from the picture here given the toad is neither beautiful nor graceful. His stomach is too large to get through the door of polite society, and yet Mr. Toad is the respected friend of everybody interested in agriculture. The farmers make friends with him and give him a home in their gardens, all because innumerable bugs and beetles that would otherwise destroy the crops disappear down that great throat and are never heard of again.

Did you ever see a toad catch and eat his supper? If not, the next time you find one of these little fellows puffing himself out to the point of bursting and rolling up the whites of his eyes in a sleepy fashion, watch him. Sooner or later he will make a sudden hop and appear out of sight. Search awhile, and you will find him with his fat, chunky body flattened out so as to seem literally pasted to the ground. While you are still gazing in wonder there will come a lightning change. He will launch himself like an arrow into a tuft of grass, gobble up his prey in shape of some destructive insect and then quickly and meekly hop back on the walk the same rotund, stupid looking object as before. In this manner he not only feeds himself, but, as I have already told you, rids the garden of many insect pests.

Instead of being the stupid, slow moving animal many thoughtless persons suppose him to be, the toad is in reality as cunning as a cat and twice as active. Therefore we say good luck to the toad. He is all right. Do not destroy him, but let him dwell in peace in your garden.

The Greedy Pig.

In a farmyard old there lived a pig.
With bristles black as ink,
And all the day, so I've heard say,
He did nothing but eat and drink.

At length he ate so very much
That he grew remarkably stout,
And there he would lie in front of the sty,
Too lazy to walk about.

One day the farmer spied him out,
And piggy was straightway taken,
And soon, alas! it came to pass
He was turned into streaky bacon.

THE LAST STRAW.

An Incident from Chicago Showing How the Worm Will Turn.

"Lemuel Finkenbinder, it is time to get up!"

After in the east the gray dawn of a frosty November morning had faintly impressed itself on the reluctant and unresponsive horizon, and the early morning sky had begun to look as if it felt stricken with premonitions of a coming day that should reveal everything it had been trying to hide, Mrs. Finkenbinder's sluggish atmosphere gave the harsh, fuzzy, perfunctory whistle of a distant locomotive that either had the asthma or found it hard work to impress the proper quickness on account of the cold, and would not have whistled anyhow if it hadn't been compelled to do it by the regulations of the soulless corporation it was working for.

"Lemuel Finkenbinder, it is time for us to get up! I have told you so five or six times!"

"Re-yah-ah-heigh-er-um!" responded Mr. Finkenbinder vaguely. "What is it, Pan? Wha'?——"

And with a soft snore he relapsed into slumber.

"Lem!"

"Yah-ah!——"

"Get up! It's time you were building the kitchen fire."

She shook him and shouted in his ear again, but he felt not, hearing and her voice sounded like the soft murmur of the waves that wash the shore of the land of dreams.

Again he wandered down the happy valley, hand in hand with his heart's idol, as of old. The gentle breezes sighed through the trees, the dewy heads, and the grassy carpet beneath their feet waved to and fro in fantastic billows, as if stirred by the wings of passing fairies. Again he looked into the melting blue eyes, in the soul answering glances he read the story of trusting girlhood's deep and fearless devotion, and his heart swelled with pride and joy.

"Lem!"

"Er——eh——what——wha'——"

"Lemuel Finkenbinder, wake up!"

"I-yes. I—what are you doing?"

"I'm shaking you. Are you going to get up?"

Back from fairyland came Lemuel Finkenbinder—not all at once, but by jobs and bumps.

He opened his eyes. His cherished wife, the partner of his joys, sharer of his sorrows, loving caterer to his gastronomical whims and disbursing agent of his treasury department was trying to push him out of bed into the cold, cold air that cause freely in through the open window.

He sat up in bed. A full realization of his dignity as a man, the head of the house of the Finkenbinder family, its champion, bulwark and defender came upon him. Memories of the past, with its crcon of indignities, misdeeds of duty, and every acts and transgressions for which he could find no adequate excuse rose vividly before him. It was not too late to shake off his lethargy, assert his manhood and vindicate himself.

"Pan," he said with iron firmness, as he lay down again and covered himself to slumber, "if you want that blamed old fire built you get up and build it yourself."—Chicago Tribune.

Poets in Chicago.

The spirit of poetry moveth itself in Chicago. Whether it moveth itself aright is another question, of course. Hereare three little scraps which yesterday's mail brought.

They speak for themselves:

THE BOY AND THE WIND.

A boy stood on the pavement the plor
Whining to catch some fakeer.
He stooped to conquer,
The wind blew him off;
He is now one of McGinty's visitors.

A boy stood in a barber shop,
With a whistlebrush in his fingers;
And all of a sudden there came a puff of wind,
And the whist blew through his fingers.

A boy took a bath in the lake one cold winter's day.
His hair froze stiff and twistless;
The wind blew strong,
His hair is all gone.
And he is now seeking advice from the Sutherland sisters.

The second poetic spasm carries in its title the cheering hope that it can never be topped:

THE OLD MAN'S DYING WORDS.

How the sun rose on that Morns
Of those years long, long ago,
How the chirped their birds
When the horns were sglo.

I was then bright and very gay,
But the lilies bow long gone by;
I am now very old and gray
And lay me down to die.

And my dying wishes are
That I may be
Layed upon the cliffs
That overlook the sea.

Place this hand on my Bosom
And this one toward the sky,
And then I'll pause and comfort
Let my dear old body lie.

We hope that this request, so soulfully and poetically expressed, may be complied with at once. The third production sustains the high literary standing of the two preceding lin

THE SEA.

I love to watch the rolling waves
Foaming and tossing beath me.
I'm not afraid; dont see I be,
When I was brought up on the sea?

As one by one the mad waves come,
And toss us against the rocks;
They toss us up roughly, and the captain talks gruffly.
But still I'm not afraid.

This is not remarkable enough however. One who can write poetry such a literary crime in cold blood should be able to scare a sea captain into hysterics, no matter how "gruffly" the old sea dog talks.—Chicago Mail.

He Wasn't Deaf.

"H-a-r-r-y! Oh, H-a-r-r-y!" called a little woman at the corner of Woodward avenue and a cross street. Just as people were going home to supper. She had no bonnet on and her voice was keyed up to concert pitch.

"He doesn't seem to hear you," said a ferret nosed man who was deriving support from a hitching post.

"You needn't worry," snapped the little woman. She looked across the street where two small boys in knickerbockers were sitting on a carriage step in front of a grocery.

"You, H-a-r-r-y!" she cried, making a trumpet of her hand.

Master Harry never moved.

"Kind of deaf, isn't he?" asked the man at the hitching post, solicitously.

She gave him a withering look.

"When I want him he'll come," she said. "H-a-r-r-y, come to supper!"

The haste with which Harry turned a double back action somersault in his haste to obey his mother caused the man at the post to say laconically:

"Vittles fetches 'em every time."—Detroit Free Press.

Choosing Between the Attractions.

Barnum's circus had just struck town. Aunt Polly had never seen the elephant, in any sense of the word, and had been telling for weeks how she "did just long to go to the show." When the proper morning came Aunt Polly's married son, Jack, told her to be ready at 1 p. m. and they'd take in the show.

"Well, now," exclaimed Aunt Polly hesitatingly, "I don't know about that. I want to see the show awful bad, but you see Deacon Perkins' funeral comes off to-day, and I don't just know which I'd enjoy the most. There'll be lots of folks there, and besides, I may live till Barnum comes again, but this is the only funeral Deacon Perkins will ever give.

"I guess, Josh, I'll have a better time at the funeral than at the circus."

And Aunt Polly went to the funeral.—Boston Globe.

Hard to Rough Passages.

Charley Whittier, the local ticket agent of the Union Pacific, tells this story:

I was on a steamer crossing the Atlantic from Europe awhile back and nearly everybody on board was seasick. The most notable exception to the rule was a big red headed fellow, who remained about the promenade deck without showing the slightest inconvenience from the ship's motion. I crawled weakly up to him and asked how it happened that he took things so easy, while all the rest of us were tagging at our very boots. I asked him what he took to keep his stomach normal. He said: "Well, I'm a railroad man. I'm a conductor on the P. D. Q. and R. railroad for twenty years."—Kansas City Times.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Madison Avenue Property Owners Object to the Widening of that Thoroughfare, and Make Others which are Rejected.—Commissioners Appointed to Assess Damages and Benefits—Other Business.

A regular meeting of the City Common Council was held last evening with the following members present: Bird, Erickson, Frazee, Glinn, Marsh, Millington, See and Weber.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting and the bills, the rules were suspended to give Madison avenue property owners an opportunity to speak in regard to the opening of that thoroughfare.

Ex-Judge Codington was presentjand addressed the Council as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen:—I received a communication from Mr. James Jackson asking me to represent him here. He owns land at the corner of Madison avenue and Front street. From the tone of his letter I take it that he isn't opposed to the widening in case he receives a compensation for his land. I also represent Mr. Charles Austin, who owns a little strip of land on the left hand side of the street. His lot is 24 feet deep. To take eight feet off this would render the land useless. More damage would be done a lot of this size than one of a depth of 150 feet.

Mr. Dreier said he had just erected a three story building at the corner of Madison avenue and Front street, and in case the street was widened he would have to tear it down. Continuing he said: "I have seen narrower streets than Madison avenue in New York, where they also do more business. Seventeen years ago I bought that lot for $700. The building cost much more than the land."

Mr. Codington said Mr. Austin placed the damage to his property at $1,000, while Mr. Jackson had not stated any amount.

Mr. Henry Piker said he owned property on Madison avenue, adjoining Mr. Austin's place. His lot was 50 feet deep and 75 feet. To take eight feet off of his 25 would destroy his whole property.

The regular business was then resumed, as no more Madison avenue property owners seemed to have anything to say.

The monthly reports of the City Physician, Collector, Assessor, and City Treasurer were received and filed.

A communication was read, from the heirs of the late T. J. Gillies, protesting against the taking of their property for the widening of Madison avenue. It was referred to the Street Committee.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the transferring of $295 from the general fund to the poor fund.

By resolution the Mayor, City Clerk and Treasurer were authorized to borrow $4,000 for the general fund, and $2,400 for the fire department fund.

Mr. E. B. Phillips was given the contract for wiring the new engine house for electric lighting. His bid was $285. Mr. Joseph Kohl's bid was $315.

Mr. Erickson of the Fire and Building Committee reported that the committee had decided to have wainscoting placed in the new engine house, instead of plaster as originally intended, at an extra cost of $172. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Marsh moved that when Council adjourned it be to meet Tuesday, August 15, to revise the tax list. It was so ordered.

On motion the street commissioner was directed to clean up the city park and put it in a presentable condition; also to erect posts to prevent persons driving through. As it is now the park is used as a driveway.

As the clerk had made no mention in the minutes of Mr. Erickson's report on Mr. Smith's bill, he asked that it be done.

On motion of Mr. See all the offers of Madison avenue property owners, in regard to the amount they wanted for land to widen the street, were rejected. Mr. See also offered a resolution, which was adopted, appointing Messrs. J. Fred. MacDonald, Edward C. Mulford and William M. Sanford, commissioners to apportion the damages and benefits accrued by the widening of the said street.

Mr. Carty petitioned Council for permission to erect a wooden awning in front of his store on Central avenue. The petition was referred to the Street Committee, with power.

The ordinance to amend the North avenue sewer ordinance was called up for final passage. The section ordering disconnections with the sewer was adopted, but the sections ordering it done by August 15 was repealed. In its amended form the ordinance was adopted and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Marsh called up the ordinance relating to morals, peace and good order of the city, forbidding the selling of fruit, etc., on Sunday. A vote was taken on its adoption, as follows:

Yes—Glinn, See and Erickson.

No—Marsh, Millington, Bird, Frazee and Weber.

As Mr. Fisk, who had presented the ordinance, was absent, Mr. Marsh moved that the ordinance be placed back on the table, to give Mr. Fisk a chance to explain it. The motion was carried.

WAR IN AN ELIZABETH CHURCH.

The Pastor of St. Michael's Scores a Young Men's Society from the Pulpit.

The Rev. Albert Von Schilgen, pastor of St. Michael's Catholic church Elizabeth is at war with the Young Men's Society of his parish. He has threatened from the altar to excommunicate the members if they do not abandon a picnic which they intend having against his wishes. The society was organized last year while the pastor was in Europe by the Rev. Anthony Kruse, then curate of St. Michael's and now pastor of St. Mark's church, Rahway.

The organization called itself the Young Men's Society of St. Michael's church, and paid $250 out of its treasury to renovate the pastor's house before he returned. He was delighted, it is said, at what was done by the society, but he afterward wanted the funds placed in his keeping, as he thought the money would be safer with him.

To Cut off the Loop.

The Central Railroad has completed the survey and commenced the grading of short line from Bound Brook to the North end of the bridge across the Raritan Bay at Keyport. This is to cut off from the line of the seashore the long loop from Bound Brook around by Elizabethport, which is about fifty-three miles long while the short cut will be only seventeen miles. The new line will run from the north end of the Perth Amboy bridge.

Wallace Fined $20.

Lawrence Wallace, who was accused of incendiarism at Fanwood and Scotch Plains, was arrested yesterday charged with disorderly conduct and fighting. Judge Moore fined him $20.

In the City Court.

Mayor Gilbert had only one case to dispose of this morning in the city court, and that was Patrick Mullen, who had been arrested for drunkenness. He was fined $5.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, was present at the corner stone laying of the New Baptist church in Washington avenue, New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Yerkes spoke on the relation of the church edifice to the church and its work. The programme was one of great interest, and the event proved one that made yesterday a red letter day for the Baptists of that city.

The Rev. Dr. Charles R. Mitchell of Kansas City, formerly pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, in this city, is enjoying a vacation and made a flying visit to Plainfield to-day. He is to meet a number of friends at dinner at Mr. Cokefair's on Crescent avenue to-day. Mr. Mitchell will preach two Sundays in the Centenary M. E. church, at Newark, during his visit East. He expects to spend a portion of his time with Dr. Carroll, who is in the Catskills.

Literary Note.

A witty writer has said that life would be endurable if it were not for the month of August. Romance provides the best possible means for making one forget the discomforts of the dog day season, its August issue being a model "Midsummer Number." A feature is made of the remarkable tales of Polish and Hungarian writers, foremost of whom is Maurice Jokai.

Repairing Somerset Street.

The work of repairing Somerset street on both sides of the car track, from the bridge to Johnston's drive, was begun to-day. The gutters are to be cleaned and two rows of crushed stone spread from the curb to the track. The work if to be done at a cost not exceeding $600.

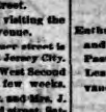
HUNDREDS OF VOTES PLACE HIM NEARER SALTZMAN.

Enthusiastic Friends Gather Coupons and Help the North Plainfielder Past the 4000 Mark.—Saltzman Leads.—Fireman Newman Advances.—Another Name Added.



FAST and furious was the pace set in the Fireman's World's Fair race to-day, and the light of hope begins to brighten the faces of Fireman Martin's friends, downcast of despair. He is far behind Leader Saltzman who keeps up the same fast pace he has been going for some time past.

It now appears to be Plainfield vs. North Plainfield and all is merry. The all important question is: Who will win?

Fireman Newman has pushed forward to ninth place and the name of A. W. Van Eyck has been added to the list.

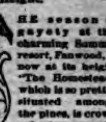
FANWOOD NOTES.

The Season at That Place is Now at Its Height.



THE season of merry at that charming Summer resort, Fanwood, is now at its height. "The Homestead," which is so prettily situated amongst the pines, is crowded. Among the prominent guests are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, whose stylish turnouts are the envy of all; Duke of Douglas and suite; Mr. Hamblin, Mrs. Cameron and her son Willie, whose magnificent voice has already captivated the natives; Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Morton and niece "Tiny" Yake, Miss Yake, Gov. Urner and wife, Mr. Urner, Mr. and Mrs. Ashley, Com. Baylor and wife of Kentucky; Col. Spring, "Jack" Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Ten Broeck and daughter, Miss Emma Boocher, Mr. Brown, L. E. Boucher, and Dr. Bainbridge of London.

Thursday night the closing dance of the season is to be given by the Westchung Club, and if the young ladies can be depended upon (and the Fanwood girls can) the affair will far eclipse in the beauty of costumes to be worn all the other dances given.

The leading member of the Board of Health, Mr. Miller, was seen last Saturday practicing with the "medicine" ball. He is sparing no pains in preparing himself for the coming bowling match with Mr. Frazee.

Mr Smith still leads the whist club in the number of points lost.

The fire department, which has done such fine work at the last two fires, have elected their well known citizen, Mr. J. K. Stevens, as foreman. They could not have obtained a better man. Gossip says he sits up Saturday nights to be in readiness if needed.

The tight money market has not affected Mr. Gibbs as was rumored. His affairs are in a flourishing condition.

Messrs. Baylor and Spring state that they wish to deny a rumor circulated through the columns of a Plainfield paper, Thursday last, to the effect that they had single and that there was anything in their remarks in relation to Morristown. Being in poor health they take those trips for their health.

—The Inter-State Fair will be held at Trenton Sept 25 to 29.

—A scheme is on foot to have all post-office employees wear uniforms.

—Pupac is open on Sundays for boating, bathing and refreshments only.

—The Pond Machine Tool Company laid off six machinists and two laborers Saturday.

—White's great sale of ladies' Oxford ties opened yesterday. Watch the advertisement.

—The Sunday-school of the German Reformed church on Craig place went by stages to Pupac to-day.

—The First Presbyterian Sunday-school of Dunellen and the Baptist Sunday-school of New Market went on their excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove to-day.

—The soap and door mat scheme is a new swindle by which the investor is to get 50 boxes worth of soap and a rubber door mat. The soap is usually worthless, but the door mat never comes.

—There will be no regular business meeting held at the room of the W. C. T. U., on Thursday, August 10th, but all are cordially invited to attend a special prayer meeting to be held at 3.30 p. m.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade will be held at their rooms, 117 East Second street, on Thursday evening, August 10. A number of applications for membership will be voted upon.

—Grand Commander Dobbs has designated August 31 as Field Day for New Jersey Knight Templar, and the indications are that a large concourse of Knights will participate in the parade at Asbury Park.

—Policeman Giese made a clever capture of James Dowd, Sunday. Dowd has been wanted by the police for six months, for causing a disturbance at the Salvation Army. He was sent to the county jail for five days.

—Report regarding the huckleberry crops are very widely in different localities. In some sections the forest fires destroyed them in the Spring. In others the blossoms cooked on the bushes during the hot June days. Others furnish a large crop of berries.

—Farmers were presented $1.25 for wheels by the Fred-Trade scouts who were vote hunting in November, 1892, but we hear nothing about the price of wheat now since it has dropped to 85½ cents at Chicago. This is part of the kindergarten "object lesson" from December Cleveland. It is not a hard lesson to learn, but then the farmers are likely to remember it in 1896.—American Economist.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Preacher's Criticism.

Not long since Rev. Thomas C. Hall of the Forty-first Presbyterian church, Chicago, preached a sermon that was rather remarkable. He criticised his own clerk as a layman would not dare do. Particularly he pointed out the weak spots in much that goes by the name of preaching, among other things saying:

Wishy-washy, goody-goody talk, with illustrations dragged in heading and now and then a fortune thrust at some universally condemned sin is not preaching and has no power. Better 10 sugar, honey, sympathetic words than half a ream full of the doleful, dreary commonplaces that most of us can write by the hour and foist on patient, long suffering congregations under the name of "pulpit illustrations." The pulpit has several unfortunates. It is a grave disadvantage to preacher-log-what-ism for so many advantages in other lines—that so many regard churchgoing for its own sake as a virtue. It gives weak preaching a backing it does not deserve and should not get.

Another disadvantage is that no one answers the preacher. He can belabor with merciless severity "higher criticism" and "science falsely so called," and only one or two in his whole congregation detect from mispronounced names and absurd arguments that the learned pastor is along those lines an ignoramus and a bumbug. The preacher can be a literary impostor. He can by the skillful use of names and alleged facts picked out of reviews and other irresponsible sources of misinformation pose as a very widely read and learned man. No one ever examines him. No one shows up his pretentious ignorance, and like fluck is sooner or later exposed only in those who have not detected the imposture and paid away.

There is an immense amount of this pulpit imposture, and it cannot be for the glory of God. It is not demanded that the preacher should know everything. But the preacher should be honest. He should not pretend to know what he does not know. There are thousands of young men who are now at all preaching because they have detected in so many preachers this crass, rude pulpit bunko game.

If only we preachers stuck to our real work, we should save ourselves from temptations along this line. Why should we go out of our way to imitate "science" or "criticism?" These are God's messengers as much as we, and to their own master they stand or fall.

Natural Bread.

A new notion is that yeast bread is not healthful to put into the human stomach. But there is one food that many millions of human beings use as bread the year round, and we have no record that one of them ever had dyspepsia. That food is the banana. With the millions who use it as bread it is like the colored brother's opossum—"good for to bake and good for to fry," as well as to eat raw. There are two principal varieties—the one to be eaten raw, the other cooked. The fruit that comes to us is of the kindto be eaten in its natural state, though when cut in slices and fried crisp in butter it makes a dish most palatable.

The banana is of the lily family of plants and itself contains all the elements necessary to sustain life, which is more than can be said of either wheat or potatoes. Further, the ground that will grow 38 pounds of wheat or 99 pounds of potatoes will produce 400 pounds of bananas. The dark eyed son of Italy who carts this natural bread through the streets is therefore fully justified in singing as he revolves, "Cheapa banana, cents piece."

Finally, if you want a dish this hot weather that is eminently filling for the money and palatable as filling, slice into a deep dish some ripe luscious bananas that have been in the ice chest several hours. Sugar them to taste and pour over them a pure fruit juice that you yourself expressed. With pineapple juice over them they will be a feast fit for the angels.

The outlook for women's getting accident insurance policies is not promising. Under the rules of the accident insurance companies a man who is injured and laid up in consequence is entitled to a weekly sum for support until he is well again. But a woman may take a policy and pay up her dues 40 years or any other length of time, and if meanwhile she is hurt and disabled she cannot get a cent from the insurance company. Only in case of her death is any accident money paid, and then it goes to her heirs.

One of Dr. E. E. Hale's best jokes is the story of a question asked by the prime minister of England when the poet Rogers wrote him recommending that Alfred Tennyson be appointed poet laureate. The prime minister wrote: "We are not acquainted with the works of this gentleman, and will you be good enough to let me know whether he has ever written anything which would make it improper for a woman to name him for this post?"

There is going to be a Primrose league established in America for the benefit of Tory British gentlemen who reside in the United States, but are too loyal to the Conservative party of England to become American citizens. Englishmen who have become naturalized in this country are not allowed to join the Primrose league. Doubtless English born citizens of this republic will live through the exclusion.

Electric welding of the iron bars for railway tracks has proved eminently successful. The welding is especially good for the rails upon curves, though placed in the rails are smoothed away as with a great press, and the wear and tear of both rails and cars are greatly diminished. Railway passengers will appreciate this side of the invention.

SHERMAN LAW DOOMED

This Result Is Given by Two Newspaper Polls.

AN OFFICIAL POLL TO BE TAKEN.

New York Congressmen Take the First Action—The Second Day of the Extraordinary Session Begins With Both Houses Waiting For the President's Message.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The joint committee of the two houses appointed to wait on the president and receive his announcement that he will shortly "communicate to them a message in writing," consisting, according to custom, of the recognized leaders on both sides, viz., Senators Harris and Sherman and Representatives Springer, McMillin and ex-Speaker Reed, waited upon the president this forenoon to receive their message. Little else besides the time to the message is expected to be done today.

At the suggestion of Representative Bourke Cockran in the house a number of its members, principally the New York delegation, met in the Arlington hotel and informally discussed the best method of securing immediate consideration and fixing a time for taking a vote on the silver question.

No specific proposition will be made to the silver people, but the members of the conference express the hope that an arrangement satisfactory to both sides will be agreed upon. Nothing is to be done looking to this end until after the president's message has been read.

The conference designated the following gentlemen to take a poll of the house and ascertain the sentiment as to the method and manner of procedure that should be adopted in this matter:

Messrs. Bynum, Ohio; Bewley, South Carolina; Hall, Minnesota; Lapham, Rhode Island; Wolverton, Pennsylvania; Geisenheimer, New Jersey; Bynum, Indiana; Cobb, Missouri; Hay, Maryland; Sperry, Connecticut; Cockran, Tracy, Fitch, Dunphy and Fellows, New York.

These gentlemen will meet again and report the result of their conference with the silver men, and endeavor to agree upon a proposition to be made to them regarding the debate and time for taking a vote on the question.

The opening of the extraordinary session of the Fifty-third congress, as far as the house is concerned, has been unmarked by anything of a sensational character and has been merely formal. Speaker Crisp was re-elected quietly and without more than the usual political opposition, and as he took the chair he was unanimously re-elected. In a few brief words he pledged himself to perform the duties of his high office with honesty, fairness and impartiality.

The only incident worthy of note was the objection made by Burrows of Michigan to the swearing in of Hon. Ed. B. Richardson (Dem.) as a representative from the Fifth Michigan district. Charles F. Belknap claims to be entitled to the seat on a prima facie case. The consideration of the question was postponed.

The biennial drawing for seats occurred amid laughter, cheers and alternations of pleasure and disappointment. The house adjourned out of respect to the memory of Mr. Enochs of Ohio.

The Sherman Law Doomed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Herald today prints this statement, based on interviews: On the Sherman silver law the senate stands: For unconditional repeal, 30; for conditional repeal, 20; opposed to repeal, 14; noncommittal, 16; total, 80. The house stands: For unconditional repeal, 117; conditional repeal, 125; opposed to repeal, 16; noncommittal, 24; total, 302. The Sherman law is doomed.

The World has compiled statistics on which it states:

"In gross the house may be reported as polling 149 for repeal pure and simple and without delay, 84 for repeal provided the sunstitute was pleasing to the member, and 91 were not yet ready to utter their conclusions on the question of the hour.

"In the senate there were found 38 ready for repeal at once, 22 with ideas of their own, which they wished to embody or see embodied in new measure, 20 were not willing to talk and three senators, Stewart of Nevada, Dubois of Idaho and Mantle of Montana, who were emphatic in saying they would not let Sherman act let alone, and severely alone at that."

Want to Continue the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The proposition to keep open the Columbian World's exposition throughout the summer of 1894 found its way to Washington previous to the opening of congress, but it had not been suggested to any members of the Illinois delegation. Senator Palmer said he would not talk intelligently on a proposition concerning which he knew absolutely nothing. Senator Colhom said he had heard such a suggestion made in Chicago, but had nothing to say beyond the fact that he would support any measure within reason which the various boards of the fair and the people of Chicago might desire.

General John C. Black, representative at large, said that if the people of Chicago, especially those charged with the management of the fair, believed it could be made a legal and financial success he would be in favor of continuing its existence for another year, but only of course upon the request of the people of Chicago.

Engravers Working Overtime.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—To meet the continually increasing demand for national bank notes from banks, which are taking advantage of the low rate of government bonds and buying them and increasing their circulation, Secretary Carlisle has ordered the force of the bureau of engraving and printing to work from 8 a. m. until 6 p. m.

This is two hours over the usual time. With these extra hours the capacity of the bureau, in addition to keeping up its regular government work, will be about 30,000 sheets daily, or 180,000 notes a day. The average stamped value of each sheet is $33, so that the total issue per day, beginning with tomorrow, will be about $1,350,000 exclusive of reissues.

A Line to Ellis Island.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Superintendent Stump of the bureau of immigration entered into a contract with the Western Union Telegraph company for the construction of a line from New York to Ellis island, New York harbor.

World's Fair Attendance.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The paid admissions to the World's fair were 89,186.

EASY FOR DIXON.

Pierce Proved No Match For the Colored Champion.

CONEY ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 8.—George Dixon, the colored feather-weight champion, knocked out Pierce, the Brooklyn assassin, for the fourteen, in three short, one sided rounds.

The contest was for a $6,500 purse and the championship. More interest has been manifested in this contest than in anything that has been held since the Coney Island Athletic club was organized.

Pierce's punishment began in the first round, continued in the second, and when round three opened Dixon sent in his left and sent his man to the ropes. Dixon repeatedly sent in his right and left on the head, jaw and neck and chest of Pierce, who was down and out after repeated jabs on the jaw that would have settled a bigger and stronger man than Pierce.

It was the universal verdict that Pierce was a softer mark than even Skelly. He was clearly outclassed, and his aspirations to a position as the premier "pulpit" knocker went home feeling that they had been buncoed into thinking that Pierce was a fighter by the glowing press accounts that were published from day to day heralding up Pierce and his wonderful ability.

Solly Smith, who recently defeated Johnny Griffin, and George Dixon were practically matched after the fight.

MRS. SHANN'S TRIAL.

The Alleged Poisoner Begins Her Fight For Life.

TRENTON, Aug. 8.—In the Mercer county court today the trial of Mrs. Hannah Shann of Princeton was begun. She is charged with murdering her son, John Shann, by poisoning him, to secure the money which his life was insured for. John died April 18 at his mother's house. The next evening Mrs. Shann was notified by the insurance company, through its agent, Harry Marland, Spencer, to have a postmortem examination made in order to ascertain the cause of death. Soon after midnight that night, according to Mrs. Shann's story, she went to see her son at her house and asked to see the body.

While one occupied her attention the other two went into the room where the body lay and remained half an hour. When the three men left the house, John Van Sciens, a boarder, entered the room and discovered that the body had been disembowelled.

The case is being tried before Supreme Court Justice Leon Abbett, ex-governor of the state, the law requiring murder trials to be made before a supreme court judge. Law Judge Robert S. Q. Woodruff and Law Judges William S. Yard and Josiah Wright are sitting with Justice Abbett. The trial is expected to take two weeks. The state has summoned 44 witnesses, and much of the testimony will be from expert witness relative to the action of mercurial poisons.

A Midsummer Snowstorm.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Aug. 8.—A storm has prevailed intermittently in this locality for 24 hours. Snow fell in certain localities. On the hillsides, sloping toward Amesbury, large patches of snow were scattered over the pastures and along the roadsides. The snow was piled up in the gutters for rods in length and from 6 inches to 1 foot deep.

It Is Akin Once More.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The name of the Fort Johnson postoffice was changed to Akin by the postoffice department. Two years ago some of the citizens of the place petitioned congress to change the name from Akin to Fort Johnson, which was done. This was objectionable to the Akin family. They have had the name changed back to Akin.

Gresham Will Protect Missionaries.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Presbyterian board of foreign missions in this city received a letter from Secretary W. Q. Walter Q. Gresham, secretary of state, in which he pledged the government to do all that was possible to compel the porte to protect the persons of the latest outrage upon an American missionary in Turkey.

New York Central Reduces Expenses.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Chauncey M. Depew was asked about a notice to the New York Central employees in the round house at Mott Haven that a reduction of three hours a day would be made in the time for which they were paid and admitted that such notice had been given.

THE FIGHT FOR MONEY.

In the East It Is Wanted Very, Very Badly.

CHICAGO BANKERS WANT IT TOO.

This Is the Cause of the Clash Between the New York and the Chicago Bankers. Money Brokers In Distress With the Banks—Record of Financial Troubles.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The currency famine is assuming a phase which would be amusing if it were not so desperately serious. The banks are incensed against the currency speculators, and the Fourth National sent word to Zimmerman in Pawkay, one of the best known brokerage houses in Wall street, asking them to withdraw the account the firm had on deposit with the national bank.

The firm in question has been the most prominent of the buyers with checks the cash which generally goes into the banks.

At a time when the banks are making strenuous exertions to supply enough small bills to their customers who have payrolls to make up, it angered them to see money brokers making a large profit—1½ to 2 per cent—by supplying small funds and "concentering" the supply of currency afloat to do it.

This little satirical primer of finance was issued verbally by a money broker:

Q. With paper, gold and silver money at a premium, what is money?

A. A certified check is now the financial standard of the United States.

Q. What is a bank?

A. A place to put money in.

The humor of this is not so much in evidence as its truthfulness.

To the report that Chicago bankers were making as efforts to force New York bankers to send money west comes this dispatch from Chicago:

The officers of the Stockyards' National bank caused a wild sensation when they refused to accept New York exchange from depositors today. The loss of the bank's officials was unexpected, and in speaking of the matter President Doud said:

"We took a limited amount of New York exchange in their current account because of not being able to sell New York exchange in the city. We said last week that we were liable to come to this point. It is not right to allow funds to be locked up in the east."

To Investigate Foster's Affairs.

FOSTORIA, O., Aug. 8.—Fifteen hundred creditors of Foster & Co. and Mr. Foster will receive the following circular in today's mail. Inclosed in the circular is a blank agreement authorizing the committee already appointed to act as their agent and ballot for or against the removal of Assignee Ghormley:

FOSTORIA, O., Aug. 1.

DEAR SIR—At a meeting of the creditors of Charles Foster & Co. and Foster & Co. on Tuesday evening, July 27, the undersigned were appointed a committee to make such investigations and commence such proceedings as may appear to be for the best interests of the creditors.

The committee was authorized to employ experts and attorneys and to make a pro rata assessment on the creditors to meet the expenses and further authorized to collect $1 from each to push the work. Among the reasons for this assessment was the fact that Mr. Foster and his bank has not been properly conducted and that an expert should be put on the books. Mr. Foster is also in a state of dissatisfaction with the assignee, and the creditors here believe their interest demands his removal. It is the firm conviction of the creditors and your committee that unless prompt and vigorous action should be taken little if anything will be realized. We trust we will work successfully we must all work together.

Only a united effort will bring success. We therefore inclose herewith a copy of the agreement many creditors have already signed, and trust you will join in this work by at once signing and returning the agreement sealed and passed by $1, which will be credited on your assessment. If you agree with us in asking the removal of the assignee and putting in his stead one of your own choosing, write the word "yes" after the word "removal" in the body of the agreement. Respectfully,

C. GERMAN,
J. L. MACEY,
A. L. WILSON,
Committee.

A Big Iron Company Insolvent.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—Andrew J. Kauffman of Columbia, Pa., filed a bill in equity in the United States district court against the Chestnut Hill Iron Ore company, alleging its insolvency and asking for the appointment of a receiver. This company owns extensive iron ore mines near Columbia, Pa., and three iron furnaces in Columbia and iron ore mines in York county, Pa., and in Carroll county, Md., and is the owner of what is known as the Buchman Valley railroad, a short railroad in York county, Pa., and Carroll county, Md. The capital stock of the company is $600,000.

Pittsburg Bankers Have Pleas.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 8.—The principal bankers of Pittsburg, composing the Clearing House association, together with between 30 and 40 of the leading financiers of the city, met at the clearing house to discuss the financial situation. No definite plan was adopted, but several are under consideration.

An Old Bank Assigns.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 8.—The Green county bank, the oldest in the city, assigned. Liabilities, $157,242; assets, $223,251. There was some excitement, but no other bank seems to be involved.

Vapor Stove Company Embarrassed.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 8.—The National Vapor Stove company made an assignment. The assets are estimated at $125,000 and the liabilities at $50,000. The assignee's bond was fixed at $100,000.

ANXIOUS FOR PATRONAGE.

An Ohio Democrat Who Wants the Office Distributed and Says So.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—According to a report current in Democratic circles, Mr. Cleveland's unwillingness to proceed to an immediate and general distribution of the loaves and fishes of the administration is to form the basis of an attack upon the president at this week's Democratic state convention.

The story runs that a Hamilton county delegate has prepared a resolution, which he will offer under a suspension of the rules, declaring that President Cleveland should imitate the example of his predecessor by immediately removing all Republicans from office, and that no public office is a public trust those belonging to the party in power should be trusted to the extent of being placed in the positions now held by their political opponents.

The name of the individual who is to spring the resolution is not given, but it is said to be couched in strong language and to charge the present condition of affairs upon Secretary Gresham.

Only a handful of delegates to the convention have arrived, and the only headquarters opened are those of Colonel W. A. Taylor of Columbus, who is in the field for the gubernatorial nomination.

HIS BALLOON BROKE LOOSE.

It Fell Into a Hospital and the Professor Into the Water.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Thousands of people gathered in the streets and on the housetops to watch the flight of a balloon which drifted across the river from Weehawken. It landed on the roof of the New York Skin and Cancer hospital at 245 East Thirty-fourth street and crashed through the skylight.

There were no patients on the top floor or a panic might have been caused. The balloon is one in which Professor Carton, French military aeronaut, has been making ascensions and parachute descents from Eldorado. He goes up and drops daily.

After reaching a height of about 1,000 feet the balloon floated westward, and the aeronaut found himself crossing the river. When about midstream, he unfastened his parachute and dropped into the river.

When he struck the water several men were ready in small boats to fish him out. Usually the balloon is anchored to the ground, but in some manner Carton's balloon broke loose this time.

TWO CHICAGO SUICIDES.

One Was a Bankrupt Coast, Another a Visitor From Washington.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Gustav Erickson, who represented himself to be a Swedish count, committed suicide at the Humboldt Park House. A gas jet in his room had been turned on, and when found he was dead. He claimed to be a cousin of Baron Mels Bosse of Stockholm, visitor at the World's fair. Financial embarrassment is supposed to have been the cause of his suicide.

Miss Mary T. Derby shot herself through the heart in her apartments at the home of W. A. Shaw, where she was visiting in company with her brother-in-law, Captain Black of the United States army. Miss Derby was a resident of Washington, whence she had come to visit the World's fair. Since coming to Chicago she has been suffering from insomnia, and it is thought she lost her mind by the loss of sleep.

A Blind Man Jumped.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 8.—A destructive fire in the four-story building at the corner of Fourth and Jefferson streets threatened to sweep a block in the heart of the retail business district, but 25 companies conquered it after a three hours fight. When the flames burst through the windows of the second floor, Mrs. Mary Stewart, who has a room on the top floor, jumped to the street, breaking a leg and sustaining other serious injuries. John Conway, a blind man, his wife and daughter also jumped, but escaped serious injuries. The building is occupied by Crocker & Stacker.

Will Throw Out Beecher's Hymnal.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 8.—There is much sorrow and indignation among the older members of Plymouth church congregation in this city because the Plymouth collection of hymns, for nearly 45 years associated with the name of Henry Ward Beecher, is to be thrown out of the church and a new collection, compiled by the Rev. Lyman Abbott, the present pastor, substituted for it.

Colonia Wins the Commodore's Cup.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The race of the New York Yacht club for the commodore's cup took place off Glen Cove, L. I., and was won by the Colonia. The Queen Mab was second. The race held unusual interest from the fact that the cup defenders, the Colonia and the Vigilant, sailed their maiden race. The Vigilant lost her topmast and bowsprit and had to anchor.

The Quarantined Passengers.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Concerning the cholera suspects on the islands in the lower bay Dr. Jenkins says there are no new cases, and the detained passengers from the Karamania are in first class health. He thinks he will release them all on Wednesday or Thursday next.

Only Fined the Cruel Kidd.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 8.—Joseph Kidd; who stamped his stepson, Arthur Arms, now in a stall in the stable to keep the boy out of mischief and whose neighbors threatened to lynch him, was let off with a fine of $5 and costs. The humane society will make further investigation.

Carried Around the Shafting.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Samuel G. Morgan, an employee of the stone crusher, a short distance south of this city, was caught in a belt and carried around a shafting making 750 revolutions a minute. He was instantly killed, the body being shockingly mangled.

Another Panama Sensation.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—A sensation has been caused in this city by the publication of a brochure in which M. Dupas, a former official of the detective service, declared that the Ribot and Loubet ministries connived at the escape of M. Arton, the Panama lobbyist.

Escaped Convicts Recaptured.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 8.—Both the convicts who escaped Sunday night were captured near Rives Junction and brought back to the prison. The same evening three convicts in the hospital escaped, but half an hour later were recaptured.

The Navahoe In the Race.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The Prince of Wales' cutter Britannia is at Ryde to race for the Earl of Desart's cup today. The Prince of Wales will be aboard the Britannia at Cowes. The American yacht Navahoe is also in the race.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

A Statement Concerning Today's Important Document.

UNCONDITIONAL REPEAL ASKED.

The President Asks That the Sherman Law Be Promptly Annulled—Thinks Congress Can Do It Within Sixty Days—Fears the Senate Will Not Be Willing.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The following is an authoreastative statement regarding the president's message as sent to the New York World by its correspondent:

"Not even in his famous tariff message of 1887, which contained for the first time the telling phrase, coined by himself, did Mr. Cleveland make better use of the fact that 'a condition and not a theory confronts us' and which he believes to be irresistible.

"He dwells most particularly upon the deplorable condition of the country as it affects the masses. The banker and broker and capitalist, he reasons, can take care of themselves, but the workingmen are practically helpless when such a condition of affairs as now prevails exists.

"To substantiate this argument he shows in concise language the actual effect of the law known as the Sherman act now in force. He calls attention to the dearth of confidence arising therefrom. He deals not in theories, but in facts and figures, to demonstrate the truth of his assertion that the burden inflicted upon the country by this unwise law falls most heavily upon the workingman.

For Unconditional Repeal.

"It is for this reason he believes that the demand of the country for repeal is so strong and universal. It is the plain duty of all patriotic citizens to interview with the responsibility of government to heed such a demand.

"Therefore he recommends unconditional repeal without hint of compromise or substitute of any kind. There he stops. Whatever may be his views regarding the future use of silver as a part of national currency, to be fixed possibly by well considered legislation after a suitable time shall have elapsed, he makes no suggestions and outlines no plan which might meet with his approval. He confines his recommendation and directs the attention of congress solely to the pressing need of the hour—prompt repeal. He notes the fact that the people in the last elections made an emphatic demand for revision and reform in tariff legislation.

"The pledges then made must be kept. But since that time an unforseen exigency has arisen, and it must be met and mastered. It is the plain duty of congress, therefore, to afford relief to the country by placing the repeal of the financial statute ahead of all other contemplated legislation relating to the tariff or any other subject.

"That is the substance of the message. It is pronounced by members of his cabinet, who alone have read it, the ablest state paper Mr. Cleveland has ever produced. It is certainly a bold, unqualified utterance, such as springs only from deep conviction. Not the least of its merits is its brevity. Published in full, it will fill not more than two columns of The World.

Perfectly Consistent.

"It is hardly necessary to say that the president's absolutely unqualified declaration will surprise many members of both houses. As a matter of fact, it is in perfect accord with his utterances on all similar questions in the past and typical of his courage in meeting exigencies.

"The message was practically finished at Gray Gables, but has been the subject of discussion at two cabinet meetings in Washington, and Secretaries Bradam and Lamont spent a large part of last night at Woodley aiding the president in his final revision. Despite all this discussion, however, it stands, with the exception of a few minor changes, chiefly of diction, as originally penned by Mr. Cleveland's own hand at Buzzard's Bay.

"Since his arrival here the president has discovered no necessity or reason for diversion from his original purpose of direct insistence upon unconditional repeal. Indeed, so far as prospects in the senate are concerned, the administration is now satisfied that the names of Faulkner, Butler and Call may be added to the list of those who will surely vote in its support at the last, thus making a safe majority of more than 10.

"President Cleveland believes that public sentiment in favor of repeal has not only grown since he issued the proclamation calling an extra session of congress, but that it is still growing and will continue to grow.

"For this reason, therefore, no less than because of his confidence of a majority in its support on a final vote, the administration considers a repeal within 60 days quite within the range of possibility."

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New York—W. G. Jones, Bonnettsville; J. F. Mayo, Fort Hamilton; H. Herrick, Kennedy; F. E. Beach, Mariposa; H. H. Gildden, Panama; W. D. Coons, Hamilton; E. Van Alen, Utica; Parker; L. B. Elliott, Upper Lisle; Sheppard Davis, West Sinokan.

BRIEFLY WORDED WIRINGS.

Chief of Police J. A. Chapman of Middletown, Conn., died in New York.

A poster of a United States army recruiting office caused much indignation in Ottawa.

George W. Gale, an actor, 58 years old, of 326 East Nineteenth street, New York, died suddenly at his home.

The looting of the Pacific bank of San Francisco by the sons of old Dr. R. H. McDonald caused a sensation there.

Benjamin Spangberg, an employee of the Sixth avenue elevated railroad, New York, was mangled by two trains and instantly killed.

Frank Smith, driver of an ice wagon, was knocked from his wagon by a Brooklyn trolley car, run over by his own wagon and killed.

The jury in the case of Ducrot and Norton, the Parisians charged with forging documents, returned a verdict of guilty against both of the defendants.

Two sensational seizures were made by the New York custom house authorities of baggage brought over by a couple of cabin passengers on the American line steamship New York.

The Very Rev. T. Bouquillon, D. D., professor of moral theology and dean of the divinity faculty of the Catholic university at Washington, had a second audience with the pope.

Mrs. Beaton of Burlington, Ont., who is alleged to have been the companion of Minnie Harrison Case at the time he disappeared from a steamer while en route from Norfolk to New York, has removed to Hamilton.

Hunting the Comrads.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 8.—The whitecaps of Breed township, Ind., burned the house of the Comrads. Three riderless horses owned by three whitecaps—John Kendal, William Fish and William Hubbs—were found. It is thought that the whitecaps were killed by the Comrads, who have returned from Kentucky. They say they have three more men to kill. It is thought they are in hiding in the woods. Harrison county is excited as it never was before the murderers' ambuscade, and everybody is going armed. The citizens are taking relatives to help them, and a bloody battle is expected in the next 24 hours.

The Anarchists Made Trouble.

ZURICH, Aug. 8.—The session of the international socialist congress was marked by a great deal of excitement. The anarchists' expulsion led to a withdraw. Several of them had to be ejected by force. In the midst of the excitement Herr Landauer, a Berlin anarchist, used a stick and precipitated a hand to hand fight, in which he was at length overpowered by the bystanders.

Still Down Pike's Peak.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 8.—Richard Woods, of Manitou, had driven, and two other men tried to beat all previous records of speed in descending Pike's peak on a contrivance called a toboggan by the railroad men. This consists of a flat board nailed over a groove, which fits closely on the rack rail of the cog road. They were all badly hurt.

General Bingham's Death.

WESTBORO, Mass., Aug. 8.—General George D. Bingham died at his residence in Westboro. He was born in Rochester April 20, 1821. He was captain of Company A, First Wisconsin infantry, in 1861, and was promoted successively to major, lieutenant colonel and colonel, and at the close of the war was brevetted brigadier general.

The Governor Fled In Disguise.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—A dispatch from Buenos Ayres says that Governor Costa of the province of Buenos Ayres has resigned and has fled in disguise from La Plata.

Deputy Factory Inspector.

HARTFORD, Aug. 8.—James C. Roach of Wallingford was appointed one of three deputy factory inspectors under the new law.

GOOD HEALTH

CONSTIPATION.

Mechanical Treatment That Can Be Performed by the Patient.

The digestive tube both secretes liquids for the purpose of facilitating the absorption of the food that is taken and carried along and throws off the residue that is unfit for assimilation. When the secretory function is upset, we have dyspepsia; when the motor property is impaired or done away with, we have constipation.

What can be done to restore to the intestines their movements, or at any rate to increase the effectiveness of these movements? The different purgatives so extensively used have the serious drawback of acting with too much vigor, and only too often of producing indefinitely the condition for the relief of which they had been given. On the contrary, in a great many cases mild stimulation is quite enough, and M. Beaty specially recommends the following method in the European edition of the New York Herald:

Every morning or evening, according to which time is most convenient for the purpose, the patient, lying on the back, should roll quietly over the entire surface of the abdomen a small cotton bag full of bird shot. The length of the session and the weight of the bag are to vary according to the degree of the constipation and the endurance of the patient.

Going to Sleep.

"If you have never done so, watch yourself go to sleep," said a Debarte printzer quoted by an exchange, "and you will be amazed to see how tense your position is. Your knees are drawn and bended, your back is curved, the arms are held more or less tightly to the body, and the fingers are folded. The eyelids are held shut, not allowed to droop over the eyes; the neck is strained, and the head seems to touch the pillow only by the temples. The points of contact with the bed are really at temples, shoulders, hips, knees and ankles. Now look at a child sleeping. Every muscle is relaxed, every joint is inert and finds rest at every point.

"The features are undone, so to speak; the nose widens, the mouth droops, the eyelids close easily, and with every line of expression obliterated he finds utter and complete repose. The shoulder makes him fall out of bed sometimes, such an inert body has he become. You may imitate him even to that degree if necessary. Begin at your toes to relax, loosen all your joints and muscles, unbend your fingers, shake your wrists loose, take the curve and strain out of your neck, go all to pieces, in fact, and see how the day's fatigue seems to slip off from you and the gentle mantle of rest and oblivion infolds you like a garment."

Theories of Blood Motion.

It has generally been assumed that a considerable time elapsed, say from three to nine minutes, from the time when the blood left the right side of the heart, traversed the whole system, and then again returned to the starting point. Professor Dalton's experiments make it appear that the time is much shorter than that. Dozens of carefully tabulated tests, says Professor Dalton, show that the blood of man makes a complete circulation once every 15 to 25 seconds, according to the physical conditions of the subject experimented upon.

For nausea lay a little pounded ice on the back of the neck.

ETIQUETTE

GARDEN PARTIES.

The Refreshments, Amusements, Dancing, Music and Decorations.

This style of entertainment is simply an out of door reception, for which a society woman makes the following suggestions in a little handbook on "Manners:" The refreshments should consist of bouillon, salads, sandwiches, cakes, ices, tea, claret cup, champagne cup and other summer beverages. These should be served on the plazzas at small tables or in a tent pitched somewhere on the lawn.

The tennis ground should be in good order, also the croquet. If there is any bowling in the immediate neighborhood, the rowboats should be dry and ready for those who care to go on the water.

If a platform is erected for the purpose, dancing is often indulged in.

A band of music is quite necessary to the proper enjoyment of a garden party.

If a fete in the country is given at night, Chinese lanterns are much used, and hung around the piazzas and from the branches of trees produce a very brilliant and beautiful effect.

What to Do With the Hands.

What to do with the hands gives more trouble and anxiety to the lords of creation than a woman generally supposes. If a man is at all shy or self conscious, those members feel like veritable excrescences which are quite foreign to the body and have to be disposed of in some way or other. What a relief it would be to thrust them into the depths of one's pockets if it were only permissible and get them comfortably out of sight. Some men compromise the matter by hooking one thumb into the pocket, thus leaving only the one hand to be disposed of, which is a comfort as far as it goes. Others fold their arms in gloomy, sarcastic fashion, while others thrust them behind as if to hide them altogether. Cholly and Chappie have a very curious fashion peculiarly their own of hanging them loosely from the shoulders a little in advance of the body, letting them wave lightly as they enter a room. But, according to an exchange in which the foregoing remarks occur, whatever is the style assumed it is very noticeable that not one man in ten is absolutely unconscious of his hands or uses them in a perfectly natural manner.

Southern Home Manners.

There is a certain softness and sweetness in southern manners that appeal very strongly to less demonstrative northerners. Perhaps no southern custom is prettier than that of having the children of a household call a friend of the family or a favorite visitor aunt, uncle or cousin, as the case may be. Doubtless the custom had its origin in the numberless genuine relationships of southern life, which led people to feel that there was a certain coldness in addressing a guest by a formal title when everybody else present was addressed familiarly or affectionately.—New York Sun.

THE DRESS OF WOMEN

AGITATION, PAST AND PRESENT, ON THE LINES OF REFORM.

Mr. Gladstone's Taste For Flowing Grecian Draperies — The Movement Started by Amelia Bloomer—Dress Reform Runs Counter to the Current of Fashion.

It is not at all improbable that Mr. Gladstone told one of the women dress reformers that he liked the old Grecian draperies better than the undulating corsetless feminine costume, for that is the judgment of most men of esthetic taste.

The expression of his opinion on this subject, however, is of no practical importance, extraordinary and manifold as his abilities may be. Fashion is a domain in which the greatest of the leaders of men are powerless, and where even the principles of esthetics do not necessarily hold sway. It is a field, too, in which the restless reformatory spirit of this period has expended itself fruitlessly, though the effort has been long and ceaseless.

Fifty years ago Amelia Bloomer began an agitation for the reform of the dress of women on both esthetic and sanitary grounds. She did not concern herself with mere general suggestions, but adopted and advocated a particular costume devised and first worn by a daughter of Gerrit Smith, one of the early abolitionists. Her example was followed by Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lucy Stone and others of the women's rights agitators of note. But the Bloomer costume, as it came to be called, did not receive feminine favor, and soon even those who were self sacrificing enough to make the experiment of wearing it in the face of public derision were glad to discard the ugly garments and to render renewed submission to the imperious dictates of conventional fashion.

The costume did not satisfy the taste of Mr. Gladstone for flowing Grecian draperies, but was devised for the very purpose of getting rid of them and the obstacles of the free movement of women, and the reform dress recommended at Chicago only lately is somewhat based on the same general principles. In each there is a tunic reaching to the knee or a little below, and then come trousers or leggings. Both bear some sort of resemblance to the present feminine bathing costume, except that they lose its grace and beauty by concealing the contour of the lower legs with baggy coverings. Instead of revealing it with close fitting stockings. The new reform dress was introduced into the women's convention at Chicago and Amelia Bloomer herself is worn by two or three of its courageous advocates, but we have not heard that even they have ventured to wear it habitually in public, and if they did so probably they would provoke no less derision than Mrs. Amelia Bloomer and her reformatory associates excited a generation ago.

Mrs. Russell, the woman who reported the remark of Mr. Gladstone, has devised a new costume on her own account. It is described as a gown which "seemed to fall entirely from the shoulders," looking as if "she had hung a bedspread upon her back and a table spread upon her front." Apparently it is a modification of the Mother Hubbard dress, which was in vogue several years ago in various parts of the Union, but in town costumers were pressed forbidding the wearing of that garment on the ground of its impropriety and no such objection is made to Mrs. Russell's bagpike gown we hope that she has corrected the defect, if defect it be, of revealing the contour of the female lower figure in its unexpressed beauty.

At any rate, it has no likelihood whatever to the Grecian draperies of which Mr. Gladstone approves with so much good taste. It has not the voluminousness which exhibits any of the outlines of the figure, but conceals them almost as thoroughly as does the hideous dress worn by Turkish women in public. Evidently it goes not to the necessity of corsets. Just there is a difference of opinion as to the injurious effect of these, and one such support was worn by women even in the classical period to which Mr. Gladstone turns with so much delight. The dress of the women represented in the Tanagra statuettes and in the gems excavated at Mycenæ is not radically different from the feminine costume of today.

The history of fashions, as shown in the superb French works which picture the costumes of every age from the dawn of civilization the dress of women of fashion has followed the same general principles of construction and ornamentation, varying in accordance with Mr. Gladstone's taste for flowing draperies, and at variance with the reform dress now recommended. The treatment of the shoulders and their decoration have varied greatly and capriciously, but draperies have always remained as the main features of the costume. Unhappily the tendency has always been away from the simplicity of the true art, and now, as Mrs. Linton has said in a recent magazine article, the flaring squalors are a distinct and inexcusable deformity since they conceal the beautiful line at the shoulder. Otherwise the present feminine costume is graceful, though a few years ago it was of much greater beauty.

The dress reform starts out counter to the whole current of fashion in feminine dress, because it is devised with a view to use to utility and without prime regard to beauty. It is intended for women emancipated from the restraints of the past, and working in the enlargements of civilization as competitors of men. Unquestionably for that purpose flowing draperies, whether they be classical, Turkish, are not desirable. Perhaps the reform dress, with its short tunic, is more appropriate, but it is not so graceful, and it is not so generally adapted to the high order of feminine beauty or the concealment of feminine physical defects. Hence women will have none of it. They may be emancipated from much else, but, thank heaven, they are not emancipated from the desire to make themselves pleasi ng to behold.—New York Sun.

Be a Woman.

Girls, all of you, everywhere, this is a word to you: Be womanly. Be true to yourself we and be guided by the promptings of those who have been through it all and know by experience the best line of conduct to pursue. You may lose the companionship of some whom you think very gay and jolly, but their evanescent friendship will be replaced by sincere respect and commendation.

It is a great fun perhaps to be a bit slangy in your talk, to take surreptitious puffs of a cigarette or to deceive your chaperon as to your whereabouts.

Possibly for a time such a line of conduct will appear amusing and clever, and you will undoubtedly think you are pleasing "Tom, Dick and Harry by being "half fellow well met and willing to deceive those who have your best interests at stake. But when your back is turned no one will be so quick to censure you as they.

Remember this and don't yield to the temptation to be flippant and untrue.

Again, be womanly.—Boston Herald.

IT WAS A GOOD ONE.

But He Never Thought of It Until Too Late.

The busy throng roughly jostled the despondent man with a sandy goatee. The world had no time to pause and ask about his sorrow. It was left for the leisurely party with a wooden leg to probe into the secret burden of his heart.

"Which?" queried he of the ligneous limb.

The despondent man shook his head.

"Not in body," he gloomily rejoined.

"Heavy heart?"

"Yes."

The wooden legged party sighed sympathetically. The despondent man pulled his goatee and groaned.

"Remorse?" suggested the leisurely fellow.

"Yes."

"Don, dear."

He knit his brows to indicate the great depth of his interest.

"I—er—crime?"

"No."

He rattled his wooden leg on the stone pavement and pondered a moment.

"Failure to—er—perform a duty?"

"Not exactly a duty."

"Indeed."

The leisurely party sighed twice. The despondent man tugged at his goatee with great energy.

"You feel for me," faltered the other, with a grateful look.

The individual with the woodenleg declared without equivocation that he knew what it was to suffer."

"Then I can tell you all."

The leisurely party bowed.

"A person"—

It was no easy matter for the despondent man to talk beneath the weight of his grief.

"Spoke to me despitefully."

He nobbed.

"And why," gently demanded the party with a wooden leg, "do you feel any remorse?"

"Ah, ha."

The moon which emanated from the despondent man shook the sandy gostee as the earthquake makes the mountain topmost and trembles.

"Ah, me. I had upon my lips a crushing retort."

"And uttered it before you thought?"

"I never uttered it at all. I never thought of the retort until an hour after he left me. And it was such a good one too."

Sorrowing and miserable in his sorrow he left himself in the crowd.—Detroit Tribune.

Little Eddie's Ideas Confused.

Little Eddie Kline was early in his seat in the infant class of the Simpson Methodist Episcopal Sunday school, Brooklyn, on a recent Sunday. For awhile he was all attention, but gradually his thoughts reverted to the coming Fourth, its celebrations and its flags. Suddenly the teacher asked:

"Now, children, can any of you tell what God created on the fourth day?"

Instantly little Eddie's hand went up.

"Well, Eddie," said the teacher, "you may answer."

"What was it that God created on the fourth day?"

"Firecrackers!" exclaimed Eddie triumphantly. "No," he added quickly, perceiving he had made some mistake, "the stars and stripes."

It was some time before the teacher sufficiently recovered her composure to be able to explain that the fourth day witnessed the creation of the sun, moon and stars, and not explosives nor bunting.—Chicago News-Record.

Her Wish.

What on earth people did before hair mocks were invented passes my knowledge.

The other night two persons were in one of a suburban lawn party.

They had forgotten everything but each other and swung slowly to and fro to the faroff music of the frogs.

He had been vainly trying for some time to confess her with his arm without being observed, and at last her white shawl slipped down just right.

She drew a blissful sigh as she nestled nearer and said, low-lovely:

"Dearest, do you see that star up there?"

"Yes, Charlie; isn't it sweet?"

"I love that star up there," in a rather faraway voice.

"Oh, dear," she simpered, "how I wish I were that star!"

It was then that some one who had been listening fell out of another hammock.—Chicago News-Record.

Much Is a Name.

"Come, Mooney," he called from the head of the cabin stairs as the boat landed. The passengers watched, wondering meanwhile if Mooney was a black and tan or a Skye terrier.

"The boat's nearly there, Birdie," he called again.

Were there two of them? All eyes were strained, but nothing answered to the call. The whistle of the steamer blew, and again the same voice anxiously down the cabin stairs over the heads of the up rushing crowd.

"Ducky," he called loudly, "aren't you coming?"

No "Ducky" put in an appearance and again he called in a pleading tone:

"Be a dear; why don't you hurry? We'll be the last to get off the boat."

Then a woman weighing at least 250 pounds appeared at the stairway carrying a big basket, two lunch camp chairs and several shawls and rugs.

"I'm coming, hubby," she said placidly, and everybody who saw her coming got one of the way as they recalled Mr. Shakespeare's pertinent inquiry, "Whose in a name?"—Detroit Free Press.

MRS. AMMERMAN SAID TO BE PERSECUTED BY HER HUSBAND.

He Lost His Way and Finally Brought up Near Metuchen, where a New Brunswick Man Found Him, and Sent Word to His Parents.

Yesterday among those who went with the German Reformed church on their excursion to Papiac was Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Mencenbach of Somerset street and their little ten-year-old son Louis. Louis stayed with his father the most of the time, but toward night he went off with some other boys to play in distant part of the grove.

When the party was ready to return home little Louis Mencenbach couldn't be found. His parents finally started for home, thinking that probably their little offspring had gone to New Brunswick on the boat, which was seen to stop at the dock and then leave for that place.

Louis did not get on the boat, however. He had been playing around the grove and did not know it was time to go home until he was told his parents and friends had started for home. Nothing daunted, the little fellow began the journey home on foot. He took the wrong road and finally wound up near Metuchen, where he was found by a Mr. Becker of New Brunswick.

Louis can't speak very distinct English as he was born in Germany.

"Louis Mencenbach, 30 Plainfield."

He left off the name of the street, but this gave the paper enough information to telegraph to his parents here, of the boy's whereabouts.

When Mr. Mechenbach received the news that his son was in New Brunswick he immediately went after him and brought him home.

PERSONAL.

Mr. W. E. Stiger of this city, has gone to Belmar.

Miss Anna Tyler of Long Island, is visiting friends here.

Miss Belle Booth of Newburgh, N. Y., is visiting friends on East Second street.

Among the Plainfielders recently registered at Asbury Park hotels are the following: Chas. G. Crawford and wife, R. C. Bowers and wife, Miss D. L. Bowers, Florence Abbott, B. C. Bowers, Jr.

Messrs. W. H. Miner and Edward Rambo are participating a delightful trip through Massachusetts on their bicycles. Mr. Miner is at present viewing the sights at the World's Fair, and on his return they will start on their trip.

Mr. Moore and family of Maine arrived in this city to-day to spend some time as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon A. Cruikshank of Belvidere avenue. Mr. Moore is Mrs. Cruikshank's father. He brought four handsome horses with him and had them stabled at Mr. Redden's on Fifth street.

Major Rebecca Chatterton, daughter of Judge Chatterton of Dublin, Ireland, and now on the Women's Training Home Staff in New York city, and Captain Adele Grosclaude the celebrated soprano French singer, and one of Plainfield's first officers, will be at the Salvation Army to-morrow night.

Mr. R. R. Schermerhorn of Doylestown, Pa., is visiting his brother, Mr. Charles H. Schermerhorn, manager of the Western Union Telegraph office on North avenue. Mr. Schermerhorn is clerk of the court sessions in the Bucks county court. He intends to visit relatives and friends in Paterson, Burlington and other New Jersey cities before his return.

IN YE OLDEN TYME.

THE EXPLOITS OF AN OLD TAVERN KEEPER.

Told by an Old Timer who is Still Living in This City.—This is Part Second of the Story.

II.

(Special Correspondence, the first part of which was published in THE NEWS of August 2.)

The "Modern Tavern Keeper" seemed to consider that he had a mission to perform in remedying all the atrocious doings then existing in the vicinity or neighborhood, which he did quite effectually in his peculiar method of operation. After obtaining their confidence, and enjoining the utmost secrecy from the characters with which he affiliated, for the time being—and woe to the man who would betray the old gentleman—they all seemed to understand him most thoroughly. He would not expose them to their injury or knowledge and they would not tell upon each other, and it was not until after years that the secret came out, but when that time came, his mission was accomplished, and those who had been tricked were most effectually cured of their natural propensity.

Perhaps one of the most telling exploits ended in breaking up chicken thieves. For a long time the neighborhood had been infested by such invaders, and all efforts to discover the vagrants had proved futile—they were evidently not living in the immediate neighborhoods of the village. Christayon finally set about the task. He had observed on more than one occasion that on the evening previous to a report of theft some two or three certain individuals were observed to pass through and be closed his house. He had already talked quite freely with them, and gradually began to draw them out and gain their great respect. "Make haste slowly," was his motto, and after he had securely set his trap they ran into it, for he had expressed willingness to take a hand in the business. The thieves knew they had one of the shrewdest comrades to lead them in their business. They consulted in his judgment and under his discipline per made ready their attacks. On a certain night agreed upon they were to make a raid, on Mr. B's. large stock. Christayon was not slow to report the whole matter to Mr. B. in advance, who was to be ready to meet them at a certain hour, and to conceal himself with his covered lantern. The night was very dark and frosty. All nature was quiet except the soft steps and whisperings of the invaders. The crickets had been chilled to sleep, even the woodside, already numbered by the October win's, had concluded with the mocoolyable kate. The chickens and fowl were in their soundest slumbers. The tree selected by Mr. B. was mounted by two of the party, while the third stood on the ground to receive the feathered tribe as they were handed to him. while Christayon was to keep a close look out for fear of being discovered, as the chickens were being caught. There was some uncomfortable fluttering of wings, but they were evidently handled with much skill. From the man highest on the tree was heard in low tones, "Pinch their necks — don't let them bollos or squeak." Quite a number by this time were secured. Christayon suggested that they must have about enough, when one of the men in the tree replied "oh! here is another fat one or two."

Just when Mr. Brown opened his lantern upon them. Most of the chickens had their heads twisted off. Of course further theft was dropped, as were the chickens. Brown shouldered his huge gun and shouted that he would shoot the first man that would attempt to escape. Christayon was the first man to cry for mercy. "Mercy, said Brown, you will all be put where the dogs won't bite you before to-morrow night. Yes, I will have you put where you can't steal any more poultry, I'll be bound." The old tavern keeper appeared the most affected and plead as for his life. Mr. B. demanded the full names of the party from him, which he seemed reluctant to give. After this was done, Mr. B. says: "Well, Mr. Soft, you are the last man that I would have suppose of being in such a game as this trick." "Well, its my first offence, Mr. B., and if you will let me off with the rest of these men and hush it all up, I will give you $200; if you will not, I am ruined for life," and he cried like a child. "No, sir," said Brown, "nothing in justice can or will satisfy me, you vagabonds." But the old tavern-keeper plead like a Judah, and like Judah "began to prevail." So they were all invited out of the cold air into the house. After being seated around a small fire, Mr. B. told them he had a proposition to offer, which, if accepted, would save them from prosecution and all its consequences, of public exposure, and prison life with all its disgrace. "As I have no disposition to be severe," I propose," continued Mr. Brown, "that if your four men will individually pledge and promise me that you will never again attempt to steal any more, and will bring your wives with you to dinner on those fowls (which are still alive,) day after to-morrow there will be no further action taken in the case, and the whole matter will be kept in our own breasts, the world shall be none the wiser for the deed, but anyone or all not complying with this aforesaid offer or settlement will and must be dealt with according to the full letter of the law. So what say ye?" There was silence for a few minutes. The eyes of the three men were turned to Christayon, who very soon broke the spell of thought by saying, "For myself I most cheerfully accept the proposition, cousins, as I know it does from a large, overbearing heart, that wishes nobody any harm, but would rather see us all happy and honest men." Calling the three other men by the names that had been given him he asked them if the all had wives, to which they answered they had. Mr. B. then put the question to the three men separately, and they with Christayon pledged themselves to comply with the terms Mr. B. had made.

The dinner day arrived with the four men and their wives, it was a bright October day with a goodly sky. Mr. and Mrs. B. were all sunshine themselves, and endeavored to make the whole company happy, and had well nigh succeeded in making the thieves forget what had been the character of the party, when suddenly the dinner bell rang, and such a dinner, seven or eight fowls were piled upon large dishes in the center of the table. When they were all seated round the board grace was said by Mr. Brown and soon the whole company was served most bountifully. It is impossible for any one to know how well the three men relished the chicken dinner or whether they had informed their wives as to how they happened to be invited to such a delicious feast; but we imagine they were not very greedy; as soon as there was the least appearance of lowering, the plate was filled up again until they cried enough, enough. Mr. Brown insisted on their eating until they were evidently making fellow or two, plush your cooks friends, and lets have a good time." They were not long in seeming to respect themselves, and were never known to to steal again, and who confessed later in life that they never felt so happy, and had greater punishment then at that dinner and would rather have suffered a year's imprisonment than to have been there, but it saved the men.

P.P.V.

From the Backwoods Into a Live Town.

Plainfield is a very wicked place, although our newspaper friends are not among the elect who see no difference between Sunday and a week day. Last Sunday we visited that city and besides witnessing the usual Sunday sights, both male and female, the electric cars in full blast, and the arrival and departure of steam cars, places of business were opened and unusual activity prevailed in all the thoroughfares. Even a colored man was cashing his pay check in Front Main street, filled with pooches. Handsome churches were numerous on every hand, but the tolling bells had no effect whatever on the crowds of pedestrians who were bent on the demands of business or fashion.—Eagle.

Our Madison friend ought to travel more to get over his puritanical notions. Then he will not think it any worse to ride a bicycle, or to ride in electric cars, or in steam cars, than it is to ride in a carriage, or even go afoot on Sunday. The only places of business open here on Sunday are those of the Seventh-Day Baptists, or persons pretending to be such, but such places are closed on the Saturday Sabbath of the Jews. If the Eagle considers what its editor saw "unusual activity" he ought to be here on any week day.

Third Party for the World's Fair.

Mr. A. V. D. Honeyman starts on Monday next on his third Private Party Tour to the World's Fair, this time with about forty persons. Among those who expect to go from this section are Rev. Edward G. Read and family, of Somerville; Rev. and Mrs. Geo. F. Greene, of Cranford; Rev. and Mrs. Geo. K. Allen, of Perth Amboy; Rev. and Mrs. John B. Knaier, of Rearville; Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Sayre, of Bound Brook; Mr. and Mrs. A. DeHart Voorhees of New Brunswick; Mrs. B. V. Leigh and daughters of Clinton; Miss Crittenden, Miss Palmer and Mr. Bushnell, of this city; Mr. A. D. Thompson and family, of Neth Amboy; Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Fulleman of Franklin Park. There are others from Elizabeth, Morristown, Princeton, etc. These tours are first class in every particular.

To-Night's Show.

Helen Russell's English Sports Company, which appears in Music Hall tonight, is thus spoken of by Boston critics:

"This company, which appears at Howard Athenæum this week, is certainly a good one and deserves especial praise in point of singing, dancing and comic situations. The comedians are Lew Dockstader, Jim Reilly, and the costuming elegant; and their two burlesques, Monte Cristo and Cleopatra, will compare favorably with half or more any of the big spectacular companies now on tour.

Miss Helen Russell will lead the novel Polish dance.

Next Saturday afternoon there will be racing at the Gentlemen's Driving Club on Park avenue. The races will begin at two o'clock. Mr. John Chandler's gray horse "Walsh" will trot five heats against Mr. Bayes' "Andy." These will also be other races.

The Weather.

Thursday fair to partly cloudy, slightly warmer and more sultry weather will prevail with light and fresh southerly winds, and on Friday fair to partly cloudy weather, with local rain and slight temperature changes, but very warm and sultry conditions.

Men Able to Work to Get no Pensions.

A pension detective visited Grand Army men here to-day and informed those receiving pensions that hereafter those able to work would cease getting a pension.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

WHAT PLAINFIELDERS WHO HAVE BEEN THERE SAY.

It is Too Grand to Describe, but Don't Fail to Go and See it.—"The News" will Send Plainfield's Most Popular Fireman There Soon.

YES among the small boys "Fairward Bound" has become the latest saying. It has taken the place of the old time cry of "Westward Ho." Both mean the same thing, virtually, as nearly everyone going West is bound for the greatest fair the world has ever known.

Plainfielders say they cannot even describe the immenseness and grandeur of what they saw.

All who have been there remark, "Don't fail to go; you will never regret it."

Hundreds of Plainfielders will yet make the trip and among them will be Plainfield's Most Popular Fireman with all his friends, including many extras, paid for in advance.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

A Good Steady Rain Needed Badly.

OF the week ending Monday, Aug. 7, the observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report that the temperature and rainfall have been very near the normal and that the rainfall was very unevenly distributed, the southern portion of the State, which has suffered most from the drought, receiving the greatest and the northern section, which up to the present time has sufficient moisture, received the least amount.

The general condition of all crops remains unchanged. Corn and the late fruits received on the 1st were of some benefit, but more rain is desired. During the week, the ground is again very dry, and all crops except buckwheat are suffering. The rain of the 5th and 6th was of little use to all the portion of the east. Grass seed and sown fields have been much injured by the drought and the pastures are very short. Peaches are rotting badly. Apples continue falling from the trees.

PLAINFIELD.—Farmers report oat crop as being light. Potatoes are being injured by drought. Average temperature, 76 deg., rainfall, 0.33 inch.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.—A small shower on the 29th was of some benefit but soon dried out. Potatoes, corn and lima beans are suffering for rain. A heavy shower light rain on the 4th was sufficient to lay the dust. Rain is much needed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Reclaiming Sand Wastes.

It is probable that the next century will witness all except the bleakest, stormiest parts of the Atlantic coast covered with grass and vegetation to the water's edge. What can be done in this direction is apparent at the seaside hotels. An area covered by barren heaps of drifting sand is selected as the site of a pleasure resort. Nothing could be more unpromising than this sand, so far as producing any beauty of vegetation is concerned, yet in very few years grass, flower plots, vines and trees cover the leveled off sand heaps, and picturesque grounds that are a thing of beauty surround the hotel.

As the country is more closely settled, it will be necessary to convert sand waste into vegetable gardens and woodlands. France has already shown the world how this can be accomplished. On the northwest French coast villages were formerly swallowed by drifting sands, driven by fierce winds. More and more of the country became covered with these, till it seemed as if the whole coast for several miles inland would be necessarily abandoned to the sand dunes. Six hundred miles of coast line were thus rendered barren. Then the government took measures to stop the desolation. Piles of wooden timbers and brush were laid along the coast in a line. The sand drifted into these and was caught, in time making a sea wall and covering the brush. Then other timbers and branches were laid upon the first ones, and again the sand blew over and caught, and made a fixed wall, higher yet. The timbers were laid about 300 feet from the water's edge.

In time a line of mound reaching along the whole coast was found. It sloped toward the sea gently, but more steeply toward the land side. Beach grass and plants that would grow in sand were sown upon the slopes. Immediately behind the wall forest trees were planted, and in time the vegetation became as firmly fixed as any in France, and the settlers were no longer swallowed up by sand. This began in 1787. The whole northwest coast is now covered with a fine growth of valuable forest trees.

An Ice Charity.

In some of the large cities this summer benevolent individuals have organized and conducted a charity as helpful as it is unique. It consists of contributing funds to supply the very poor of the tenement house districts with free ice. At convenient points in these thickly settled and wretched of the tenement regions blocks of ice are deposited, while skilled workmen saw the blocks up and distribute them among the needy who call for them.

The charity has been especially valuable in saving the lives of infants. In the hottest days it is impossible to keep milk sweet or food fresh more than a few hours without ice, and the poor babies who get it literally starved. To the ice gratuitously bestowed this summer grown people of the twentieth century will owe the fact that they are living, happy men and women, with a fair chance to fight and win, instead of dying in infancy and having their starved little bodies turn to dust in pauper graves.

Superintendence of the ice distribution is intrusted sometimes to district charities, again to the city physicians authorized to attend the poor free of charge. Orders for the ice are obtained from these. This distribution of free ice among the needy may be the coldest charity ever devised, but it is also one of the most worthy.

The history of a large irrigating canal that supplies the fruit colony at Riverside, Cal., shows how a very small creature can sometimes defeat the work of hundreds of grown men. The canal is 22 miles long and was built 12 years ago. Some years since it was discovered that the supply of water was rapidly diminishing from some unknown cause. Investigation showed that mischievous little gophers were burrowing holes in the canal and were ruining it. There was nothing to be done but to line the canal with the bottom of the ditch with cement through its whole length, and this work had to be postponed till the rainy season was on, so the canal would not be needed for irrigating purposes. After the gophers were shut out it was found that the canal conveyed twice as much water as it did before, the animals having wasted one-half.

Not later than Sept. 10 the so called Cherokee Strip will be opened for settlement. United States officials are already on the ground perfecting arrangements. The Strip will be divided into nine new counties, eight of them being arranged in two tiers. The ninth county will include the late Pawnee reservation. These infant counties are thus far nameless, being merely lettered alphabetically. Settlers of lively imagination will be able to christen them speedily once the Strip is open. For convenience of settlers four land offices will be located in different places.

REPEAL WILL TAKE TIME

Congressmen, However, Set Out To Kill the Sherman Law.

WHAT IS THOUGHT OF THE MESSAGE

Many Favorable Views — Jerry Simpson, Though, Says, "Weak as Dish Water," Through Eyeglass Eyes — Free Coinage Men Rally.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—With the request of the president fresh in their ears to repeal the Sherman silver law, and repeal it promptly, the congressmen are today actively at work on the subject. The repeal of the obnoxious law, as is now being clearly understood, is a matter of time, even if the opposition is of the weakest.

The proceedings of the senate were of great public interest. In the first place the president's message was read and listened to with marked attention on both sides of the chamber, and the senator moving from his position during the quarter of an hour or more which the reading occupied. The message was referred to the committee on finance and its immediate printing ordered.

Then the iron gates of legislation were thrown wide open, and a carnest of bills on financial and other subjects was admitted. Mr. Hill of New York was the first senator to get in a bill for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. Mr. Sherman of Ohio followed with four other bills and a speech on the same subject. In the speech he declared himself against the repeal of the Sherman act, as such repeal would, he said, destroy silver coinage forever.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts directing the committee on finance to report a bill for the repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman act and providing for a vote on the passage of such a bill by the 23d of August, if not sooner reached. This resolution was supplemented by another offered by Mr. Hale of Maine, fixing the hour of meeting of the senate from and after Thursday next at 11 a. m.

These resolutions precipitated a discussion in which several of the leading senators on both sides of the chamber participated. They went over without action and will be laid before the senate today.

Richardson Got His Seat.

The president's message was awaited by the members of the house with great anxiety, listened to with intense interest and received hopeful comments from various standpoints. When the reading of the message was concluded, the election case from the Fifth district of Michigan was taken up, and after two hours debate Richardson, the Democrat, was seated on his prima facie title.

The Democratic members of the senate will hold a caucus tomorrow for the purpose, it is said, of distributing the patronage of the body. It is also probable, in view of the developments in the silver debate, that this subject will receive the earnest attention of the caucus. After this caucus decides what the Republicans may have, the Republican caucus will hold another conference Thursday and settle their appointments.

At the close of the day's proceeding in the house Mr. Bland went to the clerk's desk and had read a call for a caucus in the hall of the house at 12 o'clock today of "all members in favor of free coinage of silver."

The President's Message.

The full text of the message is as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

The existence of an alarming and extraordinary business situation, involving the welfare and prosperity of all our people, has constrained me to call together in extra session the people's representatives in congress, to the end that through a wise and patriotic exercise of the legislative duty with which they solely are charged present evils may be mitigated and dangers threatening the future may be averted.

Our unprecedented progress and the wide spread outgrowth of enterprises which consequently check national growth and prosperity. With plenteous crops, with abundant promise of remunerative production and manufacture, with unusual invitation to safe investment and with satisfactory assurance to business enterprise, suddenly financial distrust and fear have sprung up on every side. Numerous moneyed institutions have suspended because abundant assets were not immediately available to meet the demands of frightened depositors.

Surviving corporations and individuals are content to keep in hand the money they are usually anxious to loan, and those engaged in legitimate business are surprised to find that the securities they offer for loans, though heretofore satisfactory, are no longer accepted. Values supposed to be fixed are fast becoming conjectural, and loss and failure have involved every branch of business.

Evil Effects of the Present Law.

I believe these things are principally chargeable to congressional legislation touching the purchase and coinage of silver by the general government.

This legislation is embodied in a statute passed on the 14th day of July, 1890, which was the culmination of much agitation on the subject involved, and which must be considered a truce after a long struggle between the advocates of free silver coinage and those intending to be more conservative.

Undoubtedly the monthly purchases by the government of 4,500,000 ounces of silver, enforced under that statute, were regarded by those interested in silver production as a certain guarantee of its increase in price. The result, however, has been entirely different, for immediately following a spasmodic and slight rise the price of silver began to fall after the passage of the act and has since reached the lowest point ever known. This disappointing result has led to renewed and persistent effort in the direction of free silver coinage.

Meanwhile not only are the evil effects of the operation of the present law constantly accumulating, but the result to which its execution must inevitably lead is becoming palpable to all who give the least heed to financial subjects.

This law provides that in payment for the 4,500,000 ounces of silver bullion which the secretary of the treasury is commanded to purchase monthly there shall be issued treasury notes redeemable on demand in gold or silver coin, at the discretion of the secretary of the treasury, and dated at the time they are issued.

It is, however, declared in the act to be "the established policy of the United States to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other upon the present legal ratio or such ratio as may be provided by law."

Would Destroy the Parity.

This declaration so controls the action of the secretary of the treasury as to prevent his exercising the discretion nominally reposed in him if by such action the parity between gold and silver is disturbed. Thus, immediately a refusal by the secretary to pay these treasury notes in gold, if demanded, would necessarily result in their discredit and depreciation as obligations payable only in silver, and would destroy the parity between the two metals by establishing a discrimination in favor of gold.

Up to July 15, 1893, these notes had been issued in payment of silver bullion purchases to the amount of more than $147,000,000. While all but a very small quantity of this bullion remains uncoined and without usefulness in the treasury, many of the notes given in its purchase have been paid in gold.

This is illustrated by the statement that between May 1, 1892, and July 16, 1893, the notes of this kind issued in payment for silver bullion amounted to a little more $54,000,000, and that during the same period about $48,000,000 were paid by the treasury in gold for the redemption of such notes.

Gold Reserve Not Spared.

The policy necessarily adopted of paying these notes in gold has not spared the gold reserve of $100,000,000 long ago set aside by the government for the redemption of other notes, for this fund has already been depleted by the payment of new obligations amounting to about $150,000,000 on account of silver purchases, and on a recent occasion for the first time since its creation has been encroached upon.

We have thus made the depletion of our gold secure and have brought to ther and more speculative actions to add it to their stock. That the opportunity we have offered has not been neglected is shown by the large amount of gold which have recently been drawn from our treasury and exported to increase the financial strength of other countries.

The excess of exports of gold over its imports for the year ending June 30, 1893, amounted to more than $87,500,000. Between the 1st day of July, 1890, and the 8th day of July, 1893, the gold coin and bullion in the treasury decreased more than $132,000,000, while during the same period the silver coin and bullion in the treasury increased more than $155,000,000. The government bonds are to be constantly issued and sold to replenish our exhausted gold, only to be quickly exhausted. So it appears that operation of the silver purchase law now in force leads to the exportation of the entire gold redemption of silver for the gold in the government treasury and that this must be followed by the issuance of bonds for all engagements obligations in the depreciated silver.

At this stage gold and silver must part company, and the government must fail in its established policy to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other. Given over to the exclusive use of the standard of the commercial world, we could no longer claim a place among nations of the first class, and our government must claim a performance of its obligations, as far as gold will accomplish it. It has been said upon it, to provide for the use of the people the best and safest money.

Recently many of its friends claim, silver ought to occupy a larger place in our currency and the currency of the world through general international agreement. If experience fails to demonstrate the fact that the United States will not be in a position to gain a hearing in favor of such an arrangement as long as we are willing to continue our attempt to accomplish the result single handed.

The knowledge in business circles among our own people that our government cannot make its fiat equivalent to intrinsic value nor keep inferior money on a parity with superior money by its own independent efforts has resulted in such a lack of confidence in the stability of currency values that capital refuses its aid to new enterprises, while millions are actually withdrawn from the channels of trade and commerce to hoarding idle and unproductive in the hands of timid owners. Foreign investors, equally alert, not only decline to purchase American securities, but make haste to sacrifice those which they already have.

A Dreaded Possibility.

It does not meet the situation to say that apprehension in regard to the future of our finances is groundless, and that there is no reason for lack of confidence in the purposes or power of the government in the premises.

What avails reasoning with the shareholders and businesses in the face of timid owners. Foreign investors, equally alert, not only decline to purchase American securities, but make haste to sacrifice those which they already have.

FOR POISONING HER SON

The Trial of Mrs. Shann, the Suspected Mother.

MABEL DID NOT SEE THE MEN.

The Mysterious Persons Whom Mrs. Shann Described Were Seen by No One Else—Would Not Have the Body Embalmed. Blood on the Canopy.

TRENTON, Aug. 9.—The trial of Mrs. Mattie C. Shann, indicted for murdering by poison her 30-year-old son, John F. Shann, at their home in Princeton, N. J., on April 18 last, is now well under way. Prosecutor Stockton opened the case for the state, rehearsing all the details of the tragedy. The first witness was Professor Charles McMillan of Princeton. He made a map showing the first and second floors of Mrs. Shann's residence and explained it to the court and jury.

Reuben Vanzious, a carpenter and builder of Princeton, a boarder at Mrs. Shann's house for about five years, was the second witness.

He lived there when John G. Shann was taken ill and saw him several times during his illness. About 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Shann called him, and he got out of bed and went down stairs.

Saw Three Mysterious Men.

She said three men had been in the house and had gone away. They had been up stairs in John's room, and she was afraid they had done something. He went up stairs with her into the dead man's room and saw that a canopy that had been arranged over the body was stained with blood. He said nothing, but thought that there was something wrong. He went immediately down stairs again. Mrs. Shann's daughter Mabel was awake. The latter called out, "What's the matter?" and the mother replied: "Be quiet, Mabel. Don't excite yourself."

Mrs. Shann said nothing else. There were no blood stains on the floor. The witness said he went back to bed. Mrs. Shann at that time had five boarders besides himself, and he thought they were all home that night.

Mabel Shann, being called to the stand, testified that she was 17 years old. Like her mother, she was dressed in deep mourning. She is a pretty girl, with a musical voice. She slept with her mother the night that John was disemboweled. The movements of her mother and Vanzious about the house aroused her, and she asked what the matter was. Her mother said, "Nothing to be afraid of." Later she demanded again to know what was the matter, and her mother, sitting on the side of the bed, told her this story—that three men had come to the house and rung the bell. They wore long overcoats, with the collars turned up.

They had on storm hats and inquired if she had a dead son in the house. Her mother said "Yes," and they demanded to be allowed to see him. Mrs. Shann demurred, but two of the men went up stairs to where the corpse lay. The third remained down stairs and detained Mrs. Shann there. Mabel said her mother told her that this third man pushed her about and would not permit her to follow the other men up stairs. Mrs. Shann did not tell Mabel then what the men had done. Mabel said further that she and her mother nursed John. They gave him food, and both administered medicine to him.

He was sick about six weeks. When she testified before the coroner that her mother alone waited on him, she was mistaken.

She Had Often Cooked the Food.

The witness had often cooked his food and given it to him. Personally she had neither heard nor seen anything of the three mysterious men who had come in the dead of the night and disemboweled her brother. She had not seen the canopy that had told, and that was about 3 o'clock in the morning, when she was awakened and wanted to know what was the matter. The witness described the sort of food that John used to eat and the kinds of medicine given him. Regarding the latter she could tell only concerning the sizes of the vials and the colors of their contents. Mabel was not cross examined.

J. Watson Shann, an undertaker of Kingston, N. J., was called and testified that he was summoned to the house of death. She had asked him to take charge of the body. He said it was decomposing fast, but Mrs. Shann would not have it embalmed. He did what he could to preserve the remains by injecting embalming fluid into certain parts of the body. When he ceased to perform his final duties Mrs. Shann told him the story of the three men. He saw very little blood about the body, except some stains on the canopy over it. The body lay on a cooling board. At this point court adjourned.

Dead and Unknown.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The body of a pretty 17-year-old girl is lying at the morgue unclaimed. The lips are burned and black ened by the acid with which she took her life. The girl was found unconscious on the sidewalk near One Hundred and Nineteenth street and Pleasant avenue about midnight last Sunday.

Youthful Counterfeit Pirates.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 9.—Detective Denihy captured Will Howard, Ed Buckingham, Jesse Howard and Charles F. Church, boys who, with some companions, stole Mr. White's yacht and played pirate all among the Long Island sound. They raided farmyards and chicken roosts and destroyed considerable property.

Trouble in the Indian Territory.

CADDO, I. T., Aug. 9.—The trouble in Caddo county has reached war heat. News reached here that the county judge who has been removed by Governor Jones had been murdered. There is great excitement in this section, and trouble is expected.

The Fifth Peace Congress.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The American Peace society has completed its arrangements for the fifth world's peace congress, which opens at Chicago next Monday, Aug. 14, and closes Sunday, the 20th.

Jumped From a Roof.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Fred A. Hoffman jumped from the roof of his uncle's house, 9 Grandview street, and killed almost instantly. He had just left the insane asylum.

A CRASH IN NEW YORK.

Madison Square Bank Closes Its Doors.

THERE IS TALK OF RESUMING.

The Crash Was Brought on by the Refusal of the St. Nicholas to Clear For It—A Premium on Silver Dollars—More Financial Troubles.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Madison Square bank, at 996 Fifth avenue, did not open its doors this morning. Its capital is impaired about $60,000. The refusal of the St. Nicholas bank to continue to act as its clearing agent precipitated the trouble. It is said the deficiency will be made up by the directors, and the bank will resume business.

Chairman Tappon of the clearing house committee said the bank's capital was somewhat impaired, but the directors and stockholders were wealthy men and would make good all deficiency, and after a reorganization the bank may resume business. The depositors will eventually be paid in full. Its capital is $200,000. Surplus $170,000 and undivided profits $62,898, according to its statement of Dec. 15, 1892.

The failure of Horace L. Hotchkiss & Co., bankers and brokers at 84 Wall street, was announced on the Stock Exchange. The liabilities were said in the assignment papers to be $600,000 and assets $650,000.

Will Use Worcester Clearing House.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 9.—At a meeting of the Worcester clearing house it was voted to request the larger employers of labor doing business with Worcester banks to pay off their help in checks payable only through the Worcester clearing house

Cash Was Too Scarce.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The great scarcity of currency at present is very conspicuously shown in the refusal of the Chemical bank to make up the amount of the New York Central Railroad company's payroll.

A Premium on Silver Dollars.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Zimmermann & Forshay have bought $250,000 gold afloat, paying a premium of 1¾ per cent. They offer 1¾ per cent for any part of $100,000 in silver dollars.

Clearing House Certificates Issued.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—The executive committee of the Pittsburg Clearing House association decided to issue clearing house loan certificates.

PENNSYLVANIA R.R. EXHIBIT

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A Complete Illustration of the Progress of American Railroads.—Striking Contrasts between the Past and Present.

THE World's Fair visitor who finds his way into that vast enclosure by the Sixty-fourth Street gate will come almost immediately upon a building as architectural and attractive as any of the minor structures in all the great White City by the lake; a building classical in detail as well as in general conception, standing in the midst of a plateau of green sward with walls the tint of old ivory, and garnished with flags that reflect the brightest hues of the rainbow. While it is an annex, so to speak, of the great red and green and gold Transportation Building across the way, it is an annex complete in itself, and within and without exhibits in an exhaustive manner never before attempted, much less accomplished, the beginning, progress, and development of roading in the United States as exemplified by the Standard Railroad of America. It is, in fact, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's own edifice, and presents an interesting and scholarly showing of that corporation's history from the first inception of one of the component parts in 1815, when the first charter was granted to a railroad company in America to construct a road from New Brunswick, N. J., to the present time, when it controls nearly ten thousand miles of road penetrating thirteen States, and with Philadelphia in New York Harbor, at the National Capital, in three great cities of the Ohio Valley, and at five of the great lake ports.

While the building's main facade is perhaps the more beautiful of the two one-hundred-and-forty-foot sides of the structure, the rear view will doubtless prove the more attractive to the student of railroad progress, in that it presents, with its attendant features, an excellent reproduction of a model Pennsylvania Railroad station of the present day, with signal tower, tracks, ballast, switches, frogs, overhead foot-bridge, fences, and gates. The tracks, in themselves, are as indicative as anything else of the marked development in this branch of mechanics in the last sixty years, the exhibit showing, in juxtaposition with as fine a specimen of the standard Pennsylvania rail of 1892 as has ever been rolled, pieces of the Camden and Amboy rail of 1831, of the rail used on the old Portage road over the Alleghenies, and of the very crude wood and iron rail with which the Madison and Indianapolis road was originally laid. Some idea of the contrast may be had when it is stated that whereas the Camden and Amboy rail weighed only thirty-five pounds to the yard, the standard rail of to-day of which examples shown are one hundred feet in length, weigh one hundred pounds to the yard, being nearly three times as heavy.

Upon the tracks is another contrast even more marked. Probably the most conspicuous, certainly the most interesting, object in the display is the original John Bull train, which here rests after its thousand-mile journey across the continent from New York. The old engine itself—the oldest in America—which was constructed by George Stephenson, in England, and brought to this country in 1833 for use on the Amboy Divison of the Pennsylvania Railroad, stands there to-day precisely as it was in 1836, after having had added to it such improvements as were then suggested to the minds of the American engineers. Its weight, with its somewhat cumbersome tender, is only thirty-five thousand one hundred pounds; as against one hundred tons, the weight of the ordinary standard passenger locomotive of to-day, and beside the modern machine, of course it looks very much like a toy. The passenger coaches, glistening with a fresh coat of green paint, are so low that a tall man cannot stand upright within them; their berths are worked by means of handles similar to those on the horse-cars of the present time, and the only method of lighting them is by a tallow dip in each end of each car. As example of the magnitude to which the railroad cars of to-day have attained, no better object could have been made than the selection for exhibit, side by side with this tiny passenger train, of the two tremendous vehicles on which the mammoth Krupp guns were whirled from Baltimore to the Exposition; the manner in which the guns are carried being shown by means of full size models, made of staff, of the standard sixteen-inch and ten-inch guns, such as are now used by the United States War Department.

This policy of contrast, which is so apparent without the building, is carried throughout the entire display, and the interior, with its relief maps, charts, models, by figures, photographs and relics, gives a better idea of the wonderful growth of the greatest railroad system in the country than could possibly be had in any other way. The walls of the great marble-floored hall, into which the visitor may enter from either the Sixty-fourth or Sixty-sixth street gates, bear some mahogany show-cases, while the columns, so arranged as to form a colonnade on each side, are surrounded by folding frames for the display of large sands of exhibits that could be shown to advantage in no other way.

In arranging the display the smallest details have not been neglected, and as an indication of the thoroughness with which these little matters have been looked after, the labeling of the cases with a descriptive label in five languages is especially noteworthy.

In the centre of the building, under the dome, upon a platform like that of a Greek cross, are three relief maps that are certain to attract no little notice. They illustrate the changes in the methods of crossing the Alleghenies from the year 1832 to the present time, and have been prepared with such great care as to have won words of high commendation from scientists, whose attention has been called to them. One of these in particular, the largest of the three, which is twelve feet long by four feet wide, and which shows the old portage and the new portage roads, together with the present line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, including the Horseshoe Curve, Allegrippus, and the district of the Johnstown flood, is especially valuable as being the first and only relief map ever made of that section. The original map, from which the basis of the present work was obtained, was one which belonged to the late J. N. Barry, vice-president of the company. It was in lead pencil, never having been filled in ink, and was traced so the legend runs, by President J. Edgar Thomson himself. Other relief maps, or models which form two arms of the cross, show the Horseshoe Curve and Plane No. 1, with canal-boat, cars, and locomotives.

The rest of the floor space between the colonnades is dotted with pedestals and platforms upon which are mounted relating particularly to the developed system of transportation to-day. On one side for instance, is a beautiful reproduction in miniature of the double-decked ferry-boat "Washington," one of the fleet plying between Jersey City and New York. In every particular the model maker has closely followed the original and has succeed in turning out a piece of work as nearly perfect in every detail as it is possible to imagine. On gala days it is proposed to operate this steamer with bunting, and arrangements have been made to light the interior with electric lights precisely as the boat from that line of vessels is lighted. The method of handling freight cars in New York Harbor is shown here in the same way by means of models of a tug-boat and barge.

Toward the other end of the building are lay figures in uniform of the several classes of employes of the company.

An object of considerable interest to many is a perspective map, thirty-three feet long, showing the position of each train in motion on the Pennsylvania lines at any given hour during the week of Columbian Day, October 21st, 1892.

With regard to the arrangement of the exhibits in the cases, and the swinging frames, it can be pronounced to have been exercised to carry out the fundamental ideas of grouping and contrast. One corner has, therefore, been given up to those features of the road which have to do with motive power, another is devoted to engineering and maintenance of way, a third relates particularly to the relief department of the company, and in the remaining quarter of the spacious room are general relics.

One feature of much interest to the visitor is the Bureau of Information, which will be maintained in the building.

Experienced employes will be placed in charge, who will answer all questions concerning the exhibits, but will give information relative to train schedules in current use, and other matters of interest to the traveling public.

Complete as this exhibit of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been made, it is lacking in one or two essentials but it is hoped that these will be filled, when the General Transportation Building comes in for inspection. There the Pennsylvania road is deemed best to exhibit its finished products of 1892, in the shape of cars, turned out at its own Altoona shops, and accordingly shows three specimens of modern rolling stock—a combination mail and passenger coach, a standard refrigerator car, in which dairy products are transported, a standard track-inspection car, and a track-testing car, which shows graphically the condition of the track, such as is used annually by the company's officers in making a tour of inspection of its lines, being in fact the best pieces of road-bed, etc. Altogether the exhibit reflects abundant credit upon the company in general, and in particular upon Mr. Theodore N. Ely, chief of Motive Power, who conceived the general scheme, and Mr. J. Elfred Wilkinson, who, with years of service as civil engineer in the employ of the company, and a subsequent experience of seven years as curator of the transportation section of the Smithsonian Institute, has so successfully carried it into execution.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

SEESAW.

A Brief Account of How Ned Played at Seesaw.

"Let's play at seesaw," said Ned to his brother Tom as the sun crept out of the pleach and I'll sit on the other. Then you say, Here we go, up! up! up! and then I say,

Here we go, down! down! down! just as they do in the nursery rhymes." They liked the new game very much when they went up, but when the barrel slipped and they came down, down, down to the ground, they didn't like it quite so much.

An Allegory.

Very youthful readers who may not have a definite idea of the meaning of the word allegory are advised to first hunt out its meaning in the dictionary; then, as an illustration of the definition, read the following:

A pin and a needle were neighbors in a workbasket, and both being idle folks began to quarrel, as idle folks are apt to do.

"I should like to know," said the pin, "what you are good for, and how you expect to get through the world without a head?"

"What is the use of your head?" replied the needle very sharply: "if you have no eye!"

"What is the use of an eye," said the pin, "if there is always something in it?"

"I am more active and go through more work than you can," said the needle.

"Yes," said the pin, "but you will not live long!"

"Why not?" responded the needle.

"Because you always have a stitch in your side," said the pin.

"You are a poor, crooked creature," said the needle.

"And you are so proud that you can't bend without breaking your back," retorted the pin.

"I'll pull off your head if you insult me again," said the needle.

"I'll put out your eye if you touch me," said the pin; "remember, your life hangs on a single thread."

While they were conversing a little girl entered, and undertaking to sew she very soon broke off the needle at the eye. She then tied the thread around the neck of the pin and attempted to sew with it; she soon pulled its head off, and threw it in the dirt by the side of the broken needle.

"Well, here we are," said the needle.

"We have nothing to fight about now," said the pin. "It seems misfortune has brought us to our senses."

"A pity we had not come to them sooner," said the needle. "How much we resemble human beings, who quarrel about their blessings till they lose them, and never find out that they are brothers till they lie in the dust together as we do."

Song of the Honey Bee.

Buzz, buzz, buzz!
This is the song of the bee.
His legs are of yellow,
A jolly good fellow,
And yet a good worker is he.

In days that are sunny
He's getting his honey;
In days that are cloudy
He's busied at his wax;
On planks and on lilies,
And gay daffodillies,
And columbine blossoms,
He levies a tax.

Buzz, buzz, buzz!
The coarse, smelling clover
He humming hangs over;
The scent of the roses
Makes fragrant his wings;
He never eats lazy;
From this to and daisy,
And weeds of the meadow
Some treasure he brings.

Buzz, buzz, buzz!
From morning's first gray light
Till fading of daylight
He's singing and toiling
The summer day through.
Oh! we may not weary,
And think work a dreary,
But 'tis not for me
To have nothing to do.

Blackbirds.

What boy or girl has not read about that famous blackbird who plucked off the nose of the maid while she was hanging up clothes in the king's garden, or of the "Four and twenty blackbirds all in a pie."

Well, here are some blackbirds, and let us see if we can find out what they live on, and what they do. These in the picture are the commoner ones, and live on worms and snails and all kinds of insects. But there are other blackbirds which have red wings, and they are more particular about what they eat. They generally live in the southern states and feed on rice or corn, and are a great trouble to the farmers because of the large numbers that come and eat the ripe grain in the fields. When the grain has all been gathered in, do you suppose they starve? No, indeed; they are too cunning for that. They simply find out where it has been placed and go there for their meals. But they are pretty birds, with their glossy black feathers, and we must not blame them. They have to eat, and like many persons take the easiest way of getting their food.

Susie Wanted the Other Kind.

There were some apples on the table and mamma had peeled one for baby. Susie was offered one, when she replied, "No, mamma, not that one; a nated (naked) one, p'ease."

TWO WOMEN.

I have in mind a woman fair—
Old then she seemed, for I was young;
But Time had left no mark upon her hair,
And I was holding with an infant's tongue.

Another face confronts me now—
The wreck, with eyes that light is low;
And while my lips are forming in a vow,
I feel an inspiration from above.

Two women; they who bless my life—
One old and youth, full of years;
The one the mother, one the tender wife—
Both full of love that dissipates all tears.
—Homer Bancford in Detroit Free Press.

INFLUENCE OF WOMAN.

An Encouraging Lesson May Be Drawn from Queen Esther's Piety.

An extract from a sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman at Temple Emanu-El, New York, treats of the influence and education of woman as follows:

The festival of Purim brings prominently before us the noble character of Queen Esther. She is the type of a true woman, who, when her people were in danger, was ready to sacrifice her life in their behalf by pleading for them before her liege lord, the king. She says to Mordecai, "Go assemble the Jews who are now present in Shushan and fast ye for me, so that ye neither eat nor drink three days, neither day or night; also I myself, with my maidens, will fast in like manner; and then will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law, and if I then perish, I perish."

We know the result—how the religious spirit of Esther gave her courage, endowed her with modesty and grace, made her pleasing in the eyes of the king, inspired her with the eloquence to address him, enchained her with those gifts by which she gradually unfolded her petition, succeeded in bringing Haman to punishment and averted the danger that had threatened her people. This almost unparalleled history of Esther is an evidence of what the religious spirit of a timid woman can accomplish.

What is the proper field for woman is a frequent subject of the pulpit, platform and literature of the day. Formerly there was no lack of such discussion, for woman was a slave, chattel without rights or privileges. Among the Greeks and Romans, 'tis true, she did receive the character of a matron, and beautiful accounts of the praises that poets have bestowed upon her. But we nevertheless bear the sad refrain of her inferiority to man.

Among the Hebrews, 'tis true, she was accorded a position of honor, and no more beautiful tribute to woman can be found than the last chapter of the Book of Proverbs. Civilization, which can be marked by advance in art, science, government and religion, can none the less be traced by the ever loosening chains of bondage in which woman was held. Today marriage is a union of equals who are entitled to reciprocal love, respect, claims, duties and privileges.

At one time only sons were heralded with joy. We have gotten over that silly prejudice, and welcome our daughters with equal rejoicing. At one time the nation cared only for her sons—they were the flower of the land. Today the nation knows the great worth of her women. Formerly only boys were prepared for the battle of life. Now we take as great care of the education of our daughters.

Some fathers and mothers are, alas, still under the influence of the ancient prejudice and prepare their daughters more with regard to effect than to intrinsic merit. They should remember that the dewdrop which on the pretty flower sparkles in the sun is soon melted, but the genius spark, though buried out of sight, will live forever.

Women should be afforded the same or similar intellectual opportunities as men. If they desire to enter certain trades and professions, why not? If they can? Under certain conditions she would even be introduced into certain branches of politics, and be initiated into the mysteries of municipal and national affairs.

Grease Spots in Carpets.

In the weaving of pile fabrics a little oil is occasionally used to facilitate the movement of the wires, and a very careless weaver may in handling the oil can allow a few drops to fall on the fabric. No mark of this may appear at the time, but when the carpet is on the floor the dust which would otherwise be swept off by the broom is attracted and held by the oil and a spot becomes visible.

When the spot is on or near the edge of a breadth there is another explanation. Sometimes the ears in which carpeting is carried south or west have been previously used for the transportation of oil, and the bottoms of these cars are liable to become saturated with the drippings and leakage of oil barrels. Woolen carpeting placed in such cars may absorb the oil, and the fact may not become evident to the dealer until a carpet so damaged has been laid on a floor or shown in his salesroom often enough to catch some dust.

Where such spots appear in ingrains one explanation may be that the wool was not properly scoured. But of course, in most instances where complaints concerning spots are made, the cause need not be looked for outside the house in which the carpet is laid. Children or careless servants are responsible for most of these spots as well as for a great deal of the "sprouting."

Fortunately the remedy for the trouble is simple. A mixture consisting of equal portions of chloroform and ether will remove the spots at once.—Carpet and Upholstery Trade Review.

Nuns in Jerusalem.

It is stated that there are more priests, monks and nuns in Jerusalem in proportion to the population than in any other city in the world. They belong to every nation of Europe, and many of Asia, and are of every form of worship and of dress. The Roman Catholic nuns attract a great deal of attention and receive the respect of all classes by their modest deportment and the general service that they render to all, but there are also quite a number of Protestant sisters, earnest, devoted Christian women from England and Germany, engaged on every hand in doing good.—New York Independent.

WHITE, of Plainfield,

A PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

His Daughter Could Drive a Nail Straight Every Time.

The old man gently stroked the brown hair of the sweet girl nestling upon his breast. It was evident that he was very proud of her, and when with a fond kiss she left the room he turned again to the visitor, his eyes filled with parental affection.

"Wonderful girl, that," he mused, rubbing his hands together gleefully.

The firelight sent a fitful gleam to illumine his fine, venerable face.

"Splendid education," the old man observed.

"Ah, indeed!"

The father stared into the glowing grate and chuckled with satisfaction.

"Cost lots of money," he murmured, "but it pays."

He appeared to be very well satisfied indeed.

"Very."

The visitor felt it necessary to make some comment.

"Accomplished, I dare say."

"Accomplished be hanged!"

The old man was quite violent.

"No, sir," he insisted. "My daughter has a practical, industrial education, the most finished that money could buy."

"I want to!"

The visitor professed a polite incredulity.

"Know. Sewing and housekeeping, I suppose?"

"No."

The old man noticed the look of astonishment his negative occasioned.

"No, sir, no sewing or housekeeping, but she can drive a nail straight every time. A practical education, sir, strictly practical."

The firelight sent a fitful gleam to illumine the fine, venerable head.—Detroit Tribune.

Rare Vintage.

Among the perils of wine drinking one great danger is seldom remembered, that of flooding one's system with an awful mixture, which has nevertheless been dignified by a high sounding name.

Some years ago at a great sale of wine all the old loots were purchased by a grocer in Edinburgh. The agent had the curiosity some time after to inquire what use he could have made of such material.

He was shown, by way of answer, a huge vat where all the liquors from humble Gladstone to imperial Tokay, were fermenting together.

"And what" he asked, "do you propose to call this?"

"I'm not very sure," replied the grocer, "but I think it's going to turn out port"—Youth's Companion.

Then Outspoke a Bachelor.

They were very pretty, and there was apparently five or six years' difference in their ages. As the train pulled up at the depot, out on the A. K. D., the younger girl blushed, flattered her nose nervously against the window and threw back in joyous smiles as a young man came dashing into the car, shook hands tenderly and cordially, insisted on carrying her valise, magazine, paper bundle, and would probably have carried her had she let him.

The passengers smiled as she left, and the murmur went rippling through the coach, "They're engaged."

The other girl sat looking nervously out of the window, and once or twice gathered her parcels together as though she would leave the car, yet seemed to be expecting some one.

At last he came. He bulged into the door like a house on fire, looked along the seats until his roving gaze fell upon the upturned, expectant face, roared "Come on; I've been waiting for you on the platform for fifteen minutes," grabbed her basket and strode out of the car, while she followed with a little valise, a handbox, a paper bag full of lunch, a birdcage, a glass jar of jelly preserves and an extra shawl.

And a cruel looking old bachelor in the farther end of the car croaked out, in unison with the indignant looks of the passengers, "They're married."—Richmond Dispatch.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

Little Willie Had an Intense Anxiety About All Things.

One day I sat in a car seat on the Saugus branch of the Eastern road behind a pale, careworn lady, who was talking to a little boy from Boston to Malden. As the little boy was of a very inquiring mind and everything seemed to attract his attention, I could not help listening to some of the questions.

"What is that, auntie?" the little boy commenced, pointing to a stack of hay on the marsh.

"Oh, that's hay, dear," answered the careworn lady.

"What is hay, auntie?"

"Why, hay is hay, dear."

"But what is it made of?"

"Why, hay is made of dirt and water and air."

"Who makes it?"

"God makes it, dear."

"Does he make it in the day time or in the night?"

"In both, dear."

"And Sundays?"

"Yes, all the time."

"Ain't it wicked to make hay on Sunday, auntie?"

"Oh, I don't know. I'd keep still, Willie, that's a dear. Auntie is tired."

After remaining quiet a moment little Willie broke out:

"Where do stars come from, auntie?"

"I don't know; nobody knows."

"Did the moon lay 'em?"

"Yes, I guess so," replied the wicked lady.

"Can the moon lay eggs, too?"

"I suppose so. Don't bother me."

Another short silence, when Willie broke out:

"Benny says oxins is an owl, auntie. Is they?"

"Oh, perhaps so."

"I think a whale could lay eggs—don't you, auntie?"

"Oh, yes—I guess so," said the shameless woman.

"Did you ever see a whale on his nest?"

"Oh, I guess so."

"Where is he?"

"I mean no. Willie, you must be quiet, I'm getting crazy."

"What makes you crazy, auntie?"

"Oh, you ask so many questions."

"Did you ever see a little fly eat sugar?"

"Yes, dear."

"Where?"

"Willie, sit down on the seat and be still or I'll shake you. Now, not another word."

And the lady pointed her finger sharply at the little boy, as if she were going to stick it through him. If she had been a wicked woman she would have sworn. There are 8,000,000 little boys like Willie in the United States and half as many in England.—Texas Siftings.

Bridget Explained.

Two lone, lorn women, when they reached home after the Fiske lecture one night last week, found that they'd forgotten their latchkey. So they rang the bell. They waited and waited, and rang again. After fifteen minutes of waiting and bell ringing the girl opened the door.

"Katie, why on earth have you kept us waiting so? Didn't you hear me ring?" cried one of the women.

"Yes, ma'am," said Katie, with an air of some confusion; "but I t'ought it was me young man, ma'am, as me as him had a fallin out last Sunday, an I t'ought I'd learn him a lesson, ma'am."—Buffalo Courier.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

$6 per Year in Advance. T. W. Morrison, Editor and Proprietor. Office, No. 21 Somerset street. Printing of All Kinds. 10 Cents per Week, Delivered.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

FIRST TROLLEY VICTIM.

A STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYEE SHOCKED BY ELECTRICITY.

He was Standing on a Ladder at the Corner of Front and Somerset Streets. When his Hand came in Contact with the Guy Wire—Knocked from the Ladder he Fell to the Ground.

Henry Kaiser, an employee of the Electric Railway Company, while connecting a guard wire at the top of a pole at the corner of Somerset and Front streets about ten o'clock this morning, accidentally touched the guy wire which supports the trolley wire and received a shock which caused him to lose his balance and fall about twenty feet to the ground. He landed on his feet and fell backward striking his spine.

When picked up he was unconscious, but soon revived. His face, lips and hands were of a blueish hue. He suffered much from pain in his back which he declared was broken, and was taken to the Arlington hotel in an express wagon.

Kaiser is the same man who fell from a pole last week, and received slight injuries by landing in a hole dug for an electric light pole. He lives in Paterson, where he has a wife and five children.

One of the workmen who witnessed the accident said that the Front street line was not properly connected, anyhow, and was dangerous.

"The guy wires" he added, "are not properlyinsulated. It is possible for the current to even run into the poles and wires may be lost." "I believe in being lives may be lost." "I believe in being on the safe side, and the Somerset street line has been done right."

The fact that the company would be liable is poor satisfaction for the loss of life.

Another of the helpers at work on a pole to day was also shocked, but only slightly.

Later it was said Kaiser's injuries were very slight, consisting only of a sprained ankle.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. H. Everett has returned from a visit at Boston, Mass.

Mr. John Rafferty of Park avenue is rusticating at Highland Beach.

Mr. Brewster and family of Washington avenue are in New York State.

Mrs. L. J. Denton and son of Hillside avenue have returned from Brooklyn.

Mr. J. B. Brown and family of Park avenue started to-day for Asbury Park.

Ira Riker of Brooklyn is visiting his uncle, Mr. Ira Riker of Grandview avenue.

Mr. R. Huntington of this city is registered at the Grand Central Hotel, Asbury Park.

Mrs. L. E. Davis of this city is registered at the "Grand Central," Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Smith of Brooklyn is visiting Mr. and Mrs. John E. Townsend of Evona Terrace.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Blevin are registered at "The Stratford," at Point Pleasant.

The Misses M. E. and L. C. Embury of Washington avenue are at the "Lodore," Asbury Park.

Miss Minnie Sharp of West Sixth street is visiting relatives at Royceefield, Somerset country.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Herring of East Ninth street returned last night from the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Gulick have returned home from a visit with relatives in New York State.

Mr. Barnett H. Rogers and family of East Second street returned to-day from a trip in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Deifenthaler and her daughter, Katie, are stopping with her brother, Mr. Jacob Blum of Somerset street.

Mr. Estes L. Boice has just returned from a week's visit at Round Brook and Millstone, among the Randolph families.

Mr. Dewitt C. Stratton and family of East Sixth street started to-day for a two weeks' sojourn in Oneida county, New York.

The Somerset Messenger says: "Mrs. C. Vanderveer returned to Plainfield Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Van Pelt accompanied her and spent the day with Winfield Benoman."

Mrs. John B. Sharp of Newark is visiting her father-in-law, Mr. John Sharp, of West Sixth street. Mrs. Sharp was advised to leave Newark on account of her 10-month-old son's health, who has been seriously ill with cholera infantum. Her physician said if the child's leave Newark the baby wouldn't live a week. The baby is much improved since he has been breathing Plainfield air.

Mr. Terry Has Not Sold Out.

Mr. Oscar Terry, proprietor of the North Avenue Sea Food Market, says he has not sold out his business as stated in another paper, but is still prepared to serve his patrons with fresh fish at the same old stand. He has just received a large consignment of weak fish which he is selling at reasonable prices. His store is handy for those who go to Papiac or elsewhere fishing, and upon their return wish to secure a nice string of fish to take home.

A Wreck Near Round Brook.

A freight and coal train collided on the P. & R. road, near Round Brook, last night, and several cars were wrecked.

A SMOKER FILLED WITH SMOKE.

It was Not the Kind of Smoke it was Built for, Though.

The smoking car of the train which reaches this city at 5.35 from New York was discovered to be on fire between the floors, when the train neared Fanwood. A hole was cut in the floor and all the water available, including a lot of ice, was thrown on the fire, but without any result. When this city was reached the car was filled with smoke, another hole was made in the flooring and the space between the two floors flooded with water, which was procured from the freight house, using the railroad company's hose which is kept at the passenger station. Book-keeper Hibbitts at the freight house and "Jake," assistant baggagemaster, were the "firemen" who manipulated the hose. The origin of the fire is unknown. There is no fire in the cars during the Summer, and it is supposed it must have been caused by a hot box, probably some time before discovered, as the sawdust with which the floors are lined would smoulder a long time.

BREVITIES.

—The Board of Trade will meet to-night.

—Central Lodge, No. 46, Ancient Order of Workmen, will meet to night in Odd Fellow's hall.

—Mr. J. A. Robinson, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to night will answer any questions concerning the World's Fair.

—Bean leaves are said to be an immediate relief and certain cure for ivy poisoning, when applied in a bruised state.

—Justice Mosher yesterday issued summons in the contract case of Samuel V. Miller vs. F. X. Schoonmaker, returnable August 15.

—Cleveland's "rheumatism" is the new name for the free trade panic. It affects factories as well as human beings.—Success Register.

—On Thursday, August 17, the congregation of the German Lutheran church will go to Papiac, (Boynton Beach) on their excursion.

—Justice Nash has issued summons in the contract cases of Burnett vs. Van Winkle, and Homan vs. Barton. Both are returnable Aug. 15.

—The days have grown perceptibly shorter, and will continue to do so until December 21, even though the silver purchase law may be repealed.

—The survivors of the Ninth New Jersey Volunteers will hold their annual meeting at Camden, September 20, in Post 5 Hall, Fifth and Taylor streets.

—To-morrow night Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, have two pale faces to adopt. There are also fourteen candidates awaiting the "Hunters' Degree."

—The Central Railroad will run another of its popular excursions to Manch Chunk via Easton. The train leaves Plainfield at 9.27 a. m., and the price of the tickets is $1.75.

—A sign has been placed between the "out out" boxes on the electric street railway pole at the corner of Front and Somerset streets as follows: "Danger-cus! Don't touch it."

—The Helen Russell English sporting Company gave a variety show in Music Hall last evening. It did not attract a large audience but seemed to greatly please those present.

—There was only one case in the city court to be disposed of by Mayor Gilbert this morning, and that a man named Eddy, who had been arrested for drunkenness. He was fined $5.

—The Somerset County Board of Agriculture will hold a meeting in the Court House on Saturday afternoon. A number of interesting subjects will be discussed and a full attendance is desired.

—It is reported that the Elizabeth and Plainfield electric railroad scheme has been abandoned on account of the difficulties thrown in the way by the city of Elizabeth and some of the townships.

—A child's bed should always be placed so that the light should come from one side. If it be allowed to strike in front or behind the head it would have a tendency to make the child cross-eyed.

—James C. Adams, Esq., who has addressed audiences of men in the First Baptist church on two different occasions, has been secured to speak at the Y. M. C. A. rooms next Sunday, at 4.15 p. m. Ice cold lemonade will be served.

—The Salvation Army to night will have a special meeting. Major Rebecca Chatterlin of New York and Captain Adele Grosclaude of Perth Amboy, late of France are visiting the Army. Everybody is invited to attend.

—Young men interested in the study of geology are invited to accompany Messrs. E. R. Taylor and John Dalziel on a ramble on Saturday afternoon. The party will leave the Y. M. C. A. rooms at two p. m., and join a party from the 1.30 train from New York.

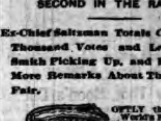
—The scheme for depressing Broad street and Central avenue, at Westfield, beneath the railroad tracks is again being agitated. The flagmen at both crossings are vigilant and faithful, but at night, after they have left their post, the danger is great.

—Care should be exercised in placing oil stoves outside of a draught. The great fire in Lynn, Mass., in 1889, which destroyed so many shoe factories, had its origin in a draught from an open door, blowing the blaze of an oil stove around the burner, causing the stove to explode.

LACKS ONLY 121 VOTES.

BUT FIREMAN MARTIN IS STILL SECOND IN THE RACE.

Ex-Chief Saltzman Totals Over Five Thousand Votes and Leads.—Mr. Smith Picking Up, and Hopeful.—More Remarks About The World's Fair.



OFFLY though the race for the World's Fair guess-work will pass the man who will be nothing votes with plenty of vim, is left out, every one, to be "in the swim," says the man to the interested crowd.

Ex-Chief Saltzman has now over five thousand votes and still keeps the lead. He is closely followed, however, by Fireman Martin who continues to gain and to-day is second by only one hundred and twenty-one votes.

Mr. Smith is third and far ahead of the fourth aud. Mr. Rogers.

The guessing is now very near, and then the great Exposition will be at its height. To the remarks of Plainfielders, published yesterday, might be added that of another who had described the Fair as a "modern fairyland, more beautiful than can even be imagined, especially at night when the grounds, buildings, fountains and the wonderful electric fountain, are all illuminated by thousands of electric lights, while gondolas, turnesque gondolas, and swiftly moving electric launches, all decorated with electric lights, make the scene thrill the onlooker with admiration."

The native villages which adorn the Midway Plaisance are exact reproductions of actual cities, and Plainfield's most popular fireman will see more of the inner part of the world looks like during his trip to the Fair than if he spent two years and thousands of dollars travelling over Europe. Don't do nothing of the thousands of things not even mentioned in the enormous catalogue issued by Fair Managers.

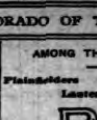
AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

Plainfielders Participate in a Lantern Parade.



PLAINFIELD was represented by the Crescent Wheelmen in the lantern parade and lawn party of the Montclair Wheelmen last night in celebration of their first anniversary.

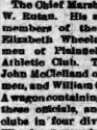
Fully 5,000 persons crowded the streets to witness the parade, and the attendance at the lawn party which followed it was nearly 3,000. There were more than 400 wheelmen in line, and sixteen every club within twenty miles was represented.

Some of the bicycles were very elaborately decorated with colored bunting, which added greatly to the effect. Many of the houses along the route were illuminated and decorated in honor of the occasion, and the large crowds, many of whom were from a distance, showed plainly how great was the interest in the celebration.

It was a gala night for the cyclists, and the parade and lawn party was thoroughly enjoyed.

The Chief Marshal of the parade was W. Rutan. His staff was composed of members of the Atlanta Wheelmen, Elizabeth Wheelmen, Crescent Wheelmen of Plainfield, and the Passaic Athletic Club. The color bearer was John McClelland of the Montclair Wheelmen, and William Garrebrant was bugler. A wagon containing a brass band followed these officials, and after them came the clubs in four divisions. The Crescent Wheelmen were in the first division.

Lehigh Valley Lease Dissolved.



FINALLY the lease of the Lehigh Valley Railroad to the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad has been solved by the Directors of the former corporation. The action was taken because the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company failed to pay $992,736.62 for coal purchased from the Lehigh Valley Coal Company prior to the Reading receivership, and which default violated the lease. The Lehigh Valley Road then instituted the United States Circuit Court to abrogate the lease, and the Reading receivers asserting, Judge Dallas ordered the separation. The latter also appointed John Lowber Welsh to succeed Elisha P. Wilbur as a Reading receiver. Mr. Wilbur is resigning because of alleged ill health. Mr. Wilbur will probably soon retire from the Reading Board of Managers, but will retain the Presidency of the Lehigh Valley.

Base Ball.

The Crescents started on their trip yesterday morning and played their first game at Pourkeepsie, winning by the following score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Crescents.	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	2	3	6

On the Crescent Oval yesterday was played one of the best games of the season. It was between the Arlingtons and Gorhams, both of this city. Both teams played a fine batting game. But the Arlingtons excelled at the bat. The Arlingtons played under odds. Three of their best players failing to appear. The feature of the game was the pitching of the Arlington's pitcher, who held the Gorhams down to three hits and struck out seven of them. The score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R	H	E
Arlingtons	1	1	3	0	2	1	0	8	9	4
Gorhams	0	1	0	4	0	0	2	7	4	6

Outgrown Their Church.

The corner-stone of a handsome new Reformed Dutch church was laid yesterday afternoon, at Raritan, in the presence of a large concourse of people and with impressive ceremonies.

The new church will be the finest in the town. It is of the Italian gothic style, with a stone front and the side walls of brick. It will be 52 feet wide and 117 feet long, with a large square tower of stone on the right-hand corner 100 feet high and a smaller octagonal tower on the left. The interior will be handsome. The main audience room will be connected and open to the amphitheatre style, with an organ behind the pulpit. There will be a chapel and prayer meeting rooms.

It was designed by Architect Oscar S. Teale, of this city.

The New Law Firm at Work.

Among other matters brought before the Orphans' Court, at Elizabeth, this morning, was the petition of Charlotte Park, administratrix of Marcellus M. Park, deceased, for an order to sell his lands to pay debts. Jackson & Anglemen of this city represented the petitioner and the court granted the order.

"Letter Carriers' Beat."

The letter carriers' settee has been painted and lettered by the "two Ikies" in an artistic manner. Lengthwise of the ties are the words "Letter Carriers' Rest." On one end of the ties is "Ikie No. 1," while on the other "Ikie No. 2" is painted.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Congress Likely to Adjourn Until Monday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. (Special.)—Both House and Senate will probably adjourn at the close of to day's session until Monday for a breathing spell, and to make some further efforts to determine "where they are at" by caucusing and private consultation.

VETERANS TO MEET.

Annual Re-Union of the 13th N. J. Vols.

The annual re-union of the 13th N. J. Vols. will be held on Antietam battlefield, on September 20th. A special train will leave Broad street station, Newark, at eight a. m., Monday, Sept. 18th, going to Baltimore, thence to Gettysburg, where a camp fire will be held in the Court House. The party will remain at Gettysburg until four p. m., of the 19th, to give an opportunity to visit the battlefield. From there they will go by the route followed by the Rebel Army in retreat, stopping at Fen Marr to view the wonderful scene afforded from this point of twenty-five square miles of Cumberland Valley, arriving at Hagerstown in time for supper. At eight o'clock the next morning the veterans will go to Antietam station, on the battle-field, and there hold their annual re-union.

Buried Alive, but Rescued.

Part of the excavation under the General Railroad tracks on Broad street, at Elizabeth, caved in yesterday while a gang of Hungarian laborers was at work in the hole. Two of them were buried out of sight, but in a few minutes their comrades had cleared away the dirt from the men's heads so that they could breathe and they were soon afterward extricated.

John Venter was badly bruised about the body and his leg was fractured in two places. He was removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital. Antonio sustained a body bruise and a slight scalp wound, but was well enough to go to his home.

The Board of Registry Organized.

The Somerset County Board of Registration met for organization at the Court House, Somerville, on Wednesday. Mr. Elisha Corieil of North Plainfield having declined a reappointment, ex-Assemblyman J. Vetterlein was selected to fill the vacancy. Mr. C. H. Bateman is also a new appointee. Mr. William H. Long was elected chairman and Mr. J. H. Mathison was chosen secretary.

The Weather.

On Friday fair, slightly warmer will prevail on the seaboard, with greater humidity and fresh southerly winds, followed by local thunder storms in the western and possibly in the eastern districts of this section, and on Saturday fair to partly cloudy and very sultry weather, with slight temperature changes, followed by local thunder storms on the coasts.

Tin-Plate Strikers Victorious.

The strike at the Morewood Tin Plate Works, Elizabethport, has been successful and the men will resume work to-morrow. The firm has conceded their demand for an increase of wages. The strikers were getting from $10 to $11 a week and wanted $13. Eighty men in all were rendered idle by the strike. The plant has been idle since Monday noon.

Knights of Pythias Field Day.

This year the Knights of Pythias will hold their annual field day at Freehold on September 4th, Labor Day.

The various divisions of the Uniformed Rank will compete in drill for prizes.

DEATHS.

BLAKE.—In this city Wednesday, August 9th, 1893, Elsie Florence, daughter of George C. and Mary Blume aged 9 months 19 days.

Funeral services from the residence of her parents, 301 Watchung avenue, Friday, August 11th at 2.30 p. m. E.

WORTH KNOWING.

Some Facts in Connection with the "Royal Blue Line" of Interest to Travelers.

Among the finest cars ever placed in railroad service in this country are the Royal Blue cars, which run on the line of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington line running over the Baltimore & Ohio, Philadelphia & Reading and Jersey Central Railways.

These cars are as handsome as the ordinary parlor car, and are fitted with a spacious smoking room. The couches were built by the different companies for the Pullman Palace Car Company, and the entire train of baggage cars, day coaches, parlor and sleeping cars and dining cars is fitted with the Pullman anti-telescoping platforms. Allen paper wheels and the Safety Car Heating and Lighting Company's standard system of steam heating.

These are improvements which are appreciated even by the lay traveler in the general way of increased comfort in riding, the vestibule attachment doing away with all lateral motion of the train, and the heavy springs making the movement an easy, rhythmical one. The interior of these cars are, moreover, everything they should be to please the eye, being finished in mahogany, with plush trimmings and window curtains and other decorations in keeping. Each car also has also a toilet room supplied with every convenience. A porter, in addition to the Pullman porter on each sleeping car porter, accompanies each train.

The speed at which these trains are run is in keeping with their high grade of construction, the journey between New York and Washington on two of them being made in four hours.

The remarkable part of the service is, that one has all the conveniences and comfort of traveling in a style that ordinarily costs an additional $5 extra. It is a startling illustration of the advancement in railroading in the last few years, and forms a fine example of the principle of progressive railroad management—the best that can be offered at the lowest possible rate.

That the enterprise of the several railroad companies concerned is appreciated by the traveling public is evidenced by the immense and constantly increasing patronage this service already enjoys.

New Jersey's Buried Forests.

[From the Pittsburg Dispatch.]

A piece of contemporary geology is being worked in New Jersey. The whole coast line has been long sinking and the process is still going on. A curious industry is carried on in the southern part of the State—the mining for cedar. Some of these noble trees exhumed from the marsh have been found three feet in diameter, with the timber perfectly sound. The "lay" of these uprooted trees, according to the American naturalist, indicates the devastation, probably, of extraordinary cyclones, occurring at intervals of many centuries while even one forest upon another that had been thrown down long before. The cedars growing there to-day send their roots among their long-buried ancestors. The stumps upon the exhumed trees show a growth of 1,500 or possibly 2,000 years, and the existence of at least two buried forests below the present growth is indisputable.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Stream Returning to Its Source.

Since the year 1607 the march of labor has been westward in America. An army of new arrivals has swept steadily across the continent, farther and farther into western wilds and unexhausted lands. Now for the first time in our history the tide is reversed. An army of labor is marching from the west eastward, in hope of securing work and food. It is one of the most pathetic and impressive spectacles witnessed in this country in a generation. In freight trains, in box cars, they come, unemployed miners and workingmen from the silver states. At stations where they stop the railroad company that forwards them gratuitously sometimes feeds them, at other times generous private citizens do so and again city authorities. At Sedalia, Mo., the people with characteristic American big heartedness fed one regiment of the returning army on bologna sausage, ice water and bread. That they did not have cholera after this feast shows a very good state of health indeed in the United States.

The American people east and west have their hands full in feeding the unemployed and their families this summer. In various instances generous private individuals have given up their own summer pleasures, even a trip to the World's fair, in order to help the hungry. It is right, and fortunate is a country where those who have food share it so bountifully with those who have not. It will be a strong pull and a long one to provide all those who are out of work with employment in the fall. That part of the country has at all times more laborers than it needs in most lines of industry. Still the effort must be made; the responsibility met. Good times will speedily return in spite of croakers and speculators. Factories will reopen, shops will rekindle their fires, and at cost of some actual suffering and many a heartache and disappointment the army of workmen that migrated the wrong way will be absorbed into the employed ranks.

The worst feature of the exodus and of the shutting down of industries will be the creation of a host of tramps. Too many of the unemployed, having had a taste of being supported without work, may make up their minds to continue that kind of life. There were men who never did a stroke of labor after the Ohio river flood in 1884 because they were supported by charity for some time following that disaster.

Local Historic Days.

Detroit lately celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of its founding in an appropriate way. The day will hereafter be observed in Detroit under the name of Cadillac day, Cadillac, a Frenchman, being the first man who settled there.

The example of Detroit should be imitated in respect to local historic celebrations. We have not so many holidays nor so many local historic records in America that we can afford to lose sight of one of them. Every city and town, every country neighborhood, should collect before it is too late all the data pertaining to that spot and preserve it carefully. The anniversary of the first settlement of a place, of the laying out of the town site or of events connected with Indian war and tragedy should annually be made the occasion of a historic celebration which will arouse all the local pride and patriotism.

School children need to be familiar with the courage and devotion of the pioneers who made all the present civilization possible. It makes youth brave and persevering to hear of gallant deeds of those gone before. These local historic celebrations should be attended with music, feasts, recitations and the reading of appropriate papers. The occasion might also be nobly utilized to awaken a desire to improve and beautify the neighborhood. If only our country roads and town streets were good, our weeds were cut and ditches and commencement parks, if malarial swamps were turned into picturesque lakes, America would be the most attractive country in the world.

Ex-Vice President Levi P. Morton may be assured of the sympathy of the country in the recent loss through fire of his great barn and 98 of the finest Guernsey cattle in the world. Nine thousand and 9,000 fowls were also consumed. Breeding Guernseys has been Mr. Morton's pet fad. A few of his cows were in the dairy test at the World's fair. But all the rest, except eight, were pastured in the barn. The herd was valued at $75,000." The fire was either incendiary or was caused from a tramp's pipe, it is supposed. The being who would deliberately roast to death dumb animals is not human. He is a monster. Mr. Morton was a rich man, it is true, and that may have been an offense in the eyes of certain present day philosophers, but the person does not live who charges that he ever got a dollar otherwise than in the line of honorable business. Moreover, his hand was ever open to the needy.

There may be some who remember even now, short lived as gratitude is, that during the last Irish famine he fitted out at his own expense and sent to Ireland a shipload of food without making any fuss about it. A strange coincidence is his that lost him a year and a half ago Mr. Morton's farmer cattle barn was struck by lightning and burned to the ground on the very site on which the present one was built.

NOT ALL FOES OF SILVER

Friends of the White Metal Will Force a Compromise.

SENATE DROPS IT FOR THE WEEK.

Democratic Senators Fail to Agree on a Line of Action, but Will Try Another Caucus—Congressman Catchings Has a Neat Closure Device.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Up to this morning little had been done toward repealing the Sherman law, but much is expected to day. Both houses are in session.

The silver question has been given by the Democratic senators into the hands of a committee. There was a long and vigorous discussion whether the appointment of a special committee would not appear as a reflection upon the finance committee. The members of the latter committee insisted that they should have jurisdiction of the subject. There was a general sentiment on the other hand in favor of placing the matter in the hands of a special committee, and that idea finally prevailed.

The discussion developed a decided opposition to the unconditional repeal of the Sherman law, and a large majority of those present insisted that the pledges of the party's national platform should be carried out. Bimetallism was generally advocated as against the unconditional repeal.

There was a disposition to deal promptly with the subject on that basis, and Senator Gorman was authorized to name the committee to conduct negotiations for a compromise on the general question. The committee consists of Senators Gorman, Voorhees, Ransom, Gray and Blackburn.

The Free Silver Resolutions.

The free silver convention in the hall of the house adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That we will support a bill repealing the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, and concurrently providing for the free and unlimited coinage of silver with full legal tender quality, on such a ratio as will provide and maintain the parity between gold and silver, as it now exists.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed by the chairman of this conference to draft and introduce such a bill and take prompt steps to secure the full and free discussion and consideration thereof, and a vote of the house upon the bill and all proposed amendments.

The committee provided for in the resolution was named as follows: Messrs. Bland, Sibley, Boatner, Lane, Bankhead, Bryan and Bailey. Mr. Culberson, chairman of the committee, was afterward added to the committee.

In the course of the session Mr. Bland presented the terms of the proposition made to him by Mr. Bourke Cockran on behalf of the antisilverites for an immediate discussion of the free silver question. This proposition, it is understood, included limitation of the time within which a vote should be taken, the number of amendments to be offered, the measure introduced for discussion and the manner of disposing of them, etc. It could be made effective only at once by the consent of the silver men, and that they might have an opportunity to consider it was one of the principal reasons for holding the session.

Every one who talked about the proceedings avoided any mention of the views of the members upon this subject, but the tenor of them may be fairly judged by the language of the resolution adopted and that of Mr. Bland. The inference seems to be that the proposition of the antisilver men was not acceptable to the advocates of free coinage and that for the present, at least, there will be no "general consent" arrangements for directing the discussion of the bill to repeal the Sherman law.

The Democratic Caucus.

The caucus of Democratic senators adjourned after a session of about two hours, without reaching any conclusion as to a line of policy.

There was a strong difference of opinion respecting the silver question, and the caucus adjourned to meet again in a few days. Meanwhile the subject of silver repeal will not figure in the senate, for the purpose is to adjourn from today till Monday.

Immediately after adjournment of the caucus Mr. Gorman repaired to the room of the committee on appropriations and called into consultation Senators Blackburn, Gray, Ransom and Voorhees. Senator Cockrell was invited to remain in the room. All of these senators, with the exception of Senator Gray, were members of the Democratic caucus committee of the last session, and although Mr. Gorman has not made his appointments at the time of the consultation their presence gave color to the expectation that they would be named as members of the caucus committee.

The senate was in session only 20 minutes, and a considerable part of that time was occupied by the chaplain in an eloquent eulogy of the late Senator Stanford of California. The only item of business transacted was the reference to the committee on appropriations of the house joint resolution to provide for the payment of sessional employees of the two houses during the present extraordinary session. A motion to adjourn was made by Mr. Gorman of Maryland, the parliamentary leader of the majority, and Mr. Platt of Connecticut, in the like role for the minority, demanded the yeas and nays.

All the Democratic senators voted for adjournment and were re-enforced by all the senators from the silver producing states. The negative vote was given by Republicans. The result was: Yeas, 46; nays, 31, and the motion was agreed to.

It was expected that under the terms of the resolution adopted by the house Speaker Crisp will today announce the committee on mileage and Mills, mileage and accounts. There is no reason to apprehend a change in the composition of the committee on rules as it existed in the fifty-second congress, although so far as known no expression of the speaker's intentions has been made.

Regarding the rules for the fifty-third congress Representative Catchings said that in his opinion the provision in the rules of the fifty-second congress sufficiently provided for closure.

"At any time," said he, "when the house feels that it has had enough discussion of a question it may order the committee on rules to bring in an order to proceed to a vote at a fixed time, and when that order is adopted it becomes effective. I consider it a very good one, and would put any arbitrary power in the hands of the speaker or of the committee on rules, but leaves the house to determine when it will close consideration of a subject."

Howard on Cockran.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Herald's correspondent in Washington says: "Free coinage Democrats are much incensed at the action of Bourke Cockran in calling a meeting of the Democratic members of the house of representatives to meet in the committee room of the committee on rules this morning to consider the silver question. Cockran's action was taken without consulting any of the free coinage men, and it is said that he has not even seen the president in the interests of the meeting. Further than that, although it may suit the purpose of the opponents of Mr. Crokes and Mr. Murphy to insist that the press bear its editor in person or by accredited agents making a fight against them and therefore against Tammany Hall, down to date the fact is that no such idea has been entertained by Mr. Cleveland."

Cleveland Soon to Leave.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Press prints this statement from its Washington correspondent: "The outlook here for the prompt action on the silver question which President Cleveland seems to desire to by no means as encouraging as some of the dispatches from Washington would indicate. Within two days, your correspondent is reliably informed, Mr. Cleveland will return to Buzzard's Bay, and no matter how important the reason that takes him there the effect will be a tendency to disorganize matters. Those who have carefully watched the situation from the inside are of the opinion that it will be almost impossible for him to hold his party together for any concerted action on the financial issue.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New Jersey—Alden, Edward Kohler; Basking Ridge, J. E. Buck; Fairview, P. D. Wragg; Harlingen, A. S. Dixon; Rocky Hill, A. T. Voorhees.

New York—Barnard's Crossing, C. H. Bunker; Belleville, H. S. Green; Forestville, A. W. Hull; Freedom, A. Gleason; Greenville, J. A. Lesser; Kinney's Four Corners, A. A. Eaton; Lake View, Peter Smith; Lawrence, J. W. Ball; Thousand Island Park, E. J. Gardner; Wrightstown, Richard Hakes.

Pennsylvania—East Prospect, E. J. Sitler; Farmers' Valley, Kendall Tyler; Fawn Grove, E. F. Webb; Lewisberry, L. S. Reiff; Depot, J. M. Teitsdorfer; Marysville, S. S. Lefler; Tilden, I. C. Marks.

PUSHING CORDAGE MEN.

Officers of the Trust Summoned to Appear in Police Court.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Police Justice Grady issued summonses against J. M. Waterbury, E. M. Fulton, Sr., G. Weaver Lopez and P. T. Wall to appear in the Jefferson Market court at 10 o'clock next Monday morning to answer to charges of perjury and violation of the statutes relating to corporations. The four persons against whom these charges are made were officers and large stockholders of the National Cordage company. These criminal proceedings were instituted by E. B. Balch, a stockholder of the company, who is also connected with the John Good Cordage and Machine company.

In consideration of the social and business positions of the four persons named, Mr. Purdy requested the justice to issue summonses instead of warrants of arrest.

The complainant, E. B. Balch, recites that during the year beginning October, 1892, the books of the National Cordage company show that a dividend of $1,406,212.67 was declared on the capital stock of the company and that a surplus of $166,413 was carried over. Mr. Balch alleges that the dividend had not been earned for that period. Upon that allegation the charge of misdemeanor is based, and as the financial statement which showed an earned dividend was sworn to the charge of perjury follows.

Saved the State's Money.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Just before the Madison Square bank suspended the state treasurer managed to draw a check for $200,000 of the state's money. The check reached the clearing house before the bank Nicholas bank had served the notice that it would no longer clear for the Madison Square bank. The $200,000 was accepted by it, and thus the funds of the state were entirely out of jeopardy.

The suspended Madison Square bank will probably go into the hands of a receiver within a few days, although President Blunt and several of the directors and depositors expressed their belief that the institution would resume business without much delay.

The Flurry In Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 10.—After the suspension of the First National bank of this city the directors of the Fourth National bank held a meeting, those present representing several millions of property, and signed a guarantee pledging themselves, their individual estates, to the payment of all deposits. The directors of the City Savings bank held a meeting and unanimously decided to close the doors for 30 days. The suspension is caused by the stringency of the money market. The bank is considered solvent.

Two Millions In Western Mortgages.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—William F. Ide, Minn., has been appointed receiver of the Hamilton Loan and Trust company at 156 Broadway. He is the second vice president of the company. The company has loaned, it is said, over $2,000,000 on western farms and had a paid in capital of $600,000. The liabilities outside of capital stock are said to amount to over $700,000 in bonds, first mortgages, accrued interest, etc.

No Money For Firemen.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 10.—The city treasurer of Brooklyn was notified that owing to the motion to adjourn by Mr. Gorman of Maryland, the parliamentary leader of the majority, and Mr. Platt of Connecticut, in the like role for the minority, demanded the yeas and nays.

REPUDIATE CLEVELAND.

Ohio Democrats Roundly Denounce the Message.

THEY ARE ALL FOR FREE SILVER.

The State Convention Opens With a Confusion of Candidates—Neal Alone May Be Will Stand by the Chicago Platform. Baker Enters the Fight.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 10.—The Democratic state convention was formally opened in Music hall this morning, and thousands of Democrats are now hard at work on the preliminaries which will lead to the choosing of a standard bearer for the fall campaign.

Hon. C. D. Crites of Lima, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, in calling the convention to order thanked the local committees and the citizens generally of Cincinnati, irrespective of party, for the complete arrangements that had insured the convenience and accommodation of the convention, and urged the delegates to go forth after their work was done with vigilance and determination to do battle with the common enemy until the polls are closed in November, when victory would be complete. Continuing, he said:

Mr. Crites' Speech.

About two months ago there was held in the capital city of this state a ratification meeting over the nomination of Grover Cleveland, backed by an equal number of sturdy Americans and surrounded by thousands of the rank and file of the Democracy of this district and county of the state, all united and enthusiastic for party success. We regret the necessity arising from the present financial crisis of Democrats high in the councils of the party, and instead of assisting in relieving their situation, were anxious and clamoring to be with us.

Duty to the country compels their presence at Washington, where they are engaged in what, let us hope, may prove a successful effort to relieve the ills of Shermanism and McKinleyism in particular and of Republicanism in general, which are so oppressive to the people and threaten the life of the country today. While the so called "Little Napoleon" is there, meeting his final Waterloo in the arena of national politics, he is not the only Napoleon of Ohio a dead blot by placing in the pit with him today one of our proud Democratic rosters with nobler aspirations, who shall drive him completely from the Buckeye roost upon which for nearly two years he has so gracefully perched, over which he has so defiantly crowed and all of which he has so basely polluted.

Fortunately we may rely upon the intelligence and fidelity of these 800 tried and true delegates, directly representing the Democracy of the 88 counties of Ohio, to the business of this convention. I bespeak for your deliberations prudence and harmony and a platform and candidates that will command not only to your credit, but to that of the 400,000 loyal Democrats who sent you here.

Hon. Gilbert H. Bettger of Columbus acted as temporary chairman and Hon. Walter Thiene of Cleveland as temporary secretary. B. W. Layton of Wapakoneta was the sergeant at arms.

Following the address of Mr. Crites, Chairman Bargar said a few words to the convention and then the report of the committee on credentials was read.

The talk of the morning has been the action of the committee on resolutions. It remained in session until 12 minutes after midnight. The roll of the 88 districts were called, and each member responded with his views on the silver question. With two exceptions the report of President Cleveland was condemned, and the opinion was expressed that the platform should declare for free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1. Finally it was decided to report to the platform to a committee, with instructions to report today. The entire committee is free coinage in sentiment.

The Situation Cloudy.

The situation this morning is as mixed and as unfathomable as it was 24 hours ago.

As John J. Lentz, the Columbus politician and himself a leading dark horse for the gubernatorial nomination, puts it, "The situation is unparalleled and indescribable." The most and in fact the only important development was the propulsion into the race for governorship of the head of the ticket—Charles W. Baker of this city. This was brought about as a result of a conference held at the St. Nicholas, convened by E. W. Hughes, ex-consul to Birmingham and one of ex-Governor Campbell's chief lieutenants, and participated in by half a score of delegates from as many districts.

To this conference Mr. Baker was summoned, and when the gathering broke up the announcement was made that Baker had been entered in the lists and might be regarded as the administration candidate for the nomination. Headquarters were at once opened at the Gibson House, adjoining those occupied by Candidate Neal, and the word went around that the prospective nominee of the convention was ready and willing to welcome his supporters.

Neal himself says that he does not know how large a vote he will poll, and this is also taken as a sign of weakness by his enemies. This is his third attempt to become governor of Ohio, and the Campbell men assert that by the time knows perfectly well where his strength lies, and that if he had 405 votes assured he would lose no time in claiming them with a loud voice.

Dayton Draws Out.

John A. McMahon of Dayton, who was mentioned for the nomination and who had quite a following, has kicked the goal out of his own balloon by declaring that he would not take the nomination if it were tendered him by both parties. Then Mr. McMahon, after declaring this, hastened over to the St. Nicholas hotel and locked himself in a room with the anti Neal people.

The selection of Baker to lead the Campbell side of the convention has hurt Neal somewhat in Hamilton county.

Neal has declared that he will abide by the Chicago platform, and his followers are Democrats of the unterrified stamp, who will stick to him as long as there is a show of his being nominated. On the other hand the Campbell men make no denial of the fact that they are with the administration and that they are out to beat Neal, and to beat him with any man who can be made available.

Campbell will not be a candidate, and if he has any game he is playing himself by the set of some enthusiastic followers it will be instantly withdrawn. Colonel Joseph Hughes of Hamilton, who is looking after the Campbell side of the fight, is carrying in his pocket an autograph letter from Campbell, in which that gentleman states that he will not take the nomination.

THE SHANN TRIAL.

The Boarder Did Not Hear the Three Mysterious Men.

TRENTON, Aug. 10.—In the continuation of the trial of Mrs. Shann, charged with poisoning her son, William Beatty, who boarded with the Shanns when John died, testified that he heard no noises of any kind in the house during the night that it is said the dead man's body was violated. He was awake about 5 o'clock that morning. It being customary with him to awake and remain so for a few minutes every night. He heard no bell ring and no footsteps in the house. Samuel Astley was another boarder who testified that he heard no noise of any kind in the house that night, except some one going either up or down stairs in the neighborhood of 4 o'clock in the morning.

Howard M. Gough of Port Richmond, S. I., a life insurance inspector of the Manhattan company, testified that when he first visited the Shann home after John's death his mother refused to allow him to see the remains after the mutilation of the body. However, when he went again, with County Physician Cantwell and Coroner Contier, he was permitted to view it. There was a large wound in the abdomen, and the eyes were missing.

Frank C. Borden, another life insurance agent, acknowledged that he gave Mrs. Shann a tip that his company intended to investigate John's death. He sent her a note the night after John died telling her she had better have a lawyer there next morning if she had none yet engaged. The missive contained a postscript saying, "Burn this note."

The wife and son of the witness testified that they called upon Mrs. Shann the same night, and that after expressed surprise that an autopsy was thought of. Mrs. Shann was perfectly cool and said she intended to send to Trenton for a lawyer.

Mrs. Eliza Bisbee, an aged lady living in New Brunswick, testified that she was at the Shann home the night John's body was mutilated. She slept in the front parlor with one of Mrs. Shann's daughters and heard noises in the hall during the night as though some men were walking on the stairs. Court adjourned at this point for the day.

THE CHOLERA SUSPECTS.

No New Cases Among the Passengers Held at New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Health Officer Jenkins' report from Quarantine concerning the cholera suspects on Swinburne island reads:

"There are no new cases to report. The situation is about the same. The two patients at Swinburne Island hospital continue to improve. The disinfection of the baggage of the passengers of the Massilia is nearly complete."

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 10.—The official cholera returns for the past week are as follows: Podolia, 200 new cases, 126 deaths; Don, 106 new cases, 40 deaths; Mursk, 69 new cases, 37 deaths; Kief, 56 new cases, 28 deaths; Bessarabia, 17 new cases, 8 deaths; Moscow city, 121 new cases, 45 deaths.

NAPLES, Aug. 10.—During the last 24 hours there were nine deaths from cholera in this city.

Yellow Fever at Pensacola.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Aug. 10.—The Escambia county board of health has issued the following official paper:

The board of health regrets to announce that two deaths have occurred in this city—those of Rev. F. C. Waite and Ellen Wood—both pronounced yellow fever. The premises have been isolated, bedding and clothing destroyed and all necessary precautions taken to prevent the spread of the fever. The public will be notified immediately if any new cases develop, and at present we see no cause for undue alarm.

This created almost a panic, and at least 1,500 people will leave the city today.

Italy Will Use Bronze Money.

ROME, Aug. 10.—There is a great scarcity of small silver in Italy, owing to the rise in the rate of exchange. Merchants use lira notes and postage stamps. With a view of remedying this evil Signor Gavazzi, minister of finance, has ordered the issue of bronze coins to the amount of $2,000,000 and of one lira notes to the amount of $6,000,000.

Texas Is Alarmed.

HOUSTON, Aug. 10.—The greatest alarm and anxiety is manifested in Texas, which produces such an enormous percentage of the cotton crop of the world. Every industry is dependent on its movement. Railways are cutting down forces, currency is selling at a premium of 8@8 on $1,000, and money to handle the crop is impossible to obtain.

Attempted Suicide While Abroad.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Jane Metier of Boston attempted to commit suicide by the river Mersey. She was a passenger on a ferryboat, and when the boat was in midstream she jumped overboard. When rescued she was insensible. Her condition is critical. Mrs. Metier recently lost a child, and its death affected her deeply.

Another Maharajah Arrives.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Another East Indian prince arrived in this city on his way to the World's fair. His card gives his name and title of Maharajah Sir Wm. Sir Thokore, sameh o. Morvi. With him is his son, his highness, the Prince Lukdirji. Colonel Humphrey of the British army is with them.

The Utes Are Troublesome.

DURANGO, Col., Aug. 10.—The Utes are leaving their reservation in large numbers and becoming troublesome. Two tribes mounted have left here in pursuit, and the authorities will at once make efforts to get the Indians back on the reservation. The military may be called out.

Smallpox in a Crowded Jail.

READING, Pa., Aug. 10.—Considerable excitement was created here by the announcement that two cases of smallpox had been discovered in the Berks county jail. The institution is crowded with prisoners. The victims will be removed to the hospital.

Convicts With Nitroglycerin.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 10.—The convicts made another daring attempt to blow up the penitentiary with nitroglycerin, but were foiled by the timely discovery of Warden Norman.

Surgeons Operated on Mr. Mackay.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—A successful operation was performed on Mr. John W. Mackay, the millionaire Californian, for the removal of a vermiform appendix.

Death of Admiral Jenkins.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Rear Admiral Thornton A. Jenkins died at his residence in this city of heart failure, aged 81 years.

World's Fair Attendance.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—The number of admissions to the World's fair Wednesday was 108,536.

ENGLAND HAS A SCHEME

She Would Like This Country to Keep on Buying Silver.

DOES NOT WANT TO SEE REPEAL

India Wants to Back Out of Her Position, but Wishes the United States to Keep on Shouldering the Load—Bankers Have Do Not Take to the Scheme.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Sun says today: Several exceedingly interesting cablegrams from London were received in Wall street yesterday. They were not made public, nor are they ever likely to be. They were sent by London banking houses of the highest repute to their correspondents here and were as confidential as they were important. Their purposes would not be clearly set forth by reproducing them, even if it were possible to do so. Hence it is more expedient to give their substance and bearing.

On the strength of the information conveyed and inquiries made by these London bankers it can be stated that the English government has become alarmed at the prospects of the repeal of the Sherman silver law.

The members of the cabinet are discussing, possibly informally, the advisability of making a proposition to the United States that if it will continue the purchase of silver under the act of 1890 the Indian government will reopen its mints to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 24 to 1.

Why They Send Us Gold.

It is understood that the government has been induced to sound official and financial sentiment in this country relative to such a proposition by a number of circumstances. Chief among these is the rapid withdrawal of gold from the Bank of England and other sources of supply for shipment to the United States.

It is recognized abroad that this movement, which is to a large extent natural—that is, based upon the shifting of the balance of trade, is stimulated by the premium which gold now commands here as currency, and which is very much larger than the premium paid by Austria and other Europeans powers to stimulate exports of gold from the United States when the balance of trade was in favor of Europe.

Another factor, it is said, in the dissatisfaction of English manufacturers and of bankers and merchants in India with the decision of the Indian government, which is really an agent of Great Britain, to close the mints of India to the free coinage of silver.

The government, it is said, wishes to retreat from the step it has taken, and at the same time desires to induce the United States to continue the burden it has borne in the past by purchasing silver bullion.

It is not impossible that early publication of the plan which the British cabinet has under consideration may prevent its formal promulgation. That, however, will not obliterate the fact that the proposition referred to above has been considered up to a point that renders it advisable to ascertain the sentiment in certain influential circles here.

Bankers who were advised of the inquiries made yesterday, and they were comparatively few and of the highest rank, were surprised at their character. At the same time they regarded the policy indicated with great complacency. The point was made that, for the first time since the silver question had become a vital one and of international importance, Great Britain had, indirectly or covertly, suggested a ratio. Of course the inferiority of the suggestion was promptly detected, for it relates to the finances of one of Great Britain's dependencies, and not directly to its own financial affairs.

Treats Us With Contempt.

In other words the suggestion actually puts the United States in the same category as India. This country is by inference that admits of no doubt treated as a minor monetary power. It is hardly necessary to add that the inquiries cabled here, presumably at the instance of the English government, did not elicit expressions favorable to the making of overtures upon the basis suggested in the cablegrams.

The substance of these dispatches was communicated last night to certain officials at Washington with the purpose of eliciting their views.

Upon one point it is entirely probable that Washington will entertain, even if it does not express, the same view that was expressed here yesterday, namely, that the suggestion is unmistakable evidence of weakness on the part of Great Britain.

Bankers familiar with the subject said yesterday that it was quite conceivable that overtures of the character indicated would be encouraged. They also agreed that the significant suggestion of a new ratio by Great Britain, even for one of its colonies, should not be underestimated.

Dr. Gui Treated Himself and Died.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Dr. Wing Gui, the best known Chinese medicine man in this city, died in his room at 12 Pell street without medical attendance. He had been sick for nearly six months, and though his friends brought several physicians to his room he refused to take any of their medicine and insisted on treating himself.

Gaining With a Broken Neck.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 10.—The physicians at the Homeopathic hospital were surprised to find that there was a slight improvement in the condition of Henry Richardson, whose neck was broken while he was bathing at Bath Beach on Sunday.

Another Stock Speculator Kills Himself.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—B. M. Crownley, residing at 99 Walton place, committed suicide by asphyxiation. Crownley had been very despondent of late owing to unsuccessful speculation on the board of trade.

Naval Orders Dined.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Earl Spencer, first lord of the admiralty, gave a dinner in honor of Admiral Gherardi and Captain Mahan of the United States cruiser Chicago, which is now at Portsmouth.

Leave to Purchase Forbidden.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—Joe Lannon, the boxer, announces that he is through with pugilism. He is a candidate for the common council from South Boston.

County Records Burned.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 10.—The Worth county courthouse at Isabella was fired, and all the county records except those contained in two books were burned.

Socialist Congress Advocates Right Hours.

ZURICH, Aug. 10.—The international socialist congress approved the establishment of an eight hour working day.

A Thousand Lynchers After Him.

JOLIET, Ills., Aug. 10.—Ernest Lacore, the murderer of Nellie Byron, was secretly removed from the county jail here to the Illinois state prison. The sheriff had to smuggle the man to Wilmington to keep him from lynchers. It was reported that 1,000 men were coming here to lynch him. To prevent this the sheriff secured the prisoner to the penitentiary for safe keeping. He was a farm hand. He confessed everything to the state's attorney, saying he murdered the child Sunday evening about 5:30 o'clock by breaking her neck between his hands, after having ravished her.

Saved Her Sister, but Was Drowned.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Miss Anna Thurston, aged 17, risked and lost her life to save that of her younger sister in the sound at Huntington, L. I. The sister was saved through her efforts, but in keeping her self afloat Miss Thurston exhausted herself, and borne down by the weight of the child she sank when help was close at hand. Miss Thurston was one of the best beloved young ladies of the village. Her father, William Thurston, is one of the wealthiest residents of Huntington.

Meredith Examined.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 10.—The testimony given by Edward Meredith, who a few years ago shot Phil Daly, the gambler, was in reference to his sanity, habeas corpus proceedings having been commenced involving the question and looking to his being taken from the Matteawan insane asylum back to Sing Sing prison.

The Popular Blouse.

Was there ever such a variety of shirts or blouses and such diversity of color in the same? Some examples are: A lilac blouse with green frills, a green one with black, a lemon with blue and pink introduced, a pink with deliciate blue and green, etc. All have large sleeves, most of them drawn tucks, falling in a cape at side, and the generality with folded waistbands, finished off with an erratic bow, either at the front or back, which is always navy and outstanding from its parent band.

A Plain Gown Made Dressy.

It is often most convenient to have an economical method of converting a plain gown into a dressy one, and an empire overall would effect this exactly and produce a variety of costumes with any colored skirt worn beneath. It is made of alternate rows of black ribbon velvet and black lace, starts from the height of a low bodice to the feet and is intended to be slipped over any gown.

Black Satin.

Black satin is certainly a becoming material, and for the moment fashionable, both for young and old. An admirable dress for an elderly woman is a black satin puffed with white, opening on either side to discover a pretty net panel worked with white, yellow and red beads—a couple of small flounces at the foot.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

THE ÆOLIAN HARP.

An Interesting Instrument Which Produces Curious Effects.

The æolian harp is a musical instrument which is set in action by the wind. It is not very well known, but is very curious and is supposed to have been invented by Father Kircher, the Jesuit savant who lived in the seventeenth century and invented many ingenious machines. But the fact of the spontaneous resonance of certain musical instruments when exposed to a current of air had struck the observers of nature in times of remotest antiquity. One of the Talmuds says that the harp of David sounded when the north wind blew on it, and it has been suggested that he had an æolian, as we understand it.

The æolian harps in the old castle of Baden Baden, and those in the four turrets of Strasburg cathedral are celebrated. These are all made of strings stretched over a sounding box and require tuning to keep them in harmony. They are also large and cumbrous and have a limited number of strings, which make the music more or less monotonous, and they are dependent on the wind from one direction only. The changes of temperature and dampness of the atmosphere make them constantly out of tune and indeed often cause the strings to break. These difficulties and drawbacks have hitherto prevented the æolian harp from being as well known and popular as such an interesting and curious instrument deserves to be, but the latest development s tend to overcome these difficulties.

The principle of an æolian harp may be familiarly shown on a large scale by the action of telegraph wires stretched from one pole to another. On a windy day there will be found to exist musical tones, rising and falling in proportion to the strength of the wind and the tension of the wires.

Hector Berlioz, in his "Voyage Musicale en Italie," has given the following curious effects that an æolian harp produced upon his lively and impassioned imagination: "On one of these gloomy days that sadden the end of the year listen while reading Ossian to the fantastic harmony of an æolian harp swinging at the top of a tree deprived of verdure, and I defy you not to experience a profound feeling of sadness and of abandon and a vague and infinite desire for another existence." Chateaubriand, in "Les Natchez," compares its sounds to "magic concerts that the celestial vaults resound." An English physician—Dr. J. M. Cox—asserts that lunatics have sometimes been instantly calmed by the sweet and varied music of an æolian harp. Other observers declare that æolian sounds will produce sleep.

The Invention of Matches.

Previous to 1829 the matches in use consisted of a slender stick with a pointed end, which had been dipped in sulphur, and they were lighted by touching them to a spark struck into tinder by flint and steel. In that year, however, what was known as the "instantaneous light box" was invented. It consisted of a small box containing a bottle, in which was placed some sulphuric acid with sufficient fibrous asbestus to soak it up and prevent its spilling out of the bottle and a supply of properly prepared matches. These consisted of small splints of wood about 2 inches long, one end of which was coated with a chemical mixture prepared by mixing chlorate of potash, powdered loaf sugar and powdered gum arabic, the whole colored with a little vermilion and made into a thin paste with water. The splints were readily inflamed by dipping the prepared ends into the sulphuric acid. These were succeeded by the lucifer or loco foco match, which was ignited by friction, and that in turn by the Congreve, which was similar to the sulphur matches now in use, and this shortly afterward by the present parlor match.

"The Devil's Drive."

"The Devil's Drive" is by Byron. Here is a quotation from the beginning of the poem:

The devil returned to hell by two,
And he stayed at home till five.
When he rose to see some homicides done in racoon.
And a rebellion in an Irish stew,
And sausages made of a self slain Jew,
And hethought himself what next to do.
"And," quoth he, "I'll take a drive."

It was Coleridge who wrote "The Devil's Walk."

The First Asparagus.

The first asparagus of which we find mention induring the reign of Queen Elizabeth. "Garden sperage," says John Gerarde, "hath its first rising out of the ground thicke tender shoots, very soft and brittle, of the thicknesse of the greatest swan's quill, in taste like the green bean, and having at the end a thick, scaly bell. These shoots," he goes on to say, "be often sodden in flesh broth and eaten, or boiled in faire water and seasoned with oile, pepper and vinegar."

A Few Maxims.

Out of ten men, nine are born to work for the tenth. Resolve to be the tenth.

Without trampling the cleverest cannot get rich.

Drink is never an example, because nobody considers himself really rich.

If you cannot become rich, remember the many miseries of the rich.

The consolation of those who fail is to depreciate those who succeed.

Vulcan, the God of Fire.

Vulcan, the god of fire, not only forged thunderbolts for Jupiter, but built the palaces of the gods, made their chariots and even their golden shoes; he was the smith god. Aphrodite, the goddess of beauty, was his wife, the signification of the myth being that artistic work must be united with beauty.

William Morris.

William Morris, the poet, is described as a short set, broad shouldered man of robust build, with keen, lustrous eyes, a curly mane of tangled gray hair and a full flowing beard. He habitually affects the rough est apparel, his general getup being decidedly nautical.

Better Times.

It was Benjamin Franklin who said: "So what signifies wishing and hoping for better times? We may make these times better if we bestir ourselves."

Spasmodic Croup.

According to Dr. A. Brubacher, spasmodic croup in children, coming on suddenly at night, is often due to impaired digestion brought on by eating some heavy food just before retiring. If the stomach is then soon be emptied by an emetic, it will be found that the croup will also disappear

BE JUST TO CHILDREN.

MANY RUINED THROUGH HAVING THEIR MOTIVES MISTAKEN.

Parents Should Be Careful Not to Misconstrue the Actions of Their Little Men and Women—Look Back at Your Own Childhood—An Episode in Point.

So much has been said about the management of children that mothers begin to weary of it all, and yet of children I wish to speak. Would that my voice could reach every woman's heart, whether mother, sister or teacher. First, I wish to lead you back to your own childhood. Did you ever begin to do some odd job that you had not been told to do, but that you supposed yourself fully capable of performing, expecting to be thanked for kindly helping, only to find that you had done the very piece of mischief that you possibly could, and, more than all, were told that you had done it out of pure mischievousness?

If you never had such an experience it must have been because servants were so plenty that nothing was left to do, or that you were too indolent to exert yourself. A friend that I was visiting had a bright boy of six years, with a loving disposition, always willing to help every one, but appar ently a most rebellious case of children. His mother was in despair. She confided her trouble to me, and I resolved to watch the boy. I need not enroll on this occasion he had won such a name as "Little Mischief."

The next morning at the table, my friend remarked that the weather was so beautiful that she would remove her plants from the sunny window they occupied to the north. "Harry but, she added, "I'd do that to do it: it is so tedious, and it tires me so."

WANTED TO HELP MOTHER.

I noticed how the little eyes sparkled, and knew as well as if he had told me that the little fellow had heard what she said, and would try to do the much dreaded job for her. Not long after she ran over to Mrs. A.'s, and no sooner did the gate shut than Harry was active. The flower stand was already in the accustomed place, waiting to be moved by some one carefully, he lifted the heavy pots, and, without breaking a leaf, transferred them to their summer quarters. Sometimes he paused a moment to rest, then with bravely to work again. His face was a picture of happiness. He was helping his mamma.

I watched and wondered if this would also be laid to his mischievous propensities. My friend was gone rather longer than she expected, for, as she told me afterward, Mrs. A. had a love of a house that she made see, as well as several costly additions to her parlor furniture. Ah! there lay the secret of her discontented look, for she had told me that owing to several losses she would not be able to expend much money on her summer outfit. As the gate swung to for her friend through all the phases of surprise, dismay, and finally anger.

"Harry, come here this instant. What have you been doing? How dare you touch my plants?"

Stinging blows fell on the hands that had toiled so thankfully.

"You are always into some mischief" she exclaimed.

I watched the child; he was heartbroken. His bosom heaved, and his sobs were pitiful.

"Go to your room and stay the rest of the morning." He obeyed.

"There! What did I tell you? How can I manage such a boy?"

"My dearly understanding Mrs." I replied.

"What do you mean?"

"That your little boy wanted to help you; I read it in his face. His motives were the best. You said it tired you so, and he unconsciously did the disagreeable task for you."

"But if he had dropped one?"

"He did not, and if he had, a broken plant is to be mourned over, but for this child is only a wish to lighten your burden, a desire of the loving heart to help you."

She went with me to the verandah. We rearranged the plants, and I called her attention to the heavy pots, and then to the little hands that had lifted them. She blushed and acknowledged she was glad they were moved, I begged her to tell her little boy the same.

"What! acknowledge that I did wrong to punish him? I would lose all control over him if I did that."

"Try this time and see," I urged. And she did.

WHEN SHE UNDERSTOOD HIM.

When she entered Harry's room he sat in a chair by the window, quietly watching the floating clouds. Still smarting from a sense of injustice, he did not look around or smile.

"Harry, come here." He obeyed. "Why did you move the plants? Tell me the exact truth."

He looked up to her face, and reading encouragement there simply said:

"Because you said it tired you so. I am most a man now. I can help you lots. I did not break one, not one, mamma, and they were heavy Are you glad now I did it, mamma?"

"Yes, Harry, and I was sorry I was cross and hurt your head. I am sorry."

"Oh, it does not hurt any more now Next time I'll wait till you tell me."

They came back together, and I saw by the looks of my friend that she had learned a lesson not soon to be forgotten. That was six years ago. They called while passing through town this winter, and a more gentlemanly, helpful boy would be hard to find She said: "I have you to thank. From the day of the much needed lesson I watched and looked into the motives of my child, and always found that the so called mischief arose from a desire to be useful. I soon got acquainted with my boy and had no more trouble with him He is now my greatest comfort."

Mothers, fathers, all that have charge of precious souls, beware how you misconstrue their motives! Though they may perhaps seem to do things out of pure mischief, be sure it is not before you punish them, lest they cease to care, and as they have the name, only wish to make it fact. Oh, the men and women that have gone to destruction from having their motives mistaken, their actions misconstrued! Be sure none of these sins are laid to your charge.—Dudley Dorr in Housekeeper

GIVE THE KISS I GAVE TO THEE.

'Tis my mother's step I hear;
Quick, oh, quickly give to me—
Haste, it is her step I hear—
Haste the fair kiss I gave to thee.
She doth fret me night and day;
"Kisses, children," she doth say.
"Never mind unless you're away.
Never mind let her betray!"
Give, oh, quickly give to me—
Give the kiss I gave to thee.
"Have you kissed a man?" she'll say.
And I'll answer say again—
Give, oh, quickly give to me—
Give the kiss I gave to thee.

SIMPLICITY IN DIET

Startling One's Guests Is Said to Be Barbarous and Should Be Stopped.

Simplicity of diet should be a point of first consideration with all persons upon whom falls the responsibility of providing the family bills of fare, since the simplest foods are, as a rule, the most healthful Variety is needed—that is, a judicious mingling of fruits, grains and vegetables, but the general tendency is to supply our tables with too many kinds and to prepare each dish in the most elaborate manner, until in many households the cooking of food has come to be almost the chief end of life.

While the preparation of food should be looked upon as of so much importance as to demand the most careful consideration and thought as to its suitability, whole someness, nutritive qualities and digestibility, it should by no means be made to usurp the larger share of one's time when simpler foods and less labor would afford the partakers equal nourishment and strength.

Eating simply for the gratification of taste is a degrading custom. A great variety of foods at one meal exerts a potent influence in creating a love of eating, and likewise is a constant temptation to overeat. Let us have well cooked, nutritious and palatable food, and plenty of it, variety from day to day, but not too great a variety at each meal.

The prevalent custom of loading the table with a great number of viands, upon occasions where guests are to be entertained in our homes, is one to be deplored, since it is neither conducive to good health nor necessary to good cheer, but, on the contrary, is so laborious and expensive a practice that many are debarred from social intercourse because they cannot afford to entertain after the fashion of their neighbors.

Upon this subject a well known writer has aptly said: "Simplify cookery, thus reducing the cost of living, and how many longing individuals would thereby be enabled to afford themselves the pleasure of culture and social intercourse? When the burdensome practice of stuffing one's guests shall have been abolished a social gathering will not then imply, as it does now, hard labor, expensive outlay and dyspepsia. Perhaps when that time arrives we shall be sufficiently civilized to demand pleasures of a higher sort. True, the entertainments will then, in one sense, be more costly, as culture is harder to come by than cake.

"The profusion of viands now heaped upon the table betrays poverty of the worst sort. Having nothing to offer we offer victuals; and this we do with something of that complacent, satisfied air with which some more fortunate tribes present their tidbits of whale and walrus."—San gor News.

Shortsightedness in Children.

Dr. Brudenell Carter, one of London's most eminent eye specialists, has of late endeavored to open people's eyes to their own shortsightedness. He is amazed at the ignorance of parents and teachers with regard to the very existence of visual defects in their children and gives them excellent advice. Unfortunately unassigned children are often ignorant of their own calamity.

They are thought "stupid" because they cannot read the clock or the blackboard the senior, and later, at the same distance, as other children. They lose legacies because they are a few seconds behind in recognizing some relative from whom they have expectations. They are supposed to be wanting in dutiful interest, whereas, until the visitor comes quite close, they don't know whether it is their uncle, their aunt or the letter carrier. It is not until some serious consequence follows from the want of observation that the malady is discovered.

The public ignorance is no less about a matter one would think equally patent. "The popular notion that shortsighted eyes are strong eyes and that they improve with age," says Dr. Carter, "is erroneous." That they do not so improve is a fact no one would think obvious to at least all nearsighted persons unless of a very sanguine disposition.—Philadelphia Star.

Valuable Lace That Is Lost.

Mrs. Burr Palliser tells a story of a lady who had some very fine old lace which she bequeathed to some young friends; but on the legatees going to take possession of the bequest, they found only new lace, and asked the maid of the deceased, an old Scotchwoman, where the old lace was. "The auld rubbish it's a' in the fire," was the reply of this sagacious shigail, "barring a wheen auld black ragged duds that I flung on the fire."

Another maid, a painstaking and cleanly soul, ashamed to present to its new possessor a coffee colored but priceless lappet of rare old lace, sewed it together and put it into a strong soap lye to simmer all night on the fire. In the morning she was surprised and dismayed to find that it was reduced to a jelly.—Chambers' Journal.

A Girl's Superstitions.

The American girl hunts for the four leaved clover, puts wedding cake under her pillow, practices Hallowe'en incantations, pulls daisy flower petals and murmurs, "He loves me, he loves me not," and throws a shoe after the newly married pair or dotages them with rice. She sticks mucilage seeds on her forehead and names them after her various suitors, designates the popping corn in the same manner or fishes the tea leaves from her cup, places them on the back of her left hand and hits them a smart blow with the back of the right hand, telling the true lover from the false by the hand to which the leaves happen to adhere.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Water for Indigestion of Babies.

Bottle fed infants probably suffer more from thirst than those nourished at the breast. The reason is that the food of the former is seldom perfectly suited, and if not so, does not digest well, causing indigestion, which means that the stomach suffers from some irritation.

Where this exists there is always an unusual demand for water. Moreover, even in breast fed babies there is often indigestion, due to insufficiency of the little one's gastric juice, which would be benefited and not impossibly cured, where they are given water from time to time.—Boston Herald

The Long and Short of It.

Tom Thumb, when first taken to England, lodged at the same hotel with Labiache, the great singer. A Russian lady was very anxious to see Tom Thumb and went to Egyptian hall for that purpose, but found that the exhibition was over. However, she followed the little man into his car and was there. She knocked at a door, which was opened by a man of colossal proportions. She started back in some alarm, but was reassured by the amiable and gracious manner of the man, who was Labiache. "I must have made a mistake," said the lady; "it is Tom Thumb I wish to see." "Very well, madam," said the giant, "I am he." "You, monsieur? Why, I had been told he was so very little." "Oh," said Labiache, "I have the habit of the little, but when I come home I make myself comfortable by resuming my natural size."

The lady again stammered her astonishment, when Labiache said: "Madam; your supposition is not very flattering to the British public. Do you suppose they would go in crowds to look at a man for the mere reason that he was very little? The interesting thing is the transformation; it is that which attracts people." The lady admitted that the remark was very reasonable.—Argonaut.

CARS IN THE BOROUGH—15 MINUTES IN JAPAN.

THE FIRST TRIP ON THE NEW BRANCH LAST NIGHT.

Car No. 1 Made the Initial Trip, Filled with Passengers.—It Started at 7.57 and was Back in 26 Minutes.

THE first car was run over the Somerset street branch of the electric street railway last night. It was car No. 1 in charge of Motorman Wallace and Conductor Curry. The start was made from the corner of Front street at 7.56. The car was crowded. Among those on board were Mayor Saunders and Councilman Marsh and Prance of the City Commission Council. Mr. Riker of the company and Superintendent Adelmann. The street and sidewalk were crowded with people to see the car start on its initial trip.

The whole distance was made without a mishap, the car running as smoothly as it did on the old line, which was in operation just a year yesterday.

The car was followed by bicyclists, who kept their bells ringing and whistles blowing continually.

Many places along the street were decorated with flags. Mr. Joseph Blatz burned "red fire" in front of his hotel. A large American flag was hung in the doorway of the engine house by the members of Warren Engine Company, who rang the bell of the engine as the car passed. At the Arlington Hotel Japanese lanterns were hung the entire length of the large front piazza.

As the car sped along one of the passengers remarked that it believe the Somerset street branch is a big improvement over the main line." Mayor Saunders, who stood near, replied: "Do you know why? Because we are the people."

Several stops were made on the return trip to take on more passengers.

Men, women and children stood along the street and hurrahed, while small boys ran alongside the car the entire trip.

The new superintendent of the road, Mr. John Adelmann, has been a resident of Plainfield about a year, coming here from Newark, where he was for thirty years connected with street railways. He is a very agreeable person, and will no doubt do all in his power to make the road popular in Plainfield by providing every safe guard against accidents which have made such an outcry against trolleys throughout the country.

The motormen and conductors are required to work 17 hours out of the 24, working Sundays the same as week days. The nice class of men who began with the road in these capacities, according to one who was among them, have withdrawn. He said to a News reporter: "It destroys home life, and makes a man a worse slave than they ever had in the South."

One lady said, "The motor men seem polite enough, but I have stopped riding on the cars because of the rudeness of the new class of conductors. For instance, one evening, when it was quite chilly, I asked the motor man if the door might be closed. He politely closed it, when the conductor, with an offensive remark opened it again."

"Another time, I was on a car waiting for it to start when a conductor stretched himself on the seat with his feet touching my dress. I supposed he was tired, but still I did not see any necessity for his being so rude as to put his feet on the seat and soil my dress. In one trip I saw enough rude conduct to do such a thing, and such people ought not be allowed as conductors. But the company can not get a better class of men, I suppose, because, of the poor pay and long hours." This is rather rough on the conductors, and it is hoped does not apply to all of them.

Incidentally it might be mentioned that in case any one is injured on the road, such facts as these would go a long way toward influencing a jury on the question of the amount of damages.

One of the conductors, in reply to the charges, says that if people knew what a lot of cranks they have to deal with they would pardon them if they sometimes seemed rude.

The Somerset street conductor is the one who earned the first nickel for the company, and is a very careful and obliging individual.

Policeman Kiely is Back Again.

Policeman Kiely, whose genial countenance has been missed from Front street and Park avenue for several days, as he has been enjoying his vacation, is once more paroling his beat. Policeman Flanagan is the next man on the force to take an outing.

For Street Railway Extension.

Superintendent Adelman of the street railway company says that he has a petition for the extension of the road to Dunellen signed by 350 persons. Petitions are also being signed for an extension to Netherwood and Scotch Plains.

Scared by the Trolley.

Mrs. Allen's horse was frightened by the electric car on Somerset street this morning and started to run away. The animal was stopped before any damage other than broken traces resulted.

JAPANESE DANCING BY A NUMBER OF YOUNG LADIES.

A Successful Entertainment Given for the Benefit of St. Joseph's Church, in Saengerbund Hall.—Followed by a Dance.

THE St. Joseph's church gave an entertainment in Saengerbund Hall on Somerset street, last night. There was a large number present to witness the well executed selections and dances. The "Dresden trio," Messrs. Alfred N. Norbury, Fred. A. Lewis and Fred. J. Pope was loudly applauded and drew forth several encores. Mr. John H. Carney was the drawing card of the evening and greatly delighted the audience by reciting "Excelsior org," also a piece about the new Somerset street railway and the "car that passed last night" for the first time. Another interesting event of the evening was the drawing for the World's Fair ticket. Each ticket had a coupon attached so it numbered the same as the ticket. The coupon was placed in a box with the seat and one drawn from the number. The prize was a free ticket to the "World's Fair," or "Chicago and Return." The winning number was 216, which was held by Mr. Dennis Gavin.

After the entertainment was over the chairs were cleared away and dancing enjoyed.

The fifteen minutes in Japan was very interesting, being an exact representation of Japanese dancing and was beautiful if it could have been done better by the Japanese themselves.

The programme was as follows:

Overture	Prof Riley
Selection	Miss Guenette
Messrs. Roberts, Spencer, Martin and Spencer
Recitation	Miss Cora Shepard
Solo	Miss Clara Lanning
Double Reel and Jig	Miss Clara Lanning
	Miss Myrtle M Borge
Solo	Mrs. Norrie
Recitation	H. H. Westphal
Selection	Dresden Trio
	Messrs. Norbury, Lewis and Pope.
Recital	Prof Vieyard
Sailor's Horn Pipe	Miss E. M. Force
Recital	Minetta Hayden
Spanish Dancing	Miss Clara Lanning
Closing Selection	John H. Carney

Fifteen Minutes in Japan—Represented in characteristic costumes by ladies: Misses Fannie Moore, May Day, Lizzie Casey, Lena Weber, Nellie Lawler, Nora Flynn, Katie Carty, Lizzie Flanagan, Kittie Flanigan, Katie Leahy, Lorella Quinn and Alice Kelly.

Miss Alice Quinn was the accompanist.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. Meddledith and family of Park avenue have gone to Asbury Park.

Mr. W. G. Bartlingradale of Kensington avenue is visiting in East Mericbes, Staten Island, for a few days.

Letter Carrier Will Demarest of Stone street is unable to attend to his duties to-day owing to sickness.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Cutter of corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue are visiting friends in Brooklyn.

Mr. F. C. Langhorne and family of Putnam avenue have returned home from an outing at Asbury Park.

Master Lawrence and Miss M. Watson of Gloversville, N. Y., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Watson of Grant avenue.

Mr. J. R. Clawson and Miss A. M. Wilson were married at Dunellen Wednesday afternoon. Both have many friends in this city.

Miss Estelle Van Middlesworth of Elmwood place is visiting her cousin, Miss Minnie Van Middlesworth, of East High street, Dunellen.

Mrs. A. M. Briant and her granddaughter, Miss Edna Harris, started this morning for Philadelphia and Ohio to visit a brother and sister.

Policeman Charles Close is at Bound Brook to-day endeavoring to hook the finny tribe. Fish stories at the station house will be rife to night.

Miss Mitchell and her niece, Miss Colton, of Grove street, have returned from Chicago, where they have been attending the World's Fair.

Frederick Bennet, a nephew of Mr. Joseph Blatz of Somerset street, who has been spending some time here, returned to his home in Brooklyn yesterday.

—Edith Flay, Lizzie Pond and Ella Johnson, ten, eleven and seventeen years old, were drowned in Newark Bay, at Bayonne, about six o'clock last evening.

Mr. David L. Thompson of Rockview Park is cashier of the Fuller Company of New York, which failed Wednesday. The company's liabilities are a half million dollars.

Two sisters of Mrs. Thomas Bantingham who have been spending three or four weeks with her, at South Plainfield, returned to their home in Tarrytown, N. Y., Wednesday.

The Rev. D. Charles Preyer of Newark will preach in the Trinity Reformed church next Sunday, in the absences of the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, who is enjoying his vacation.

Mr. J. Fred. MacDonald has cut his strip of land near Netherwood into 146 building lots. He has also had two streets cut through the property—Columbia avenue and Frederick street.

"Judge" Brown of North Plainfield, while hurrying for a train a few days ago, said to himself, "Well, there, I have forgotten my watch." Then he pulled the watch out of his pocket to see if he had time before his train started to go back home and get the watch. He held it in his hand. This is a singular mixture of thoughtfulness, forgetfulness and absentmindedness.

SLAPPED HER HUSBAND.

AND WHEN CHIEF GRANT INTERFERED SHE SLAPPED HIM.

Mrs. Wyatt Did Not Like to be Told to Go Home—A Colored Man from Baltimore Assaulted by a Jealous Husband.

FATHER an exciting scene occurred at the North avenue station this morning. There was a crowd of people waiting to take the train to New York, when a colored man rushed up to the ticket agent and asked for a ticket to Baltimore. As he turned from the window he was met by Charles Wyatt another colored man, who asked him if he knew Miss Peterson, now Mrs. Wyatt. On receiving a reply in the affirmative, Wyatt struck the other man in the face. Both then ran out in front of the station, where Wyatt tried to repeat the assault, but was prevented from so doing by Mayor Gilbert and another gentleman.

Mrs. Wyatt then appeared upon the scene and ordered her husband home. He did not go, so she slapped his face. Chief Grant here interfered and told Mrs. Wyatt to go home. As she did not go he started to take hold of her to force her to leave. As he reached for her arm, she turned around, slapped the Chief in the face and started on a run for home.

Then ensued a foot race. The woman proved too swift for the Chief and she got away. She was finally arrested at her mother's on East Sixth street.

Policeman Force meanwhile protected the colored man who had bought the ticket for Baltimore, from further assaults by Wyatt. He was told he could prefer a charge of assault against Wyatt, but he refused to make a complaint and left for Baltimore.

The trouble, it seems, originated in Wyatt's jealousness of his spouse, who used to be the Baltimore man's best girl.

She, it is said, told her husband that she was going to the depot to see an old friend off, and this was what sent Wyatt to the depot in such haste.

BREVITIES.

—The councilmen drank a toast at the Arlington hotel last night after the trip of the first car.

—White's special sale of Oxford ties continues to morrow. See advertisement for particulars.

—The case of Sullivan vs. Conover was adjourned to-day, by Justice Nash, to Friday, August 25.

—The Board of Trade held a meeting last night. Several applications for membership were acted upon.

—Sunday evening a cow belonging to Lishon Pierson of Dunellen strayed away. It was found near Grant avenue Tuesday.

—The Bound Brook Woolen Mills, the largest factory in that place, with a pay roll of over $3,000 a week, will hereafter run only on half time.

—The Harned Academy of Park avenue re-opens on Monday, Sept. 18. With its enlarged buildings it will be unequalled for boys in preparing for college or business.

—A few changes were made in the timetable of trains between this city and Somerville to-day. The 9.27 p. m. has been taken off and the 10.28 substituted. The 8.35 has been changed to 8.38, and 12.43 night added.

—About a hundred persons heard Thomas Ringler, the prison evangelist, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sunday. Lemonade will be served and fans provided again this Sunday.

—The latest thing on the lake is a boat owned by Plainfield parties and which has paddle-wheels worked on the bicycle principle. It cannot be called a success, however.—Dunellen Gaff.

—The latest joke is told on Messrs. Timbo, Frazee and Bingham. The story is that the late Mr. Smock, before his death, told them he would leave them some thing in his will. Recently each received a letter from a lawyer requesting them to be present at the reading of the will, as they were each mentioned in the will.

The Weather.

On Saturday, fair to partly cloudy, more sultry weather will prevail, with fresh southerly winds and nearly stationary temperature, followed by local thunder storms and rain near the Blue Ridge and on the seaboard, with falling temperature, and on Sunday generally fair, slightly cooler weather, possibly with rain along the sea coasts.

Crescents Again Defeat Poughkeepsie.

The Crescents played the second game on its present trip yesterday, at Poughkeepsie, winning as follows:

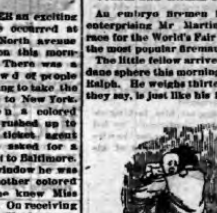
Mr. Saltzman's Friends Respond and he Makes Another Gain.—The Records of Messrs. Smith, Rogers, Vroom and Bimm Improve.

An embryo Bremen has joined the enterprising Mr Martin in his hustling race for the World's Fair trip offered to the most popular Bremen.

The little fellow arrived on this mundane sphere this morning. His name is Ralph. He weighs thirteen pounds, and they say, is just like his father.



MR. MARTIN TRAINING FOR HIS TRIP.

Of course, Mr. Martin is happy and all smiles. He looks upon the newcomer as a mascot and thinks his trip to the World's Fair is now assured, notwithstanding the records of his formidable competitors, the popular Messrs. Saltzman and Smith.

Mr. Saltzman is 179 votes ahead to-day. Mr. Martin has left 2000 far behind.

Mr. Smith is a good third with an even 2000 votes, and the friends of Messrs. Rogers, Vroom and Bimm better their accounts.

August 30 is the date for the winner. Particulars of the trip on page two.

When the Mills Shut Down.

[From the Wave River News.]

O, 'twas glorious last November when the victors marched away
When the fife, drums and banners in magnificent array!
How their eyes with rapture sparkled, how each
At the thought of poor old Benny swamped by tyrannous sway!
and how double extra jolly it would be to scatter and kill
Our W. McKinley and his blamed old robber bill;
But a different sort of feeling seems to permeate
the town,
And you don't count for glory
When

The Mills Shut Down.

O, 'twas altogether love then to near the G. O. P.
And furnish season tickets up Salt River, don't you see;
Standing on official pudding, sure, such happiness seem most being
While Maxwell gives his hatchet just a little extra swing.
But don't here comes another sort of music to the air,
That tells of empty stomachs, and of pockets growing bare!
Where are those protection critters now, these days of misery?
Where, oh, where these great reformers
When

The Mills Shut Down.

Low! the great and noble Grover, what a valiant
To plant his No. 11's squarely on "pluto-
And Athat the fearless, of the wierd and awful name
How his stirring deeds should echo on the trumpet blast of fame!
How they'll turn to country over and then turn
it back again.
And shout all the rascals from among the haunts of men!
'Tis a glorious prospect, truly, for many a thriving town,
But it peters out so easy,

The German Lutherans Friends Helping Them.

The following is translated from the Lutherischer Gemeindsfreund, the paper edited by the Rev. Mr. Kionka, pastor of the German Lutheran Congregation:

"Mr. John Koch, our treasurer, has made us a present of $1,000 and has promised to give us $1,000 more, if we collect another $4,000, but we have some years time to do it in. For the present he will lend us this $1,000 without interest. Mrs. Anna Pfaschinskys, the president of the Ladies' Society, has also lent us $1,000, for one year without interest.

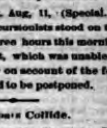
Mr. F. M. Hulett, the well-known music dealer on Front street, will make us a present of a very nice organ for the church. Mr. A. M. Griffen, the plumber, has offered to do all plumbing work for nothing. We are very much obliged to these liberal gentlemen for their help in building our church.

Superb Illustrations by Mr. George Wharton Edwards.

Godey's Magazine for September, published August 15, 1893, will contain a variety of matter, and many attractive features. First comes the complete novel, Sir's Daughter, by Frederick B. Mott. This is a strong and dramatically told story of Western life, and is superbly illustrated by Mr. George Wharton Edwards, who will also illustrate Constance Cary Harrison's story of Virginia life, "Flower de Hundred." Mr. Edwards has also illustrated two years' course. Graduate course now added. Tuition fee, $100. Re-opens October 2, 1893. Address GEORGE CHASE, Boston.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

The Riverside Club Cyclers to Hold a Meet.



WAVERLY Fair track will be the scene of the Riverside A. C. Cyclers' annual meet on Saturday, August 26th. One of the principal events of the meet will be the three men team race for a valuable silver trophy. This trophy is of heavy sterling silver, simple yet rich and handsome, and, including the base, is exactly twelve inches high, with suitable space for inscription of the club and individual names of the winners. Messrs. H. E. Hawthorne, C. H. Cobb and G. W. Cobb of the Orange A. C. C. were the winners last year.

The competition is open to any and all bicycle clubs in New Jersey in good standing. Each club team shall consist of three men, all of whom must have been members of the club for a period of three months immediately preceding the race. The winning team is determined by the number of points scored. L. A. W. rules will govern the race. One club can enter more than one team, but each team must be entirely independent of the other.

In addition to the above trophy, a diamond scarf pin will be presented to the contestant in this race winning the greatest number of laps.

Popular Excursions to the World's Fair via Pennsylvania Railroad.

ADDITIONAL DATES IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

So great is the popularity of the half-rate excursions to the World's Fair that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has decided to increase the number of trips. In pursuance of this plan popular excursions will be run August 12th, 19th, 26th, 29th, September 9th and 13th. These excursions will be run under the same conditions as those which have preceded them, and will afford every one an opportunity of attending the World's Greatest Fair at an inconsiderable cost.

A decided improvement in the train service which accompanies it so as to deliver the passengers in Chicago at an early hour the following afternoon, places the excursions on an equality in the matter of speed with the best express trains.

The special trains are composed of the standard coaches for which the Pennsylvania Railroad is famous, and their completion and the rapidity with which they are hauled for return within ten days, is $20 from New York, $18.25 from Philadelphia, and proportionate low rates from other stations.

Many expressions of satisfaction have come from those who took advantage of the earlier excursions of this series.

American Day Next Thursday.

Asbury Park is arranging for a big crowd American Day next Thursday, August 17. The day is set apart for the parade and demonstration of the Jr. O. U. A. M. of this State. Almost every council in the State will be represented in the parade.

Mr. Bradley, of Asbury Park, has ordered a large arch erection for the occasion and it is expected that other business men of the city will follow his example and assist in decorating the buildings and streets.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Tramp Census.

Very suggestive is that paper of Professor J. J. McCook in The Forum on the tramp evil. Professor McCook has spent a long time trying to get at the root of this excrescence on our modern civilization. He has carefully interviewed in person and caused to be interviewed no less than 2,100 of them, mostly in the east. He made them answer such questions as how long they had been on the road, what their health was, what age they were, whether married or single, if they could read and write, etc. In many cases the vagrants were required to answer the queries before they could get lodging, so that one of them felt constrained to append to his list of replies this comment, "That's a lot of questions to ask a fellow for a night's lodging."

The conclusions arrived at by Professor McCook tend to destroy every vestige of sentimental pity that one might feel disposed to waste on this individual.

The tramp is a tramp because he will not work. The chief cause of vagabondage is drunkenness. The fellows who take to the road are in the majority of cases born with a deficient moral development or else drink has undermined it. To get rid of them requires no featherbed policy. The evil must be grappled energetically. Professor McCook thinks the German labor colony system the best that has been devised to meet their case. He is of opinion that it is very bad policy to allow tramps to sleep in station houses, and he says, "Get people to stop absolutely giving little coins to beggars." What the tramp nuisance costs the country financially is summed up in the following:

Here, then, is a body of 45,865 men, for that is my estimate of their number, made from the best attainable data—an army larger than Wellington's redcoats at Waterloo; eleven-twelfths of them are under 35; five-sixths of them are in perfect health; three-fifths of them have trades or occupations requiring skill; over nine-tenths of them can read and write. And these persons, constituting one-quarter of 1 per cent of our adult male population, are permanently withdrawn from productive work. That is not all. They beg for public burdens. In case of war the recruiting sergeant might be nimble enough to catch them if bounties were high and bounty jumping active, but the taxgatherer never, in war or peace, for the very roads which they wear they never repair.

Nor is this all. They are steady consumers. To support them in the New Hearth in Hartford costs $2.70 per week; in the almshouse, $2.50. And since institutional life is adopted by but one in the last resort, we may be sure that what they get outside is worth at least as much as the smallest of these sums. Add a conservative 10 cents a day for drink, levied upon the public by begging, and 2 cents for tobacco, and you have not far from $3.50 per week, or about $8,000,000 annually.

Then add police supervision. Every arrest in Hartford costs $5.50 simply in police fees. Then add hospital and dispensary charges. In fact, it can hardly be doubted that the average tramp costs nearly or quite as much as the worse sort of criminal, whose cost, by a careful estimate that excludes, however, the original outlay for buildings, is in Hartford $4.40 per week. Call it only $200 a year, and you have $10,000,000 a year more than the sum of the Indian department, and one-half the cost of our navy. With it we could pay more than one-quarter of the interest of the public debt.

German Political Parties.

We are sure there are those among our readers who would like to know something about the political parties in the present imperial German parliament. This is perhaps especially true since the dissolution and re-election in consequence of the emperor's army bill. We have found a list of the parties in the new German parliament, with the number of members belonging to each. We reproduce it, believing that this list itself will throw as much light on German politics as a column of writing would do. After our acquaintance with the simple Republican, Democrat, Populist and Prohibition camps into which our various political lines divide us, the German list will be rather confusing to the American mind. No wonder Bismarck lost both health and temper keeping track of them all. Here they are:

Conservatives, 74; Imperialists, 24; National Liberals, 50; Radical Union, 12; Radical People's Party, 24; South German People's Party, 11; Center, 96; Guelphs, 7; Social Democrats, 44; Poles, 19; Anti-Semites, 16; Independents, 9; Danes, 1; Alsatian Protest Party, 7; Alsatians in favor of the army bill, 3.

Supply and demand regulate themselves where they are allowed to. In the tightness of the money market the prices of government bonds fell along with other securities to a price which paid the banks to buy them. Buying them and using them as a basis, the banks were enabled to increase their circulation and thus throw more money on the market. During the month of July $8,000,000 were added to the circulation through the national banks.

Certainly Senator Mitchell of Oregon expressed the sentiment of the people of the United States, whether he did that of the politicians in congress or not, when he said, "These are times in which the real welfare of the country should not be sacrificed for the sake of mere partisan advantage."

As to party divisions, the present congress stands as follows: Senate—Democrats, 41; Republicans, 38; Independents, 2. House of representatives—Democrats, 221; Republicans, 125; Independents, 8.

What seems to be a profitable crop to raise this summer: A New York publisher has been paid for $10,000 for selling out a good share of an artist's board.

A DEBATE OF TEN DAYS.

This Is the Programme For the Silver Fight.

PRESIDENT LEAVES THE CAPITAL.

Today the Fight Begins in Earnest—Cockran Leads the Antisilver Men—Free Coinage Men Have a Bill Ready—A Conference With Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The situation has been greatly simplified by the action of a conference held at the residence of Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle, at which nearly 40 gentlemen, including the leaders of the antisilver wing, were present. A general discussion of the propositions submitted by the antisilver committee was held, and it was agreed to take the affirmative on every proposition. The conference lasted nearly two hours, and at its conclusion the members congratulated themselves that the action taken was the best under the circumstances. A proposition will be made to the silver men today to close the debate in 10 days and then vote on the different propositions regarding free coinage, different ratios and unconditional repeal.

Mr. Cockran and the other antisilver leaders expressed themselves as hopeful that this plan will be agreed to. While it cannot be positively stated, it is more than probable that the bill will be introduced in the house today—at any rate not later than Monday—after which debate will be commenced.

The two committees representing the silver and antisilver forces seem to be playing for position, each desiring to assume the initiative, but of what avail the point of advantage sought will be it is difficult to discern among the mass of rumors that are afloat.

The Situation.

From all these and from the statements of members of the conference regarding their proceedings the positions of the two parties are these: The antisilver men, led by Mr. Bourke Cockran, propose that a bill shall be introduced to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman law and that a vote be taken upon that proposition first. If it be defeated, amendments may be offered providing for the free coinage of silver and a vote be taken on them.

The free coinage men offer this counter proposition: That the bill outlined by the free silver caucus shall be introduced by the committee authorized to prepare it, providing for a repeal coupled with free coinage; that any amendments desired may be offered and that a vote shall be taken at the end of three weeks.

This was not acceptable to the antisilver men, who insisted, it is said, upon a vote first upon the proposition to unconditionally repeal the purchase clause. It was impossible apparently for the committee to come together, and after several separate consultations and two joint meetings an adjournment was had until this morning.

The free coinage men offer this counter proposition: That the bill outlined by the free silver caucus shall be introduced by the committee authorized to prepare it, providing for a repeal coupled with free coinage; that any amendments desired may be offered and that a vote shall be taken at the end of three weeks.

This was not acceptable to the antisilver men, who insisted, it is said, upon a vote first upon the proposition to unconditionally repeal the purchase clause. It was impossible apparently for the committee to come together, and after several separate consultations and two joint meetings an adjournment was had until this morning.

The free coinage men were represented in the conferences by Representatives Bland, Boatner, Culberson, Bryan, Bailey, Oates and Lamb; the unconditional repealers by Cockran, Tracey, Harter, Raynor, Catchings, Lapham, Geissenheimer, Meredith, Fitch, Wilson of West Virginia and John Dewitt Wilson of Indiana.

Considerable interest was added to the situation by the fact that Secretary Carlisle visited the capitol in the course of the morning and was in consultation in the library with Representatives Cockran, Tracey and Raynor. He also called on Speaker Crisp in the latter's room and remained some time. After the house had adjourned Representatives Cockran and McMillan called at the treasury department and were closeted with Secretary Carlisle.

Little Done In Either House.

Brevity was the feature of the senate proceedings. The chaplain confined himself to the Lord's Prayer, the journal was embraced in a couple of paragraphs, and then there were two yea and nay votes taken—one on a motion to adjourn over till Monday and one on a motion to adjourn.

Both motions came from the Democratic side of the chamber and were carried by Democratic votes and the votes of senators from the silver producing states. The whole session occupied less than 20 minutes.

The day was one of waiting in the house. The Democratic silver and antisilver advisory committees were meeting both separately and conjointly, and it was the plan of the Democrats to give them time to reach a satisfactory conclusion. Therefore after a recess had been taken an adjournment was decided upon, and a motion to that effect was made, but the Republicans, desiring to put every man on record, demanded the yeas and nays. Twenty-three Democrats voted with the Republicans against adjournment, but their votes were of no avail, as the motion was carried—yeas, 178; nays, 122.

Before announcing the result the speaker appointed the committee on rules. It consists of the same members as composed it in the fifty-second congress, except that Mr. Outhwaite (Dem.) of Ohio is substituted for Mr. McMillin (Dem.) of Tennessee.

The President Leaves.

President Cleveland leaves Washington today, probably this afternoon, for Buzzard's Bay, to remain until about Sept. 1. It is likely that he will be accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland, who is anxious to join his family at Sorrento, Me.

Since the meeting of congress on Monday last Mr. Cleveland has disposed of a large amount of work, and he feels that there is nothing to keep him in Washington. Congress is not expected to do anything for some time, and matters for congressional consideration can be properly by the president at Gray Gables as well, if not better, than in Washington. Mr. Cleveland spent the last two days at his country seat and managed to get rid of a large amount of business. He disposed of all the applications for pardons laid before him and signed his name to the hundreds of certificates nominating men who were appointed during the congressional recess to the offices they are now filling. These recess appointments are the only ones the president will send to the senate before his departure.

Carpenters Fell From a Church.

ROCKSPRAD, O., Aug. 11.—Seven carpenters were working on the roof of the new Methodist church, the rafters of which broke loose. Five fell 40 feet, and two, Oliver Swager and Curnon Morrow, were killed.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed: New Jersey—Maple, H. B. Wilson; New Durham, A. J. Kirby; Penn's Grove, D. V. Summerill, jr.

SOLDIERS AS LYNCHERS.

At Cripple Creek They Hanged Two Miners For Killing a Private.

KNOXVILLE, Aug. 11.—It is reported that the soldiers at Fort Anderson went to Coal Creek, and taking Dick Drummond from his boarding house hanged him to a trestle. Shortly afterward they went to another boarding house and captured a miner named Elkins and hanged him to the same trestle.

Drummond and Elkins were the men arrested on suspicion of ambushing and killing Private Loeagher Monday night.

Later the soldiers arrested a miner named Moore on suspicion of being an accomplice of Drummond and Elkins, and unless he can prove his innocence he will be lynched.

Over 1,000 miners went out on strike, and serious trouble is expected.

The only mine now running is that of the Knoxville Iron company, which works state convicts, and grave fears are entertained that they may again be released and that the soldiers will be burned by the striking miners.

The cause of the strike is the reduction of 30 per cent in wages by the Coal Creek companies, which the miners would not accept. The miners are doing a great deal of talking and are very much excited. Serious outbreaks are expected at any time. A late dispatch from Lieutenant Fiffe at Fort Anderson corroborates the above and says that trouble is feared, though they are fully prepared to meet any emergency. Company D of this city is now in readiness and will go to Coal Creek at a moment's notice.

WEAVER'S HOT SHOT.

He Calls the President's Message a Heartless Ukase and Other Names.

SILVER LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Farmers' day was an immense success. There were 7,000 people present at the assembly. E. E. Dean of Hoosepe Falls presided. Judge J. W. Kerr of Colorado spoke from a Colorado standpoint. General Weaver of Iowa spoke for two hours and dived for information from the national People's party. He went for the president with hot shot.

Referring to the president's message, he said, "I repeat that this heartless ukase from the executive mansion has hurled the country into a political revolution, which will continue to gather power and force until every vestige of plutocracy shall be swept away and the government then be restored to the hands of the people who have made it, strengthened it and more than once cemented it with their blood."

There were various other points and interesting illustrations in General Weaver's speech which drew tumultuous applause. Nearly 100 carloads of excursionists were at the meeting, and the large crowd proved orderly and yet enthusiastic all day. Ignatius Donnelly of Minnesota, who was billed, failed to appear. Several state officers of the Alliance were present.

The Body Still Hanging.

NORFOLK, Ga., Aug. 11.—Jack Chambers (colored) was taken from Officers Spence and Drayton and lynched. Chambers' body was riddled with bullets. He confessed to having taken part in outraging Mrs. George Warren, the wife of a prominent farmer at Hoboken, Ga., last year. Chambers is the third negro lynched for that crime. Chambers is now hanging to a tree near the road, his body being viewed by many people.

Sailing Schooner Seized.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—The custom authorities confiscated the schooner George P. Trigg. She is about 117 tons and has on board a cargo of laths, and, though sailing under a clearance for Fox Island, Nova Scotia, she carries at her peak the American flag. It was because of the absence of registration that the vessel was seized, and the further complication of a British subject sailing under the American flag arose afterward.

News From the Falcon.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—The father of Frank W. Stokes, who accompanied the Peary party to Greenland, has received a letter from his son dated Battle Harbor, Labrador, July 17. All the party were well and looking forward to a safe landing on Greenland by the first of this month. This is probably the only information that will be received from the explorers until the Falcon arrives back in St. Johns.

Yellow Fever Fugitives.

ATLANTA, Aug. 11.—A trainload of fugitives from Pensacola reached here. It was a special train, and the passengers were some of the most prominent people of that city. They found every door closed against them until they reached Atlanta. At no place were they allowed to stop. All Alabama cities had most rigid quarantines. They were, however, welcomed to Atlanta. They say the panic there was great.

Her Husband Spirited Away.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Mrs. Clara Perry Thomas obtained a writ of habeas corpus to compel Justice Gaynor and Deputy Sheriff Conway to produce their brother, David J. Solomon, in the supreme court. She declares that they have spirited him away, under pretense of his mental insanity, to keep him from marrying her.

For a Parade of Unemployed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—At a meeting of representative labor men it was resolved to ask the different labor unions each to send five representatives to a conference to be held at the International Labor Exchange, on Aug. 20 at 3 p. m., to discuss the organization of the unemployed for a parade and demonstration in this city.

Concessions of Railroad Men.

EASTON, Pa., Aug. 11.—The result of the conferences between Vice President Voorhees of the Reading, the superintendents of the Lehigh Valley and the grievance committee of the latter road was that the men got a number of concessions upon points which have been a source of annoyance to them.

Injured In the Surf.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 11.—Thomas Wilkinson of the firm of Bailey, Banks & Biddle of Philadelphia was seriously injured while bathing here. He was buried against an iron pole supporting a lifeline.

A Big Meteor Fell.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 11.—A large meteor passed over this city and struck in the marsh near the Isle of Hope, six miles out. The shock was felt in the city and created great excitement.

THE OHIO CANDIDATES.

Neal Will Lead the Democrats Against McKinley.

AN ADMINISTRATION PLATFORM.

No Stand Was Taken on the Silver Issue. Neal Was the Gubernatorial Nomination After Eight Years of Campaigning For the Place.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—Lawrence T. Neal is realizing today the truth of the old adage that "All things come to him who waits." For eight years in pursuit of the highest office in the gift of the Ohio Democracy, so energetic and persistent that he had almost come to be regarded as a perennial candidate, he suddenly finds his ambitions gratified, and that without even a semblance of a struggle.

With the field against him, lacking organization and able lieutenants, he led from the start and cantered under the wire a comfortable length in advance of his closest competitor. Even up to the moment of the calling of the roll his prospects looked unfavorable, but the opposition was disunited, if not absolutely demoralized. Neal might have been beaten with ease could it have concentrated upon any one man of acknowledged strength.

The Democratic Ticket.

The ticket selected is as follows:

For Governor—Lawrence T. Neal of Hamilton county.

For Lieutenant Governor—William A. Taylor of Franklin county.

For Supreme Court Judge—John W. Sater of Darke county.

For Treasurer of State—B. C. Blackburn of Coshocton county.

For Attorney General—John P. Bailey of Putnam county.

For Member Board of Public Works—Louis B. Willcolm of Summit county.

For Food and Dairy Commissioner—Patrick H. McKeown of Hamilton county.

It was a hot day, but a cool convention. The hall was filled with a dense mass of swelting, mopping, fan waving delegates, who from start to finish conducted their business in a deliberate manner. It was too hot, in fact, for the display of any degree of physical energy, and that was the main reason why the meeting was marked with so little of the sensational.

The platform adopted as a whole was remarkably harmonious, considering the unsettled condition of matters before the meeting convened. Baker was expected to bring a more or less turbulent mob, who was an easy victory for Neal, and his friends are more than hopeful of success in November. They say that they will carry McKinley. Neal, it is well known, does not stand high in favor at Washington, yet he stands upon a platform which indorses the administration.

The action of the platform committee in omitting to take a stand on the silver question is variously commented upon. Members of the committee declare that it was all summarized in the plank binding the convention to support the administration, but the free silver men, who are numerous, are not so content. One member of the platform committee said flatly, "We did not know what to do."

The Platform.

The platform adopted reads as follows:

First—We hereby approve the platform of the Democratic party adopted by the national convention at Chicago, especially those portions of it referring to the tariff and to currency legislation. We congratulate the country upon the early prospect of relief from the evils inflicted by the president's late message to congress and we have confidence that the Democratic congress will devise laws to furnish such relief.

Second—The financial situation is the unfortunate legacy of Republican administration. It is the natural result of the McKinley tariff, the alternate silver law, extravagance of the party lately in power and the creation and fostering of trusts and corrupt combinations by that party. It has caused a lack of credit, to create distrust in money of the country and to paralyze its business.

Third—We recommend that national banks may be permitted to issue their currency to an amount equal to the par value of the United States bonds which they deposit with the treasurer of the United States, to the end that the volume of currency may be immediately increased.

Fourth—The interests of every true soldier and sailor demand that the pension roll should be made and preserved as a roll of honor. We believe in a just and liberal recognition of the claims of the veterans and favor granting them all that patriotism could ask, all that national gratitude would demand. But the grantting of pensions as a charity, the granting of pensions as a charity, the granting of pensions for partisan purposes or on department decisions in contravention of law, as practiced under the last administration, should be speedily ended and corrected so that the unselfish valor of the American soldier may be honored, not shamed.

Fifth—We condemn the unbusinesslike administration of state affairs under Governor McKinley, during which time extravagance and defalcations under it and demonstrate the condemning of official crimes which have brought humiliation upon our people.

Sixth—The Democratic party expresses its confidence in the ability of the Hon. Calvin S. Brice of the United States senate to materially assist the Democratic majority in the congress of the United States to extricate the great commercial interests of this country from their present distressed condition.

Seventh—The country has abiding faith in the integrity, patriotism and exalted courage of President Cleveland. True to the people and watchful of their rights, he will enforce honest and economical methods in the conduct of affairs and secure to every section of the country the blessing of good government.

Dr. Parkhurst's New Move.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Dr. Parkhurst's Society for the Prevention of Crime formulated charges against Police Captain Devery in management of the Eldridge street station, alleging that he permits disorderly places to flourish in the precinct without interference.

SHE SAYS HE IS INSANE.

General Hamilton's Wife Uncovers a Scandal.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMISSION.

Mrs. Hamilton Says Her Husband Is Under the Influence of Another Woman and Claims That She Has Been Deserted—A Historic Family.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Hamilton, wife of General Alexander Hamilton, the grandson of General Alexander Hamilton of revolutionary fame, has secured from Justice Dykman of the supreme court at White Plains the appointment of Elihu H. Frost of the firm of Frost & Frost, in the Equitable building, as a commissioner to inquire into the sanity of General Hamilton.

The application was made and granted at the home of Judge Dykman for the purpose of keeping the affair a secret. Although the regular papers were signed, they have not been put on record in the county clerk's office at White Plains and will not be until after Commissioner Frost has made his report. The following is the petition:

Mrs. Hamilton's Petition.

In the matter of Alexander Hamilton, a supposed lunatic, the petition of Sarah Elizabeth Hamilton of Tarrytown, N. Y., respectfully shows that she is the wife of said Alexander Hamilton, and that the said Alexander Hamilton now is and for a space of several years last past has been so deprived of his reason and understanding as to be altogether unfit and unable to govern himself and manage his affairs; that the petitioner is the second wife of said Alexander Hamilton, they having been married in 1878; that the first wife of said Alexander Hamilton died in 1875; that there is no issue of the said marriage of the petitioner and said Alexander Hamilton.

On Aug. 8, 1893, the said Alexander Hamilton and your petitioner legally adopted as their daughter Mabel Hamilton, as appears more fully by an order entered in the office of the clerk of the county of Westchester Aug. 8, 1893; that the issue of the said Alexander Hamilton with his first wife, Elizabeth S. Hamilton, are as follows: Alexander Hamilton, Jr., who resides at Lyons Plains, Conn.; Henry Hamilton, whose residence is unknown, and Minnie Henderson, whose residence is also unknown.

On May 13, 1893, the said Alexander Hamilton resided with your petitioner at Tarrytown, but that since that time the said Alexander Hamilton left his home, and your petitioner for a long time was unable to discover his whereabouts, but that your petitioner is now informed and verily believes that he is temporarily residing at 134 West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, New York city, in the custody of Mrs. Freeman, who is no relation to the said Alexander Hamilton.

The income of the said Alexander Hamilton is $3,000 a year. He has been suffering from weakness of mind. He has several times threatened the life of your petitioner and also threatened to kill himself on numerous occasions. He is very careless with his money, and has not contributed to the support of your petitioner, and has been spending his money on trivial things. Said Alexander Hamilton was 77 years old on Nov. 19, 1892.

That said Mrs. Freeman is no relative of said Alexander Hamilton and has not known him, to the knowledge of your petitioner, prior to 1890.

Emily O. Bodine, a sister of Mrs. Hamilton, also makes an affidavit that she has known Hamilton since 1878; that in November, 1892, she visited the house of Alexander Hamilton and had noticed the erratic conduct of her brother-in-law; that he threatened to take her life several times and also threatened to kill his wife and himself; that she considered him totally unfit to take care of himself, and that he is suffering from disease of the brain and has become childish.

Other Affidavits.

Mabel Hamilton, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, makes an affidavit similar to that of Miss Bodine.

Mrs. Hamilton's attorneys are Edward P. Schell, A. I. Elkus and Colonel Edward O. James, while Mr. Hamilton will be represented in the proceedings by William Vulmer, a partner of Robert Ray Hamilton.

Mrs. Hamilton is about 47 years old. The couple have had frequent quarrels, which at times necessitated the calling in of the police to quell the disturbance. The present trouble dates back to 1890.

Some time during the year it is said that an article appeared in one of the New York newspapers entitled "Reminiscences of the Rebellion, by Alexander Hamilton de Hoved." The articles were said by Mrs. Annie Freeman. She wrote to General Hamilton asking him if he was the General Hamilton she had met 30 years before and who also was an intimate friend of her husband, who fought in the late war. The general answered this communication, it is said, in person. He called at the house, and there met Mrs. Freeman and her daughter Dora.

Took a Trip to Washington.

General Hamilton's wife found that her husband, accompanied by Mrs. Freeman, had taken a trip to Washington. They had registered at a hotel and occupied adjoining rooms.

Some time ago Mrs. Hamilton built the house in which she lives, and he persuaded her to give a mortgage on the place and to build with the proceeds a house on an adjoining lot owned by the general. This property he transferred to his wife, but asked her not to place the deed upon record.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Hamilton learned, she says, that her husband had drawn up a deed giving the property to Mrs. Freeman. The deed had been executed and was to be sent forthwith to the register's office at White Plains to be recorded. Mrs. Hamilton, however, got her deed from a vault in the bank and drove post haste to White Plains to record it.

A Disorderly, says Mrs. Freeman.

Mrs. Hamilton was seen at her home. She said: "I married the general in Jacksonville, Fla., while he was traveling in the south for his health. Although his family is wealthy, he was penniless.

"I gave him $100 to buy his clothing with. Although the Hamilton family have been prominent in the history of this country for over 100 years, my family is just as well known. My father lived at Montgomery, Orange county, and Bodine Bridge, in that county, is named after him."

Mrs. Annie Freeman was seen at her home, 134 West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street. She is a widow with several adult children, who live with her. Mrs. Freeman's sister and her husband share her home.

She also has a number of boarders. She denied that she was detaining General Hamilton or had any undue influence over him. He merely boarded with her. She went to Washington with him, she said, at the request of his son for the general's health. Her daughter was with them. She had never any idea that the general was insane.

A BULLET IN HIS HEAD.

Strange Death of Mr. Muser, a Wealthy New York Merchant.

SUFFERN, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Richard Muser, head of the firm of Muser Brothers, lace importers, whose store is at the corner of Greene and Broome streets, New York, was found on his farm with a bullet hole in his head. He was unconscious. Physicians worked over him all day until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when he died without having recovered consciousness.

Mr. Muser was supposed to be a very wealthy man and was one of the best known men in Rockland county. His home was on a large farm one mile east of Suffern.

Mr. Muser was one of the directors of the New York Life Insurance company. He was in partnership with his brother, Curt Muser, who lives in Belgium, and Frederick W. Muser of Brussels was a special partner for $600,000. Richard was a member of the Manhattan club, the Union League club, the Tuxedo club and the late Manhattan Athletic club.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

WHERE WAS LITTLE MATILDA!

A Story of a Little Girl Who Was Always Looking About For Something New.

If you lived at Oak farm, you would have heard Matilda's mother asking 20 times a day:

"Where is little Matilda?"

For little Matilda was always hunting about to see what she could find. And she found the farm a good place for looking about. There was always something new to be seen, and if there did not happen to be anything new little Matilda was content with the old ones.

"WHAT PRETTY LITTLE THINGS THEY ARE!"

One day she could not be found anywhere, and her mother and all the maids were running about saying:

"Where can little Matilda be?"

And at last it was found that little Matilda had crept into the dog Rover's large kennel and was sitting behind Rover, who was looking out in front wagging his tail, for he was very fond of little Matilda.

Another time she was found in the dairy, where she had taken two saucers and the two cats, Tabby and Blackie, and was giving them a treat of milk and cream, much to the anger of the dairymaid.

But little Matilda thought she should like to go farther away from the house than she had been before.

"If I go by the palings, I dare say I shall find something new."

"What can that be?" said little Matilda, half aloud. "This is too far for a hen to be away from the farmyard. I must go and see."

So little Matilda kept along by the palings until she suddenly came to a stop. She still heard the hen clucking, and she looked round and round, and at last she found a place through which she could manage to scramble.

"Why," she said, "there is a hen and her chickens living here. What pretty little things they look. Why, I know the henwife well; it is Mrs. Goldie. Why, Mrs. Goldie, how did you come here?" But as Mrs. Goldie could not speak she could not tell little Matilda anything. So after Matilda had looked long enough at Mrs. Goldie and her chickens she went home, and there she heard that Tom, the man who took care of the poultry, thought that change of air would be good for Mrs. Goldie, and so he made a sort of coop down by the palings for her.

"And I found it out," said little Matilda.

Wood Mice.

There are many kinds of mice, and though some people are afraid of them they are all perfectly harmless. Some of them gnaw holes in our houses and carry off bits of food, but there is not a mouse in the world who is not more afraid of us than we can possibly be of him.

The greatest enemies of the wood mouse are the stoats and the owls. To escape the former, mother mouse builds her warm nest on a shrub or tree, but she finds it hard work to hide it from the sharp eyed owl. If the baby mice escape this silent thief of the night, they are very lucky.

A Fine Exiley Day Game.

"Hoop and ball" is a very pretty little game in which both hoops and balls are used, but the balls are not thrown to be caught, and the hoops are not rolled.

You get six wooden hoops, all of different sizes, such as will measure from 12 to 8 inches across. Each person has a little screw hook to hang it up by.

Next prepare a place to suspend the hoops. That may be a stout wire fixed across the playroom about seven feet from the floor, or you can put up your wire across the attic between rafters, at the same height, or in the barn. Or if you wish to play out of doors you can have the wire stretched between trees.

Now, just where the hook is, fasten to each hoop a cord reaching to the center of the hoop, with a ball attached to the end.

A GOOD THROW.

To play, you throw a rubber or worsted ball at each hoop in turn. If it goes through the hoop without ringing the bell, it counts by fives, according to the size of the hoop, the largest 5, the smallest 30. But if the ball goes through and rings the bell, you add 10 to the count. If it rings the bell and falls back without going through the hoop, count only 10. The game is 100.

Each player throws at all the hoops every time it is his turn.

This is a good play say time, anywhere, and it is the very best rainy day game that I know of. In a barn, or an attic, or the playroom, says a writer in the Atlanta Constitution, in which a picture shows a small boy in the act of making a good throw. He pas just rung the bell.

Bound For Fairyland.

Two little maidens went hand in hand,
Trudging and toiling to fairyland;
They lost their way in a tangled dell
And came at last to a wishing well.

What did they wish for? They wished for home,
But gave their hand to a merry gnome,
Who led them to a fairy bower,
And there they slept in a lily flower.

Through fairy morrows each reigned a queen,
In jeweled crown and a robe of green,
But in the arbor where roses peep
Their kind nurse found them—they'd gone to sleep.

SHOULD SHE MARRY?

THIS QUESTION IS ASKED ABOUT THE BUSINESS WOMAN.

Here Is a Writer Who Thinks She Should Remain a Spinster—An Opinion Which Many Men and Women Will Not Agree With—A Question with Two Sides.

It is perhaps because the press and the public think that the woman who goes out to earn her bread has a good deal on her hands already, that they discuss at such length her private affairs. The presumption is that she has no time to think about them herself.

They prescribe a suitable dress for her—a tailor-made affair, which suggests a quick bathing suit and the costume of a Mexican greaser. They tell her how to behave, and advise her how to get on in the world. They point out her privileges and enlighten her as to her supposed rights, and now they have fallen to discussing her matrimonial chances.

At the outset this seems superfluous. It is perfectly obvious that the woman who goes to work does marry—sometimes with a degree of speed and an amount of success fairly disgusting to the one who must achieve her destiny through the ordinary social machinery. For, sentimentalists to the contrary, the happiness has a great deal to do with our poor human affections, and if matches are arranged in heaven, some insufficient angel takes good care to plan them so as to save mortals any great sum for traveling expenses.

Whenever men and women of apportionately the same social grade work side by side there is sure to be an undue proportion of weddings. The disenchantment of familiarity, the continued friction which is the inevitable concomitant of even the pleasantest daily toil, the gradual dissolution of the novelty which makes the new friend more interesting, if no more esteemed, than the old—all these forces are powerless beside the stronger one of mere propinquity.

HER EVOLUTION.

The pretty typewriter, the graded school teacher, the cashier, the government clerk, all show fairly conclusive evidence that the woman who is a breadwinner marries easily—that is, quickly. The only question to discuss is whether she really achieves the happiness which it may be taken for granted she has in view when she alters her condition. As there are no statistics, all one can do is to run briefly over the logical probabilities of the case.

In the course of her evolution from the strictly domestic type, the woman herself has undergone certain changes. To begin with, she has proved herself as belonging to one of the two great classes into which all women who have to come to a hand to hand struggle with the world are divided—the woman who can take care of herself and the woman who cannot. Doubtless the latter is the more pitiable spectacle, but she is hardly less agreeable than the other.

A woman can learn the a b c of commercial principles—sometimes much more than this; she can school herself to such a manner that the man of whom she buys a house or to whom she sells a lot will forget to take a leering in the absurd tactics which the sterner sex resorts to when it wants to turn an honest penny without doing violence to its chivalrous instincts; she may learn to be as unperverse in criticism and oblivious to impertinence, but whoever says she can get these things without loss of others equally valuable proves that he has not made an exhaustive study of this kind of feminine success.

It is a mistake to describe these changes in earlier days as masculine. They are feminine. The real fact is that she becomes objectionably feminine. Traits which the circumstances under more fortunate conditions have become very unpleasantly active. The woman of affairs must be a hypocrite if she would succeed. She must constantly affect to like the things she dislikes and to despise the ones she likes. If she can do this well she will ultimately make her fortune; but in the greater number of cases the woman who attempts it produces much the same impression as would an ambitious fish who should gasp great breaths of dry, fresh air and cry, "Oh, how delightful!"

It is all very well to say that a woman lays down the weapons of her own sex when she takes up a sort of work in which she can make her own living; but, if she does so, she does it in the face of the strongest temptation to use them under cover and where they will be most effective

EFFECT OF DOMESTICITY.

The reversion to the domestic type from which she had so laboriously differentiated herself is a fact of which only one woman in a thousand is capable. The original change is hard enough, but to retrace her steps! Domesticity is like innocence; once lost, it cannot be regained.

Though it is unwise for a woman who has forsaken the usual paths wherein her sex is appointed to walk to marry any man, in the case of a normally unfortunate one when she chooses, as we have seen she is very likely to do, a helpmeet who has traveled side by side with her. It is true that he will respect her capacity for affairs—sometimes to the degree of throwing off all responsibility with regard to the practical needs of the family—but the best that she can hope for from him forever and ever is that he will continue to be her very good comrade. He will assume that because she can take care of herself there is no need that he should take care of her.

He will not worry when she travels alone, or make dear little fusses about her practical inspection or criticism of the way she keeps her account books or attempts to instruct her in public affairs by mild lectures made up of political talk for babes. In short, he will not do any of the things which make life worth living and love worth having to ninety women out of every hundred.

No, on the whole, the business woman had better not marry. She had better contrive herself with the knowledge that she has attained all feminine hides of having "plenty of chances," and rest secure in the honorable order of Spinsters by Choice—her own choice, and no one else's.—Eunice Dorr in Kate Field's Washington.

Girls Surpass the Boys.

At Iowa college a careful record has been kept of the comparative standing of the young women and men in class work. From this the interesting fact has been gleaned that the average standing of the young women has been above that of the young men in every term but one in nine years in the sophomore class in every term and in the senior class in every term but two; that is, the average standing of the young women was higher than that of the young men thirty two times out of thirty six.—Exchange.

WHITE, of Plainfield,

Fashions in Women's Dress 30 Years Ago.

Ah! who that remembers woman's dress of thirty years ago would be willing to return to it? Skirts full gathered or plaited over great, clumsy, swinging wire cages, and very long, trailing, not only over drawing room carpets, but over the inexpressibly flinky shrieks and shrieks, mostly of cloth or thin kid; big bonnets with hideous little shells called capes hanging over the backs of the wearers' necks, flowerily held in a position where they could neither protect nor ornament the head by broad ribbons tied in immense bows beneath the chin; long and wide circular cloaks, fastened at the neck by two or three buttons, giving no protection to the arms, flouting out behind as one walked, and holding the wind like the mainsail of a ship, while the voluminous skirts from the muddy pave ment with the other.

Ugh! How ugly all these fashions were! But youth was just as beautiful then as now, and many are the blooming faces I can recall as they looked sweetly forth from their disfigurements. Yes, my dear, bright girls of from sixteen to twenty, your mothers and aunts were once just as beautiful as you are now. You don't believe me, I see, but it is true. And they were quite as happy and content with themselves, and just as modest and "proper," too, though they saw no harm in accepting help from strangers, and in going to balls and theaters without other attendance than that of "Brother Tom" or even "Cousin Fred." Circumstances alter cases. The simple way of thirty years ago, when New York was more like a big overgrown village than a city, cannot be compared with the customs that have become necessary in one of the largest and certainly the most cosmopolitan of cities in the world.—Helen Evertson Smith in New York Independent.

How One Woman Washes.

There is truth in the quotation, "There wouldn't be so many tired people in the world if men would stop climbing hills before they get to them." And washing seems to be one of the hardest hills a woman has to climb. Yet there is no need of her starting Monday afternoon or laying awake Sunday night to think about it. She can get up Monday morning, put on the boiler and heat some water at the same time she is cooking breakfast, if she has planned something easy to get, which she can do if she chooses. As soon as the water is sufficiently warm, take the cleanest of the clothes, soap the parts most soiled, roll up each garment or article separately and pack them in a tub with lukewarm water enough to cover them.

Leave the boiler on the stove, and after breakfast warm up the water in the tub by turning on a few dippersful of hot water. Rub out the clothes as they need it, throwing them into another tub of lukewarm water. You will be surprised to see how little rubbing they will need, and when you have finished rubbing will put the clothes out of the sudsing tub, rinse them through the cold bluing water and they are white and clean, ready for the clothes line. You can pack the more soiled clothes in the water you have rubbed the cleaner clothes through, or part of that used for suddsing, refilling that tub, of course, and your washing is soon done.

We always leave the boiler on the stove so as to have a supply of hot water, and at the last, if there is any blued, we throw in a few of the most soiled clothes and let them scald a moment. The clothes are much whiter than if allowed to boil, and you don't have the steam and heat. We don't use hard or kerosene or washing fluid for anything but scrubbing the kitchen floor. Use good soap.—Cor. New England Homestead.

How a Woman Mounts Her Wheel.

The young women who ride bicycles are fond of wheeling their machines on the beginning of the Boulevard at Fifty-ninth street, alongside the park. There they mount and ride up the Boulevard. But the thing is easier said than done. It is a public and a notable event whenever a lady mounts her wheel. She stops and stands beside it. Then she looks up and down the street and over all the trees in the park and along the houses facing them. Immediately people appear in all the windows. Butcher boys put down their baskets, pedestrians who had supposed themselves in a hurry stop and loiter on the curbs. Men in the act of stopping a car turn back and allow the car to go on, while they look at the girl with the wheel. Everybody is now looking at her, and she has assumed a startled air of unconcern.

She sets her teeth and begins to look sidewise at the wheel and to move it along. She walks beside it—a quarter of a block—a half a block. There is a time for everything, but the time for getting aboard the wheel is long a-coming. Soon she raises one foot and hops with the other. The people come out of the windows. She lifts one leg on the saddle and scratches and dabs at the earth with the other foot. She strikes the ground hard and, with a vigorous hump, lands squarely on the saddle. Then she moves away with her drapery flying and her russet shoes tipteeing out from under her skirts. When she is a block away the errand boys take up their baskets and catch up the tunes they were whistling when first they saw her. In half a minute life is humdrum on the Boulevard go on as before.—New York Sun.

Marriage in Jerusalem.

In Jerusalem marriages are always conducted by the old women. The old one will praise the charms of a young woman to a young man whom she considers suitable for the passage, and gaining his consent acquaints his inamorita with the fact. The marriage is performed by the shiek of the synagog, but the bashful doesn't see his wife until she unveils in the nuptial chamber. The woman's wishes are never consulted in the matter. The man is allowed four wives. When in the presence of a man the woman must veil her face totally, and when traveling she must ride in a closed conveyance. A man is not allowed to see even his brother's wife. This custom of veiling is not observed by the peasant class. When a woman goes to visit a female friend every man in that friend's house is banished during her stay.—Detroit Free Press.

An Agile Queen.

When Queen Margaret of Italy goes upon her climbing tours through the mountains of Gressoney she adopts the costume of the mountain peasants, which consists of stout boots, a short red skirt and a black bodice. This rustic attire suits to perfection her striking beauty, and it is no wonder that the simple country people worship her. The queen is an indefatigable walker, and her love for this exercise is of great assistance to her attendants. "Why, I assure you," said one of them the other day, "that her majesty actually climbed up a rock with her hands when all the time she might have got round by a path."—Cor. Baltimore American.

Fishing.

A youth beside the water sits.
The noonday sun is warmly beaming;
His nose and neck are turkey red,
His eye with radiant hope is gleaming.
He watches close the bobbing cork
As soon upon the day billows;
A jerk, a swish, and high above
He lands a sucker in the willows.
That's fishing.

A fair maid trips the tennis court,
A dozen eyes admire her going;
Her black and yellow blazer burns
A hole right through the summer's glowing.
She drives the ball across the net,
And into hearts consumed with wishing
She drives a dart; Cupid's dare;
She'll land a sucker too, she's fishing.
That's fishing.

The politician on his dander
Tackles both wet Democrats and granger;
He tries to make them think that he Alone can save the land from danger.
He cheats the lady on the sly,
He says your wife looks really youthful,
And, though you love you've fifty-five,
You look just twenty and he's truthful.
That's fishing.

My little wife bobbs me stands
And steals a dimpled arm around me;
A kiss upon my face she lands
Some information to astound me.
Her bonnet is quite out of style;
Her dress more wraps quite pass the mine;
That lovely one—no closer—at Brown's
Is just the one she'll be choosing.
That's fishing.

So, whether the game be fish or men,
The bait be kisses, worms or bluebacks—
The place at home, by sunny pool,
Or lands beyond at wealthy Hushes—
'Tis the old game the serpent played
With Mother Eve in Eden's bowers;
And all mankind are fishers of
Will love the sport to time's last hours.
That's fishing.

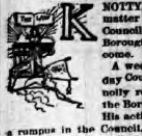
THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

A SINGULAR SPECIAL MEETING LAST NIGHT.

The Mayor's Unparliamentary Action Generally Denounced, especially When the Trivial Matter that Caused it is Considered.



KNOTTY, indeed, is the matter of electing a Councilman in the Borough likely to become.

A week ago yesterday Councilman Connolly resigned from the Borough Council. His action has caused a rumpus in the Council. His resignation made the Council stand three Republicans to two Democrats. Mayor Saunders, Democrat, does not vote unless to decide a tie. This gave the Republicans an opportunity to elect a Republican to fill Mr. Connolly's unexpired term. A Republican could have been appointed.

Before the meeting was called to order last night there was much uneasiness visible in the looks and actions of the Democrats. It was plainly evident that some scheme was "in the wind."

Mayor Saunders called the meeting to order, but omitted to have the roll called. It was the first time he ever did so.

He asked the clerk to read the bills, which he referred to the proper committees. He then said: "As Councilman Howell is absent to-night, and as Assessor Cooley will have the budget ready next Friday night, it would be best to adjourn to that date. Council is adjourned."

Although Councilman Needham was on his feet to object before the Mayor finished, he was not listened to. The Mayor merely said "Council is adjourned," and walked out of the Council chamber followed by Councilman Neal.

For a moment all were amazed. Never before had such a scene been witnessed in the Council chamber. Councilman Needham then ordered the Clerk to call the roll. He did so, and, finding that a quorum was not present, the Councilmen adjourned.

Democrats and Republicans alike were loud in their denunciation of the Mayor's action. At the bottom of the stairs a prominent Republican stopped the Mayor and told him that he thought him "no gentleman" and then he added, "to think that I helped elect such a man Mayor." The Mayor, without replying, walked away.

Both the Republican Councilmen and those in the lobby were surprised at Mayor Saunders' action.

Councilman Edwards said it was the worst "sag law" he ever heard of and that Saunders must have taken them for a lot of "Tammany heelers."

The Mayor's action is considered to indicate that he would put the most trivial politic matter ahead of the business interests of the borough, and that is the reason his action is so earnestly condemned.

It is hoped his better judgement will prevail before another meeting takes place, and that he will not act in a way that will do neither himself nor the borough any credit.

150 MACHINISTS IDLE.

At Least That Many Will Be Out of Work After To-Night.

In addition to laying off 20 men last night the Potter Press Works notified their employes that hereafter until further notice they would run but eight hours a day.

The Carpet Factory has shut down.

Fifty-three men are to be laid off at the Pond Machine Tool Works to-night. This will make about 150 machinists out of work in this city.

BIBLEVITIES.

—No ball game to-day.

—To-night there will be a song service in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—Mr. A. V. D Honeyman's third tour to the World's Fair will start Monday.

—White of Plainfield has something to say of interest in his little space. Read it.

—A colored man and woman were arrested this morning by Policeman Kiely, for fighting.

—Howard Wilson was thrown from a horse on Somerset street this morning. He was not injured.

—The entries for the 25-mile road race of the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers, to be held August 19, close with Captain Kiely to-night.

—The Plainfield Cornet Band played at the merry-go-round last night. A colored man attempted to do several "bare back acts" on one of the wooden horses. He often missed his horse and came down on the platform. Another colored man potsed himself directly in front of the band and tried to set the part of drum major, sometimes singing and sometimes dancing, going through a lot of manoeuvres with his arms, feet and face. In crossing over the small foot bridge several were crowded off and treated to wet feet.

Salvationists Visit Orange.

Six of the soldiers of the Salvation Army left on the 6.00 train last night for Orange, to visit the corps at that place, which is in charge of Capt. E. March and Lieut. Shanno, formerly in charge of the corps of this place.

THE TRESTLE GAVE WAY

ENGINE NO. 200 NARROWLY ESCAPES TUMBLING IN A COAL YARD.

Its Weight Held Up by An Iron Rail, Under Which the Woodwork Had Fallen.—It Might Have Been a Fatal Accident.

Fireman Dunham and Engineer Wilcox were placed in a perilous position this morning, and but for the good qualities in an iron rail they might have been crushed or scalded to death. They are in charge of engine 200 which is used to drill cars in and out the coal yards and at the freight house.

This morning they were switching two loaded coal cars on the trestle over L. A. Rheaume & Co's coal yard. The trestle, which has been in use a long time, although of heavy timber gave way under the engine. Fortunately the woodwork gave way under one rail, which, though it bent under the strain, held up and kept the engine from going down into the empty coal bin. Had the engine gone through, both the engineer and fireman would, no doubt, have been killed or seriously injured.

The truck wheels have been removed from the engine and this throws the weight of the engine on the "drivers." The engine rocked for a few moments as if it were going to topple over by the sudden strain which it went down. The removal of the truck no doubt had much to do with the accident. Had they been on the weight of the engine would have been divided. The wrecking train was sent for and the engine helped out of its predicament with the derrick.

FISH STORIES.

In Which Plainfielders and a Fanwood Man are Concerned.

Several fish stories are now being told of Plainfielders. One is that yesterday Councilman Weber, and Messrs. Bock and Voehl went fishing at Manasquan. They had good luck and were returning home doting on their catch. In the car with them was Judge Moore of Fanwood, who after hearing about their great catch of the finy tribe, sneaked off to the baggage car and helped himself to the finest fish in the party's basket.

The fisherman did not discover their loss until they reached home, when to their surprise they were minus their biggest fish. They now want Judge Moore.

Policeman Giese and Eugene Laise went to Bound Brook fishing yesterday. They returned about ten o'clock last night with a basket of fish. They didn't say how they got them. Just how they did get possession of so many fish leaked out in a very roundabout way. A friend of both parties stood at the corner of Park and North streets talking to a man from Bound Brook. He was a stranger to all concerned. As Policeman Giese passed he asked "Who is that man?" "That is Policeman Giese," replied the friend. "Why I saw him buy a basket of fish of a man at Bound Brook station to-day," said the Bound Brook man.

This accounts for their big catch.

THEY ROBBED AN OLD MAN

And Then Commenced to Fall Each Other's Hair.

An old man rushed out of Pruden's alley yesterday, and told Policeman Kiely he had been robbed of $5 by women. Policeman Kiely immediately investigated the matter. He found Maggie Bentford and Sarah Haley fighting and pulling each other's hair at a lively rate. Policeman Kiely took them both to the lockup along with another woman he found there whom they called "the dressmaker." The dressmaker was fined $10, and the other two sentenced to pay $20 fines, or be committed to the county jail for twenty days. They took the 20 days.

THE ICE FELL ON HIM.

A Chair Upset and Threw Iceman Morton on the Floor.

Wednesday, as Superintendent John Morton of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company was assisting men fill Mr. J. W. Van Sickle's ice box, he met with an accident, from the effects of which he was compelled to stay home the next day. He stood on a chair in order to reach the top of the ice box. As he was lifting a cake of ice up, the chair upset, throwing him on the floor. The piece of ice fell on his arm and hand, causing severe bruises. In falling his hip was also injured.

He is Well Known in Somerville.

John Amerman of White House, was arrested at Plainfield, on Tuesday for trying to scare his wife into giving him part of her wages to spend for drink. This man Amerman is well known in Somerville by some people of whom he has borrowed money.—Somerset Democrat.

Frightened While Drinking.

This noon as one of Mr. Andrew Letkins' horses was drinking at the trough in front of Mr. Thorn's place on Somerset street, a car went by, frightening the animal until it dashed the wagon against a pole. The harness was broken.

SOMERSET COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

A Regular Meeting Held at Somerville Last Tuesday.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met in regular session at Somerville, Tuesday. Bills were ordered paid amounting to $695.31. Estimates made by the members of the probable cost of bridges in their respective townships for the current year were as follows:

Bedminster	$2,500
Bernards	2,000
Branchburg	2,000
Bridgewater	4,000
Franklin	2,000
Hillsborough	2,500
Montgomery	2,000
North Plainfield	2,000
Warren	2,100
	$24,100

$20,000 was authorized to be be raised by taxation for appropriations for county expenses for the current year.

The contract for the mason work of the Westervelt avenue bridge, between Plainfield and North Plainfield, was awarded to E. Bartle at $4.40 per cubic yard, and the iron work to W. T. Kirk for $2,100.

Amerman Fined $25.

John Amerman of White House, who was arrested Tuesday, for causing a disturbance at Evona, was given a hearing last night. Mayor Gilbert fined him $25. Amerman came to Evona and demanded that his wife pay him half her wages. When she refused he became abusive and was arrested by Policeman Krimey after a chase to the train.

Mrs. Wyatt Fined $10.

Mrs. Wyatt, the colored woman who was arrested yesterday morning for assaulting her husband by slapping him in the face, and who, when ordered away by Chief Grant, refused to go, was given a hearing last night. She was fined $10, which was paid by her husband.

ROBBED THE BANK.

And Fled With a Lot of Clothing.

Mary Robinson is a gay young colored woman. A few weeks ago Mary's antics in Plainfield procured for her a call in the county jail. She disported around the "Colorado of the East" in male attire and considered it a great lark, but the authorities disagreed with her.

After her release from jail Mary secured a temporary home with the family of Jno. D. Foster, also colored, at 229 Railroad avenue, and for awhile all went well.

Mrs. Foster has a child, and like most children, this little one saves its pennies by putting them in a little bank which is kept on the mantel.

Yesterday morning there was a surprise in the Foster household. The fact that Mary Robinson had left for parts unknown created no unusual feeling, but when the child's bank was found to be empty, and when it was discovered that several dresses and other clothing belonging to Mrs. Foster had disappeared, there was consternation among the family.

It was at once suspected that the articles and money had gone with Mary and the police were asked to find her. They traced her to New York and last night brought her back to Elizabeth and placed her behind the bars at police headquarters.

As the prisoner had no one to go bail for her she was committed to await the action of the court.—Elizabeth Journal.

The Weather.

On Sunday, in both of these sections, fair to partly cloudy weather will prevail, with considerable local rains on the coasts, followed by clearing and the "cool wave" and on Monday the weather will be bright and cooler, with southwest winds.

WHAT DO YOU SAY.

Weather Prophet De Voe, of Hackensack, says the hottest weather of the season is upon this section and will last about a month. He says the coming "cool wave" and on Monday the weather will be a severe one. The drought over Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky will last a month yet. He predicts occasional showers for this locality.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Longest Railway in the World.

It is the trans-Asian railway of Siberia, which the Russian government is building at an estimated cost of $265,000,000. The figures will mount higher than that before it is completed, however. From Vladivostock, the Russian seaport on the Pacific, east coast of Siberia, westward to Cheliabinsk, on the east side of the Ural mountains, the projected line will measure 4,560 miles in length. The western end of the line from the Ural mountains eastward is well under way now. Although 1897 has been fixed as the year of completion for this whole stupendous work, yet it is certain that the twentieth century will dawn before it is done.

Central Siberia, which the road will traverse, is almost as unknown to civilization as the middle of Africa. The line pushes eastward and slightly north to the capital of western Siberia, Omsk, as its first objective point. Omsk is about 500 miles from the Ural mountains. Through barren salt steppes as desolate as the oldtime "Great American desert," the road leads to Omsk. Russia hopes, however, to reclaim this region just as much of the American desert has been reclaimed through irrigation. But northward of the line, toward central Siberia, is a tract which can most nearly be compared to the great wheatfields of our own Dakotas, though plow has as yet scarcely scratched its virgin soil. Russia proper is fast becoming overcrowded with a rural population that is too ignorant and brutish to do more than trim the best of farm lands. The soil of Russia proper has thus been already worn out, much of it, and the hope of the white czar now is to transport many of his agricultural children over his great railway to the garden of central Siberia, where it will take generations to strip the soil as they have done in their old homes.

A little farther eastward, south of the main line, is the mining district of the Altai mountains, where many enthusiasts believe gold surpassing that of Australia or California will yet be found. Thus far, about half the length of the great road, there is a reason for its existence. For the eastern half there is no sufficient commercial reason at present. Russia needs it to transport soldiers and military supplies. She has besides a dim dream that she can by its means bring part of the trade from southern Asia to Vladivostock and bend it around to western Europe across Siberia.

The Berlin Sewage Farms.

The city of Berlin is absolutely cholera proof, writes Mr. Poultney Bigelow in The Cosmopolitan. Besides that she disposes of all the sewage within her borders at a profit of 3 per cent. The two facts belong together. The city of Berlin nearly 20 years ago purchased some thousands of acres of flat sand wastes adjacent to her boundaries. With these she began the experiment of utilizing sewage. The city was divided into districts. In each district the sewage flows into an immense cesspool. Thence it is removed by powerful pumping machinery to the fields of the sand wastes and spread upon them.

There are no "barnacle politicians" in Berlin to hang on and ruin the workings of the municipal government, Mr. Bigelow says. The administration of the sewage farms is in the hands of citizens of the highest respectability, and under their management the result has grown to be an object lesson to all the cities of the earth. The pumps work night and day. The lands irrigated by the sewage ditches are cultivated in grain and vegetables. The product is the finest by far that appears in the Berlin markets and is the most in demand. Land about Berlin in its natural state before the sewage irrigation was applied to it was worth $182 the acre. As soon as it is put under the operation of the gigantic pumping works, however, it immediately rises in value to $400.

This autumn the medical department of Johns Hopkins university will be opened to women students on equal terms with men. The requirements for admission to the medical school are of the highest grade—maintained in this country. The applicant to Johns Hopkins must be a graduate of a regular college or have an education equivalent to it. The medical course itself has been lengthened to four years. If this sort of training for physicians becomes general in America, the doctors of the twentieth century will every one of them know how to spell. The University of Pennsylvania has lengthened the medical course to four years, so also has Harvard. All of them should demand the college education or its equivalent as preliminary to entrance on the physician's course. The lack of it vary training in our medical profession has been a serious drawback hitherto.

Eugene Field writes this of Thomas Brower Peacock, who read the Columbian ode at the World's press congress: "Mr. Peacock's music is peculiarly his own. There is in its muse an originality, a freshness and audacity which could hardly be looked for elsewhere than upon the boundless prairies of Kansas, whose illimitable vastness is itself an inspiration to great endeavor."

Telegraph linemen are becoming careless again because not many of them have been killed lately.

HOUSE BILL NUMBER ONE

The Field Cleared For the Great Silver Battle.

SENATORS ARE LINING UP TOO.

Senator Wilson Introduces the Repeal Bill, and the Debate Is Limited to Four-teen Days.—Kafirmeter Road Criticises His Opponents' Measures.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The silver fight began in earnest in the house immediately after the approval of the journal. It was not unexpected, as the fact was known that the silverites and the antisilver men on the Democratic side had reached an agreement as to the method to be pursued and as to the time within which the debate should be limited.

The first gun of the battle was fired by Mr. Wilson of West Virginia. The missile was in the shape of a bill for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. Then came forward Mr. Bland of Missouri with a flag of truce, under which, after some little objection from the Republicans, an arrangement was effected whereby a debate for 14 days, with night sessions if desired, was provided for, votes to be taken on ratios varying from 16 to 1 to 20 to 1, and on an amendment providing for free coinage of the daily sessions of the house to extend from 11 a. m. until 5 p. m.

The Silver Men's Bill.

The silver men opened their batteries in the shape of a bill (offered as a substitute) for the free coinage of silver at the present ratio. This started the ball. Mr. Rayner of Maryland was the first champion sent out by the antisilver cohorts, and he fought vigorously and well. He was re-enforced by Mr. Brown of Indiana, who, in a brief speech, advocated the repeal of the Sherman act conditionally or unconditionally. Mr. Bland of Missouri was put forward to return the fusillade of argument and eloquence, and he performed his part without detracting from his reputation as the leader of the silver forces on the floor.

He was followed by the Populist member from Colorado, Mr. Pence, who contented himself as a matter of fact for the protection of silver, and by Mr. Wheeler of Alabama, who demanded a greater volume of currency. The fight was still on when the house adjourned.

The Democratic caucus committee spent all day in considering various plans looking to the arrangement of an order of business, but no definite action was taken. No motions of any kind were made, and the discussion was of an informal character. The committee has not to meet in the evening, but will have another meeting today, at which the consideration of an order of business will be continued.

Mr. Reed Speaks Briefly.

After the house had voted to adopt without debate the order of Mr. Bland fixing the procedure for the discussion of the silver bill, ex-Speaker Reed said to a reporter:

"This action of the Democracy shows how little they can be relied on for nonpartisan action. On a very important proposition involving the whole question all debate was suppressed. Mr. Bland was permitted to formulate his own proposition, and no other was allowed to be even considered. Mr. Bland was given an opportunity to submit half a dozen propositions. Other members could not present even one. If the plain proposition had been on yes or no to the recommendation of their own president, there would have been perfect readiness for a vote at once on one side, but if the whole question was to be open and long debate to be had the house ought to have had a chance to provide for the increase of the metallic currency, for just now the need of the country is currency, and the country ought to see a chance to provide for its needs. However, the Democracy has assumed the responsibility, which is something."

Rifer; Waukesha, Isaac Palmer; Woolward, L. D. Orndorf.

The Times on Wilson's Bill.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The Times today, commenting on the proceedings in the United States congress, says: "That a parity between gold and silver must be maintained is agreed by all parties in the United States congress. If Mr. Wilson's bill becomes a law, the thing can be done, but that it can be done if the Sherman act remains in force or if silver be admitted to free coinage is more than doubtful."

Fire in a Troy Hotel.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Fire at 1 o'clock this morning did about $1,000 damage to the Troy House. The guests were thoroughly frightened, but the quick work of the firemen prevented any further disaster.

Drowned Herself and Baby.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Elmer Schlpamsse, aged 23 years, ended the life of her 3-months-old baby by throwing it into the Passaic river and then committed suicide by drowning.

Brooklands Stock Farm Burned.

TROY, Pa., Aug. 12.—The Brooklands stock farm buildings were burned. Fifteen valuable horses and a number of blooded cattle were destroyed.

A NEW YORK PROGRAMME.

What the Democrats Propose to Do This Fall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—The Sun says today: Senator David B. Hill is at 4 West Netherland hotel and will remain in town until early next week, when he will return to Washington. The senator be lyes that the Sherman law will be repealed.

The Democratic state committee will, in all likelihood, meet in New York city late in the month, and the state convention will probably be called to meet in Saratoga late in September—as late as possible. Senator Murphy will continue to act as chairman of the state committee and will head the coming campaign with his usual vigor.

The programme at the moment is not to renominate Frank Rice of Canandaigua as secretary of state and Elliot Danforth of Rainbridge as state treasurer on the ground that they have served two successive terms in these offices, and Democrats don't believe in third terms. The proposition is to renominate the following: Comptroller, Frank Campbell of Bath; attorney general, Simon W. Rosendale of Albany; state engineer, Martin Schenck of Greenbush.

The Democratic state leaders are consulting about the best men to take the places of Mr. Rice and Mr. Danforth. If the coming fight there will be, it is declared, many interesting features. This should be considered an "off year" in state politics, it was said, but it promises to be anything but that.

TEN CASES OF CHOLERA.

The Plague Makes Headway on New York's Quarantine Islands.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—There are 10 cases of Asiatic cholera among quarantined passengers on Swinburne island and there has been one death. Health Officer Jenkins' latest report reads as follows:

"At 4 p. m., Friday, 10 cases were transferred to Swinburne island from Hoffman, and at 7:30 p. m. two more were taken to the same place. The first three are: Giovanni Lauria, aged 38 years, Italian; Vincenzi Trolia, aged 35 years, also a native of Italy, and Georgis Corias, aged 35 years, a Greek. The others are Domenico Di Cioppo, aged 17 years, and Antonio Pierini, aged 21 years, both Italians. All showed characteristic symptoms of cholera. The bacteriological examinations of the last cases received have not been completed as yet.

"The census of the hospital shows 19 patients, one of whom is convalescing. In three of the 10 the diagnosis of cholera has been medically confirmed.

"All are well on the Karamania. Thus far all the cases have developed within the period of incubation after the removal of the passengers from the steamer. The Massilia was discharged from quarantine, her passengers having been 19 days out from Naples without the slightest evidence of cholera appearing. Her bills of health were dated at Marseilles July 15 and Naples July 22."

MANY FINANCIAL TROUBLES.

Currency Is Scarce and Great Factories Are Shutting Down.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 12.—The two big woolen mills in Raritan have gone into the hands of a receiver. David L. Finstein of New York, president of the woolen mills, upon reading President Cleveland's message sent the following telegram to Raritan:

Owing to the president's threats in his message that the tariff will be changed in the near future, I want the mills to go on half time as soon as possible.

Kinyon Brothers have reduced the force in their iron foundry. The gas fitters' shop at Round Brook are working only three days a week, owing to lack of orders.

Big Mills Shut Down.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Aug. 12.—The Arnold print works, the largest mills in this town, together with the Beaver and Eclipse mills of Gallup & Houghton, in this town; the Williamstown Manufacturing company in Williamstown, and the North Pownal Manufacturing company at North Pownal, Vt., mills which made cloth for the Arnold print works, will shut down indefinitely tonight. More than 2,000 employes are affected.

Take Clearing House Certificates.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—The 19 banks in this city, comprising the Clearing House association, agreed that each bank should take $100 or multiples of certificates, or $500,000 in all, at 75 per cent of the face value of the securities offered, bearing interest at 6 per cent and 4 per cent commission.

Knitting Mills to Close.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 12.—The Stewart knitting mills will close tonight. Liddle Knitting and Green Knitting companies' mills will close Monday. The mill of Gardiner & Warring will shut down when the goods now in process of manufacture are run out.

Seven Hundred Unpaid Workmen.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 12.—The 700 men at work on the Bloomingdale asylum in the employ of Norcross Brothers, who have a million dollar contract for the construction of the new asylum building, will not receive their two weeks' pay today, owing to the tightness of the money market.

Cook, the Illegal Banker.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 12.—The bondsmen of Charles S. Cook, charged with illegal banking, surrendered him to the government, and he will be tried. Cook had banks in Mascoutah, Chicago, Sorrento, Gillespie, Ill., and in Hartford and Juneau, Wis.

Will Pay in Checks.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Aug. 12.—The Social Manufacturing company, the largest and wealthiest cotton concern here, will next week begin to pay its help in checks drawn on the clearing house at Providence.

DEATH FOR THE GANG.

Armed Men Hunted Down the Meachamites.

SURROUNDED THEM IN A SWAMP.

After the Outlaws Had Terrorized Four Counties For a Long Time the Citizens Arose and Took Revenge.—A Weird Tale From the South.

JACKSON, Ala., Aug. 12.—The counties of Clarke, Choctaw, Wilcox and Marengo are greatly excited over the murderous doings of the notorious Meachamites, and between 400 and 500 heavily armed men are in Meachamsburt for the avowed purpose of wiping out every member of the gang and avenging the numerous wrongs perpetrated upon the good people of the counties named. The Meachamites number between 25 and 30 men, and their point of operations is Meachamsburt, six miles from Coffeeville and about 17 miles from Thomasville.

Five years ago, when the settlement was founded, these men piled their vocation as farmers and were to all intents and purposes good citizens.

A year ago, however, the trouble began. The county is a prohibition one, but one day a sign was displayed on a tree in the village that whisky could be secured on certain nights during the week by applying at a certain store.

Customers were plentiful. When they entered the store they were met by masked men, who would deal out to them whisky in such quantities as desired. No questions were asked by officers of the law, but the liquor was warned under penalty of death to say nothing of the business methods followed by the dealer. This violation of the law went on for some time, and the selling of whisky led to the crimes being committed.

Murder and Arson Done.

Several fatal shootings between drunken men occurred. The best citizens expressed themselves freely, and several of them were threatened with death if they attempted to take any action. Finally John A. Hare had his barn, stables and house burned, and on his going into the yard to fight the flames he was shot at and narrowly escaped being killed.

Joseph Anderson was another victim. He was shot down while walking through his field and died instantly. His assassin was never arrested, although it was well known who committed the deed. A few months later a thrifty old negro, and the only one in the Meachamsburt at the time, was killed while at work in his mill.

At this time the clan was widening and taking in more new men. Terror existed among all, and upon joining the men threatened and sought to protect themselves. In December last Ernest McCorquodale's death followed. This cowardly assassination occurred about 10 o'clock Christmas night in the presence of the unfortunate victim's family, worked up the entire community, and his assassin was finally located. The evidence was complete, and on Monday afternoon the murderer met his death. He was James, the leader of the Meachamites and an unscrupulous villain in the community. The posse located James near Coffeville Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

He had been out attending a meeting of the clan and was on the way back and in the act of entering his gate, when four men who were stationed at nearby points of advantage fired upon him with the four rifles simultaneously. Every bullet took effect, and James fell in his tracks. His body was carried into the house by his family, and next morning the officers were informed in the little creme ery of the town. James leaves a wife and several children. Kirk James and others of the gang are said to have escaped within a short time.

Among the other acts of lawlessness committed by the gang were the distilling of illicit whisky and the counterfeiting of money. Since the killing of McCorquodale they have also added two more crimes to their category.

About a month ago a negro named Willis Hodnes was shot down while at work in the field near Coffeyville for an alleged insult to a white woman.

The Negro Was Innocent.

Two weeks ago the alarm was given in Meachamsburt that a negro had attempted to outrage a white woman. A posse was formed, and after a hard chase a bad negro thought before the woman, who failed to identify the guilty person. Sam House, a brother of Willis House, was one of the men in the posse. The mill of identified, but proved an alibi by two prominent men and was released. About two hours before daylight the next morning House was called to his door and shot dead by two unknown men.

Subsequent developments went to show that there was no attempt to outrage the woman, but the affair was a ruse to get a chance to dispose of House, who had related to certain parties that he knew who had killed his brother, Willis House.

Then followed the trouble at Thomasville, the Meachamites threatening to clean out the whole town on account of one of their number, who stole a pair of shoes, being discovered. The last outbreak on the part of the outlaws caused the law abiding citizens of all surrounding counties to come together and agree that the gang should be stamped out.

Later—Tooch Bedsoe, one of the Meachan gang, had escaped and after a hard chase was killed. He confessed that Bob Burke killed John Anderson and shot down Willis House, and that James, the leader of the gang, killed Ernest McCorquodale for a large sum of money and that James Condon killed Lem House; also that Captain James Forscue has been marked as the next victim. The posse riddled Bedsoe with bullets.

The dead of the gang are Lew James, Bedsoe and Kirk James. Other members of the gang are found in the swamps, and the posse propose to kill them all by tonight. One man, Sandy Norris, who was taken Friday, was to go to jail as a condition that the posse turned him over to the sheriff instead of shooting him.

PRESIDENT NEEDS REST.

He Tells Why He Left Washington For Gray Gables.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 12.—President Cleveland arrived on the steamer Puritan this morning and started for Gray Gables.

When the president left New York last night, it was stated that he was not feeling at all well. The following official statement was given out as to the cause of the president's return to his seaside home:

My absence from the capital at this time may create some surprise in view of my intense interest in the subject now awaiting the determination of congress. Though my views and recommendations have been already communicated to that body, and though I am by no means certain I could further aid in bringing about the result which seems so necessary, it would be a great satisfaction to me if I could remain at the scene of action.

But believing that my usefulness, if I shall rest with hope and confidence to the action of those upon whom the responsibility now rests of relieving our people from their present distress and difficulties.

I am going back to my summer home at the seashore because I am not sufficiently rested from the strain to which I have been subjected since the 4th of March to fit me to again assume the duties and labors which await me here. I have been counseled by those whose advice I cannot disregard that the further rest I contemplate is absolutely necessary to my health and strength. I shall remain away during the month of August and shall devote myself to real and complete recreation.

My day's doings will be devoid of interest to the public, and I shall be exceedingly pleased if I am free from the attentions of newspaper correspondents.

Cabinet Officers Leave Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Secretaries Carlisle and Gresham and Postmaster General Bissell left for Deer Park, Md. They will return on Monday.

MILLIONS INVOLVED.

An Alleged Illegal Bank and a Forged Will Features of the Case.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Harriet R. Sheffield, a niece of Isaac Andrew J. Davis of Butte City, Mon., who left an estate estimated at $15,000,000, filed a petition for her appointment as administratrix in New York on the property of the estate here. The estate has been in litigation in Montana and in Massachusetts. Notices have been served on Clark, Dodge & Co., and on the Bank of New York not to part with any money or property belonging to the estate, whether it stands in the name of that estate or in the name of the First National Bank of Butte City.

The petitioner avers that this bank never had a legal existence. She declares that the directors did not own their stock absolutely, but received it from Mr. Davis, who owned the capital of the bank under an agreement to hold it for him and to restore it at any time that he should demand it. That the directors were simply trustees for the estate. It is maintained that under the federal statutes directors, to be duly qualified, must own their stock without conditions.

A will found after Mr. Davis' death was contested in the Montana courts on the ground that it was a forgery. The jury disagreed. The petitioner declares that Mr. Davis left no will.

DESPERATE DENVER MEN.

Say They Will Not Allow Foreigners to Build the New Sewers.

DENVER, Aug. 12.—Five hundred unemployed American citizens met in mass meeting here and resolved that imported foreign labor should not be allowed on the sewers just contracted for. They say that there are never districts, and the contracts were rushed through the city council in order that the hundreds of resident citizens thrown out of work might be given employment. The contractor has imported 500 Italian laborers to do the unskilled labor, which begins next Monday; hence the above action was taken.

A committee of the unemployed visited the newspaper offices and announced the sentiments of the mass meeting. They said that the meeting was composed of American citizens resident in Denver, the majority of whom had families to support and that they would permit the work being done by foreign contract labor if it came to bloodshed. They declared that they would as soon die of gunshot wounds as of starvation.

Funnel Shaped Clouds.

LARNED, Kan., Aug. 12.—A funnel shaped cyclone struck the ground nine miles south of this city. At one time five separate clouds, whirling with a great velocity and with their ports reaching toward the earth, were seen by the residents of this place, who gathered in the streets. Wherever one of those funnels struck the ground it cleared everything in its completed as if it had been run over by a giant mowing machine. Much damage was done.

Religious Riot in Bombay.

BOMBAY, Aug. 12.—A religious riot occurred in this city, and many persons are in the hospitals suffering with more or less dangerous injuries.

Further murderous assaults have been made on the Hindoos this (Saturday) morning. Troops are stationed in the chief native centers, and patrols are constantly on the move, with guns trained upon the principal native streets.

Sleep Walker Drowned.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Lena Krietz was found drowned at the foot of East One Hundred and Twenty-first street. The police report no death as suicide. Her relatives emphatically deny that she killed herself consciously and assert that she walked into the river while asleep.

Ethan Allen's Sword.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The sword which Ethan Allen carried at the taking of Fort Ticonderoga during the revolutionary war has been offered to the government, to be placed with similar relics in the National museum, by Hannibal A. Hopkins of Lansing, Mich.

Left Only Empty Safes.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—George C. Taylor, doing business as a diamond importer at 20 Broadway, corner Seventeenth street, under the firm name of Taylor & Hoe, is said to have removed all his valuable assets from his safes on the night of Aug. 7 and eluded his creditors.

THE LOST BRIDEGROOM.

Locked Up In an Insane Asylum by His Brothers.

SAY HE IS A PARESIS VICTIM.

He Shoots to a Friend From a Window in Bloomingdale Asylum—His Bride Almost Prostrated—A Lawyer Will Try to Get Him Out.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Clara Perry Thomas learned for the first time in the supreme court before Justice O'Brien that David J. Solomon, her intended bridegroom, who came back to the wedding feast he had ordered on Wednesday afternoon, had been committed to Bloomingdale asylum at the instance of his brothers, Henry J. and Lemond Solomon, on Tuesday afternoon.

The hearing on her writ of habeas corpus for the production of David was adjourned to Tuesday on consent after she had been informed of the commitment, and she went into an empty courtroom with her sister Louise, her counsel, R. J. Haire, and some friends and swooned.

When she revived she had a fit of weeping, and then she and those about her asked the reporters if it was right to whisk a man off into an asylum that way. She had driven about the city on Tuesday morning with David, she said, while he made arrangements for the wedding. She left him at Broadway and Nineteenth street to do some shopping, and he drove down to the workwear concern at 541 Broadway, in which he and one of his brothers are partners. That afternoon two physicians, Graeme M. Hammond and C. E. Brown, were summoned to the place of business. They filled out a certificate for his commitment.

Judge McAdam of the superior court, who was not sitting that day in court, was found elsewhere, and the commitment was signed. No court record or such a commitment is required to be made.

Miss Thomas' story.

Miss Thomas, who is 26 years old and shapely, said that she, of all persons, should have been informed of the proceedings and at any rate told where her fiance had been taken. His brothers had sent her word on Tuesday night that David was ill. She immediately went to the house of Henry J. Solomon, 26 east Sixty-fifth street, taking her sister Louise and her physician. Dr. Ludden saw Henry J. Solomon. Henry said that David had been sent away insane, but refused to say whither.

"I never saw any symptoms of insanity," Miss Thomas said, "during the 12 years I have known David. I was 14 years old when I went to work for the workwear firm of his father, Josiah Solomon, who died Dec. 31 last. David had been stopping with my mother at 307 West One Hundred and Twenty-third street. That Tuesday morning he came down early to breakfast. He first took some fruit. He had a peculiar way he wanted hominy cooked and told me to fix it for him. I said:

"'You big baby, to want it just that way.'

"He smiled in reply. After breakfast he went down and told the men who were tearing up the street that he would like it paved before our house for Wednesday afternoon in view of the wedding. Then we got into the carriage he had given me and drove about to give some orders for the wedding. David ordered cold luncheon for 40, and simple floral decorations, including a flower bell and a bouquet for me. Then we drove to the house of Rev. Dr. Harris of the Fifth Avenue temple, and in his absence left word for him to come to officiate at the next afternoon. We went to the New Netherlands hotel, where David engaged rooms. We were to go to the Thousand Islands on Thursday morning and be back to town the following Monday. He had chosen the dullest season in trade for the marriage. That didn't look insane. He had hoped to find a chance to take me to Chicago in September.

"The previous Thursday he had given me a wedding ring to keep for him until the event, and a solitaire diamond ring, both of which he got that day at Tiffany's. Months before he gave me a double diamond ring."

Not Allowed to Let Her See Him.

She showed the three rings to the reporter. The wedding ring and the solitaire ring had the same inscription, "D. J. S. to C. P. T., Aug. 9, 1893."

Lawyer Haire said last night that he would obtain an order to show cause today why the commitment should not be set aside. He said that Clara and her sister Louise had gone to the asylum yesterday afternoon, but that those in charge refused to permit them to see David. They were informed that Superintendent Lyon would not examine him before Monday. While the sisters were waiting, Louise, in strolling about, had seen Solomon at a window on a floor above. He called out that he would be down stairs at once and left the window. He did not reappear.

Dixon and Smith Matched.

CONEY ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Solly Smith, who recently defeated Johnny Griffin, and George Dixon have signed the articles of agreement to fight before the Coney Island Athletic club. The fight will take place on Monday, Sept. 25, for a purse of $10,000—$6,000 to the winner and $1,000 to the loser.

Three Bad Young Pirates.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 12.—Church, Buckingham and Howard, the three piratical boys arrested for stealing books and pilfering along the sound, were each fined $50 and costs and sentenced to three months in jail. When sentence was pronounced the boys laughed and took the matter as a joke.

How to Utilize the Fair Buildings.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—A brilliant scheme to utilize the World's fair buildings when the exposition is closed is put forward by J. G. Jackson, president of the American Exhibitors' association. His idea is to make Jackson park the Union depot grounds for all the railroads entering Chicago.

A Prairieite Publicly Hanged.

PICKVILLE, Ky., Aug. 12.—Henry Hall was hanged here for the murder of his brother. He made a confession on the scaffold and completely broke down. Fifty guards armed with shotguns prevented any attempt at rescue. His widowed people witnessed the execution.

Train Struck an Ice Wagon.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12.—A Reading railroad train struck an ice wagon at Conshohocken, and two Italian children who were stealing a ride on the wagon were killed. Howard Williams, the driver, was probably fatally injured.

THE SHANN TRIAL.

Dr. Cantwell Says a Butcher Could Have Done the Deed.

TRENTON, Aug. 12.—County Physician Cantwell of Trenton testified in the trial of Mrs. Hettie Shann for the murder by poison of her son in order to obtain the insurance on his life.

Dr. Cantwell said that the body of young Shann could have been disemboweled in 10 minutes, and that it did not need an expert to do it.

On cross examination he said that Mr. Shann did not object to the post mortem examination, but wanted it made in her house. When it mutilated the body of John Shann did it much as a surgeon would have done it, but it was not necessarily a surgical operation. A butcher or anybody could have done the cutting. The person who removed the organs must have had a knowledge of and about anatomy. There was nothing to indicate an expert hand, but a firm hand and a sharp knife were undoubtedly employed.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.
Between William W. Green, Wm. Goin Wolfe, Mary A. Irons and William Irons, her husband; Frederick Irons and Mary Irons, his wife, complainants, and Thomas Irons et al., defendants.

By virtue of an order of the Chancellor of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Carrie C. Line, wife of James H. Line, Isaac P. Line and the said James H. Line, infants by James H. Line their next friend, Henry Lippincott Line, Arthur D. Line, Walter Line and Emma F. Line are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainants on or before the 4th day of September next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you. Said bill is filed to have the following described lands in the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey, charged with the value of the forty-five acre tract of land specifically described by the said Isaac N. Line in his last will and testament of Isaac N. Line to James H. Line for life, remainder to said children, and also with the use of the said forty-five acre tract from the date of said the will, April 3, 1882, to the date of final decree herein, and for an account of said James H. Line, as executor as aforesaid, may be decreed by the Court to be charged to the said estate, and the Plainfield bank, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, said from the proceeds thereof pay the value of said the estate in said forty-five acre tract specifically devised to the said James H. Line in May, 1887, to date of final decree in this cause, and that from the proceeds of the said sale of said forty-five acre tract the said executor be ordered to invest a sum equal to the value of said forty-five acre tract, and pay the interest or principal of the income of the said James H. Line to Carrie C. Line during her life or widowhood, and that the Court be empowered to limit a time within which to divide the principal among the children of said James H. Line, and that the Court may direct how the said forty-five acre tract from the proceeds thereof pay the value of said the estate in said forty-five acre tract specifically devised by the said Isaac N

GOOD HEALTH

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S COUGH.

Mode of Treatment For the Most Distressing Element of Phthisis.

In a recent article in the New York Herald's European edition the methods of treating the different varieties of cough in consumptive patients are explained. The subject is one of great practical interest and importance to a large class of patients. A foreign medical correspondent points out that in a dry, hacking cough not accompanied by much expectoration recourse can be had to preparations of opium associated with belladonna. If the character of the bronchial tubes is not very abundant and is very sticky, I prefer to use one of the following preparation in a spray: Bicarbonate of soda, 2 grms.; hydrochlorate of morphine, 0.05 centig.; aqua dest., 1000 grms.

This is sufficient for four seances. When a dry cough is accompanied by any rise of temperature, our medical correspondent approves the use of phenacetine at the dose of 0.50 centig., as proposed by M. Maragliano.

In cases where there is abundant expectoration opium must be replaced by the different balsams, as tar, turpentine, guiacol or creosote, inwardly or inhalations. Relief can be had by the use of the following formula for pills: Oxalate of cerium, 0.15 centig.; extract of licorice, q. s. for one pill: flat 40. Four to six a day.

Difficult as it is to relieve the cough of consumptives, it is too exhausting to be neglected.

No Need to Wear Moles on the Face.

There is no reason for putting up with such a disfigurement nowadays as a mole on the face, said a physician to a writer for the Washington Star. It can easily be removed by well known surgical processes. If it were necessary to resort to the knife, the light scar left would be infinitely less ugly. Such an operation is almost painless, the mole being cut in two down the middle and extirpated in a moment. Incidentally the hairs are removed permanently by the destruction of the follicles from which they grow.

But there is a simpler and better method than that which can usually be applied. A needle connected with one pole of an electric battery is thrust gently down to the center of the excrescence. Then the current is turned on for a brief instant, heating the needle white hot, and it destroys the root of the mole. There is very little pain involved, and it is all over in a moment. Moles, likes warts, are abnormal developments of the skin. The root being destroyed, the growth is atrophied and quickly disappears, never to return. Sometimes you will see a mole in an advanced stage of development, which is attached to the skin only by a very narrow neck. To dispose of it is the simplest matter in the world. There is a little instrument, which consists of nothing more than a tube main. The only way to extirpate them is by the electric needle, which is thrust down into the bottom of each follicle, a slight current destroying the root.

VISITS OF CONDOLENCE.

A Chat About a Social Task to Which No Cast Iron Rules Apply.

"One of the hardest trials to me in a social way is this paying visits of condolence," remarked a sympathetic woman the other day. She had just returned from two such visits. She sat down with her feet on the fender and questioned if she had done any good by those visits.

"I never pay them," said her listener.

"How do you manage?" she asked.

"I write a note of a few perfunctory sentences covering the case. I believe to most people—nine out of ten—in trouble a call is a far worse ordeal than a note. The other, the tenth person sympathy would be wasted on. In my note I speak of calling when the mourner feels equal to receiving. When people say they will 'be happy to see you,' the hardest pangs are over."

This sympathetic woman smiled. "I believe I have never lost my childish awe of persons clothed in deep mourning. While I was a child, but old enough to be an observing one, several members of the family died. I heard much talk of the 'proper' way to behave during such episodes. I have never forgotten it. It seemed very strange to me then that people should consider such trifles at such a time. And I think so yet."

"Certainly. That's the absurdity of it."

"Yes. But, my dear, you can't altogether blame people for it. It is sometimes the fault of education. And different temperaments bear grief differently. Some people talk continually of the deceased—his virtues and habits, his sufferings and death. They appear to think of nothing else. Others are so reticent they shrink visibly at any mention of the lost one's name. They know your well meant speech by a look of disapproval, a short reply or an immediate turning of the subject. Who is to decide which of the sufferers feels the most keenly? I knew one family who, when a loved son died, put his portrait into the attic and dropped his family name as a family one as completely as if he never had lived at all. Does such extreme sensitiveness show the greatest affection?"

"Well," said the other woman, "it is certainly easier to call upon people who are complacent over the fact of wearing correct clothes and are anxious to know exactly which of their friends were at the funeral. You know how to satisfy them, although you may remain secretly skeptical of the love that takes pride only in forms and retails its secrets to careless outsiders."

"Perhaps!" and the sympathetic woman shook her head. "It is best not to make cast iron rules, even about that."—Harper's Bazar.

HEALTH AND SINGING.

FACTS FOR GIRLS WHO INTEND CULTIVATING THE VOICE.

Take Off Tight Corsets—Health the First Requisite—No Reason Why American Girls' Voices Cannot Be Trained at Home—Words of an Authority.

Surely there is no reason why American girls should not become as fine singers as any on the globe. They have all the requisites of perseverance, superior mental endowments and ambition. The American singers who have become famous have been trained abroad, but I hold that they can be educated at home if they are properly taught. Health is the road to success in singing as well as in other professions. The new gospel of music I would teach to the young women of America is technique, physique and grace. It is no Debartean fad, or anything of the kind, but common sense.

There are hundreds of so called remedies and little secrets intended to make the voice clear and smooth, such as eating dried plums, or swallowing glycerine in homeopathic phosphates. My secret is health. Body and soul and voice are so closely connected that the disease of one means the blight of the others.

Take a healthy woman and you will never find in her those capricious freaks and nervous approaches which make life a burden to her and her friends. Unfortunately the weaker sex is granted privileges which are apt to make her enjoy the affection of enacting the role of a nervous, fading, drooping lily. Nine times out of ten if she would remove her clothes or rise she would soon become a healthy rose.

Health and voice are so nearly connected as physical and mental health, and the voice is the thermometer of health. A change in the physical state is first noticed in the voice and the beginning of anæmia has the effect of making the voice feeble and narrow (below the pitch). Where is the young girl who does not suffer occasionally in a more or less degree from this sickness of today?

HEALTH'S A REMEDY.

What is the remedy, or rather the preventive? The most dangerous enemy of health is tight lacing. It is not expected that a young girl should at once recognize the far reaching and destructive effects of this most pernicious abuse, but their mothers should use all their influence to check a danger so serious to future generations.

Lacing compresses that part of the lungs so necessary to easy breathing and singing. If the lungs are so tightly compressed that they cannot expand at the sides they must find relief by going to the upper or lower part.

Every one knows, or should know that the upper part of the lungs is the weakest. And none of the irritation of the lungs begin there. It is by no means an edifying sight to see a lady singing "with her shoulders," as I heard it called. The opposite, the abdominal breathing, is well enough for a man, but it can become very dangerous for a woman.

Many of this well known fact many renowned singing teachers make this kind of breathing the Alpha and Omega of their method for men and women alike.

There are women voices which have resisted every training and could not be killed in spite of their masters. These voices, although they exist in a small minority, will make the reputation of a teacher, whether deserved or not. But if a teacher is enabled to choose his material and to demand voices he does not think worth cultivating he ought to have a new one with every single pupil. The voice is like a delicate plant; the obedient manner produces it, but by care nurse and cultivate it with good careful love. If the voice meets all the requirements in the early days of training there is no need to worry about progress later, for success is assured.

THE SECRET OF THE ART.

The most difficult part of voice culture should be taught first, viz., the free and natural development of the high and low tuning of the registers. If a singer acquires these they will enable him or her to reach the highest point in art. The old singing masters, Porpora, used to say that one might be able to write upon one piece of music paper all that a singer needed for instruction.

In spite of renowned conservatories the nerve tone development is still the wonder ful "secret." Generally the greatest attention is paid, not to tone development, but to a one sided education in all directions and branches. How shall a singer succeed who has not been taught right in the first place? He knows a good many succeed who are taught wrongly, but that is because they have voices that defy all attempts to kill them. He or she will have to learn for himself or herself what to do, and do it.

Great allowance should be made for those who do not study singing for the purpose of becoming professionals. The system that I advocate makes a principal point of the hygienic benefit to be derived therefrom, as it combines voice and body culture. To me, love, a healthy voice exists only in a healthy body. Overheated rooms are conducive to all the physical ills and woes known to man. No matter how many heavy wraps are put on before leaving a superheated room, it is almost impossible to preserve the lungs. The dangers are too sudden, and not even the most robust can stand them. The body should be so hardened that it does not require warm rooms.

TEACHING CHILDREN.

Should children be taught singing? The development of the ear is one of the slow est but most fundamental parts of instruction. A child is more apt to catch the sound of different dialects and idioms. I know this from experience, because my father, being in the German army, was often transferred to different places in the empire, and although I was in my childhood years I rapidly picked up the dialect in each province, and the result was that I spoke all so fluently no one could tell where I was born.

Now, this is an example for my claim that the ear and taste of a child ought to be trained early to avoid that tiresome work of undoing in later years many faults and bad habits.

I cannot imagine the feeling of becoming tired from singing. Unfortunately I am acquainted with the agony of feeling a voice fade away and becoming only a sad echo. When I was sixteen years old I did too much. Oh! if I only could have stopped a great many tears might have been saved me. There was a silver lining to the cloud that came, because I then went through a careful musical education, including much study, theory and anatomy of hand and arm. However, my love for singing had not ceased, and I began again, though most timidly, my vocal studies, and gained back by arduous study a lost one. Formerly a gift of nature. This taught me much, and my misfortune is stringing to my ability to work against every fault in the voice of a singer.—Baroness Anna Von Meyerinck in New York Telegram.

THE BRIDAL DRESS.

O' the rustle to it and the glisten to it!
Prap! thee, listen to it!
It is white and bridal, with a shimmer of light,
Like the moon on the snow on a winter's night.

'Tis from Worth, they say.
What is he, I pray?
There are pearls sewn over it,
And the lace which cover it—
Was there ever such lace!—like the dainty white trace
Of the frost on the pane of such wonderful grace!

Was it ever woven by human hand,
Or was it the gift from a fairy's wand?
Then the orange blossom, so white and so sweet,
Fit to garland my lady from head to feet.
Oh, the whiteness of it,
Oh, the brightness of it,
Yet sewn too white
Or 'twas too bright.
My bride is the daintiest maid that I know,
The dearest and fairest and sweetest, I trow,
Ever told of song or story,
Ever one of in tales of glory.
Come maid or come wife,
Nothing fears me, my bride,
The world's behind me
And I've you by my side.

WASHING DISHES.

With a Little Thought and Care the Work Is Not Hard.

Pooh! Everybody knows how to wash dishes!" you exclaim. If I believed that I would not write this article. I have many a time seen dishes treated in a way not at all nice, to say the least. Some people will pile a lot of greasy dishes into a pan with cold water and soap, and, after standing on about a quart of water and sozzle them out after a fashion that does not make them shine with cleanliness. Some will use the dishcloth to wipe them, or a cotton rag. Bosh on such a method, I say.

There are many people who never make preparations before they sit down to the table to have a kettle of hot water ready when the meal is over; many who never put water into the spider in which some article of food has been cooked, or into the pan in which meat has been baked, nor a dish in which dough, batter, etc., has been mixed, so that what adheres may soak and be easily removed, but they will let them stand and dry and then, when it comes to the washing, plunge them right into the dishpan, dough and grease and all, and rub and scrub and scrape with a knife to get off that which might have been so easily removed by soaking before coming to the final washing. Let me tell you my method, and if any one has a better way, I will gladly learn it if they will teach me.

Mixing dishes and baking dishes are put to soak directly after using, if there is any substance adhering that would otherwise be difficult of removing. In this water I wash all that is left before bringing the dishes to the pan. I see that the teakettle is refilled or a kettle of water is on the stove before I sit down to the table. When the dinner is over I scrape the plates which require it, and if particularly greasy I take a little hot soapsuds in some dish and wash them before putting them into the dishpan, for I do detest thick, greasy dishwater.

First I wash the cups and saucers, spoons and knives, then such dishes as are the least soiled by the food, the cooking dishes coming last. I have the water very hot and use a handle mop for the best dishes; for the cooking dishes I have a cloth made from a worn towel. I have two grades of these dishcloths and a sink cloth besides. I have nice wiping towels of the checked crash usually, but that is not really essential. It is a matter of taste merely. By the side of my dishpan I have another into which I place the dishes as I wash them, arranging them loosely, and over these pour hot water to rinse them of the suds, etc. Then they wipe so much more easily when hot.

This water is used to wash the towels, the mops, and a second hot dishcloths, adding soap, of course, and taking them in order one after the other, instead of dumping them all in together. The sinkcloth then comes into requisition, and after the sink is washed and wiped dry, the pan and cloth are washed in clean water. I never have any ill smelling towels nor dishcloths; they are so disposed as to dry thoroughly. Sometimes, of course, it is necessary to use the rinse water for washing other dishes, and in a large family it would be always necessary to have two or more courses of water, but where there are only two or three persons one only is essential where the plates, etc., are previously partially cleansed.

I am aware that this reads like much work, but it is not really, and if it were, who can begrudge a few extra minutes to have the dishes clean and bright and the cloths perfectly sweet?—M. D. Welcome in Housekeeper.

Gloves for Kitchen Work.

Every woman desires to keep her hands dainty. But when she is forced to do her own kitchen work, it is impossible to keep her hands in the condition they should be. Nothing is more chafing to a delicate skin than the alkali soaps which it is necessary to use in washing greasy dishes or cleaning greasy sinks. A pair of long rubber gloves, such as chemists sometimes use in laboratory work, will protect the hands in a the hottest dish water. These gloves come in black, white and lead color, in sizes considerably larger than kid gloves. The smallest size sold, we believe, is No. 7. This is small enough for a lady who wears 5½ or 6 in kid gloves.

After one becomes used to them it is easy enough to do scrubbing, dishwashing and sundry other tasks in these gloves, which cost from $1.25 and $1.50 a pair, and properly hung up and dried when used will last a long time. It is a great mistake to buy such a glove too short in the wrist. It should reach high up on the forearm. Water will well in over the top of a short glove so that it is no protection to the hand.—New York Tribune.

Across the Footlights.

Even the immortal and ever blooming Fanny Herring is not safe from the slings and arrows of the outrageous gallery god. This lady of undying fame long enough in the popular prize theaters, but when he lands in the amusement hall of the local dime museum his behavior is something terrible.

Fanny only acts in the latter places, and her plays are short, shocking and delirious. Recently she was appearing in one of an ultra blood and thunder order in which it was necessary for her to exclaim: "Gr-r-rest heviens! If I only had a horse!"

She awakened in the—

"Say, Fanny," queried a voice from the rear of the house, "would a mule do?"

"Yes," was the retort, "come around to the stage door."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

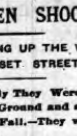
TWO MEN SHOCKED.

WHILE PUTTING UP THE WIRE ON SOMERSET STREET.

But Fortunately They Were Standing on the Ground and so Didn't Have Far to Fall.—They were Uncoiling Wire.



TWO more men were shocked while stringing the guy wire for the Somerset street railway Saturday afternoon. The wire was thrown over the span and the men on the tower-wagon were fastening it while two men had the reel on the ground. They stood in front of Mr. Van Winkle's store. The ground was quite damp at that place, and as they started to let out the wire it struck a span in which there was a leak. This span is the corner down the guy wire and into the coil, which they were uncoiling. One of the men gave a yell and fell into the middle of the street The other looked up to see what was the matter, and the up to see what was the matter, and the next instant he was lying flat upon his back in the gutter. Neither was hurt beyond a shock and a shaking up.

Mr. Kiely, one of the linemen, received a severe shock in the morning. While up a pole fixing a wire he came in contact with a live wire and would have been thrown to the ground but for one of the men who caught hold of him and held him. Mr. Kiely's hands were burned slightly by the wire.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Kleinsorge of Franklin place left Saturday for Chicago.

Mr. John B. Sharp of Newark spent yesterday at his father's, on East Sixth street.

Woods on Fire at the Plains.

The woods back of Scotch Plains were on fire yesterday. The alarm was sounded and it was at first reported that another house had been set afire. Investigation proved it to be nothing but underbrush in the woods.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

ON THE GROUNDS OF THE HILLSIDE TENNIS CLUB.

Mr. Simmonds Getting in Trim to Take Part in the United States Tournament at Newport, Next Week.—Saturday's Scores.

HE Hillside Tennis Club began a tourney, ment between members of the club last Thursday morning for first, second, third and consolation prizes which had been donated by merchants. There are nine entries as follows: R. Cahoone, F. Dorman, F. Fish, F. Goddard, H. Hunter, H. Simmonds, Jr., A. Simmonds, R. Simpson and F. Frost.

They have been playing Thursday, Friday, Saturday and to day, and will probably finish by to-morrow. At noon to-day Albert Simmonds had played seven out of the eight sets, winning them all. H. Simpson stands second, winning five and losing one. Mr. A. Simmonds is playing continually and getting in trim for the United States tournament to be held at Newport, Tuesday, August 22. He will represent the Hillside Tennis Club and will give some of the cracks a lively time to get in ahead of him. There are 70 entries and the winner will be called to play Mr. Campbell of Brooklyn who now holds the championship of the United States. Mr. Simmonds leaves for Newport Saturday evening on the 5:30 boat from New York.

The members of the club have had a new shower bath put in the club house for use of members. It was used this morning for the first time. A telephone is to be put in in a short time. Money has been appropriated for that purpose.

The following are Saturday's scores: Mr. Simmonds defeated Mr. Hunter 4—6, 6—4, 7—5 and Mr. Dorman 6—3, 6—3. Mr. Simpson defeated Mr. Cahoone 6—0, 5—6, 6—4. Mr. Cahoone defeated Goddard, 6—5, 6—4.

MR. HAYES' "ANDY" WON.

Exciting Races at the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

ON THE Gentlemen's Driving Park track, Park avenue, Saturday afternoon, there was the best trotting seen there for some time. It was witnessed by a number of people from Plainfield.

Mr. Hayes' "Andy," Mr. Chandler's "Walkill" and Mr. Osborn's sorrel mare trotted four heats. "Andy" won the first heat in 2.40. The second heat was won by "Walkill" in 2.37¾. "Andy" won the third and fourth heats in 2.38.

There was also a race between a horse from the Dover Stock Farm and one belonging to Mr. Morgan of Orange. The former won. Time 2.50.

Mr. Michael Quinn of this city was starter.

The first races were very exciting, the three horses going "neck and neck" for some time.

CARELESS DRIVING.

Two Women and and a Boy Thrown out Into the Street.

About five o'clock Saturday afternoon, a big bay horse attached to a road wagon in which were seated two men, dashed around the corner of Front street into Somerset street on a run.

Mrs. John Windle and her daughter, Mrs. Claude Mundy and Mrs. Mundy's little son were seated in a buggy which was standing close to the sidewalk, on one side of Somerset street. The electric car had stopped to take on passengers just opposite this buggy. In between the buggy and car the bay horse drawing the road wagon rushed, tearing into Mrs. Windle's buggy and upsetting it. Both ladies and the little boy were thrown out. Two wheels and the top of their vehicle was wrecked. They all escaped injury, Mrs. Mundy only receiving some scratches on the arm.

The men did not stop to see what damage had been done, but drove rapidly up the street.

SCARED BY A TRICYCLE.

A Family Dumped Upon the Sidewalk by a Runaway.

As a man and his family were driving down Plainfield avenue, yesterday afternoon, his horse became frightened at a tricycle and jumped upon the sidewalk. The man was pulled across the dashboard and slightly injured. The remainder of the family were thrown out upon the flagging. The horse broke loose from the wagon and dashed down the street. It was a hired rig, and the horse ran home.

He was Almost Home With his Load.

About seven o'clock Saturday evening, as an employee of Mr. P. M. French was driving up Somerset street, with a load of green corn the right hind wheel collapsed, and part of the load fell into the gutter, just as the bridge was reached. Had the wheel held out five minutes longer the corn would have been at the barn. Another wagon was procured and the load transferred to it.

"Daring Midnight Robbery."

Some time during Saturday night "Letter Carriers' Rest" was stolen from the alley alongside the Post Office, and there is much wailing and gnashing of teeth and thirst for revenge in the ranks of the association.

The same had been recently painted up in fine shape and the members were prouder than ever of their seat. It has been stolen once before. It was chained fast to the Suydam building in a manner thought to be burglar proof.

Cass Teller Goes on His Vacation.

Judge Coddington, having just returned from a short outing, and realizing the benefit to health of a longer stay away from home, was liberal in sending Cass Teller on a thirty days' vacation at Blore's Pavillion, Elizabeth. Teller was arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, Saturday night, by Policeman Frederickson.

Policeman Frederickson also arrested William Garrity, who was very drunk. He was fined $5.

CRESCENTS STILL WINNING.

Saturday they Defeated the Orient Field Club.

HE Crescents played at Hackensack, Saturday, with the Orient Field Club team and won by the score of six to two. Keenan and Turner pitched. So far the Crescents have won every game they have played while on this trip. Several Plainfielders went to Hackensack to witness the game. The following is the score:

The Paterson defeated the Washington League team, at Paterson, yesterday, by the score of 17 to 5. Two Crescent players—Turner and Rafferty—were on the Paterson team.

The Westfields defeated the Somerville, at Somerville, Saturday, by the score of 6 to 0.

It is expected that Pugilist Jim Corbett will play third base for the Asbury Park team against the Crescents of this city at the former's grounds on Thursday.

BREVITIES.

—The merry-go-round, which has been back of Tier's dam for some weeks past, has been taken to Westfield.

—To-morrow night the City Common Council will meet to revise the tax list, and fix the tax rate for the year.

—The Saltonstall cup was won by Wheelman A. A. Zimmerman at Chicago Saturday. The trophy was the gift of Mr. Saltonstall of Elizabeth.

—It is expected that 7,000 members of the Ancient Order of Forresters will take part in the big parade and reunion of the order in Newark, N. J., to-morrow.

—Car No. 1 ran off the track at the corner of Front and Somerset streets yesterday afternoon. After the passengers got out of the car it was put back on the tracks.

—Owing to the heavy traffic on the Somerset street branch, car No. 2 was also run over the line yesterday afternoon. Both cars were crowded every trip.

—Bradstreet's reports 474 failures in the United States during the week, against 459 in the preceding week, and 198, 213, 148, and 177 in the corresponding weeks of 1892, 1891, 1890, and 1889. The Middle States had 85, New England 37, the Southern States 48, the Western States 174, the Northwestern States 85, the Pacific coast 21, and the Territories 14. Canada had 34, against 32 for the previous week. Of failing enterprises 73 per cent. employed a capital of $5,000 or less, and 13 per cent. employed from $5,000 to $20,000 capital. Only 39 failures are reported with capital each in excess of $20,000.

—The following notice is published by request: The New York Fruit and Flower Mission, 104 East 30th street, is still carried on by the original members, and on the plan by which it was established in 1870. Choice fruit, flowers and sick room delicacies (and money for them) are desired every Monday and Thursday, for careful distribution in hospitals, homes and through tenements by city missionaries, etc. Packages under twenty pounds are carried free by the express companies, and baskets returned if desired by mark. This is the only "New York Fruit and Flower Mission." It has an entirely separate field from any other mission, though of late it has been confounded with the University Settlement or Neighborhood Guild, and perhaps others.

—In this period of depression when a good many older periodicals have been hard beset, it is interesting to learn that the Review of Reviews, although comparatively so young, has won a position as impregnable as any other periodical that could be named in the United States, and that its circulation is not only solidly maintained, but steadily increasing through the intrinsic merits of the periodical. The Review has become a necessity to a large constituency; and whereas in times of financial depression many people give up their luxuries, there is always a steady market for the plain necessaries. Fortunately for the Review of Reviews, its readers consider it as a prime requisite rather than a casual luxury, and so its editions are not curtailed by the influence of current financial disasters.

FIVE PERSONS PERISHED.

Fire Destroys a Chicago Hotel this Morning.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14, (Special.)—The Senate Hotel, a three story structure on Madison street, near Fifth avenue was burned this morning. Five persons perished.

One man jumped from a window in the top story and was killed. About four others were suffocated or burned to death.

200 Men Added to the Unemployed.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Aug. 14. (Special.)—Johnson & Johnson, a large firm of this city, shut down to-day, throwing 200 men out of work.

Dr. Buchanan Sentenced to Die.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14, (Special.)—Dr. Buchanan was sentenced to die in the week beginning Oct. 2, 1893.

A Democrat's Cry for Political Change.

Even that Democrat paper, Der Somerset Bote, is howling for a change. The following is translated from its last issue.

ARE THESE DEMOCRATIC TIMES?

THE PRESENT BURNING SITUATION IN SOMERSET COUNTY AND NEIGHBORHOOD—LET US HAVE A POLITICAL CHANGE.

Worse times than the present in Somerset county are not liable to come.

1. The Somerset County Bank crashed.

2. The Raritan Woolen Mills reduced working hours.

3. The Round Brook Standard Gas Fixture Co. was bad off time.

4. Scott's Press Works in Plainfield has laid off fifty skilled workmen.

5. Twenty machinists of Potter's Press Works meet the same fate.

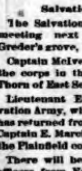
6. The American Engine Works in Round Brook have shut their doors and 250 mechanics thus become idle.

7. "My sweetheart, what wilst thou have else?

All this touches directly the prosperity of our blessed county. We labor from hand to mouth and when the hand ceaseth to work, the body will starve; and why all this? "Cleveland," howl the Republicans; "Capital," reply the Democrats! In the political crisis we in the unconsult war against capital and trusts the cause of the crisis? Who will dissolve the question? True it is, that the Democratic party, thus far, has played a miserable part in the crisis of developments and that if help does not come immediately, that Cleveland emblazon will sink in unfathomable depths, and in this county at the next election hundreds of good Democrats will vote for a good Republican Senator and Assemblyman.

FIRE AT WESTFIELD.

An Unoccupied House Burned Saturday Evening.



FIRE destroyed an unoccupied house at Westfield Saturday evening. It was situated on North avenue and was owned by Mr. William S. Clark of Bound Brook, who was going to move into the house in a few days.

Neighbors Harrison, Kinney and Hartley were the first at the burning building, and threw on pails of water. They are reported as having said the flames fairly floated around the room on the water they threw in, and that the walls and floor must have been flooded with kerosene.

It is said Mr. Clark has had trouble with some Westfield people, who it is thought took this mode of revenge. The house was partly insured.

Salvation Army Notes.

The Salvation Army will hold camp meeting next Sunday afternoon at Greder's grove, Evona.

Captain Melver, formerly in charge of the corps in this city, is visiting Miss Thorn of East Second street.

Lieutenant Edith Naylor of the Salvation Army, whose home is in this city, has returned from a six weeks' visit with Captain E. Marsh, formerly in charge of the Plainfield corps.

There will be three or four special officers from New York in attendance at Bailing Boat, who has just returned from England. The blood washed warriors of this corps will be in attendance.

Lieutenand E. Naylor will go to Allentown, Pa., to assist Captain L. Yodder of that corps.

Pump Foundries will Resume Work.

The Worthington Pump Foundries, in Elizabethport, will resume operations August 21, after a shut-down of three weeks. The shops gave employment to 2000 men and boys. The suspension was caused by a strike of the coremakers and molders against a 10 per cent. reduction of wages.

The cause of the reduction was the stringency in the money market, and the managers of the works said at the time that as soon as there was any improvement in financial affairs the usual wages would be again paid. There are plenty of orders on hand.

PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE AT NETHERWOOD.

Those Who Participated and Those Who Won Prizes.

The past week at the Hotel Netherwood has been a delightful repetition of the many pleasant weeks gone before in the way of charming events.

A brilliant and joyous gathering of the guests in the large salon of the hotel on Thursday evening last announced the fact that another progressive euchre party would be added to the list of others gone before. Thirteen tables were placed in the salon, and the following people participated in the game: Mrs. M. Bowery, A. E. Bowery, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Birch, Mrs. C. L. Kellum, Miss Ida C. Kellum, Benjamin L. Raymond, James Phyfe, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Eaton, Mrs. Chandler W. Riker, N. A. Bonner, Mrs. W. H. Snedeker, and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Cook. The fortunate winners were:

Ladies—First prize, an exquisite lace fan, Miss Carrie White; second prize, lovely bonbon box, Mrs. F. H. Richardson; third prize, an elegant cut glass berry bowl, Miss Ida C. Kellum.

Gentlemen—First prize, a silk umbrella, W. J. Best, second prize, a pocket knife, W. J. Eaton; third prize, a silver-mounted flask, C. A. Smith. The consolation prizes were: Glove stretcher, Miss Richardson; silver pencil, Elliott Ranney.

Mr. A. E. Bowery, whose name alone is a guarantee of success, purchased the prizes, evincing his usual excellent taste in that direction, and, with his able assistants, brought the game to a happy conclusion. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Bowery, and he gracefully responded.

Work Reduced in Elizabeth.

The 500 workmen in the Central Railroad machine and car shops, at Elizabeth, were notified Saturday that, until further notice, they would only be employed five days a week. Each working day, however, will consist of ten hours, and the members are satisfied, as they feared the shops were to be closed for some months.

The employes of Mansell & Co's stove works were notified to-day that, beginning Monday, the works would only be run three days a week. The works employ 150 men.

The Weather.

On Tuesday clear weather will prevail, with fresh and light variable winds, becoming mostly southerly; and on Wednesday warmer, fair and more sultry weather, followed by a "warm wave."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Why Wheat Is Down.

A correspondent of the New York Sun has prepared a careful and elaborate paper on the state of the wheat acreage and market. It throws light on the question why the price of that staple is lower than it has been since 1745. In addition it tends to cheer the despondent hearts of agriculturists by the assurance that in a year or two at most the price of wheat will resume its normal rate and never again in our time drop so low.

In brief, the price of wheat is down because there is so much of it for sale, there is so much of it for sale because the production has been in advance of the world's needs. The production has been in advance of the need mainly because after our civil war an area unheard of before in history was thrown open in the United States in a few years to cultivation, and it included some of the greatest wheat lands on the globe.

During the 15 years following 1869, 99 per cent was added to the area of our land under cultivation, and most of it was used for cereal production. Our population increased in the same period only 45 per cent. The Sun writer shows from statistics gathered abroad that increasing the world's wheat area 5 per cent beyond the proportional increase of population reduced the price of the grain 31 per cent in the British market. The growth of the world's breadeating population in the seventies required an addition to the wheat area all over the globe of 17,000,000 acres, yet in that time the United States alone added 19,000,000 to the wheat acreage. Is it any wonder prices fell?

Since 1884, however, the wheat acreage relatively to population has been decreasing. It has been decreasing absolutely in the vicinity of the large cities everywhere, the farm lands there being required for market gardening and dairy purposes. But the supply of wheat on hand in 1882 was enormous, and a year or two was required to consume the surplus. Then came colossal wheat crops in 1887-8. These carried the bread eaters on till the harvests of 1891-2. The unheard of cereal production in this country in those years added to the great crop in Europe in 1892, swamped the world again, and it has not yet recovered. We entered on harvest the present year with an apparent reserve of 110,000,000 bushels of old wheat still on hand. But the demand will presently catch up to the supply. The Sun writer says:

Such acreage yields from American fields being hitherto unknown, it may be assumed that they will but rarely be repeated, and the world's wheat area, with average yields, being now deficient by more than 12,000,000 acres, the average harvest will produce but 2,280,000,000 bushels, while the world's needs are now 2,465,000,000, and augmenting at the rate of more than 28,000,000 bushels per annum—the equivalent of 2,700,000 new acres. Therefore we may expect prices to advance to a remunerative level just as soon as existing reserves shall have been consumed.

Prices having once reached such a level, a continuance of their remunerative character is practically assured by the probability that such additions as are made to the wheat bearing area in the Italian states and South America will be more than neutralized by decreased losses in western Europe and America.

An inventor has devised a genuine burglar proof safe for railway trains. It is arranged with two combination locks. Just when the bold train robber darkens the car doorway, pistol in hand, the express messenger touches a little spring. In an instant the safe is locked on a new combination of numbers which the messenger himself does not know and could not give to save his life. The agent at the main station has that combination set down in his books, and he must hasten it out before the safe can be opened. With this device the robber, the messenger and the station agent must all be in league before an express car safe can be robbed.

Whether the storage battery street car will come into common use depends altogether on whether it can be run as cheaply as the trolley car. No doubt the owners of the trolley lines themselves would be glad to substitute storage cars and thus be rid of the complaints made of the overhead wires if they could. To produce a cheap and lightweight storage battery system for street car propulsion presents a field of invention worthy the highest ambition. The storage battery fills all the requirements made of it as a motor.

A person of an imaginative turn of mind writes to recommend that parachutes be attached to the outfit of all firemen, so that when they find themselves cut off by flames from communication with the ground they can simply launch a parachute, throw themselves from the window and sail down to safety. Yes, with the long record of lives lost every summer by reckless parachuting, this is a suggestion that don't lift. Let the man who wants to try it on the firemen try it on himself first.

That naughty paper, the Philadelphia Public Ledger, regrets that the halls of congress have been so well repaired and fixed over this summer so as to be now really well ventilated and comfortable. If they were not so, then The Ledger thinks congress would adjourn quickly, and the extra session be over. But now the members will feel themselves as well off at the capital as at any cool summer resort and stay on indefinitely.

During the first week in August $10,000,000 in gold were added to the reserves of the New York banks from Europe.

AGAINST MRS. SHANN.

The Prosecution Has Put In Some Strong Evidence.

HER DEFENSE WILL BEGIN NOW

There Seemed to Have Been a Mania For Life Insurance Among the Members of Her Family — Her Husband's Strange Death.

TRENTON, Aug. 14.—If the prosecution succeed in proving their case to the satisfaction of the jury, which from the character of the testimony already given appears to be probable, it is hardly possible to conceive of a more infamous and revolting crime than that for which Mrs. Mattie Shann is now on trial.

That she was the prisoner's son, against whom, so far as has been shown, she had no grounds for ill feeling, and the sole motive for the murder, if murder it was, appears to have been to secure the paltry $9,000 for which the young man's life was insured.

That he was slowly done to death in the most cruel fashion possible by the long continued administration of corrosive sublimate is pretty thoroughly established.

and there is no question whatever that an attempt was made to remove all evidence of poison by cremating the body in the dead of night, within four hours after Mrs. Shann had been notified that the insurance company suspected that something was wrong and intended to insist upon an autopsy.

The Shann family appear to have had a sort of mania for life insurance. All the members were heavily insured to an extent which, if it existed, as a possible motive for the removal of John Shann, made it exceedingly difficult to keep up all the policies.

Poison In a Milk Punch.

The family is not entirely free from the imputation of having had frequent recourse to the same expedient, for it is openly charged that Frederick Shann met the same fate which befell his son, and that one of Mrs. Shann's daughters-in-law barely escaped after partaking of a milk punch flavored with paris green.

In the latter case the poison was revealed by an analysis of the punch. An indictment against the woman's husband failed by some political hocus pocus which involved its "swapping" for one found against a saloon keeper for violating the excise law.

In the case of the death of Shann, Sr., it was proposed to try Mrs. Shann for the murder, jointly with that of her son, but Justice Abbett declared that he would try the prisoner for only one crime at a time. Still another suspicious point relating to the insurance scheme of Mr. Shann is that Mabel Shann, the prisoner's pretty 16 year old daughter, was taken ill about the time of her brother's death with very similar symptoms.

Mrs. Shann kept a mechanics' boarding house in Witherspoon street, Princeton, and appears to have been a model landlady, judging by the exquisite cleanliness and order that marked her establishment. Perhaps as a wife and mother she fell a little short of perfection.

Her Amazing Fortitude.

The fortitude she has shown so far is amazing, and her occasional attacks of faintness are evidently due rather to physical weakness than to emotion.

Young Shann died on Tuesday, April 18, and that afternoon Special Examiner of Risks Gough of the Metropolitan Life came down from New York to make a few inquiries. Mrs. Shann refused to let him see the body, and he continued his researches in the town until he had learned enough to convince him that an autopsy should be made.

He reported this to the company, and on the following day Frank Borden, an agent of the company in Princeton, learned of it.

What Borden's interest in the matter was does not appear, but on Wednesday night, between 10 and 11 o'clock, he sent a note to Mrs. Shann and afterward sent his wife also. In the note that an autopsy would be held in the morning and that she had better summon a lawyer. His note bore the postscript, "Burn this."

The coroner found on the following day that all the internal organs with the exception of one kidney and the bladder had been removed. Mrs. Shann was arrested. She then took charge of three men entering the house and eri-cerating the body. When the court adjourned on Saturday, Prosecutor Stockton had shown by the evidence of S. Bergen and County Physician Cantwell that Shann's symptoms were unquestionably those of mercurial poisoning.

Professor Cornwall of Princeton testified that he had found traces in the muscles of all the parts of the body submitted to him. The defense will probably endeavor to show that Shann's death was the result of unskilled treatment, but this will hardly account for the enormous quantity of mercury found in the body. They will also try to show that the operation of evisceration was a ruse beyond Mrs. Shann's strength. How one visit of the three supposed physicians will be explained remains to be seen. Mrs. Shann will probably take the stand on Tuesday.

A MILLION IN SMOKE.

Flames in Lumber Piles and Sawmills Destroy Much Minneapolis Property.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 14.—Two fires, presumably the work of incendiaries, destroyed over $1,000,000 worth of property here. The fires broke out in a stable in the rear of the Cedar Lake Lumber company's house and soon spread to the icehouse proper. From there, fanned by a quick breeze, it spread to Clark's box factory and then destroyed the boiler works of Linton, Connell & Co., including a $27,000 riveting machine—the only one west of Chicago. Lehlardt's wagon works were totally consumed; also a quantity of lumber belonging to various firms. The Cedar Lake Ice company loses $5,000; Clark's Box company, $30,000; Linton, Connell & Co., $60,000; Union wagon works, $15,000.

While this fire was at its height an alarm was turned in from the lumber district at the other end of the island. Boom island, as the place is called, was a mass of wood and lumber piles belonging to Nelson, Tenny & Co. and Backus & Co. This was blazing fiercely, and fanned by a brisk wind the flames soon spanned the narrow stretch of water and began eating their way among the big sawmills and residences in the vicinity of the river bank.

All along Marshall street and through that entire section are small frame houses occupied by laborers and sawmill hands. They went like tinder when the flames first struck them, but the residents had ample time to move their belongings. In all 112 houses were destroyed. Although a general alarm was turned in, the entire city department proved powerless to stay the progress, and aid was asked from St. Paul, and that city promptly responded. For a while it looked as though the entire part of northwest Minneapolis would be destroyed, but by the concentration of the department the further progress of the flames was checked.

It was reported that Mrs. Thomas Sloane, an old lady who was bedridden, was burned in her house. The charred remains of a boy were also found in the debris.

PEACE IN MEACHAMBEAT.

It Came After Kirt James Had Been Riddled With Bullets.

JACKSON, Ala., Aug. 14.—The trouble in Meachambeat is at an end. The posse has disbanded and quiet reigns supreme. Babe Burke, Jim Jordan and Mack Burke, three of the worst men in the gang and acknowledged leaders, escaped by taking refuge in Satilpa swamp.

Kirt James was killed Friday night. He was captured in his field and put in charge of a guard of eight men to be lodged in jail. A mob of 100 men took him from the guard, tied his hands behind him, placed him in front of an oak tree and riddled his body with bullets. He makes the third man killed.

A plot to whip to death several of the leading spirees who voted for Jones in the Jones-Kolb gubernatorial contest was unearthed. Citizens of Meachambeat are panic stricken. Many have sold out, and those who could not find purchasers have abandoned their property and left. It is reported that Neal Sims, brother of the notorious Bob Sims, has joined forces with the Burkes, and what if this be so further bloodshed will follow. The present trouble will cast a blight on Coffeeville and will come near depopulating the town.

Playfully Killed His Sister.

BATESVILLE, Ind., Aug. 14.—Miss Louisa McClure Lyon, aged 20, and her brother William was visiting a neighbor. The latter had loaded William's revolver without having told him, and young Schrader, thinking it was empty, took it up and playfully snapped it in the sister's face. The gun went off, and the ball crashed through her brain, killing her instantly.

THE VISIT OF SATOLLI.

He Goes to New York as a Guest of Corrigan.

AN INTERESTING CHURCH CRISIS.

It Is Said That Concessions Have Been Made and That the War Between the Catholic Dignitaries Is to Come to a Peaceful End.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The visit today of Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate, to Archbishop Corrigan upon invitation of the latter is regarded with a great deal of curiosity by every one familiar with the strained relations which have existed between these two church dignitaries. Whether the archbishop has climbed down from the high ground he assumed when dealing with the Italian dignitary and is anxious to cover up his descent before the public by having the despised vice pope authority his most honored guest, to whom all sorts of obedience will be made by himself and his immediate followers, will of course never become generally known.

Those who profess to know, however, declare that the archbishop has seen that a terrible scandal for the church in this country was imminent, if not exactly through his own fault, through that of his friends, who, going too far themselves, would fain drive him along on the road to ruin, and that in time he has humbled himself, gaining, however, certain concessions which will save him public humiliation.

The Concessions Made.

It is stated that he has accepted without reserve the authority of Mgr. Satolli in all things relating to the government of the church in this country and that henceforth the friendliest relations will exist.

The concessions made him are said to be that he will not be asked to give Dr. McGlynn a parish, the doctor to be allowed the roaming commission which he himself favors, with the entire country for his church and pulpit, and that Dr. Burtsell will be allowed to remain for the present at Rondout. Dr. McGlynn, in the archbishop's opinion, is unfitted for parochial duty, and the belief is would be folly to endeavor to put him in the trance within which every ordinary priest must work.

It is pointed out that the present pastor of St. Stephen's, he Rev. Charles H. Colton, has done more in the parish during the past three years than Dr. McGlynn could do in a lifetime, and that he has almost changed the whole face of the church, which would have long since been sold out had not a change been made. It has furthermore been urged that gibbosity of tongue does not make a man great, and that Mgr. Satolli, instead of troubling more about him, should allow Dr. McGlynn to go on in his own way.

If being thus settled the Catholic church to avoid scandal at all cost, Mgr. Satolli is willing to be thoroughly reconciled with the archbishop and to have no clogs on the ecclesiastical machinery in this archdiocese.

Denied at the Cathedral.

At the cathedral it is of course denied that the archbishop ever had any strained relations with the apostolic delegate. On the contrary, it is said he was most anxious for Satolli's coming, and in a January address a pastoral letter to the clergy formally appointed the pope's action in sending the delegate, and that in a letter to the pope on the occasion of the holy father's jubilee he said his sufferings arose "in entire obedience to your holiness we venerate the authority of the mission apostolic."

Next Sunday morning—the feast of the Assumption of the blessed Virgin—a 10 o'clock Mgr. Satolli will celebrate pontifical high mass in St. Patrick's cathedral. The assistant priest will be the Rev. Mgr. Farley; the deacon of honor, the Rev. John Edwards of the Church of the Immaculate Conception and the Rev. James H. McGean of St. Peter's; deacon of the mass, the Rev. W. J. Daly; subdeacon, the Rev. P. Daly; masters of ceremonies, the Rev. James N. Connolly and the Rev. Henry T. Newey of the cathedral. Archbishop Corrigan will preach.

The apostolic delegate will be taken to several Catholic institutions after breakfast, and in the evening there will be a reception at the archbishop's residence. No tickets will be necessary for admission to the pontifical mass.

Shot at John L. Sullivan.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—John Lawrence Sullivan, actor and pugilist, had a narrow escape from death at the hands of a fellow sport the other evening in the barroom of the Vanderbilt hotel, at Lexington avenue and Forty-second street, this city, it is said. He was shot at by an old enemy, according to the report, but the bullet missed.

A Startling Rumor About the Queen.

ST. JOHN'S, N. B., Aug. 14.—Rev. L. C. McNeil created considerable excitement in his church by announcing that a cable dispatch had been received to the effect that Queen Victoria had been stricken with paralysis. No confirmation has been received.

Her Lip as a Burnt Offering.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14.—Rachael Boyle, aged 34 years, of 535 Sycamore street, during religious excitements, cut off a portion of her lip and then broiled it as an offering to God. She is now in the Philadelphia hospital.

Two Mysterious Deaths.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 14.—The bodies of two unknown women were found in Beck's Run hollow, under the Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston railroad trestle. The cause of their death is a mystery.

A POLITICAL WAR.

Troops Play a Part in the Politics of Three Mexican Towns.

HOUSTON, Aug. 14.—Fighting is looked for in the state of Coahuila, Mexico, before the election for state officials, which takes place on Sept. 15. There are two candidates for the office of chief executive—Garza Galan, the present governor, and Don Miguel Cardinas of Saltillo. They are known respectively as Galanites and the Oppositionistas.

The latter party is much the stronger in numbers, but Galan has the support of the state and municipal officials, who are all his appointees. The supporters of Galan have prevented the opposition party from meeting or organizing clubs, and so arrogant and illegal has their conduct become that it has given rise to much ill feeling between the two parties.

This culminated Thursday in the Oppositionistas rising in their might in the towns of Allende, Navas, Morases and Saragosia and driving out the Galan officials, who had forcibly deprived them of the rights guaranteed them by the federal constitution.

Upon the news reaching here the jefe politico of the district, Manuel Rosas, organized a posse of about 100 men, of whom 80 were federal soldiers, and left here for Navs, about 20 miles distant, with the avowed intention of cleaning out the Oppositionistas.

GALVESTON, Aug. 14.—A special from Eagle Pass says about 200 federal troops were unloaded at Sabina, states of Gaobulla and Peyotes, on the Mexican International. It is reported that a trainload of cavalry will follow, to be distributed along the line of the road. Cardinas' party captured Navs and turned out the Galan officials and took charge of the offices. This places them in possession of most all the towns surrounding Piedras Negras.

What action the federal troops will take is purely surmise. About 200 of Cardinas' men are camped three miles from Peyotes station, where the troops were unloaded.

THE MONEY STRINGENCY.

Standard Oil Checks Refused For the First Time.

TOLEDO, Aug. 14.—For the first time since oil was discovered in the Ohio fields the checks issued by the Standard Oil company are not honored. The merchants and boarding house keepers have always readily accepted the checks after being properly indorsed and have had no trouble in negotiating them at the Toledo, Findlay and Lima banks. So common were these checks that they were used almost the same as currency, and many of them would become so worn that they scarcely held together when they at last got around to the banks.

The fact that the country is suffering a currency famine has been made apparent to the oil men in a manner which astonishes them. A few of the checks issued for July were accepted by the country merchants, who promptly turned them over to the banks. The latter refuse to issue the currency on them or to remit to persons' accounts. Some banks even refused to accept them for exchange at 3 per cent discount.

Closed For an Indefinite Period.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 14.—The No. 1 knitting mill of Warren, DeForest & Co. closed for an indefinite time. They employ over 300 hands in this mill. Some of the mills paid off in silver and small change owing to the scarcity of currency. There are nearly 4,000 people now out of employment in this city.

A Big Lot of Gold.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Cunard steamer Aurania brought $234,000 in gold, $31,250 of which was consigned to the Canadian Bank of Commerce, £32,000 to the American Express company, £100,000 to Drexel, Morgan & Co. and £19,300 to John Sinclair.

New York Checks Refused.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 14.—The live stock dealers at the East Liberty stockyards have decided to refuse all checks and New York drafts in payment for stock pending the present currency stringency. Only cash will be taken.

Twenty Cholera Patients.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Dr. Jenkins reports 20 cases of cholera at quarantine among the detained passengers, two more having been discovered Sunday. The steamer Fulda arrived from Genoa. All were well on board. All of the steerage passengers had been detained five days at that port, and their baggage was disinfected before embarkation.

Bayoneted His Wife.

PATERSON, N.J., Aug. 14.—Charles Klose, 113 North First street, fatally wounded his wife with a bayonet attached to a rifle belonging to the German Schuetzenbund, of which he is a member. He knocked her down with the butt end of the weapon and then stabbed her in the side with the bayonet.

Wrecked on the Lakes.

ROCHESTER, Aug. 14.—Saturday night, during the gale off Charlotte, the Luura, a coal barge hailing from Oswego, went down 25 miles from shore. Captain Malcolmson and his crew of five men and a stewardess took to the yawl and made Charlotte in an exhausted condition.

A Bankrupt Con. ty.

O'NEILL, Neb., Aug. 14.—It is feared Holt county is bankrupt. More than a week ago Treasurer Scott left the county city. He has not returned, and to $20,000 in county funds that should be on hand only $2,000 can be found, three-fourths of that being in a defunct bank.

Sanger Was Badly Injured.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 14.—Walter C. Sanger, the champion Milwaukee bicycle rider, may never appear in a wheelman's race again in consequence of the injuries he received in Chicago.

National Croquet Tournament.

NORWICH, Conn., Aug. 14.—The National Croquet association tournament opened in this city today. Championship games will continue through the week. Over 30 clubs are represented.

Shot at an Ex-Minister.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—M. Lockroy, a former cabinet minister, was fired at by a man named Moore, a notorious socialist, because he refused a request for a loan of 10 francs.

Satolli Visits Corrigan.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Mgr. Satolli leaves today for New York, accompanied by his secretary, Dr. Papi, to visit Archbishop Corrigan on invition of the latter.

Cashier Charged With Embezzlement.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 14.—C. A. Hawkes, formerly cashier of the Seven Corners bank, was arrested, charged with having embezzled $3,000.

SENATORS ARE READY.

Early This Week They Will Begin the Silver Debate.

NO LINE OF ACTION AGREED UPON.

Representatives Are Taking Great Interest In the Pending Fight—Almost a Hundred of Them Down to Speak—Night Sessions May Be Held.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Congress has settled down to debate with a degree of expedition almost unknown in its history and with an apparent determination to do something that promises well for the outcome.

Fortunately for the majority in the senate, the action of the house on the silver question relieved them from the necessity of speedy and perhaps ill advised action. The Democratic caucus committee charged with the preparation of a plan that should secure the adherence of the united majority will therefore commence its labors with more deliberation than would otherwise have been possible, and it is not expected now that they will perfect their work—which involves consultation with many senators at each stage—much before the house has acted.

The finance committee will probably wait upon the action of the caucus committee, and so the silver question is not likely to figure in a formal way in the proceedings of the senate this week. It is entirely possible and even probable that speeches will be delivered upon the subject, but if so they will be based upon some such resolution as that introduced by Senator Lodge, calling for a vote upon the repeal of the silver purchase section of the Sherman act, and not upon a bill regularly reported from the finance committee and ready for immediate action.

There is a strong disposition in some quarters to fill in the time during the week by the discussion of the Lee Mantle senatorial election case, which is in a privileged position and can be called up at any time to the displacement of other business.

Debating Nothing but Silver.

The programme in the house has been definitely fixed by the adoption of the order introduced Friday last by Representative Bland. The time will be devoted exclusively to the consideration of the silver question under the rules of the last house governing general debate. Notwithstanding the apparent lack of interest in the discussion manifested by members, the number of applicants for recognition already on the speaker's list demonstrates that the period allotted to the debate—11 days under the general rule and three days under the five minute rule—will be all occupied.

There are now between 90 and 100 names enrolled by the speaker, the great majority of whom probably expect to talk the full hour allowed by the rule. There are a number, however, who have stipulated for shorter periods, generally 20 minutes or half an hour. It appears that the time for debate will be too short to accommodate all who wish to speak, night sessions will be held to lengthen the period, but this expedient, it is believed, will not become necessary before next week, with the expiration of which the debate will close.

Senate Will Begin the Debate.

Senator White of Louisiana, a member of the "steering committee" of the Democratic caucus, is quoted as saying that the committee has come to no conclusion respecting a line of policy to be pursued by the majority on the senate. His understanding, however, it was said, was that the debate on the silver question, based upon one of the measures already pending, Mr. Stewart's free coinage bill or Mr. Lodge's resolution to vote on the repeal of the Sherman law on the 3d inst., will begin at once, possibly today. Senator Hoar expects to address the senate in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law Tuesday or Wednesday.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New Jersey—Batsto, Alonzo Norton; Forest Grove, Elizabeth C. Ford; Marlton, G. S. Middleton; Shrewsbury, G. D. Bradford; Woodbine, C. L. Adkins.

New York—Carlisle, William Angle; Fruitland, D. H. Fuller; Niles, Allen Birch; Voorheesville, K. Dayton Joslin; Walker Valley, Cornelius Barnhart; West Chazy, W. F. Stratton.

Tied the Watchman In a Chair.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 14.—Fred Tate, watchman at the Nickel Plate freight house, was waylaid and badly beaten by burglars, carried into the freight house and bound to a chair. The burglars then blew the safe open and carried off the cash drawer, containing $100 in cash and a large number of checks.

Rescued by a British Cruiser.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The British cruiser Forth rescued the British steamer Kirkby, Captain Brown, off Start point in a fog. The Kirkby was kept afloat and towed to Plymouth by the Forth. The Forth had just left Tor bay, where she had been with the blue maneuvering fleet.

Four Persons Drowned.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 14.—The Magnolia Outing club gave an excursion on the river which terminated disastrously. A naptha launch with seven a number of people, was sunk. Mrs. Charles Rief, Mrs. George Rief, Miss Wagner and a child were drowned.

Took Rough on Rats.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 14.—Miss Annie Lima, a jute spinner, 24 years old, died in great agony from a large quantity of rough on rats. Her mother says that Annie mistook the poison for malaria medicine.

Children Killed by a Cyclone.

WISONA, Kan., Aug. 14.—A cyclone in the northern part of Labette county destroyed a number of farm property. The house of W. H. Jackson was demolished, and his two children were killed.

A Band of Pilgrims.

AUBREYVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 14.—St. Mary's congregation of the Little Falls made its first pilgrimage of the season to Our Lady of Mt. Carmel. Two thousand persons were present.

Cholera Increasing in Russia.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Official returns show a great increase of cholera in Russia in the past week. In Moscow city there was an average of 30 cases and 15 deaths daily.

A French Pedestrian's Journey.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—George Grandin, a French pedestrian, arrived in Chicago, having walked all the way from New York, which city he left July 15.

ALMOST A MUTINY.

Some Lively Times Aboard the American Yacht Navahoe.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The Sportsman says that Captain Barr of the yacht Navahoe will return to America in a week. It is reported that the captain of the volunteer has been cabled for to come over and take charge of the Navahoe. In the meantime she will be commanded by Captain Dexter, who has piloted the Navahoe in all her races in England and who was formerly skipper of the Valkyrie.

According to The Sportsman the recent row aboard the Navahoe occurred in this way: The men were sitting at the aft rail when an order was given which was obeyed very slowly.

The last man to rise, said to be one of the smartest of the crew, was remonstrated with by one of the gentlemen aboard the yacht. The seaman spoke back, and a long altercation ensued, resulting in the gentleman's striking the seaman in the face and cutting it open.

The boatswain was ordered to put the man below, but was reluctant to carry out the order. Eventually he persuaded the man to go. The seaman refused to accept an apology from his assailant and declared his intention to commence litigation. Ultimately the gentleman who struck the seaman settled the matter by paying the man six months' salary, amounting to $70, and his passage to America. The man will sail for home in a day or two.

CONVENIENT STYLES.

Uses For Old Laces—Effective and Economical Arrangements.

Those women who find old lace by them, or indeed lace of any kind, black or white, have an unusually good opportunity for displaying it to the best advantage, for it is introduced in every imaginable fashion on both morning and evening dresses. The lace flounces which used to be worn are now placed at the edge of the skirts, often festooned with ribbon bows; they also are introduced round the hips, while triple flounces are made to cover the entire skirt.

Almost any shaped piece of lace appears to be adapted to the shoulders and to the capes, which are of every form, but mostly surround the yokes or taper from the waist over the shoulders. It is certainly newer to have a detached cape covering the sleeves only, and then it should reach to the elbow.

LACE TRIMMED EVENING DRESS.

Our first cut shows an exquisite evening dress of pink satin trimmed with lace, beaded by a roulean of ribbon and bows. Lace edges cross the front, falling in a triple frill over the sleeve. Many black satins trimmed with white lace are accompanied by hats and bonnets of transparent guipure trimmed with jet.

No colors are now so vivid as the yellows of various tints, from faintest primrose to the deepest orange, but delicately yellow shot with browns. In the second cut is shown a very pretty arrangement of silk and lace for wearing under an open jacket. It is of light lemon colored taffeta veiled with black lace and mostly covers the front, being turned under below the waist. Blouse fronts and bodices and very desirable variety in a limited wardrobe.

Movable yokes for several dresses with a frill at the edge, so that they can be tacked over the bodice, form most effective and convenient arrangements.

There are many white and black striped gowns, black gowns with white guipure trimming, and a novel feature in the fashions are the black nets worn over shot and china silks. Fawn and black are favorite mixtures.

BLOUSE FRONT IN SILK AND LACE.

Accordion plaiting is applied to many black chiffon worn over light colored satin, light blue, pink and other tones, just for the bodices. It has this advantage—that fabrics which are not in themselves rich or perfectly fresh gain an added importance and improved nesect.

METEORITES.

Their Peculiar Markings—Origin of the Familiar Shooting Stars.

The most generally accepted theory in regard to the masses of stone or metal which not infrequently fall from the sky and are commonly known as meteorites is that they are small planets revolving in regular orbits around the sun, like the earth and larger members of the solar system. When from the intersection of the orbits the meteorite collides with the earth, the velocity with which it strikes is so great that the blow against the air itself and the friction of its passage raise its temperature to a white heat, just as a nail may be heated redhot by striking it on an anvil with a hammer. This heating is usually quite superficial, as the few seconds consumed in its passage through the air are not long enough to raise a mass of any size to a red or white heat.

While the number of meteorites reaching the earth probably amounts to thousands, it not millions, every day, a very small proportion are noticeable, and still fewer reach the ground. For the most part they are extremely minute, hardly larger than fine grains of sand, and are totally dissipated in the air before reaching the earth. These constitute the familiar "shooting stars," which are so common on clear, moonless evenings. Popular Science News, in which the foregoing is found, further says:

Meteorites are divided into two classes, the stony or mineral and the metallic. The presence of native or metallic iron is very characteristic of meteorites, as native iron is very rarely found in the rocks constituting the earth's crust. Very curiously, this meteoric iron is always alloyed with nickel, and when the surface of such a metallic meteorite is polished and then etched with acid the crystalline structure of the alloy is developed in a most remarkable manner, forming a design known as the Widmanstatten figures (Fig. 1). The production of these figures was formerly supposed to be peculiar to meteoric iron, but specimens of native iron have been found in Greenland which gave these figures and resembled meteoric iron in every respect, but were afterward found to be of terrestrial origin.

The stony meteorites consist principally of a few silicates. A phosphide of iron known as schreibersite occurs in some, and when polished and etched with acid gives markings which are very characteristic, but entirely different from the Widmanstatten figures. In Fig. 2 these markings are represented as seen on the surface of a mass of meteoric iron found at Canyon Diablo, A. T.

HOW MISS GRACE BATES DECORATES THE HOMES OF WEALTH.

A Bright Idea of the Penniless Daughter of a Millionaire, by the Carrying Out of Which She Has Won an Independence and a High Reputation.

FIG. 2—METEORIC FIGURES.

There is no woman in the country who takes more practical interest in the struggles and trials of untrained girlhood to gain a livelihood than Mrs. Stanford, of California. With a generous heart and a well filled purse it is no easy matter to find out how to help or relieve the wants of that constantly increasing class of gentlewomen who have been taught a little of everything but the useful, and whose shamepride is less offended by delicately proffered charity than a suggestion of manual labor.

Mrs. Stanford has the aptitude for discovering what a girl can do, sometimes unearthing unsuspected and undeveloped talent. Knowing this she is a modern genius among believers in her own capacity, but is lacking the chance to make use of it. Here is a little story from life that illustrates my point:

A bright and refined looking girl of seventeen came to see Mrs. Stanford one day. Her name was Grace Bates, and she was the only daughter of Judson Bates, one of the richest men the Pacific coast has ever known, and who made his fortune in Honolulu. Here the little girl on his magnificent estate like a prince; his children were brought up and educated with every luxury and advantage, and their children in turn were started on the same flowery path. Misfortune, however, appeared with time and pursued the family with such apparent vindictiveness that the millionaires grandchild at seventeen found herself bereft of male relatives, penniless and with an invalid mother and two infant nieces dependent upon her.

There were some friends of better days who had offered the poor child a home, but she had within her that precious germ of Anglo-Saxon independence that dies hard. Make a struggle she must. So she went up to the great house that sat on the hill.

HER FIRST TRIAL.

"What can I do for you?" asked Mrs. Stanford with sympathy, for she knew the family history and the girl's sore straits.

"I have just one chance," said the girl eagerly. "I believe I could decorate your house and your table for an entertainment in a way that would please you. I understand color and form, and I love flowers as dearly as any Japanese, and can arrange them. If I should fail it would do you no harm. If I succeed, my fortune will be made, for other people will give me orders."

Now a hostess who entertains as Mrs. Stanford does, making novelty as much a specialty as magnificence, would far rather give a big check than run the risk of having her decorations marred; but this is just where the real generosity came in, and Mrs. Stanford hesitated but a second before consenting. The occasion that offered was a large dinner given in honor of a military hero, to be followed by a reception. Wishing to leave her new florist unembarrassed, Mrs. Stanford avoided visiting the apartments in her hands until the work was completed.

"When I did come down to receive my guests," said that lady, "I found the place transformed. The girl seemed gifted with the fingers of a fairy and the imagination of a poet. There were no stereotyped designs, but every plant, every flower entered its office, and there was so much grace and originality in the arrangement of the table that every woman who sat down at it asked me as a favor the address of my new decorator."

A SIGNAL SUCCESS.

So little Miss Bates made her fortune, for orders flowed in, and California orders are not niggardly. All this happened six years ago, and now the young lady owns her own cottage and house, and her own handsome establishment. Her two little nieces are receiving a thorough education, and the invalid mother has all the relief that skill and love can bring her.

When the tour that President and Mrs. Harrison made through the west was first announced, the Stanfords expressed a desire to entertain them, and on the acceptance of their invitation Mrs. Stanford telegraphed Miss Bates to make preparations for the event, and gave carte blanche as to expense. At 7 o'clock on the morning of the day set for the dinner Miss Bates drove to the house followed in wagons by her corps of eight assistants, all young girls, clad in uniform, with big white aprons and white caps. They brought with them piles of clean hay sheets, with which, as if by magic, they covered the polished floors, the Turkish rugs and the embroidery and tapestry of the upholstered furniture.

All day long they worked silently and nimbly, and at 4 o'clock Mrs. Stanford was asked to make a tour of inspection. Pretty girls and smart WALKED OFF THE TRAIN.

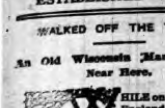
An Old Wisconsin Man Injured Near Here.



WHILE on his way to England Mr. John Johnston of Wisconsin, an old man 68 years old, was injured near Dunellen last night. He was accompanied by his son who had to keep careful watch on the old man, who is very eccentric. Last night he went to sleep for a few moments and was awakened by the cry that a man had walked off the train. It proved to be his father, who had walked off the train as it was under full headway. The train was stopped and ran back to where the old man lay. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. Dr. Fritts attended him. It is thought he is injured internally. No bones were broken.

BREVITIES.

—Warren Engine Co's new hose tower is finished.

—Car No. 2 was also run on the Somerset street line last night.

—The crossings on Somerset street have been raised to grade.

—The Crescent Avenue church steeple has been re-tinned from top to bottom.

—The contract case Fessler vs. Seguine was tried before Justice Mosher yesterday. Decision was reserved.

—Mr. Parker's large mastiff died the other night. It was valued at $1,000 and had taken three first prizes at different times.

—The Board of Freeholders will hold a special meeting on Tuesday, August 22, to open bids for macadamizing a new county road.

—Fred Foster was thrown from a bicycle at the corner of Somerset and Race streets last night. He barely escaped striking the curb with his head.

—The bicycle race between James Martin and James Egan, from here to Westfield and return, which was to have taken place last night, was postponed indefinitely.

—A new meat market has opened on North avenue. The price of meat is put at a figure, that, the proprietor says, will draw the buyers. See his advertisement elsewhere.

—Andrew Hegren was arrested in the borough last night by Marshal Pangborn. The marshal has been looking for him since last Winter, when he was in a fight over the brook. He was fined five dollars.

—A brakeman was injured near Bound Brook last night by falling from a car. He was brought to this city, where Dr. Fritts attended him. His foot was crushed. He was afterwards taken to his home.

—The Post Office Department has issued an order creating a new Post Office at Baltus Roll Hill, known as Baltusrol and has appointed J. H. Howell Postmaster. The new office will be supplied daily from Westfield.

FOR STEALING CLOTHES.

Alice Robinson Arrested Last Night by Policeman Vanderweg.

Alice Robinson was arrested last night by Policeman Vanderweg, on complaint of Mrs. Osborn of North avenue, who charges her with stealing some clothes form her place. The theft was committed Saturday night, she says.

Policeman Vanderweg found her at a house in the boulevard, where she was hiding.

She was given a hearing this morning before Justice Nash. Trial was set down for three o'clock this afternoon.

Road Book of New Jersey.

The New Jersey Division L. A. W. has issued an excellent road book of New Jersey for the year 1893. It is a handsome volume, bound in red Morocco, with gilt lettering, and is of a size and shape to be conveniently carried in the pocket. Not only is every road in New Jersey plainly shown in this book, but the kind of road is clearly designated, so that those wishing to take long drives or trips through the State with horses and carriages can tell before starting which roads to take, and whether they will encounter roads good or poor, smooth or rough, gravelly or sandy, level or hilly, telford or dirt, macadam or clay, stone, shale or mud.

Base Ball Notes.

The Crescents go to Middletown Wednesday, and to Asbury Park on Thursday to meet the Asbury Park team on that day, and any Plainfielders who have not had an opportunity of seeing the team play at home will take advantage of this opportunity.

The Cuban Giants will be here Labor Day morning and a good game is expected, as they are greatly strengthened since they were here last. Sedens, their new short stop, is said to be a phenomenal player.

The Weather.

On Wednesday, warmer and fair to partly cloudy weather and southerly winds will prevail, followed by local rain in the lake region, and on Thursday rather higher temperature, more sultry and fair weather, followed by local rains in this section.

NOW IT'S WIFE NO. 3.

WHO IS CAUSING TROUBLE IN MR. BULLOCK'S HOUSEHOLD.

Wife No. 2 was a Plainfielder who Brought Suit Last Winter for Money Loaned the Much Married Bullock—He is in Trouble with Wife No. 3 Now.

THOMAS O. Bullock, a rice importer of New York city, seems fated to troubles of a domestic nature. From his first wife, whom he married many years ago, he obtained a divorce in Utah, after which he again married.

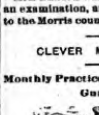
A year or so ago his first wife brought suit against him on the ground that the Utah divorce was not legal. Wife No. 2, who was a Plainfielder, and was married to Mr. Bullock in this city, also broke with him about the same time. The courts held that the Utah divorce was not legal, and this caused wife No. 2. Then wife No. 1 obtained a genuine divorce, and wife No. 2 brought suit against him for money she claimed to have put in his business, but it is understood that Bullock settled with her.

Bulloc about a year ago took unto himself a third wife in the person of Miss Gertrude Sanders, of Brooklyn. Bullock has now made complaint before the justice of the peace of Dover, charging that his wife has "at various times used threats toward her husband that she would kill him with a hatchet, and that she would shoot him." He also charges that she has maliciously destroyed "sundry pictures, clocks, glassware and other articles of value."

Mrs. Bullock was arrested, but waived an examination, and gave bail to answer to the Morris county courts.

CLEVER MARKMANSHIP.

Monthly Practice Shoot of the Climax Gun Club.



The ClimaxGun Club grounds, some clever marksmanship was indulged in by the members of the club, on the occasion of their regular monthly shoot yesterday. The club is rapidly going to the front, and will soon be one of the leading trap shooting clubs of the State.

The attendance was large and a large number of spectators watched the "target smashers" break the flying targets. The score of each contestant in the club match of 25 targets is given below with the handicap of each:

T. Brantingham, scratch, 24; C. Smith and N. Agger, scratch, and scored 21; T. H. Keller, scratch, 20, D. Terry, scratch, 16. S. Terry, handicap 7, scored 18; Trust, 5, scored 25; Geo. Voehl, 7, score, 29; R. Manning, 8, broke 3; J. Darby, 10, scored 16; D. Darby, 5, broke 20; W. Terry, 7 score 26, "McCarty" 7, score 31, and J. Gordman securing a handicap of 10 scored 22. Several sweepstake matches were shot and over 100 targets were shattered by the marksmen during the afternoon's sport.

PERSONAL.

Dr. F. C. Ard of Watchung avenue has returned from his vacation.

Miss E. Mundy of Somerset street has gone to Little Falls, N. J., to visit friends.

Mrs. P. M. French of Somerset street starts for Buffalo, N. Y., to-night, to vis it relatives.

Mr. Peter E. See is improving his property on Somerset street by having his fence fixed and painted.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Evans of Washington avenue, North Plainfield, have gone away for the remainder of the Summer.

Among the Plainfielders registered at Asbury Park hotels Saturday, were F. C. Adams, Miss M. J. Elliott, Mrs. J. R. Van Arsdale and daughter.

Patrick Lyons and Sophie Rothenhausen of Lilden avenue were married on June 24th, at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage, by the Rev. Charles R. Barnes.

Mrs. John J. Kenny and children of East Second street started Saturday to be gone probably two weeks visiting friends and relatives. At present they are visiting in Elizabeth, but later they will go to New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. George Le vis of Mountain avenue have received a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones of Grandview avenue, who are spending five weeks at the World's Fair and visiting in Chicago. They say they are having a glorious time, and that the World's Fair must be seen to be appreciated.

Trouble Among the Canarys.

Mrs. James Canary complained to the police last night that her lord and master was enjoying himself smashing the dishes and breaking up the furniture. Policeman McCue arrested James and placed him where there were no dishes to smash nor any furniture to break, except a plank which has stood many a trial and is good wood yet.

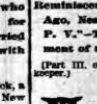
The Judge suspended sentence in his case this morning, as Canary said he was a little drunk and that he had bought and paid for the dishes.

AN OLD TAVERN KEEPER

AND HIS LOVE FOR A GOOD JOKE AT OTHERS' EXPENSE.

Reminiscences of Life Many Years Ago, Near Peapac, as Told by "P. P. V."—This is the Third Instalment of the Story.

(Part III. of the story of the "Old Tavern-Keeper.")



IT WAS in the old tavern, some few years later, that the first temperance lecture was listened to by a company of six young men who resided within a short distance from the village. They had met together at some meeting in a neighboring town about two miles distant. The weather was extremely cold. Seeing a light in the old tavern on their return, they, stopped, when it occurred they proposed giving Christavon a benefit of his fire, which was a custom in those days, without any particular harm being attached to it. After the party had sat around the fire a few minutes, drinks were called for. Christavon, who seemed to be interested in the boys and their conversation, led off in a little story, as if he had not heard the request for something from his bar. But soon the glasses took the form of a decoction of drinks. The old tavern-keeper was obliged to do "something." He had advised them to desist, but there were six against him. After exhausting his seeming resources, he fumbled in his pockets for the key to unlock the door of his bar, but no key could be found. When suddenly the thought struck him that his wife must have the key, as she had been "waiting" at the barsince he had. Thereupon he based an excuse to obtain the key from his wife, who he thought might have gone to bed for the night.

The young men were willing to wait, when very soon the good old landlady put in her appearance. She questioned them as to what they wanted, and when the reply was, "Drink," "Why," says she, "I am astonished at such a company of wise young men. I know your fathers and mothers, and sisters. Would you call for drinks if your fathers were here. How would your mothers feel just at this moment if they knew you were here at this time of night asking for liquor; and your sisters, would they not be manifest in the way you circulated during your conduct. Go straight to your homes as nice young men ought to, for you will get nothing to drink here to night I assure you." Of course they lost courage, after the good old lan dlady's lecture of reproof, asking again for any thing to drink at Christavon's bar.

At another time a villager and cabinet maker, had a very poor horse, which was considered a shame and disgrace to the town people. It happened that some one in the neighborhood had the misfortune of finding his horse dead, whereupon Christavon had the dead animal taken off and stuffed, and after the cabinet maker had retired for a good night's sleep, had it placed on stilts against a rear door of the shop, so as it would fall inside when the door was opened. This door the cabinet maker was sure to open directly after entering his place of business. Sure enough, all the effigy a fine similie of his horse. Christavon was sure to enter in about the time, so as to witness the performance, and hear the cabinet maker wished he had disposed of the brute, as he had been advised. Christavon meanwhile expressing his wonder and mock lahment as to how such a thing should happen, was entirely unsuspected by the cabinet maker, to the same day, gave his old horse away.

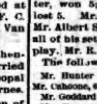
YESTERDAY'S TENNIS.

Mr. Simmonds Still Leads in the Hillside Tournament.



THE Hillside Tennis Club tournament was continued all day yesterday and will probably be finished to-night. Out of the nine entries four have finished. They are Mr. R. Simpson, won 7; lost 1. Mr. S. Hunter, won 5; lost 3. Mr. F. Fish, won 3; lost 5. Mr. P. Frost lost all by default. Mr. Albert Simmonds still leads, winning all of his sets so far, with one more to play. Mr. R. Simpson holds second place. The following are yesterday's scores:

Mr. Hunter defeated Mr. Goddard, 6—4, 6—2.
Mr. Osborne, 6—4, 6—4, and Mr. Frost, 6—3, 6—0.
Mr. Goddard defeated Mr. Frost, 6—3, 6—1.
Mr. Simpson defeated Mr. Hunter, 6—4, 6—1, 6—4.

Mr. Dorman defeated Mr. Goddard, 6—1, 6—3, and Mr. Frost, 6—0, 6—0.
Mr. H. Simmonds defeated Mr. Frost 6—0, 6—0.
Mr. A. Simmonds defeated Mr. Frost, 6—2, 6—1.
Mr. Simpson defeated Mr. H. Simmonds, 5—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Tried to Pull the Post Up.

Charles Smith's horse, tied to a post on Somerset street, created some excitement, this morning, by trying to pull the post out of the ground. The post didn't move, but the bridle couldn't stand the strain and broke. The horse would have gotten away, but for the prompt action of Policeman Vanderweg who sprang out and caught the animal by the head. He held it until the bridle could be mended.

The cause of all the trouble was a small boy who backed his wagon in Mr. Smith's horse.

—A number of young men amused themselves on Harmony street yesterday afternoon trying to ride a high bicycle.

ROBBED OF FIFTY-FIVE DOLLARS.

John Scudder Arrested Accused of the Theft.

John Giles of Park avenue was on his way home Saturday night, when he was met by John Scudder, who lives on Lake street, and knows the first named quite well. Scudder saw that Giles had been taking quite freely of the cup that inebriates. Being of a kindly disposition Scudder volunteered to see his friend home.

The two plodded along. Giles became friendly and told Scudder he had fifty-five dollars in his inside pocket. Owing to the scarcity of funds in the country, Scudder decided to take advantage of the opportunity to make himself solid against any more failures in the money market. He forthwith divested the old man of his cash. To conceal the theft he took his victim to an old shed on Lake street and left him there.

When Giles became sober he naturally felt for his treasure. It was gone. It finally dawned upon him that Scudder had been the last man he was with. He went to the chief with his tale of woe. Scudder was located at "Jim" Babbitt's pool room yesterday and arrested by Chief Grant.

He was taken before Justice Nash, who held him for the action of the Grand Jury. In default of $100 bail he was committed to the county jail.

ARLINGTON HOTEL OPENED.

Proprietor Windham Gives his Friends a Royal Time.

THE opening of the Arlington Hotel, at the corner of Somerset street and Greenbrook road, took place last night. The hotel was formerly owned by Mr. Joseph Blatz who sold the place to Mr. Rice, who in turn sold it to Mr. Henry F. Windham, the present proprietor, a short time ago. The place has been entirely remodeled and painted.

The hotel was decorated with Japanese lanterns and red white and blue electric lights. Bunting encircled the building and flags hung from every available place. The lawn was illuminated by electric lights, three rows running the entire length of the lawn.

Tables were set on the lawn. At the first table were: Mayor Saunders of North Plainfield, John Adamson, Superintendent of the Plainfield Electric Street Railway; Joseph Blatz, of the Crescent hotel; Charles Sebring, of the North Plainfield Electric Light Co.; Mr. Schoonmaker of Newark, and the proprietor of the Spring Brook Company of Newark; August Windham, Jacob Blimm, H. Delke of Grove street, Geo. Polhemus, electricians; and Mr. Ulrich.

A large table was occupied by about 150. A brass band furnished music.

A SUICIDE AT SOMERVILLE.

Dr. Edward Goertz Takes a Dose of Prussic Acid.

Dr. Edward Goertz, a practising dentist of Somerville committed suicide by taken prussic acid at an early hour yesterday morning. His office and sleeping apartments were in the Sebring Building on Main street. The janitor's wife heard Dr. Goertz moving about his room on the floor below early yesterday morning. When Janitor Demont went into the Doctor's room he found him stretched on the bed, partly dressed with a bottle of prussic acid clutched tightly in his hand. His body was still warm when County Physician Reed arrived at eight o'clock. Dr. Goertz was alone in the world. He was a Prussian by birth, and was highly thought of. Ever since he lacked grip he had been sick and dispondent.

Regarding Mr. Charles Potter Jr.

The Press News, of New York has two items of interest about our greatly esteemed townsman Mr. Charles Potter Jr. It says:

Charles Potter, Jr., it is stated, has retired from active service in the Printing Press Company bearing his name. If such is the case, no man deserves a well earned rest more than this honorable gentleman. Mr. Potter originated the plan of going direct to the printer with his machinery instead of waiting for the printer to come to the market. He began his printing press career about 1857, and, to his credit be it spoken, he always did his work in a dignified, clean and thorough manner. It is rarely that a press machine can go through the different States without incurring animosities or calling out vituperation or comment from competitors. Mr. Potter was a rare exception in this respect, his manners seemed to awe into silence the most bitter of rivals, and his bearing always commanded respect. May he enjoy his rest.

Calvert B. Cottrell, the well known printing press builder, died at Westerly, R. I., on Friday, July 28th. Mr. Cottrell, when quite young, in company with Mr. Nathan Babcock, began the manufacture of printing presses for Charles Potter, Jr., as indefatigable salesman, who was probably the pioneer traveling salesman of printing machinery in this country. Mr. Potter, during the years 27-8 and 9, sold many of the country made presses. Potter was driven from the market by R. Hoe & Co's purchase of the Adams' press patents, which covered the slatted frame for piling the printed sheets. In 1865, on the expiration of the Adams' patents, Mr. Potter again entered the field.

—All the outside work on Mr. W. D. Murray's new house on East seventh street has been completed.

DR. COLES' GIFT TO THE LIBRARY.

A Volume Containing a Biographical Sketch of the Late Abraham Coles.

Dr. Coles of Scotch Plains has presented to the Free Public Library a copy of the volume entitled "Abraham Coles biographical sketch, memorial tributes, selections from his works, (some hitherto unpublished,) edited by his son Jonathan Ackerman Coles, A. M. M. D.

Of the subject of this volume The Critic says:

"There was no more scholarly man in New Jersey than Dr. Coles who was best known by his translations of 'Dies irae.' The name of his place 'Deerhurst' was given to it because of its deer park, in which the owner kept a fine herd of those beautiful animals. Dr. Coles' library or study at Deerhurst was an ideal room, not only on account of the scholar's library it contained, but because of its architectural attractions, the plentiful light coming from the top, its inviting fire-place, and its easy chairs."

The volume contains beside many other views, both interior and exterior of his beautiful home at Deerhurst, a fine view of this "scholar's library." The frontis-piece is an excellent steel engraving of Dr. Coles, whose face is doubtless a familiar one to many in this locality.

Another of the interesting features of Dr. Coles' property is the labyrinth of hedges, the idea being, by following the paths, to reach a big tree in the centre, a very difficult and amusing feat. The labyrinth was designed by Dr. Coles and arranged under his personal supervision. He has many other interesting curios on his grounds, such as odd and rare trees, elaborate gardens and beautiful statuary, in all of which he naturally takes great pride.

PARIS, August 15, (Special.)—The decision of the Behring Sea Tribunal Arbitration was handed down at 11.07 o'clock this morning.

The five points of article 6 are decided against the United States.

A close season is established, to begin May 1 and to continue until July 31. The close season shall be observed both in the North Pacific Ocean and in Behring Sea.

A protected zone is established extending for sixty miles around the islands.

Pelagic sealing is allowed outside the zone in Behring Sea from Aug. 1.

The use of firearms in sealing is prohibited.

The American Arbitrators have expressed their satisfaction with the text of the decision.

That New Railroad

The Bound Brook Chronicle of last week contained an article on the new line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey which is to be built from Bound Brook to Perth Amboy, touching at Highland Park. The reason usually given for constructing the road is to cut off the long loop for shore travel, via Elizabethport; but the Chronicle says that it has been assured, by officials in a position to know, that the road is to be merely a spur from Perth Amboy to the brick yards along the north bank of the Raritan, and will be only three or four miles long.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Americanizing England.

There are people who would like to see America and Great Britain united again into one country, but whether we should politically swallow our mother or she should swallow us they do not make quite clear. One of these gentlemen is Mr. Andrew Carnegie, who having done well in business, is in a position to have views about anything he likes. Another is Dr. Albert Shaw, who thinks the union, however, can best come about by Americanizing England, a proposition which our British brother would undoubtedly hurl back with scorn upon the head of the proposer. Dr. Shaw says that "if the great political blunder of the third George" is to be undone, then we must have liberal and enlightened citizens of each country making propaganda on the other. He also believes with Carnegie that W. W. Astor in London could place himself at the head of the movement for the reunion of the English speaking race. He is sure there is to Great Britain already a tendency toward Americanization, and that there ought to be a still stronger one. He says:

"Turn where we may, we find evidences of the Americanization of British institutions. The Australian banks are reconstituting themselves on the American plan. Mr. Balfour's sojourn at Cape Cod has been for the purpose of studying the American immigration laws with a view to protecting the English race. But it is in the House of Commons that the influence of Washington and the United States is most perceptible. Mr. Gladstone—most unfortunately for the country—began by framing the home rule bill with an eye not to American, but to colonial precedents. That was the root of all his errors, the cause of all his embarrassments, for the difference between colonial and American precedent is simply this: that the American constitutions were drawn up with the view of enabling the colonies to become independent states, while the American constitution, as interpreted by the great civil war and its resultants, is based upon the principle of keeping together in indissoluble federation states which in their own domestic affairs are independent."

What We Owe to Other Lands.

From France we get pears and poultry of the most approved varieties that thrive in America; from China, pigs and peaches. The best and most profitable of the grapes in our vineyards also are the product of foreign varieties that are budded upon wild hardy American roots. From Great Britain and France we bring the horses that are breeding up the whole scrawny though tough American stock. The magnificent Clydesdales from Scotland; the thoroughbreds, hackneys and Cleveland bays from England, the Percherons from France, would leave a sorry looking crowd of show steeds at our fairs if they and their descendants were taken away. From the Channel islands and from Holland come our best dairy cows. The original stock of our sheep came from Spain, Germany and England.

From Russia we bring the only apple hardy enough to withstand the rigor of our northwest climate. From the Mediterranean region we brought the ancestral shoots of the Florida and California oranges which are now reaping fortunes for thousands. From the faraway orient came the tea. Japan sends us the daintiest and most beautiful evergreens upon our lawns, also the most splendid chrysanthemums, and last of all the biggest and juiciest chestnuts that ever grew. There will be a revolution in the chestnut trade when the Japanese grafts now begging set begin to bear.

Even we the people are descended from European stock. Well, there is one great consolation. In every case, whether that of horses, pigs, oranges or men, wouither have improved already or speedily will improve on the old stock.

It is known that the sun spot period is 11½ years. During that time the spots fade out dim, increase to their maximum size and again fade in regular sequence. The maximum of sun spot storminess of this year, 1893, is believed on fairly established observation that the sun spot display at its height is attended with a corresponding display of the aurora borealis on our earth. If this theory be true, we may therefore look for splendid appearances of the northern lights this year. The Peary party will be exceptionally well situated for observation.

An agency which is doing much good in a quiet way are the so called university settlements in the large cities. The one in New York recently gave a free loan exhibition of paintings and art objects in one of the poorest tenement house districts. The rooms were crowded with visitors of the very class for whom the exhibition was intended, and more than half of them were children. The latter took a vote on the pictures that pleased them most.

The next great railway to be built will be that from the east coast of Africa to the Victoria Nyanza. Several years must elapse before the work is finished, but it is down in the books that this railroad is to be. It will be 651 miles long and will cost $17,000 a mile to construct. The engineering difficulties are not so great as some that have been overcome by Americans in the Rocky mountains.

What is literary fame? The rural inhabitants who lived neighbors to the late Donald G. Mitchell in the palmiest days of his literary reputation speak of him as "a queer sort of a man who didn't know beans about farmin', but could write like thunder."

In the fashion now for those who do business their accounts for all sorts of clothes they are usually carried not to make up of it, however.

MUCH TALK OF SILVER.

Senator Vest Makes a Three Hours' Speech.

VOORHEES HAS A FINANCIAL BILL.

Senator Hill Introduces a Resolution, and Other Members Do Likewise—There Was Some Very Lively Debating in the House Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver, without discrimination against either metal, found a strong and eloquent advocate in the senate in the person of Mr. Vest of Missouri, who made a three hours' speech on that topic, based on a resolution offered by him last Tuesday. Mr. Vest was emphatic, as he always is, and made it very plain that he would resist to the last extremity the repeal of the Sherman act unless that repeal was coupled with bimetallism.

Mr. Vest's Speech.

Mr. Vest went on to argue against the idea that the overproduction of silver in relation to gold justified the demonetization of the white metal, and he quoted the tables of gold and silver production for many years in support of his argument.

He took occasion to say, with the greatest respect for the president and without the slightest doubt of his honesty of purpose, that when he failed in that great state paper to say a word in respect to bimetallism it certainly meant that a consideration of the question of the free coinage of silver at any ratio was so impracticable that it did not enter into the mind of the president. As to the assertion that silver should be demonetized because it fluctuated in value, while the value of gold was stable, he read an extract from what he called "a remarkable pamphlet" written by Mr. Monteith Douglas, a business man of London, before the closing of the Indian mints, pleading with the people of Great Britain in favor of bimetallism as the only safe and sure foundation for financial existence and declaring that silver has really fluctuated much less than gold.

In replying to questions by Mr. Gray of Delaware, Mr. Vest asserted that any dissension of the subject would be the imperfect and unsatisfactory which did not admit on both sides what was known to every intelligent man—that if the volume of money was increased the prices of commodities went up, and that if the volume of money was decreased the prices of commodities went down.

He had on the day in the vicissitudes of his life when $30 of paper would not buy a loaf of bread and when a $5 gold piece would buy a house and lot. It was not necessary for him to say when and where that was because he did not wish to revive war issues. [Laughter.]

If one-half the currency of the country were struck down, the burdens of those who owed money would be doubled, and the prices of commodities would be put down beyond computation.

He Answers Questions.

Mr. Palmer—Would the repeal of the Sherman act bring the country to a gold standard?

Mr. Vest—I think it would. If the Sherman act be repealed, not another silver dollar will be coined in this country.

Mr. Palmer—How does the Sherman law aid free coinage?

Mr. Vest—I do not think it does aid free coinage.

Mr. Palmer—Then why not rep al it?

Mr. Vest—I am willing to have it repealed, but I do not want its repeal made a stalking horse for monometallism.

In reply to a question by Mr. Platt of Connecticut, Mr. Vest said he did not know what the president did do. He only knew that the president sent a message to congress in which he did not say one word about bimetallism, and he took it for granted that if the president had any idea of was slaying bimetallism he would have said something about it.

A bill was introduced by Mr. Voorhees of Indiana and was referred to the finance committee of which he is chairman, allowing national banks to issue notes to the par value of the bonds deposited or to be deposited in the treasury, not to exceed, however, the paid in capital stock of the banks. This bill was accompanied by a letter from the secretary of the treasury approving it and stating that its passage would at once increase the national bank issue on the bonds already deposited by $19,000,000.

Some important resolutions were offered and laid aside for future action—one by Mr. Hill of New York restricting legislation at the present session to financial subjects, and two by Senators Mitchell of Oregon and Gallinger of New Hampshire that there shall be no change in the tariff laws during this congress.

In the House.

The day in the house was devoted to speechmaking. The greatest attention was paid to Mr. Warner of New York, but he seemed scarcely so much at home as he would have been had the tariff been the subject matter of debate.

Mr. Patterson of Tennessee was also slow in securing an audience, but when he did so it was an enthusiastic and appreciative one.

Mr. Pendleton of West Virginia maintained his position in favor of the Wilson bill in good manner and answered the many questions pied to him with ease and courtesy.

Mr. Bailey of Texas gracefully and quietly presented the reasons which impelled him to vote for a coinage bill.

The house adjourned while his colleague, Mr. Hutcheson, was still holding the floor on the same side of the perplexed question.

Owing to the absence of the hour when the senate adjourned, the Republican caucus was postponed, subject to the call of the chairman, Mr. Sherman. It is reported that Republicans will get together this afternoon.

Representative W. M. Springer of Illinois saw Secretary Carlisle in reference to the alleged dispatch from Deer Park which imputed to Mr. Carlisle the statement that Speaker Crisp had yielded to the wishes of the administration and had promised to appoint Mr. Wilson of West Virginia chairman of the committee on ways and means.

Mr. Carlisle authorized Mr. Springer to say he had never made any such statement at Deer Park or anywhere else, and further that it was not true that the president or any member of the cabinet, so far as he knew, had communicated with the speaker in any way as to the makeup of the committee on ways and means or of any other committee of the house, nor would they in any way seek to interfere in the matter. So far as he (Mr. Carlisle) was concerned, he would be satisfied with any committee that Mr. Crisp might select.

ARBITRATION FINISHED.

A Deal Has Been Made Between the Bering Sea Commissioners.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Ex-Minister Edward J. Phelps, who represented this country at the Court of St. James during President Cleveland's first term, is at the Clarendon hotel en route from France to his home in Vermont. While abroad he acted as counsel for the United States government before the board of arbitration which is considering in Paris the dispute between the United States and England over the Behring sea seal fisheries.

Mr. Phelps was asked if there was any special significance in the fact that Sir Charles Russell had been hastily summoned from London to Paris.

"None whatever," said Mr. Phelps, "unless perhaps it may be taken as indicating that the board of arbitration is about to make public its decision. In such an event it would be only natural that Sir Charles, as leading counsel for the British government, would want to be present when it is delivered. There is, in my opinion, no foundation for the statement that in a certain event England is to be permitted to present new evidence to the arbitrators. If any such agreement had been made, I would have been notified of it, and as yet I have heard of none.

"There is not the slightest foundation in fact for the statement that there was anything approaching coolness or rancorous feeling between the counsel of England and those for this government. Our relations were always of the most pleasant character, and acted merely as advocates of our respective sides without the slightest personal animus. As to the suggestion that England will not abide by the decision unfavorable to her, I deem such a thing absurd. I have no doubt that England will submit even if she loses every point in the controversy. This, indeed, is hardly possible, as the outcome of it all is likely to be a compromise, as all international questions submitted to arbitration usually are."

FIRE AND EXPLOSION.

Denver Firemen Injured In a Fierce and Destructive Blaze.

DENVER, Aug. 15.—Fire totally destroyed the Crescent flour mill and elevator on Blucher avenue and Montgomery street. Both buildings were the property of the Colorado Milling and Elevator company, of which J. E. Mullen is president. The total loss, including a large quantity of flour and grain, is $250,000 to $300,000. The insurance is about 7 per cent of the loss.

During the fire Lieutenant McLean was terribly injured by an explosion in the dust room of the mill and may die. P. Sarngeant, Chief Pearsey's driver, had an arm broken by being forced from the roof by a stream of water from the fire hose.

A general alarm was given, and every engine in the city was on the scene. Practically nothing could be done toward arresting the flames, as the mill burned like tinder and was soon wrapped in fire. In addition the water supply proved to be insufficient, and it was found hard to get water of sufficient force to combat the fire. Within 30 minutes from the time it started the mill was burned beyond hope of saving anything.

There were 13 men in the mill when the flames were discovered, and they had but little time to escape, so rapid was the spread of the fire.

All Suggestions Are Filed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—"We are now tabulating the propositions made from all parts of the country for the solution of the financial difficulty," said Senator R. F. Pettigrew of South Dakota at the Fifth Avenue hotel. "The number is large. They come to all the senators at the rate of about 120 each mail. All classes and conditions of men send them. They embrace about all the possibilities. The friends of free coinage in the senate are able to hold their ground against those who favor unqualified repeal of the Sherman act, and they will hold it until some compromise is agreed to."

Cruise of Amateur Blue Jackets.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The San Francisco took up her cables today and started out to sea. She had on board 122 officers and men of the naval reserves of Philadelphia and Rochester. The cruise will last for four days. The men will be drilled in the use of guns, great and small. They will have a chance to practice loading casks with rifle balls and to repel boarders with cutlasses. The ship will be in the Delaware river on Tuesday. She will be inspected by the governor and his staff and other officials. The San Francisco will return to this port on Friday.

Cleveland and Lamont.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The Advertiser says today: "A report was current among the politicians in this city last night that between President Cleveland and his secretary of war have become very much strained. The story goes that Lamont has been trying to get the president to name certain New Yorkers for office, but Cleveland has cut him short with a rebuff. This was more than Colonel Lamont could stand, and he would have a few brief remarks made by each gentleman."

The Vigilant a Winner.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Aug. 15.—Over the sparkling waters of Vineyard sound the cup defender, Vigilant, led the Jubilee and Colonia. It was a great victory for Mr. Iselin and his bronze centerboard sloop, for the Boston boat, Jubilee, had overtaken and passed both the Colonia and the victor about 15 minutes after the start.

Hanged Him and Riddled His Body.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 15.—Monroe Smith, a negro, assaulted Mrs. D. E. Sears, a white woman, near Spring Hill, Ala., Sunday. A posse pursued him all night and captured him in the woods. After hanging Smith to a tree the mob filled his body with bullets and then cast it into a creek.

The President Fishing Again.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Aug. 15.—The president and Dr. Bryant were down the bay fishing for three hours. One of the president's dear has escaped from the park near the entrance to Gray Gables and has not been found.

A Destructive Fire.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Aug. 15.—This city was visited by a destructive fire. Two large blocks, several stores, 12 residences and a number of stables were burned. The loss will reach $200,000.

Frost in the Catskills.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The Catskill mountains and meadows in Delaware county were covered with a white frost Monday morning.

The Queen Not Stricken With Paralysis.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The report that the queen had been stricken with paralysis is entirely without foundation.

MRS. SHANN'S DEFENSE

Other Causes That Might Have Led to Her Son's Death.

HER COUNSEL TELLS HIS THEORY.

It Is Suggested That the Insurance Company Was Also Interested in the Disappearance—Witnesses Tell of the Dead Son's Past Life.

TRENTON, Aug. 15.—The case for the prosecution in the trial of Mrs. Shann having been finished, the defense began. Captain Holt made his address to the jury, outlining the defense fully. He held that the insurance men connected with the case had as much motive in removing young Shann's internal organs as Mrs. Shann. They were also interested to the extent of $2,000. He did not charge them out and out with the perpetration of the deed, but wanted the jury to consider all the circumstances and in doing that to weigh carefully all that those men did.

Frank C. Bordo, who passed him free as sound, sent word to Mrs. Shann the very moment that he learned that his company intended to make an investigation, advising her at the same time to "pass this note."

It had not yet been shown, but it would be, that Dr. Bergen, the family physician, had also examined the boy for life insurance a little time before he was taken ill. Insurance companies discharge agents if they do not prosecute them for passing as sound applicants for insurance who are really unhealthy. The defense did not say they had deliberately poisoned the boy, but when motive was talked of the circumstances must be regarded.

Suspicion Directed to Others.

Suspicion had been thrown on the mother alone, while there was suspicion enough to involve half a dozen persons outside the family. Insurance Agent Gilbert in connection with the case he also commented on by counsel. He went to Princeton in the disguise of a detective and was the first to mention anything about an autopsy.

He engineered the autopsy. His interest in the matter he admitted on the stand when he said that if a murder could be proved the company would not have to pay the insurance.

The prisoner at the bar was not a murderess, and if she had accomplices, as the state theories, she must have confessed herself to be one, must have confided to some one the secret of the awful crime. The defense holds that they were removed to conceal the fact that they were diseased and that the theory of the prosecution is therefore without foundation.

James Parker, who claimed to be an intimate friend of young Shann, was the first witness for the defense. He testified to visiting several houses of ill fame with Shann in Trenton between Christmas and New Year's last winter. William McVey also told of debauchery in companionship with Shann. McVey admitted that he had been convicted in this court and sent to prison. He refused to mention the witness who forced to acknowledge that he had served a term for larceny and that sentence had been suspended on him once.

Hugh Shann, a brother of John, the deceased, next testified that he saw the latter taking medicine last winter and that his brother admitted the nature of his affliction to him.

Witness heard his brother praise his mother for her devotion to him. He often saw them kiss and exhibit other signs of affection for each other.

Mrs. Shann's Sister Testifies.

Mrs. Harriett B. Gray, a sister of Mrs. Shann, testified that she visited at her home almost every day during John's illness. She used to go into the sick chamber and always talked to him. Witness would remain from five minutes to half hour each time. She never saw John the most loving care. John could not bear to have her out of his sight and wanted her always to occupy a certain seat, so that he could see her when he looked.

Mrs. Isabella Updyke, a half sister of Mrs. Shann, also testified that the latter was devoted to her sick son. Their relations were very tender and loving. Mrs. Shann waited on him day and night and never neglected him or a minute.

Mrs. Minnie Kelly, a daughter of Mrs. Shann, testified that she frequently saw John take medicine during the months of January and February last. He did not like to take the medicine was for. During his last illness he grew very weak and helpless. His mother was always kind and affectionate to him. Dr. Bergen said his sickness was due to nervousness, but one of them he said he did not care to tell the family.

Mrs. Kelly repeated the story of the three mysterious men as it was told her by her mother and as it has been told several times on the witness stand. Court then adjourned.

Silver's Silver Convention.

KETCHUM, Ida., Aug. 15.—The state silver convention was called to order by Governor McConnell. The large hall was packed, and nearly all the counties in the state were represented. Across the stage were banners bearing the inscription, "16 to 1—No Compromise." A committee of five on permanent organization was selected and a committee of 12 on resolutions. Then the convention adjourned.

The Iowa Republican Convention.

DES MOINES, Aug. 15.—The state convention of Republican League clubs met here today with 1,000 delegates in attendance. The contest for nomination for governor has become very active. Frank D. Jackson seems to be in the lead. Lafayette Young will follow Jackson closely, if not evenly.

"I am Truly Thankful

For Hood's Sarsaparilla. During the war I contracted typhoid fever, and fever and ague, leaving me with enlarged spleen, general debility, and impure blood. I have suffered ever since, in spite of doctors' medicines, which did me no good. I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, have not had a chill since, and my health is fully restored. I am truly thankful for Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have taken it for years and can say it is better than any medicine I ever took." J. E. SULLIVAN, Chief Clerk P. O., Lowell, Mass.

DAN SICKLES' FENCE.

There Is a Big, Big Row About It Now.

THE MILKMAN'S DAUGHTER SUES.

If It Is Chopped Down, as Has Been Threatened, the General Will Have It Rebuilt and Go to Law Himself—The Scene of the Famous Drain Fight.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Several of the town officials of New Rochelle say that despite the financial stringency the town treasurer will pay a prize of a gold double eagle to anybody who will find out exactly what the dispute was between the agents of General Daniel E. Sickles' estate and Miss Carrie Ensinger, who is known as the milkman's daughter. The dispute is apparently over a brand new picket fence which General Sickles' brother-in-law, George Sawyer, built last week along North street as the boundary line of part of the extensive Sickles property.

A lawsuit, at any rate, has been begun over the fence and has excited as much if not more attention than was aroused by the litigation over Bourke Cockran's fence.

The contention between the milkman's daughter and Mr. Sawyer includes the building of drains, the filling in thereof later on and the alleged infringement upon the town rights in extending the Sickles fence out into Clognie avenue, which cuts east and west across North street.

Miss Ensinger's Claims.

Miss Carrie Ensinger, who is a strapping big blond, has instructed her lawyer to claim that Congressman Sickles is trying "to gobble up half of the roadway" of Clognie avenue, with a view that when the town improvements which are being pushed ahead reach Clognie avenue and that thoroughfare is laid out anew the town surveyors will have to cut off a slice of her property to widen the road and let the Sickles property alone.

The row is even funnier than the dispute about the drains, which began two years ago when Liquor Dealer Mohr of Avenue A and Seventeenth street bought a lot on the Sickles estate, built a house thereon and secured, as he says, Agent Sawyer's permission to build a drain leading into Redmond's brook. Innkeeper Redmond, who is a jolly Irishman and proud of the fact that the brook was named after him, said last night that it would puzzle a Pennsylvania Dutchman to explain the "snarl" that had arisen over the drains and over the fence.

Health Officer Dalrymple said in a cheery tone:

"I'll give up the conundrum about the fence right at the start, but I will say that I consider that General Sickles and his agent are perfectly right about filling in the drains. They obeyed the orders of the authorities like good citizens."

The town authorities are now awaiting with great interest the outcome of the litigation over the Sickles fence. They said that they really didn't know who would win. Miss Ensinger, the milkman's daughter, who owns several houses, says that she is going to hire men to chop that part of the Sickles fence down which she claims illegally projects into the roadway of Clognie avenue. If she carries out this threat, there will be lots of fun in New Rochelle, for it was stated last night that Congressman Sickles' agent will rebuild the fence as fast as it is destroyed, and bring counter suits for damages besides.

Garret Mountain Ablaze.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 15.—A spark from a locomotive on the Lackawanna railroad set fire to the tall and withered grass at the foot of Garret mountain, and in a few minutes afterward the underbrush, trees and vines that clung to the slopes on the south of the heights and perpendicular rocks on the north side were in a blaze, illuminating the city and country for miles around. A force of men fought the fire and saved the few residences that are nestled among the trees from destruction.

Seven Killed In an Explosion.

COLFAX, Wash., Aug. 15.—The Union Pacific steamer Annie Faling, plying on Snake river between Riperia, Wash., and Lewiston, Ida., was blown up off Waite's bar, four miles below Almota. Seven persons were killed and all on board injured. The vessel was blown to pieces. The names of the killed are: Thomas McIntosh and brother, passengers; Mrs. Toppen, purser's wife; Gustave Swell, waiter; Joseph Bush, deckhand; William Kidd, deckhand, and a fireman whose Christian name is Paul.

Helped Her Brother Kill Her Husband.

MACON, Mo., Aug. 15.—Dr. D. V. Howard of Buckley was shot and killed by his wife and brother-in-law at New Boston. Some weeks ago Howard was arrested and fined for whipping his wife and placed under a bond to keep the peace. She afterward sued him for a divorce and alimony. He got drunk and went to New Boston and raised a row with his wife and her brother, and they got into a fight, with the above results.

The Meredith Case.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 15.—In the Meredith case, Dr. Allison occupied the witness stand during the afternoon. Under a searching cross-examination conducted by Dr. Allison he stated that drugs could not have been dropped into Meredith's food, as sworn to by Bernard Lynch, without detection.

Not Work Enough to Go 'round.

DENVER, Aug. 15.—The great disparity between the numbers of men out of employment and the amount of work to be had was strikingly illustrated when 2,000 unemployed men gathered at the place where work on the new sewers was to begin. There was work for only 40 men.

MURDERS IN KENTUCKY

Four Stories of Lawless and Bloody Deeds In the Blue Grass State.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., Aug. 15.—A cold blooded murder was the result of a feud in this county. Fleming McNeal was passing along the road when Charlie Morrow sprang from ambush and shot him down with a pistol. Morrow is at large, but will probably be lynched if caught.

At Cadiz Station, a small village near here, the negroes have been holding a series of religious services known as a feast in the wilderness. Thousands have thronged the meetings nightly, and the excitement has not been altogether of a religious nature. At last the meeting culminated in a riot, during which pistols, razors and stones were freely used. Three negroes were shot, one fatally.

CARLISLE, Ky., Aug. 15.—Sam Smith, a stonecutter, went to the house of John Howard, who had just been brought home a corpse. He had fallen from his horse while drunk. Smith wanted to kill his (Smith's) wife, who was in the house. Will Carty, a neighbor, attempted to restrain him and received the contents of a double barreled shotgun in his breast, death resulting instantly. Smith made his escape and is still at large.

MIDDLESBOROUGH, Ky., Aug. 15.—Frank Carey shot and killed James Taylor near the Four Seasons hotel. Carey escaped to the mountains.

SEVEN VICTIMS.

Two More Deaths Resulted From the Chicago Hotel Fire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Two more of those injured in the Senate House fire died in the hospital. The complete list of dead is:

Harry Godfrey, aged 7.
Edward Short, aged 25.
Mrs. Fannie Hood, aged 27; a widow and recently from New York.
Philip Cronberg, aged 21, of Little Rock; died at the County hospital this afternoon.
William Ulrey, aged 17, of Buchanan, Mich.; died this afternoon.
Unknown man about 35 years old; may be C. A. Taylor of Hot Springs, Ark.
Unknown man about 23 years old.

The Karamania Released.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The Anchor line steamer Karamania, which has been held since Aug. 3, left quarantine and proceeded to the Union stores at the foot of Sedgwick street, Brooklyn. Policemen were detailed at the gangplanks to prevent any one from leaving the vessel.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE YOUNGEST OF QUEENS.

She Studies Much and Plays with Dolls, but Has Few Youthful Companions.

Not many people have ever seen a real queen, and most of our young folks will be pleased to look at the picture of one, especially when it is that of the youngest queen in the whole world. This is what Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands is, whose portrait appears here. She is not yet twelve years old, and she came to the throne about a year and a half ago (Nov.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

A SPECIAL MEETING TO REVISE THE TAX LIST.

The Tax Rate for the Ensuing Year Fixed at $2.20.—Plainfield's Total Valuation is $6,850,851.—The Election Boards Appointed.

In accordance to law the City Common Council held a special meeting last night to revise the tax list for the ensuing year. President Gunn presided, and Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Fisk, Frost, Frazee, Marsh, Millington and Weber were present.

The petition of Mr. A. D. Mallison for permission to erect a small building back of his house on Watchung avenue was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings, with power.

In a communication Mr. William M. Sandford informed the Council that he would be unable to serve on the Madison avenue Commission.

President Gunn then declared a recess of 15 minutes in order that Council might have time to examine the tax assessor's books.

When the members re-convened Mr. Marsh stated the assessor's books had been examined in accordance with the law. He offered a resolution, which was adopted, to the effect that the tax assessor's report be received and approved.

Mr. Marsh said as the law directed that election boards must be appointed before the first of September in order to serve at the December election. The law also required that the Democratic members of Council appoint two members for each district and the Republicans two. As Mr. Frazee was the Democratic "party" in Council Mr. Marsh moved that he appoint the members of his side of the house.

The following were appointed, Mr. Marsh appointing the Republicans and Mr. Frazee the Democrats:

FIRST WARD.

First District—Republicans, George W. Moore and R. E. Coriell; Democrats, J. J. Kenney and M. DeCourcey. Second District—Republicans, G. Thorn and A. Kahrman; Democrats, S. Sharkey and E. Dreier.

SECOND WARD.

First District—Republicans, J. A. Doane and W. M. Messerschmidt; Democrats, L. M. Stover and L. Timpson. Second District—Republicans, D. Hand and E. Miller, Jr.; Democrats, J. B Guttridge and A. Cocks.

THIRD WARD.

Republicans—B. Frank Coriell and M. Marvin Dunham. Democrats—F. Bacon and W. L. Wright.

FOURTH WARD.

First District—Republicans, E. W. Titsworth and A. R. Grey; Democrats, M. R. Flynn and James H. Searing. Second District, J. B. Higgins and J. W. Dixon; Democrats, J. Krinay and T. McCarthy.

On motion the appointments were confirmed.

Council then returned to the regular order of business.

Mr. Fisk offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the transferring of $350 from the general fund to the poor fund.

The treasurer was authorized to negotiate a loan of $300 for the general fund.

Mr. Erickson, of the Fire and Buildings Committee, stated that on the completion of the new engine house the city would have room for all the apparatus. He moved that the West Second street property, now used by Gazelle Engine Company and Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, be sold, and that the committee be authorized to advertise the sale of the property. It was so ordered.

Mr. Fisk, of the special committee for the collection of back taxes, appointed some time ago, reported that the amount of delinquent taxes due the city for 1891 was $2,321.31, and for 1892, $13,188.93. He turned in the list to the Council. The report was received and filed.

The residents of East Third street petitioned for an electric light between Church and Washington streets. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets, with power.

Mr. Marsh said the Fire and Buildings Committee had received two bids for heating of the new engine house. He moved that the committee be allowed to decide which to accept. It was so ordered.

The tax rate for the ensuing year was fixed at $2.20, the same as last year.

The following bills were ordered paid and Council adjourned.

TOWNSHIP BUSINESS.

SHORT SESSION OF THE NORTH PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE.

Reports of the District Clerks of the School Districts Nos. 36 and 38 Received.—Bills Ordered Paid. —$6,000 to be Raised for Township Purposes.

The North Plainfield Township Committee held a meeting in Spencer's Hall last night. All the members were present. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, the reports of the District Clerks Joseph and Bilyeu of Districts 36 and 38 were read and approved. The reports were for the year ending June 30th. Mr. Joseph's report showed that there had been paid out for teachers during the year the sum of $6,475, and for the new building $445.62. $300 had also been paid out for school library, leaving a balance on hand of school funds of $2,626.60.

Mr. Martin reported that he had called upon Mr. Ackerman, by request of the committee, in reference to the repairing of Valley road to the stone quarry, and had been informed by Mr. Ackerman that the matter had been left to his superintendent. The following bills were ordered paid.

M. H. Vanderveer	$ 22 00
H. N. Spencer	150 00

The books of the Assessor were examined and approved.

On motion it was decided to raise, for all township purposes, $6,000 for the ensuing year.

The meeting then adjourned.

PERSONAL.

Thomas B. King, Jr. is at Asbury Park.

Mr. M. Warren Williams has gone to Asbury Park.

Mrs. Brett and William Brett of Central avenue have returned from Asbury Park.

Mr. A. G. Hooley and family of Central avenue are at Monroe, Orange County New York.

Mr. George Wharton Edwards, the artist, of Franklin place has gone for a six weeks' trip abroad.

Mrs. N. B. French of West Fourth street, accompanied by her children, started Monday for Saratoga.

The Rev. Mr. C. E. Ketcham will preach in the Trinity Reformed church next Sunday both morning and evening.

Master Robert C. La Boyteaux of East Sixth street has returned from a two weeks' outing at North Branch, N. J.

Mr. Harry Grannatt of Denver, Col., who has been spending some time visiting his parents on Fourth street, has returned to the West.

Among the Plainfielders at Ocean Grove Monday were A. G. Holly, who is at the Westminster, and Blanchard Randolph at the Spray View.

Mrs. Jonathan Clawson of Brook avenue is sojourning at Asbury Park. Her daughter, Miss Dolly, who has been with her, returned home Monday night.

Mrs. A. D. Smith and daughters, Misses Anna and Agnes, of Grandview avenue, start to-morrow for the World's Fair and a visit with friends in Cleveland, Ohio.

One of Mr. A. M. Griffen clerks, Mr. Frank Krewson of Pearl street, was taken suddenly ill yesterday while at work in the store. He is better to-day.

Masters Arthur Murphy son of Rev. T. Logan Murphy and Allan Wilson son of Col. Wilson, of North Plainfield started to-day for a hilarious weeks' fun at Lake Hopatcong.

Yesterday, Mrs E. R. Perkins of Central avenue, who is Summering at Newport, paid a flying visit to Plainfield. She returned to Newport, where the family will stay for two weeks yet.

To-day Mrs. Rowland Cox and family of West Seventh street start for the World's Fair, to be gone two weeks. Mr. Rowland Cox will spend the time his family are away, camping in the Catskills.

Mr. H. Jorgensen has lately bought the Brown property on Harrison street, and is now erecting a new house, where the small house of Mr. Brown stood that was burned down last year. Mr. Jorgensen will occupy the house when it is finished.

Mr. Aaron Berkaw, about 71 years old, went to his son's house on East Second and is now erecting a new house, by a board walk. He was standing alongside his son when he suddenly fell over dead. He was born at Readington. Three children survive him—one son and two daughters. One of the daughters is Mrs. Augustus Smith of Central avenue.

Many of the relatives and friends of Mrs. J. S. Powlinson of Grandview avenue greatly surprised her by celebrating her birthday recently in the novel way of each writing her a letter. She received sixteen letters and several cards. New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Washington, D. C. were represented.

Off for Papiac.

This afternoon Messrs. Joseph Golding, Edward Randolph, William Bion, Israel Jones and Edward Martin started at half past one o'clock to ride to Papiac on their bicycles. After taking a dip in the salt water they will return home.

THE LATEST TROUBLE.

THE SILVER QUESTION A DEMOCRATIC STUMBLING BLOCK.

Our Special Washington Correspondent Says the Tangle is Growing More and More Intricate.

WASHINGTON, D. C. August, 1893.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS—

WITH the usual inactivity which has characterized the course of the Democratic party ever since it was so roundly thrashed in 1891 5, manifesting its controlling influence in the operations of the Fifty third Congress, called together for a special purpose by the Democratic President, the Democratic House, immediately after the reading of his message, which recommended immediate action on the silver question, adjourned for a couple of days and went into caucus to consider whether it should dare refuse to do the things recommended by its President. Up to date the indications are that it will refuse to do it. Careful canvasses have been made of House and Senate by those interested in the repeal of the Sherman law and something of a canvass by the friends of free silver, and while it is found that the Republicans will almost to a man vote with the exception of those from the silver states for the repeal of the Sherman law, it is doubtful whether a bill to repeal can pass unless something else is coupled with it giving some additional use of silver in the place of the present system. President Cleveland's proverbial luck seem to have deserted him. He called the extra session of Congress when silver was at the lowest point it had ever reached. Before Congress could get together silver increased in value and standing and the country became conscious of the fact that the present depression is not due to any great extent to the silver question. By the time Congress got together under the call for an extra session the whole country was in a broad smile at Mr. Cleveland's predicament, for everybody had become conscious of the fact that the fear of the tariff restriction which he has been for years urging was the real cause of the trouble which he proposes to cure with a mere repeal of the law which is adding three or four million dollars per month to the currency.

HIS SADDLE POST BROKE.

A Bicyclist Meets with a Serious Accident.

Mr. John Lynch and Mr. Forristel of the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers startle 3 to ride over the Scotch Plains-Fanwood course last night. They were riding at a fast rate to practice for the race next Saturday. When near Mr. Coles' place the rear sliver saddle post of Mr. Lynch's bicycle broke. Mr. Lynch was thrown with much force on the ground, badly cutting his right knee and bruising his right arm.

Mr. Forristel took his injured companion on his bicycle and carried him as far as Low's hotel, where he took a back and rode home.

THE TRICYCLE WAS TRICKY.

It Caused the Injury of two Young Men Monday Night.

Monday night Messrs. Matthew Walker and Clarence Love started to ride from Westfield to this city on a tricycle. As they were descending the Fanwood hill Mr. Walker's feet slipped from the pedals and he fell forward, sliding partly under the machine. He shouted to his companion to put on the brake. Love did so, stopping so suddenly that he went flying headforemost over Mr. Walker's head into the middle of the road. Mr. Walker was seriously hurt, his left knee and leg being badly bruised. Mr. Love escaped with a few slight bruises.

BREVITIES.

—The Third Street Mission went on a picnic to Johnston's Grove yesterday.

—A new culvert has been placed at the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street.

—White's sale of ladies Oxford ties, at 66 cents and 78 cents, is the wonder of customers who say they can't see how such handsome shoes can be sold so cheap. See advertisement.

—Wilson avenue needs repairing. It is both dangerous for pedestrains and carriages, the water having washed deep gullies in the road bed, making it impossible for wagons to go further than 200 feet from Greenbrook road.

The Weather.

On Thursday slightly warmer fair to partly cloudy weather and light southerly winds will probably prevail, with maximum temperature exceeding 90 degrees and frequent local rains in the western districts, and on Friday more sultry, partly cloudy weather and nearly stationary temperature followed by local rains.

Borough Board of Health Meeting.

Mr. Charles Willis was appointed garbage collector for the district West of Somerset street at the Borough Board of Health meeting Monday night. Messrs. Carman, Love and French were present.

"Time Flies Apace" so "Vote Early and Often."—The Law Regarding a "Repeater" Does not Apply in this Contest.—"The More the Merrier."

LETTERS from the World's Fair are received daily. They are filled with most glorious descriptions, and written only in chapters as the writers happen to have a few moments to spare before eating a hasty meal or just before going to bed, tired out.

"Time flies but too fast" and crowd as they will the eight weeks and at the end of each day that all the glorious things they have seen are "but a drop in the bucket."

"Time flies" not only in Chicago but also in Plainfield. The time for decision is getting so near that—well, you had better be up and doing, I tell you verily. Mr. Most Popular Fireman, or you'll be so excited with all your friends about congratulating you that you'll forget the very thing you want.

Don't take a truck. You can travel more comfortably with a valise, it's handier. You will want to comb your hair while at Chicago, too. That's a little thing but they don't have combs and brushes in all hotel rooms.

August 30 is the date for the winner.

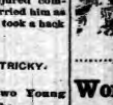
FIVE CARS BURNED.

Bad Wreck on the Central Near Somerville.



WRECKS are becoming quite frequent on the railroads. Last night a freight train was wrecked near Somerville.

Some of the cars were filled with "carboys" of vitrol, which exploded setting fire to the cars. The trucks were not cleared at noon.

The Pole Fell as the Children Left Their Play Ground.

A large pole being raised at the corner of Somerset street and Mountain avenue for the electric light company, this morning, fell with a crash into Mr. Mountford's yard, breaking down the fence. Just before it fell children were playing in the yard who would have, no doubt, been killed had they remained there a moment longer. They were told to go away by one of the men just before the pole fell.

For Madison Avenue Property-Owners.

Notice is given in another column that the Common Council have fixed the 21st day of August, at eight o'clock p. m. and the Council Chamber, No. 109 Park avenue, as the time and place for J. Fred. Mac Donald, William M. Sandford and Edward C. Mulford, the Commissioners appointed by the Common Council to meet the property-owners of Madison avenue, in reference to the widening of that street.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A MASSACRE.

Religious Mob Rioting in Bombay.

LONDON, Aug. 16, (Special.)—Bombay is in possession of a mob of Hindoos and Mahometans. Troops are powerless. Every mosque has been destroyed. Many persons have been massacred. Europeans are panic stricken. Troops are now protecting only the public buildings. The Governor has appealed for help, asking for instructions.

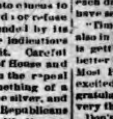
RACING IN UNION COUNTY.

The Linden Association Obtains a License.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 16. (Special.)—The Linden Blood Horse Association obtained a license for a track from the Linden Township Committee last night.

The license is for five years at $5,000 per year.

Picked up on the Cars.



BE Street Railway Company's Somerset street branch is a well laid road. The novel way of filling a macadam road with mud so as to pack well, is, however, causing a nuisance. The mud in dry weather soon becomes dust. When the cars go by the suction causes a cloud of penetrating dust to float after them. It is hard on the conductor. They are required by the rules "to be neat and clean" and yet are given blue uniforms to wear. Get extravagant, Mr. Street Railway, and put on a sprinkler a few times a day. Complaints are numerous from residents along the line who say the dust kills their flowers and renders it impossible to have the windows open.

Someone put a couple of railroad torpedoes on the street car tracks yesterday. It is time should watch out for such offenders. Plainfield horses are not trained to explosives yet.

A little, fat man, who had been washing dust out of his throat at several saloons, last evening took a ride on the Front street line. He left thirsty and another saloon bore in sight and with the remark to the conductor, "All right, you don't need vos stop," he waved his hand and hopped off about as gracefully as a cow would have done. When he struck the ground his feet did not seem to be mates. One acted as though it wanted to go with the car, the other quited here and there. There was a whirling of arms, a stumbling run and the little man rolled heels over head into the gutter. He was not hurt.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a regular meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 288, I. O. O. F., held the 14th day of August 1893, the following resolutions were adopted by the Lodge:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from us by death our esteemed and respected brother, Hiram Voorhees, Therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of our late brother, we do sincerely mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our esteem and respect.

Resolved, That we extend to the family of our deceased brother, our sympathy in this the hour of their bereavement and that these resolutions be recorded in the book of minutes and a copy be presented to the family of our deceased brother and published in the Plainfield daily papers, and be it further

Resolved, That as a token of respect to our late brother, we drape our charter for a period of thirty days.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Can an American Keep a Hotel?

No, he cannot, answers with much emphasis General Rush C. Hawkins in The North American Review. Americans do not know how to cook for a hotel, and that is the most serious count in his indictment. He himself undertook a summer campaign among country resorts, visited four of the best advertised and highest priced ones within a radius of several hundred miles, and at length returned to his city home in despair and disgust, with his digestion, he had reason to fear, irreparably damaged. At one of the resorts he tried a certain so called "fancy dish" which purported to be capon and truffles. He found it was "a sort of cold pressed hash of veal and beef tongue, with not a particle of capon or even chicken in it, while the truffles were a composition of a shining black substance of the texture of isinglass."

In spite of the $5 to $7 a day charges at our principal hotels, General Hawkins has information from expert authority that the total cost per head for food is no more than 40 cents.

The cooks in our hotels are "a lot of French, German, Italian and Irish upper scullions who are no more cooks than they are astronomers." The meat they ever did in the old country was to peel potatoes and wash onions. Of the food these fellows serve General Hawkins remarks:

"It is quite unnecessary to write that not one in ten of these products of the kitchen named in the bill of fare is properly prepared or decently served. The vegetables are usually cold and soggy, often sloped with a nasty looking and watery tasting sauce. The meat is usually tough and cold. The flesh made dishes (entrees), with high sounding French names, have their taste nor smell like anything we have ever seen before. The sweets are often the better part of the dinner, but the fruits, in the majority of instances, are the cheapest and poorest that can be found.

Woman's Right to Smoke.

The difficulty of distinguishing between law and custom even in the mind of the average policeman was well exemplified in Louisville the other day. Three giddy girls walked up one of the city streets. They were different looking from the hundreds of other girls that promenaded Louisville highways only in one respect—they were smoking cigarettes. It curdled the blood of two law and order policemen who stood on a corner, and they instantly arrested the girls for disorderly conduct.

In the morning, when the young women were brought to trial, the police judge remarked, "While the accused were not acting in accordance with the established canons of society, I cannot see that they were violating any law." He accordingly dismissed the case.

But this decision opens up a fearful vista for the future. There is no law anywhere against women's smoking cigarettes so long as they do it in private. This decision will become widely known. Are the female sex from this time on going to walk along the streets puffing tobacco smoke? They can if they want to, but will they? And if they do, will the lawmaking sex then enact a statute that women shall not smoke in public?

The fewest failures recorded during the present stringency are those of farmers. Of merchants 90 per cent fail at one time or another, of farmers only 10 per cent. Agriculturists are apt to consider merchants, manufacturers and bankers as their enemies in some degree, yet in this hour, when the city business man is tearing his hair in the vain effort to find money where no money is, the farmer can sit secure under his roof tree, knowing that come what will he is sure of at least food and shelter. He may have to economize sharply, but ruin does not stare him in the face. All this is something—it is much.

The universities of Europe have 16 times as many students as those of America, though European countries do not begin to be as wealthy as this republic is. There are only 2,500 university students proper in the United States. There are compensations, however. One is that a large proportion of the university students in Europe are Americans. Another is that every young man in America can drive a nail and black his own boots, which hundreds of foreign university graduates cannot do.

A curious sort of economist says that low prices for agricultural products stimulate the growing of still more of the same products, because the farmer must raise yet larger quantities of them to meet his expenses. Not if the farmer has any sense. If the price of wheat, cotton or potatoes falls below a paying figure, the farmer with gumption will go to raising something else that does pay him.

The Siamese difficulty will bring into common use a fresh bit of slang in the terms "buffer" and a "buffer state." It is only necessary to remember that a buffer is something that keeps things from banging together hard in order to see many apt applications of the word.

There was not a young woman in Great Britain except Princess May who was eligible for marriage in terms of equal rank with a prince of the blood royal. It was with reference to her, for Prince George to marry her or to leave.

Both Samoa and Hawaii appear to expect to receive the United States in the future.

PROTECTION OF SEALS

Assured by the Behring Sea Arbitrators' Decision.

FOSTER TALKS OF THE VERDICT.

Though Technically Against the United States, the End is Gained—A Zone Sixty Miles Wide to Be Protected—Fleet Will Probably Be Withdrawn Now.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The unfavorable decision of the Behring sea arbitrators rivals in interest today even the all pervading silver question. Secretary Gresham was asked to give an expression of opinion on the decision, but this he declined to do, holding that it would not be proper for him to comment on the matter. Mr. Gresham communicated the news to President Cleveland at Gray Gables and also had a long conference with Secretary Carlisle, presumably with reference to future action concerning the maintenance of a fleet in Behring sea.

At present the United States has five vessels in that sea, with instructions to prevent poaching during the pendency of the arbitration proceedings. What is to be early yet to say what will be done with this fleet, it is probable that all the vessels comprising it will be withdrawn with the exception of one of the revenue cutters, which will be used in maintaining the protection of some of the islands of the sealing islands of the United States in accordance with the decision of the arbitrators.

Foster on the Decision.

In an interview cabled from Paris, the Hon. John W. Foster, American agent to the Behring sea tribunal of arbitration, said that he thought that the restrictions would render the pelagic industry unprofitable. The provision for a close season will not only prevent pelagic hunting during three-fourths of the time months, but it will be said to be very profitable, but it will break the sealing season.

The two sealing fleets suspend operations during the best part of the summer. It leaves the right to hunt seals in the north Pacific from January to May. The weather during three-fourths of that period is very unfavorable, and the catches then made are always small. It also leaves the right to hunt seals in part of Behring sea after July, which means for a period of about 25 days, after the expiration of which rough weather compels the hunters to leave.

Mr. Foster added: "True, the United States have not obtained all they contended for, since they demanded the total prohibition of pelagic sealing, but the regulations now made are much better than those Mr. Blaine vainly offered to Lord Salisbury in 1890 as a settlement.

"Mr. Blaine then proposed as the sole restriction of pelagic sealing to prohibit it within 60 miles of the Pribyloff islands. The present settlement is also more advantageous than the one proposed by Mr. Bayard in 1886, as he asked a close season for the seals during May and June. It has since been found that the operations of the pelagic hunters were most destructive to pregnant seals during those months."

The consensus of opinion among the American agents and counsel in Paris is that though technical success rests with Great Britain on legal points, on practical grounds the victory is to the United States, as the arbitration was entered upon to preserve the seals, and the decision achieves that result.

Text of the Decision.

The decision is as follows:

A close season as established in articles 4 are decided against the United States.

A close season is established, to begin May 1 and to continue until July 31. The close season shall be observed both in the north Pacific ocean and in Behring sea.

A protected zone is established extending for 60 miles around the islands.

Pelagic sealing is allowed outside the zone in Behring sea from Aug. 1.

The use of firearms in sealing is prohibited.

After a preamble stating the case submitted for decision the full text of the award runs as follows:

We decide and determine as to the five points mentioned in article 6, to which our award is to embrace a distinct decision upon each of them.

As to the first of said five points, we, Baron de Courcel, John M. Harlan, Lord Hannen, Sir John S. D. Thompson, Marquis Emille Visconti Venosta and Gregory W. W. Gram, being a majority of said arbitrators, decide that:

By the ukase of 1821 Russia claimed jurisdiction in the sea now known as Behring sea to the extent of 100 Italian miles from the coasts and islands belonging to her, but in the course of the negotiations which led to the conclusion of the treaty of 1824 with the United States and the treaty of 1825 with Great Britain, Russia admitted that her jurisdiction in said sea should be restricted so as to reach a common shot from shore.

It appears that from that time up to the time of the cession of Alaska to the United States Russia never asserted in fact or exercised any exclusive jurisdiction in Behring sea or any exclusive rights in the seal fisheries therein beyond the ordinary limit of territorial waters.

Exclusive Jurisdiction Denied.

As to the second of the five points, we, Baron de Courcel, John M. Harlan, Lord Hannen, Sir John S. D. Thompson, Marquis Emille Visconti Venosta and Gregory W. W. Gram, being a majority of said arbitrators, decide and determine that Great Britain did not recognize or concede any claim upon the part of Russia to exclusive jurisdiction as to the seal fisheries in Behring sea outside the ordinary territorial waters.

As to the third point, so as to much thereof as requires us to decide whether the body of water now known as Behring sea was included in the phrase "Pacific ocean" as used in the treaty of 1825 between Great Britain and Russia, we unanimously decided to determine that the body of water now known as Behring sea was included in the phrase "Pacific ocean" as used in said treaty.

On the fourth point we decide and determine that all the rights of Russia to jurisdiction and to the seal fisheries passed to the United States, inclusive by the cession.

On the fifth point we decide and determine that the United States have no right to the protection of or property in the seals frequenting the islands of the United States in Behring sea when found outside the three mile limit.

This last decision was made by Arbitrators John T. Morgan, Baron de Courcel, Marquis Visconti Venosta and Judge Gram. Lord Hannen, John M. Harlan and Sir John Thompson dissenting.

Articles Agreed Upon.

The following regulations were adopted by a majority of the arbitrators, Mr. Harlan and Sir John Thompson dissenting:

Article 1—The United States and Great Britain shall forbid their citizens and subjects respectively to kill, capture or pursue at any time or in any manner whatever the animals commonly called fur seals within a zone of 60 miles around the Pribyloff islands, inclusive of the territorial waters, the miles being geographical miles, 60 to a degree of latitude.

Article 2—The United States shall forbid their citizens or subjects to kill, capture or pursue in any manner whatever during a season extending each year from May 1 to July 31 inclusive the fur seals on the high seas in that part of the Pacific ocean, inclusive of Behring sea, situated north of the thirty-fifth degree of north latitude or east west of the one hundred and eighteenth degree of longitude from Greenwich until it strikes the water boundary described in article 1 of treaty of 1867 between the United States and Russia, following that line up the Behring sea.

Article 3—During the period of time in the waters in which fur sealing is allowed only sailing vessels shall be provided with any right to take part in fur sealing operations. They will, however, be at liberty to avail themselves of the aid of such auxiliary steam vessels as propelled by paddles, oars or sails as are in common use as sailing boats.

Article 4—Each sailing vessel authorized to carry on fur sealing must be provided with a special license issued for the purpose by its government. Each vessel employed shall be required to carry a distinguishing flag prescribed by its government.

Article 5—The masters of vessels engaged in fur sealing shall enter accurately in an official logbook the date and place of each operation, the number and sex of the seals captured daily. These entries shall be communicated by each of the two governments to each other at the end of each season.

No Firearms to Be Used.

Article 6—The use of nets, firearms or explosives is forbidden in fur sealing. This restriction shall not apply to shotguns when such are used in fishing outside of Behring sea during the season when seals may be killed.

Article 7—The two governments shall take measures to control the fitness of the men authorized to engage in sealing. These men shall have been proved fit to handle with sufficient skill the canoes by means of which seal fishing is carried on.

Article 8—The preceding regulations shall not apply to Indians dwelling on the coast of the territories of the United States or Great Britain carrying on the fur sealing in canoes or undecked boats not transported by or used in connection with other vessels and propelled wholly by paddles, oars or sails and manned by not more than five persons, in the way hitherto practiced by the Indians, provided that such Indians are not employed by other persons, and provided further that when so hunting in canoes or undecked boats the Indians shall not hunt fur seals outside the territorial waters under contract to deliver the skins to anybody.

This exemption is not to be construed to affect the municipal law of either country, nor shall it extend to the waters of the Behring sea or the waters around the Aleutian islands.

Nothing herein contained is intended to interfere with the employment of Indians as hunters or otherwise in connection with sealing vessels as heretofore.

Article 9—The concurrent regulations hereby determined with a view to the protection and preservation of the fur seals shall remain in force until they have been wholly or in part abolished or modified by a common agreement between the United States and Great Britain.

Said concurrent regulations shall be submitted every five years to a new examination in order to enable both governments to consider whether, in the light of past experiences, there is occasion to make any modification therein.

The arbitrators made a special finding on the facts agreed upon by the agents of both governments with reference to the seizure of British vessels in Behring sea in 1887 and 1889.

In addition the arbitrators make certain suggestions to the two governments, the most important being that they should come to an understanding to prohibit the killing of seals on land or sea for a period of from one to three years and should enact regulations to carry out the findings of the arbitrators.

A YOUNG FIEND.

Blew Up and Killed Three Boys With Powder.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Aug. 16.—A fiendish act was perpetrated near Homewood which resulted in the death of three boys. Frank Graham of Homewood, 17 years old, knew that three boys were hunting groundhogs about a mile below the village. He got a can of blasting powder, attached a fuse, placed it in a little pile of rocks and waited until the young hunters neared the spot. Then he lit the fuse and crept off to a safe distance.

Burgyss Reel, 16 years old, and James Reel, aged 14, sons of Smith Reel, a well known farmer, with James Carney, aged 17, approached the spot entirely unconscious of danger.

The can exploded, all being maimed and burned terribly. Carney was knocked insensible, and his clothing was burned off. One of the Reel boys was also disabled. The other Reel boy was able to crawl away and gave an alarm. Drs. McAleer and Coffin of Beaver Falls answered the call for physicians, and willing hands in the neighborhood soon arrived and everything possible for the young sufferers, but unavailingly, as they died a few hours later. Graham made his escape and is still at large.

THE TRAMP KILLED HIM.

After Walking Two Thousand Miles Little Johnnie Gave Out.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 16.—John Tredwell, 13 years old, who started last spring to walk from Nebraska to Higganum, Conn., 2,000 miles, arrived at Higganum completely exhausted, ragged and half starved.

His father, John Tredwell, formerly lived there, but died in the spring of 1887, and the mother moved to Nebraska and died in the spring of 1893. The boy, who was left in the world all alone, started East. He had two uncles living a mile out of Higganum village, but was too weak and died before reaching them.

Idle Hands In Illion.

ILION, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Sixty employees of the Remington typewriter works have been laid off, and those remaining will work only five hours a day until further notice. Bacgett's tannery in Little Falls is running on half time. The Little Falls knitting mill has reduced its force by 50 employees, and a further reduction is contemplated.

The President Still Fishing.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Aug. 16.—The president enjoyed another day's fishing down the bay with Dr. Bryant. The dory which escaped from Mr. Cleveland's premises Sunday was caught and returned to its pen.

Vigilant First Again.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 16.—The cup defender Vigilant was a winner again, not in a race, however, but in the run of the New York Yacht club fleet from Vineyard Haven to Clarke's point.

Paper Manufacturers Cut Wages.

AUBURN, Conn., Aug. 16.—Wilkinson Bros. & Co., of Shelton, paper manufacturers, now making government postal cards, notified their employees of a cut in wages of 15 per cent.

To Examine Reading's Books.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Permission has been given for an expert examination of the books of the Reading company in the interest of the holders of the two kinds of bonds.

ALBANY, Aug. 16.—John Beland, aged 74 years, was run over and mortally hurt by a motor car and will probably die.

THE SILVER SITUATION.

In the House the Debate Goes Hotly On.

SENATORS TALKING AIMLESSLY.

The Wilson Bill Committee Confident of a Majority of Thirty For Unconditional Repeal—The Senate's Financial Committee Fails to Agree—Three Notable Speeches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The silver debate in the house was not especially important. It merely gave an opportunity for four members—Messrs. Hutchison of Texas, Blanchard of Louisiana, Grosvenor of Ohio and Snodgrass of Tennessee—to give expressions to their views. The most interesting speech, because it was really the first Republican protest against free coinage, was delivered by Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio and which was lacking neither in earnestness nor ability.

Among other things he said that it was to be regretted that the president, in his message to congress, had not been so void of partisanship as he had asked the two houses to be. It was unfortunate that the executive on this question, looking forward to the condition which portended violent opposition to his views, had seen fit to first appeal to partisanship and to unjustly proclaim to the people that the present perils of the country grew out of the legislation of the Republican party.

If the pending debate should develop into a partisan discussion, its instigation would be found in the declaration of the president himself.

Sarcasm From Mr. Grosvenor.

The president had declared that the Republicans had been responsible for the present condition of affairs, and this declaration would be the origin of political discussion, if political discussion there should be.

He then read the message of President Buchanan to congress in 1857, and pointedly intimated that President Cleveland had been guilty of plagiarism in his recent message to congress. President Cleveland might have gone further and might have said to the country that there was a condition existing not only similar to that found by his predecessor, but that there were many more factors not described by President Buchanan.

Referring to the sixteenth chapter of Leviticus, he called attention to the selection of a scapegoat and said that the Democratic party could not select the McKinley act as a scapegoat, and so it had devoted the lamb to the Lord and sent the silver bill into the wilderness. [Laughter.]

The difficulty in which the country now found itself was attributable to the fact that the people feared the tinkering with the present tariff by the Democratic party. He hoped that the Democratic party would be patriotic. The Republicans could be relied upon to do their duty. This was their record, and if they did not, it fell to put it in a hole. [Applause.]

Mr. Snodgrass, a Democrat from Tennessee, made a bitter assault upon his colleagues, Democrats, because of the position taken by that gentleman against free coinage. Then the house adjourned.

In the Senate.

There were three noteworthy speeches delivered in the senate. One was by the new senator from Massachusetts, Mr. Lodge, making an earnest appeal to the senate to take action with a bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman act.

Another was by the junior senator from Colorado, Mr. Wolcott, who contended that, although the Sherman act was vicious and illogical, it had nothing to do with the financial crisis, and its repeal would do no good and might do harm.

The third was by the senior senator from Massachusetts, Mr. Hoar, and was a temperate discussion of the whole financial question, with a decided leaning toward bimetallism.

A fourth speech—first of all in time of debate—was made by Mr. Gordon of Georgia in advocacy of a bill introduced by him to suspend for six months the 10 per cent tax on the notes of state banks. No action was taken on any of the pending resolutions and the senate adjourned.

At a meeting called by the committee in charge of the bill for the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act Representative Rayner of Maryland presided. About 40 members were present, representing every section of the country. They compared notes, and the meeting felt satisfied that there was a majority in the house of not less than 30 in favor of the bill. Various sub committees were appointed to meet from time to time and report the condition of the house on the subject of repeal until the vote has been taken. An executive committee was also appointed, of which General Tracy of New York was elected chairman.

How the Finance Committee Stands.

The committee on finance of the senate held a meeting, at which for an hour and a half the silver question in its various phases was discussed. The only result of the meeting was that foreshadowed—authorizing Mr. Voorhees to favorably report the bill increasing the circulating notes of national banks to the par value of the bonds deposited.

In the committee room there was some very persistent opposition to the reporting of this measure by Messrs. Vance, Jones of Arkansas and Harris of Tennessee. The discussion only tended to show that the finance committee was as far removed as ever from coming to any one thing in the way of general legislation on the financial situation and the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law in particular.

It was decided that with the long time between the meetings of the committee the members could never come to a definite understanding, and it was agreed that the committee should therefore, beginning with Thursday next, hold daily sessions. The members of the committee are as firm and unyielding as they were the first day.

So far the committee is divided on lines that show the extremes of the proposition. The silver men insist that they will submit to nothing but unconditional repeal at the present ratio, and the other side, with equal emphasis, assert that the only thing they will indorse will be the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause.

MRS. SHANN WEPT.

She Broke Down Several Times While Testifying In Her Own Defense.

TRENTON, Aug. 16.—In the continuation of the trial of Mrs. Shann on a charge of poisoning her son, Peter Shann, a carpenter who occasionally assists J. Watson Shann, the undertaker, testified that they are brothers, and that he (the witness) helped to prepare young Shann's body for burial. On the morning following the disemboweling he called at the Shann house to attend the body and was told by Mrs. Shann that it was in good condition. This was at 7 o'clock. The testimony of the witness created a mild sensation, as it was in evidence that the discovery of the disemboweling was made at least four hours before his arrival.

Mrs. Mattie C. Shann, the prisoner, was then put on the stand. She testified that she was 47 years of age and a member of an Episcopal church in Princeton. John's habits, she said, were irregular. The first she knew of his illness was through his coming to her for money to go to a physician with.

Mrs. Shann broke down several times during her recital and wept. This occurred when she described her son's condition as very low. Her language and manner were those of a refined and well educated woman. Weeks before her son died, she said, she insisted that his physician, Dr. Bergen, should bring another doctor with him. Dr. Bergen put her off a number of times, until finally she threatened to call Dr. McDonald in herself.

Dr. Bergen then brought Dr. Lytle. He, son had had hemorrhages from the bowels at that time. Several of Dr. Bergen's prescriptions were refilled a number of times. Whenever she refilled the disinfecting tablets for any purpose other than disinfection.

Mrs. Shann was asked if she ever gave her son the tablets in solution or in any other way, and she replied, looking at the jury, "Gentlemen, I did nothing which I am ashamed for God or man to know."

She was required to answer categorically and replied in the negative. She nursed John, almost unaided, all through his sickness because she would permit no one else to do anything for him. She used to read her prayer book and Bible to him at his request, and her pastor, who called frequently, also held services in the sick-room.

Mrs. Shann gave the names of about a dozen different persons who called to see John during his sickness. She denied a statement of a witness for the prosecution that John once complained that his mother was too lazy to cook an egg for him. Mrs. Shann also denied the truth of the story told by Caddie Pyatt that she forced medicine down his throat. The witness described her way of administering the medicine, showing that she had always been gentle with her son. She was still on the stand when the court adjourned.

TWO ARMED MOBS.

One Will Lynch, the Other Will Shoot the Lynchers.

YELLOW SPRINGS, O., Aug. 16.—This village is wild with excitement over the momentary expectation of a lynching, if not burning at the stake.

William Whaley, the colored desperado who so fiendly murdered a farmer named Hopping for his money Monday, and who is suspected of three other similar murders that have occurred here within the past month, was traced to a stone quarry near the town.

The quarry was surrounded by several hundred armed men, but in the darkness Whaley made his escape and ran to the woods with the mob at his heels. He will almost certainly be captured, for while only the threats of lynching will surely be put into execution at once.

Sheriff Doge arrived here from Xenia with a posse of deputies, but he will not be able to cope with the desperate mob. Nearly one-half of the town's population are colored people. The latter, nearly 300 in number, are armed with rifles and shotguns, and they declare that Whaley must be given a fair trial. They have organized, and if Whaley is lynched a bloody race war is feared.

MR. BLOUNT SAYS NOTHING.

He Has No Remarks to Make Even About the Cane Incident.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—James H. Blount, who was appointed commissioner to investigate Hawaiian affairs and who subsequently received the appointment of United States minister to Hawaii, returned from Honolulu on the steamer Gaelic, after a sojourn there of over four months.

Mr. Blount maintained his reticence as to the conclusions at which he had arrived respecting Hawaiian affairs to the very last, but his belief was prevalent in Honolulu that a protectorate and not annexation is the thing to be established by a treaty with the United States. The returning minister was besieged by a crowd of reporters on coming ashore, but he was not in a communicative mood and practically little information could be obtained from him.

When the matter of the presentation of the cane to Clans Spreckles, bearing an inscription and the Blount coat name with those of prominent royalists, was touched, he was equally reticent. It is expected that he will leave at once for Washington.

The Chair Pushers Strike.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Four hundred college boys who are known as chair pushers are on strike, and the World's fair concession is paralyzed for the present. YUNG YU THE GORGEOUS

The New Chinese Minister and Suite Arrive.

HE HAS EIGHTY TONS OF BAGGAGE.

Accompanying Him Are Eighty-two Representatives of the Flowery Kingdom. Much Kowtowing and Tea Drinking.—He Comes to Relieve Minister Tsui.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—Such kowtowing and salaaming, such an amount of tea drinking and such gorgeous costumes as those at the Mail dock haven't been seen before for many a day. Elaborate preparations had been made to celebrate becomingly the arrival here by the steamer Gaelic of Yung Yu, the new Chinese minister to the United States, a seven button mandarin, who comes accompanied by a suite of 82 persons. The steamer folks said it was not more than daylight when the steamer was outside the Farallones before preparations for the arrival here were begun.

The costumes when members of the suite showed themselves on deck were something stunning, and all the young lady tourists aboard were in ecstasy at the display of rich silk brocades, Turkish fez with red tops and slanting sides that looked for all the world like cherry turnovers in black pans were features of the dress. Evidently trousers were not in it. Flowing shirts with fancy pendants were all the go.

Received In State.

The Chinese consul and his people were at the wharf long before the steamer. Thirty-six carriages were there, too, waiting for the oriental suite. Soon after the gangplank was stretched out the consul led the way aboard.

Then ensued disturbing symptoms of Chinese cordiality. The form of salutation necessitates a doubling up. All the passengers gathered about to see the greetings. When the consul was led into the presence of the new minister in the latter's private cabin, the ceremony was excessive. Both immediately prostrated themselves until the tips of their cute little tinpan hats touched the floor. They did not approach nearer each other than the opposite sides of a large round table. After both were seated an attendant brought tea, and then they had a conference that lasted fully a half hour.

There were 80 tons of baggage, and no time was lost in getting it out, and it was all passed by the custom house authorities without examination. Then the party was placed in carriages and driven to the Palace hotel, where the dragon flag was flying. A dining room has been fitted up on the west side of the caravansary for the accommodation of the party.

Yung is envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States. He has never been here before and does not speak English. He is accompanied by his wife, and there are five other ladies in the party—Mrs. Shu, Mrs. Chang, Mrs. Kwei, Mrs. Hoo and Mrs. Hu—all of whom are accompanied by their husbands, who are members of the new diplomatic corps.

Some Are Yale Graduates.

Five of the suite were educated in this country. Among these is Mun Yew Chung, who acted as a sort of spokesman for the party. He is a Yale college man and in his day was the clever cockswain of the university crew. From him it was learned that there are about a dozen members of the diplomatic service in the party who will be permanently at Washington. The rest of the party belong to the consular service and will be distributed through the country.

They are all well educated in the affairs of this and their own country and are all from influential families in China. Chung says that the party will remain in San Francisco about a week. Besides being minister to the United States, Yung is also the representative of his country in Spain and Peru. He will nominate two of his party, one to be charge d'affaires at Lima and the other at Madrid.

The new minister is a small sized man about 50 years of age. He is quite stout and has a full face, shaded by a black mustache. Dark, piercing eyes peep out from beneath a broad, high forehead. The Chinese Six Companies have made arrangements for a big banquet in honor of Yung, which will be held in Chinatown.

Hiram Camp's Daughters' Will Contest.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 16.—The daughters of the late Hiram Camp of this city have filed an application in the probate court praying that an appeal in the probate courts be taken from the probating of the will, and the application was granted. The ground on which the appeal was taken and which will be made the basis of the contest is that undue influence was used with the testator in the making of the will upon the part of various benevolent institutions, which now get a large share of the deceased's property. The estate is valued at about $170,000.

Savors of Anarchy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Between 7,000 and 8,000 of Chicago's army of unemployed took possession of the Lake Front park and listened to speeches from their fellow toilers. The meeting closed with the adoption of resolutions calling upon congress to do away with the present evils of the financial world. The meeting also demanded that the Haymarket monument erected in memory of the policemen killed during the anarchist riots of 1886 be torn down.

Cholera In Lemon Skins? Fudge!

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—A meeting of the Italian fruit dealers, including importers, was held to protest against the action of Surgeon General Wyman in prohibiting the importation of lemons from Italy. The order was ridiculed, and declarations were made by physicians saying that cholera germs could not live on lemon skins.

Journal of Commerce's Nomadic Office.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin no longer employ members of the Typographical union in their composing rooms. The places of the union printers have been filled by nonunion men.

Pennsylvania Pay Will Be Sept. 7.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 16.—Governor Pattison has issued a proclamation appointing Thursday, Sept. 7 next, Pennsylvania day at the Columbian exposition.

Fire at the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Fire started in the art gallery at the World's fair, but was extinguished before much damage had been done.

Three Cholera Deaths In Berlin.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Three Polish laborers died of cholera in the eastern quarter of this city.

TOLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

Silver men in Jonah, Tex., burned President Cleveland in effigy.

A frightful yellow fever epidemic now prevails in Amapala, Honduras.

Dr. R. W. Buchanan, the New York wife poisoner, was taken to Sing Sing.

There are at present between 20,000 and 25,000 men out of work in Boston.

The Coatsworth grain elevator and a dozen wooden buildings in Buffalo were burned.

At Shreveport, La., eight masked men held up and robbed a number of passengers on a train.

Matchwood and Bruce Crossing, two small Michigan towns, were destroyed by forest fires.

The San Francisco finance committee of the midwinter fair has $400,000 and will begin active work.

J. A. Ellsworth of Newark, N. J., pleaded guilty to kissing another man's wife and was sentenced to publicly kiss his own wife, which he did.

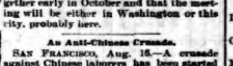
The Rev. William P. Treacy of Swedesboro, N. J., says that he has been freed from all censure and fully reconciled to the Catholic church by Mgr. Satolli.

To Meet In Octobee.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Chairman Carter of the Republican national committee says he has decided to call the committee together early in October and that the meeting will be either in Washington or this city, probably here.

An Anti-Chinese Crusade.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—A crusade against Chinese laborers has been started in Fresno and other places in the San Joaquin valley and seems to be spreading over the state.



POPULAR FOOTWEAR.

Comfortableness a Decided Feature In This Season's Boots and Shoes.

Russet shoes are the thing for summer wear. There is a color now in outdoor shoes —a pure brown with no touch of red in it—which assimilates with the present tone of fashionable colors. Brown shoes are worn with serge or linen gowns, and with brown open work stockings to match nothing looks prettier. Brown rubbers may even be bought to match one's brown boots or shoes.

Tan or russet shoes and boots are not simply a fad of the season, but represent a fashion so sensible and comfortable that it is likely to long hold its own. Russia leather is the newest variety in this class of shoes. Its softness and pliability make it extremely pleasant to wear, and it is said not only to retain its polish and finish well, but even to improve in color with age. Russet leather is invariably laced up in front and not buttoned.

STYLISH BOOTS AND SHOES.

Morocco and patent leather are often blended both in boots and shoes, and very taking boots are in patent leather, with glove kid uppers. T e toe cap is traced and not put on, which saves the extra thickness of the toe, and this, by the way, leads to the prediction that it may not be long before tips will have had their day. Fashion has been unusually constant to them, and ladies are beginning to tire of the oft recurring choice between "pointed tip or straight tip?"

With the many dainty, light colored furbelowed gowns in the thinnest of stuffs, which are a feature of the fashions, white shoes are a natural consequence, and in these the newest and most attractive will be white suede, with white patent or tan tip.

A popular walking boot is the low heeled blucher recommended in the cut.

Shoes for evening and carriage wear are in glace kid of different colors. As here illustrated, they continue simple in trimming, with bows of ribbon and small steel ornaments.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council have fixed the thirty-first day of August, 1893, at the hour of eight P. M., and the Council Chamber, No. 109 Park avenue, in the City of Plainfield, as the time and place for a Public Hearing of all persons interested in the matter of the petition of Edward C. Mulford, the commissioners appointed by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, dated, "An Ordinance to widen Madison avenue from the northwesterly line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey," and to hear all objections to the same.

All persons desiring to be heard upon the foregoing choice between "pointed tip or straight tip?"

WOMAN AND HOME.

DUTIES WHICH OCCUPY WIFE, MOTHER AND HOUSEKEEPER.

Care of the Wardrobe—Family Co-operation—Dainty Work For Feminine Hands. Cheerfulness at the Breakfast Table. Making Cowards of Children.

A girl who perhaps has had perfect freedom and immunity from all care becomes, as soon as she is married, her husband's companion. She must be fresh and attractive in appearance and feeling to greet him when he returns home in the evening. She must have topics of interest on which to converse and make herself charming to him after his day's toil, or be ready to go out with him to the theater, lecture, card party or entertainment, as the case may be, or to make the evening agreeable to him at his home if he is domestic in his taste. If she does not do this constantly and persistently, the average man will, after the novelty of the new life has worn off, betake himself to his club, or if he is lacking in principle he may drift away altogether and find other company which is more agreeable to him.

Where there is strong mutual affection and the man has a fine sense of honor, chivalry and high principle he will of course feel that obligations are mutual, and he will find for himself and make for her and with her interests that will be harmonious. When to this happy condition are applied ample or very comfortable means, the woman's work in the home is greatly lightened. But take the case of the mistress of a family in moderate circumstances with three or four children. The house must receive enough attention from its mistress each day to keep all in good running order, even supposing that one servants do the actual work of the household. Meals are to be ordered three times each day, with provision for the requirements and idiosyncrasies of each individual from poterfamilias down to the last comer in the establishment. Now, this may seem a mere trifle to the looker on, but when the appointed tables see the daily toll of fare, but let any such looker on try it for days, weeks, months, years, season after season, and he or she will soon find he will think that the position of mistress over alone as a family of ordinary size is no sinecure.

Then the difficulties with servants and their idiosyncrasies, the smiling of their difficulties with economy, the task of instructing them in their duties, the frequent directions which must be given to the details of cooking by ordinary housekeepers, is something which few of the other sex understand. Those who are able to pay very high prices for fine cooks may be exempt from ordinary trials, but the average housekeeper knows that she must often supplement her own knowledge and experience with remarks like these: "The bread this week is not baked slowly enough or long enough," "The soup is too weak," etc., to keep up the cooking to the standard requisite for the health and satisfaction of the family. Then the care of the house, the weekly cleaning, the constant supervision of cellar, closets and drains form with the catering a department in itself sufficient for the entire occupation of one woman, and the health and comfort of the whole household are dependent on the fidelity and intelligence which direct it.

Yet the mother's responsibility and care have only their beginning here. The needs of the children from infancy to adult life in health and sickness, their training—physical, intellectual and moral—here is another department which demands for its fulfillment the vitality and the best powers of the mother in the home. The oversight of the clothing of young and changing forms is a care that is sufficient for one head and pair of hands, even when people are sensible enough to pay little court to Dame Fashion.

Most of all in the home is the companionship of wife and mother to husband and children, for which she needs time for her own personal physical requirements of air, rest and refreshment, time to keep up her intellectual interest in books, pictures and music, that she may never become a household drudge, a mere minister to temporal needs, but that she may be the beloved friend and counselor.—Anna A. Comelin in New York Advertiser.

Care of the Wardrobe.

The "one dress and wear it" plan, though in some respects a good one, is not by any means the most truly economical. For instance, there is no saving in wearing one's finest gown during the hours at home. It is better after the visit or shopping expedition, both for comfort and economy, to exchange the toilet for an old but fresh house robe. It is scarcely possible to come in from an excursion of any kind in dainty order, so in the interest of her personal charms a woman should get rid of her street costume as soon as may be after she arrives at home. The garment should be thoroughly dusted, shaken, pressed and hung upon a hook in a closet. Occasionally touch the soiled spots with benzine and examine the seams for broken stitches. Never wear a woolen gown in the kitchen. Fire retains odors and smoke and soot becomes offensive as well as shabby. It is a saving in the end to have fair and inclement weather costumes straight through. Even a mackintosh is not an adequate protection against the ravages of storms of rain or snow. Have one for "occasions," if it can possibly be managed. It will be money in the pocket to do so.

It is the same with shoes. It's a pity to wear the fair weather ones walking frequent through mud and slush and rain, for a wet shoe never is as nice again. Its shape is injured, and it has lost about the weight in wearing quality. It is better to keep a trim, serviceable, plain pair of shoes on hand for this kind of "spoiling," reserving the better pairs for kinder weather. Even for fair weather it is by far the best economy to have several pairs of shoes at a time, wearing them alternately. When not in use, they should be stuffed with soft paper and covered from the dust. It is needless to say that shoes should be carefully looked to as to loose buttons and torn button holes.

Rain ruins kid gloves. No matter what price you pay for them or how superior the quality, dampness will make them lose shape and break. This theory of saving also applies to a sufficient number of undergarments for various necessities of wear. It is the same, too, with jacket headed chiefs, fichus and the usual accessories of the toilet. As for hats, a small shower will make chaos of the smartest confection from a milliner's hand, and the sensible woman will provide herself with a soft felt skirt or close plain bonnet, on which the elements may work their will without spoiling either her looks or her spirits.—Boston Courier.

Family Co-operation.

A lady returned from a long and pleasant visit wrote to one of her entertainers: "Keep of you singly has some special charm. United you are irresistible."

Another lady returning from a visit to another family remarked in an intimate friend, who knew all the members and circumstances of the latter family: "Each one of the Blanks taken separately has good and even charming qualities, but taken together they are dreadful! I shall never visit there again."

The difference between the two families lay in the fact that whereas the members of the first all worked unitedly to make their guest's visit a pleasant one, those of the other worked for the same end conflictingly.

In the first family (we will call them the Harmonies for convenience) there were nine individuals of three generations, comprising a grandmother, her widowed daughter, with her son about 15 years old and daughter of 14, a bachelor son of the old lady, and a married daughter with her young child and husband, and the last mentioned's niece, a young lady of about 18 years.

Here one might imagine were some of the elements of discord ready to hand. A mother-in-law, a son-in-law, a sister-in-law, a brother-in-law, cousins, an uncle, aunts, and aunts and cousins by courtesy only! Less diverse elements than these have been found troublesome in other cases. But this family very early found out that harmony was by no means monotony. If a false note were at any time struck, all were by common though tacit consent agreed that it should not be struck again. Each member of this household knew the best points of all the others, and all were united in their endeavors to bring out the best and ignore the rest as far as possible, and it is astonishing how far this is possible when the effort is made.—Harper's Bazar.

Dainty Work For Feminine Hands.

On North State street there is a bright and happy young woman who has made a success of herself as an assistant to a fashionable house decorator. She thinks the employment a capital one for girls and knows that many of them are not to be found unrolling wall papers and soaking undecided clients to let her suggest schemes of coloring for their rooms. She says she began as a bookkeeper, but was ashamed as soon as her employer found that not only she could as well as any man persuade the customers who did not know their own minds to buy whatever goods which the establishment wished to get rid of, but also had an eye for color and patience to find just the thing more determined people had in mind.

It is a pity more other Chicago girls is not doing the taking little pastel dinner cards which are brought to this town from Philadelphia. A certain artistic maiden there found that her graceful and apparently careless sketches of children's heads or flowers or butterflies had caught the fashionable fancy, and her hands are full doing orders for this and other dinner giving towns.

And there is Miss Mary D. Bates, the now famous "illustrative designer" whom the California commissioners asked to present to them her idea of the illustrative work that would best represent their state at the World's fair. She began her now important business as a designer of decorations with a stock in trade, as she herself put it, of "a pair of scissors and a reel of wire." Now she has seven young women to assist her in making houses gorgeous with flowers and drapery for weddings and balls. She lends money to other women to enable them to raise the sorts of flowers she most needs and in many other ways finds the power of helping less happy sisters, which is the brightest reward successful women know.—Chicago Tribune.

Cheerfulness at the Breakfast Table.

The breakfast table need be an almost certain index of the day. From it we catch or the courage and patience that are to help us through. Hasty words and looks, or we there begin the fretfulness and irritation that will make difficulties still harder and perplexities still more trying. There are misguided housekeepers who rise the hour so the proper season in which to recount all their woes. The restless night is described and because every ache and pain are set forth with all the minuteness of a diagnosis. The paper is read, and the battles, murders and accidents therein recorded are served up with the toast and coffee.

The boy who rises in an ill temper is permitted to vent it in complaints of the food set before him, nothing of which suits him, no matter how dainty or appealing it may be. His sister indulges in like naughtiness, and reproof and reprimand embitter the morning which is scarcely begun. Every thing in this life is, to a greater or less degree, habit. Dwelling and dilating upon one's infirmities, reading and relating horrors and casualties, complaining, fretting—all these are habits and habits only.

Parents can insist upon courtesy and self control and can exact it, and by setting a worthy example can see to their children the reflection of their own moods. Many a life, many a fortune, has been wrecked by a wrong start—the breakfast table mood.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Making Cowards of Children.

People are very prone to say, "What a little coward that child is!" forgetting entirely that it is even as they who have made the little one what it is. No baby is born afraid of the dark, the big policemen or any of the one hundred and one bugaboos that nurses and parents conjure up to terrorize the small wrongdoers, but it is made cowardly by the frightful fictions concoted for its benefit.

Tell a child the truth about everything always, no matter how trivial or unimportant it may be, and it will soon come to have perfect confidence in everything you say. A little one declines to go into a dark room to bring out its doll that was left there because some one has told it of a great bogie man that lurks in the dark apartments, ready to spring upon little children. Suppose we were strangers in a strange land and one of the inhabitants told us or we found that lay in bidding in the nearby forest, wouldn't we believe them, and wouldn't we be very apt to shun the abiding place of so formidable a bogie?

It is the same way with children. They are strangers in a new and untried land, and rely implicitly on the statements of those who have greater knowledge of this large and wonderful world. Therefore, nurses should be trained to tell the truth regarding the most unimportant happen ings and affairs.—Philadelphia Times Girls of Thirty.

The postponing of marriage and the newer education of women has brought into existence a class that did not formerly exist—namely, the class of "girls" between 28 and 30. They are bright, educated, capable women, who are awaiting marriage, and instead of being given an interest in life and provided with something to do they are launched into society with the idea that the proper thing for them to do is to abandon themselves to the pursuit of pleasure. One result of this is that we have women after marriage infinitely less inclined to the necessary slowness of domestic duties. They live for thrills, sensations and excitements. As these cannot be obtained at home they resort in expedients when eventually prove fatal to the real and noble idea of marriage. The upper class girl is becoming a lamentably self indulging creature, who speaks of the "crime" of her life in an incessant round of amusement. The great leisure classes of cultivated women cannot be held guiltless if a sense of individual responsibility and surrender the benefits of birth and education on its own amusement.—Exchange.

The Dealer's View of Dudes.

There is an increased interest, as greater production, of dudes and friezes. This is an age of economy People think more for themselves than they used to. A decorator must know more because his customer is better educated. A buyer asks for a dado nowadays with a view to covering up the worn spots upon the wall or mop-board. Two years ago she would have hesitated to do this, for the wall paper dealer would have looked upon her disgustedly

A room is now fashioned by a new frieze or some other accessory, and it is no longer essential that the entire room shall be treated unless the entire room needs it. It is folly to tear down this growing custom, and the dealer who refuses to patch up an apartment simply stands in his own light. From a dollar and cents' point of view, it is preferable to decorate the entire apartment, but on the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread so the furnishings and odd details of this character are better than no sales at all.—Philadelphia Upholsterer

Where Dresses Do Not Fit Well.

The point where the average ladies is not what it should be is just below the collar at the back of the neck. There are various other weak spots, as, for instance, where the sleeve is sewn into the curve at the shoulder, but it is in stitching on the collar that the unskilful dressmaker does her worst. Even when she has fitted the shoulders of her client with tolerable accuracy, she is sure to spoil her work by gathering the edge a trifle at the back of the collar, or by leaving behind a superfluity of material which it is her duty to trim away. Of 60 everyday women in an elevated car often not one rejoices in a good fit just below the nape of her neck. There are bubbles of silk or wool which should lie in smooth perfection. There are collars carving out, collars too big and collars too small, and there are, take it all in all, enough dress goods wasted in the combined misfits to make an entire new costume for one of the misfitted victims.—New York Letter.

Two American Literary Women.

There are two literary women of whom the west has every reason to be proud. They are Mary Hartwell Catherwood and Octave Thanet. We are not altogether sure that they are not producing the best native literature now current in this country.

With Mrs. Catherwood's work we are particularly pleased. It has a delicate, fanciful quality which is simply delicious. Miss Octave Thanet is more of a humorist than her Illinois contemporary is. Her fidelity to nature gives to her studies of character great power and convincing force of fulness.

Both these ladies are artists in the best sense, and both are in private life and in their everyday relations with humanity as charming as the most ardent admirer of their delightful stories could imagine.—Chicago News-Record.

Graceful Women Riders.

An eminent physician says: "I have frequently had opportunities to notice the difference between the riding of men and women bicyclists, and I have been much surprised at the contrast between the two. The women, as a rule, are graceful, dignified and easy. The men in the majority of instances have looked more like agitated grasshoppers than anything else that I could imagine. They sprawl over their wheels, sit with their spinal columns almost in a half circle and act as though it were necessary to work for dear life in order to get ahead. I think it safe to say that not one man in twenty-five rides really well. The women almost—if not altogether—reverse this rule, for a very ungraceful rider among them I rarely see."—New York Ledger.

Doleful Looking Sparrowons.

Why is it that a sparrowon has always such a stiff and formal air? The few pictures that generally adorn its walls are hung with painful regularity, set pieces of tortoise-bone pose in solemn state upon the mantel, and often the only intellectual provision made for the occupant consists of an old magazine or two. A few more pictures hung in a less conventional way, a half dozen photographs scattered here and there, a little bookcase containing a score or more of volumes suitable for filling an occasional spare hour, a sofa with two or three tempting pillows—these are not much, but yet sufficient to make the sparrowon so much more attractive and cozy as to fit a homelike luxury.—New York Tribune.

A Celebrity at Thirteen.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps was only 13 when her first story was published, and she was 20 when her "Gates Ajar" brought her celebrity, so that she is usually thought to be much older than she really is, her name having been so long before the public. She does all her literary work between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m.

The Queen Brews Her Own Tea.

The queen, when possible, brews her own tea. She uses prouge pekoe, at 5 shillings, and disapproves altogether of the general "blends." The Duchess of Edinburgh takes her tea in Russian fashion. It is brewed in very strong tea and drunk with cream in place of either sugar or cream.—London Tit-Bits.

Queen Marie Henriette of Belgium is the last one of the five noble ladies who have received from the present pope the decoration of the Golden Rose. The others thus honored are the queens of Spain and Portugal, the empress of Austria and the Countess d'Eu of Brazil.

For an ordinary set of plain handkerchiefs a single initial, quite small and perfectly simple in form, is in excellent taste and would form an easy beginning for those who are not yet very skillful or experienced in the work.

An egg may be "birdnested" for a terribly fastidious breakfast—that is, have its white whipped into a stiff pile of froth, in which the yolk is lightly baked.

Borax and soda should be avoided by old ladies especially whose hair may want their honorable gray hairs to come out of the bath tinted a buttercup yellow.

NO HAPPINESS DEFINITION CONSIDERED ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY.

Competitors Find That There is Really More in Happiness Than They Supposed. Keep Hunting for it, and Life will be Enjoyable.

IN THE "Best Definitions of Happiness" contest the selection of Judges was made with a view to get bright persons of known standing, varied talents, and excellent judgement. In this we were, as may be seen, eminently successful. It is no easy task to select the best definition of a number submitted, consisting of good, bad, indifferent, original and otherwise. Yet this task the five Judges have ably done and their letters form a most interesting part of this article.

Definition demands the use of a complete epigram or apothegm. My fourth feeling was that of chagrin: for I was compelled to read so many witless sentences, meaningless and therefore lifeless.

There is only one truly worthy of judgment, and that is number 61, reading as follows:

An exalted condition of the mind, differing in form and degree as the peculiar characteristics and capacity of the possessor demands. To the erudite, it is knowledge; to the fool, ignorance; to the benevolent, charity; to the miser, gold. It is a mental kaleidoscope through which is revealed "God's bow of promise."

That speaks for itself, for it hath some wit as well as wisdom; it hath sense as well as truth; and it defines that charm which happiness truly hath, delusiveness. That delusiveness is peculiar to each and every phase of mankind, making a generality impossible, and an exact definition too little.

Respectfully submitted,
Sincerely yours,
WM. CUSHING BAMBURGH.

Miss M. Baxton Says:

DEAR SIR:—I select from the definitions of "Happiness" submitted to me, number 33, "Sunshine in the Soul," as being clear, concise, comprehensive, and adapted to all ages and conditions of life.

A "second best" choice is much more difficult to decide upon, there being so many duplicates and triplicates, differing only slightly in wording. But, upon careful comparison, I think number 59 meets the requirements suited to the various stages of our existence. Yes.

Yours very truly,
M. BEXTON.

Mr. Nelson Runyon's Judgment.

I have examined the list of "Definitions of Happiness" sent to me, and have selected number 35 as the "best and most original"—i. e. embodying most concisely what I understand "happiness" to signify, while perhaps not the "best", or "the most original" definition in the list.

Many of the definitions given merely present state or conditions, or both—the result of which, I admit, is naturally to produce happiness, but they do not really define "Happiness," as required in your offer, and perhaps number 35 may be classed among them.

I have selected number 5 as "second best." I was quite impressed with number 60, where the matter is brought down to a business basis—not that the definition "Coming out ahead" is an original idea, but the "Example" furnished "To win the prize for happiness would be happiness for me," shows a rather unique conception of happiness in the mind of the sender, whose eye is evidently fixed upon the go(a)l-d.

Very truly yours,
NELSON RUNYON.

Rev. Father Smyth's Decision.

ST. MARY'S RECTORY,
58 W. Sixth St.

The definition which seems to me most deserving of the prize is number 7. "To have a heart filled with love to God," etc.

Whilst this definition might be better worded it contains the idea of Happiness as expressed by the old adage "Mens sana in corpore sano." A good conscience intelligently recognizing and obeying God's holy will and a body properly cared for must be for us Christians the essential elements of Happiness.

If, however, a person were to consider Happiness in relation to this life solely, it is indeed something relative, and differs according to the natural characteristics of each individual, definition number 41 explains this view pretty fully and I would on this occasion award it second place. Thanking you for the honor conferred upon myself and the opportunity afforded to others of employing their minds, during these troubled times, on hopeful and happy thoughts,

I remain,
Sincerely yours,
P. E. SMYTH.

The senders of those selected by the judges are as follows:

5—41—Mrs. F. J. Brown, 15 Rogers street. 7—Mrs. E. T. DeForest, 425 West Second street. 12—J. M. Emerson. 35—Mrs. J. W. Savage, 600 East Front street. 37—38—Cornelia A. Gavett, 312 West Fifth street. 53—D. M. Runyon, 1089 Arlington avenue. 58—Lemuel W. Serrell, 625 West Front street. 60—Harriet A. French, 38 Somerset street.

Numbers 37 and 38 were both selected by one judge.

Number 41 received the votes of Two Judges and 14, Therefore, Declared the Winner.

FATALLY INJURED ON THE RAILROAD.

A Polish Laborer Struck by a P. & R. Locomotive.

While walking along the railroad track near Harlingen yesterday afternoon, Stephen Van Dunk, a poor Polish laborer, was struck by a Philadelphia and Reading R. R. locomotive probably fatally hurt.

He was brought by the trainmen to the Muhlenburg Hospital in this city about five o'clock last evening.

Examination by the hospital physicians showed that the mans' left shoulder, both arms and several ribs were fractured, some in many places. He was also internally injured, the extent not being known, and his recovery is very doubtful.

The injured man has a wife and family in the country.

Miss B. Augusta Hart is at the Norman House, Ocean Grove.

Borough Councilman Neal is about today after a siege of illness.

Mrs. Randolph of Evous lies dangerously ill at her home with typhoid fever and is not expected to live.

Mr. Opdyke is having his large house on Watchung avenue remodelled and considerably improved.

Mr. Horace Sherwin and family of Orchard place are at Peapack N. J. where they will remain for two weeks.

Mr. Jennings is having an asphalt walk put down in the Riverview avenue side of his new property. It is a great improvement over the old board walk.

Dr. J. B. Probasco started this morning on the American line steamship "Paris" for Southampton. He intends spending most of his time in England, on pleasure bent.

Messrs. J. A. Haynes, Clarence Teel and Aaron Kline of this city started at daylight this morning for a fishing trip in the neighborhood of Budd's Lake. They expect to be gone several days.

Mrs. A. J. Beale and daughter Florence of Netherwood, have returned from a delightful trip to Lake Hopatcong. Mr. Beale and son have also returned from their trip through Massachusetts.

Mr. H. Dicke of Grove street is continually improving his property. This time it is a new coat of paint being applied to the house. He has lately had his place enlarged by adding a two story addition.

Mrs. William Schenck of North avenue died yesterday afternoon of consumption after a lingering illness of five months. She leaves one child. The funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon in Warren chapel.

Mr. John Munn of La Grande avenue started this morning on one of his frequent weekly trips to Richfield Springs, N. Y., where his family are spending the Summer. He expects to erect a handsome new residence in this city.

Mr. J. Hervey Deane will exhibit about one hundred lantern slides at the Rock View Farm, Dunellen, this evening. Miss Carrie Barrett has invited a number of friends to share the evening's pleasure and an informal dance will be held after the exhibition of art.

The third death in one family within a year is that of Miss Joanna Collins of Scotch Plains, whose demise occurred Wednesday. The funeral services will be held at nine o'clock Friday morning at the residence and at St. Mary's church, this city, at ten o'clock.

Mr. George Wharton Edwards of Franklin place, an artist of considerable fame throughout the country, started this morning for Europe on a pleasure tour on the Red Star steamship "Rhineland." After six weeks of rest in Holland and Belgium he will return, stocked no doubt with many excellent sketches of those historical countries, and it is probable he will be invited through the metropolitan magazines, later.

A SUCCESSFUL TWO-CENT FAIR.

Six Little Girls Raise Money for a Crippled Friend.

SIX little girls held a fair yesterday at Corcoran and overlog on West Second street for the benefit of a poor, disabled friend. They were Maggie Laing, May Mulford, Emily Mehl, Lulu Gilmore, Grace and Lizzie Van Sickle.

Andrew Mulford assisted by acting as gate-master, and charged every one two cents to enter the grounds, which were nicely decorated with flags and Japanese lanterns. Many pretty things, made by the girls, and refreshments too, were on sale in abundance. The amount of money raised was not large, but when presented to their crippled friend will no doubt help lighten his suffering and troubles. The poor fellow has been helpless for many years and has to be wheeled about in a roller chair.

The charity of the little girls is most commendable.

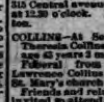
WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

Reports of Crop Conditions for the Week Ending August 14.



OF the week ending Monday, August 14, the observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather service report that the temperature and sunshine in all sections have been above the weekly average and that the rainfall has been greatly deficient, excepting the eastern portion of Middlesex county, where a heavy shower on Saturday afternoon, measuring 2.51 inches, effectually broke the drought.

In the northern section the extreme heat, with the severe drought, is intensifying the injury already done to all growing and maturing crops. Buckwheat, just out of the ground, is in full blossom, and all orchard fruits are affected, but well-cared-for orchards not so seriously as others. Peaches are reported as forcing badly and apples continue falling from the trees. In the northeastern portion, corn is reported as doing well except on very sandy land, and that sown for fodder is being cut as the blades are drying up.

PLAINFIELD—The deficiency of rainfall is hurting all crops. There is a deficiency from the corresponding week of last year of 1.32 inch, and for the month so far 1.59 inch. All crops are burning from the intense heat. Some farmers have not set out their late cabbage. Average temperature for the week, 76 deg.; rainfall, including the 19th, 0.05 inch.

JOHN NEAGLE.

The Grape Crop Good.

It is estimated that the yield of grapes from Southern New Jersey this season will be nearly double that of last year. This is due to increased acreage and a heavier crop than usual. It is believed that good prices will be maintained, as the quality of the grapes is unusually good.

What They Left Undone.

A very fine meeting had the world's congress of engineers at Chicago. From the uttermost parts of the earth they came and read papers on the exact amount of power it would require to raise one horse load one foot in the air and just how strong a quadruple expansion engine ought to be to keep from blowing up when a given amount of steam was applied to it. In the section of electrical engineering the paper readers rattled about among volts and amperes and dynamos till all was blue.

It was no doubt thoroughly inspiring to the paper readers. But some of them wore their new summer tan shoes to that congress, very much like the streets of Chicago in the same and meandered gayly through the labyrinths of the World's fair. As they did so no doubt it pained them to observe the bright new yellow shoes taking on day by day a darker hue. By the time the week was over and the engineers were ready to go home the giddy russet shoes, alas, were no longer russet at all, but a dull camp kettle black, especially if it rained during the congress week. No human being would ever have guessed the things had ever been other that the meanest kind of a rusty black.

It was Chicago soot that did it in a week's time, and there are other soft coal cities—Cincinnati, for instance—still dirtier than Chicago. With all their learning, all their inspiration and good times, the engineers failed to tell a waiting, suffering public how to dispel the unspeakable gulf of smoke which is fast swallowing the splendid cities of the Union and making them uninhabitable for clean people. Give us a remedy, Messieurs Engineers, and don't wait till the next World's fair to do it either.

A Good Word and Some Good Advice.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger, now called by some envious critics the president's official organ, pats the members of Fifty-third congress gently on the back and calls them good boys. Then it proceeds to give them advice on the duty of the hour as follows:

The great majority in congress and out of it have no other purpose to be served and act according to the best light they have on any given subject. It is therefore good policy in such a state as the present to promise from Washington, is to begin at once to avoid personalities and the attempt to show that the motives of the opposition are selfish. The men whose personal interests lead him the wrong way will not be converted by abuse, nor will a stinging personal speech, however much it may be applauded, convince the understanding. The coinage question is easy and should be discussed with no more passion than the teacher exhibits while explaining to his class the rule of three. Looking back over the periodical discussions of coinage questions which have taken place at intervals during the last hundred years, one must admit that the most rational element of the debate was a real hindrance to an understanding of the subject and that at no time was the decision of congress directly controlled by the personal interests of a majority of the members. Unfortunately politics have much to do with votes on such subjects, and politics should be kept out of the coming discussion if possible.

The Currency Corner.

The New York Sun says:

The famous gold corner, which culminated on Friday, Sept. 24, 1869, popularly known as "Black Friday," was broken by the sale by the government of $4,000,000 in gold and by the announcement that it stood ready to sell $60,000,000 more if necessary.

A corner in currency, not so extensive as the gold corner of 1869, but much more mischievous, is now hampering trade and seriously inconveniencing every citizen. The banks refuse to pay their depositors either in coin or in paper. Speculators are taking advantage of this fact to buy up currency at a premium and to exact a greater premium for it from those to whom they sell it again.

The government can break this currency corner by the use of the means that were employed to break the gold corner in 1869. If Secretary Carlisle will but announce that he is prepared to accept offers of United States bonds and pay for them in gold to the amount required for the redemption during the past fiscal year, or say $40,000,000, the corner in currency will come suddenly to an end, the strain upon the banks will be relieved, and the government will save interest to the amount of $1,620,000 a year.

It was a very curious report, that which came across the Atlantic that Great Britain had become anxious because she thought the United States was going to dump the silver load we had been carrying so many years entirely unaided by other nations. Accordingly semiofficial, wholly confidential telegrams were sent, it was reported, from London to New York to feel the American pulse at Washington and elsewhere and find out whether, if England should resume the free coinage of silver in India on a basis of 24 to 1, the United States government could not be induced to continue the purchase of silver under the Sherman law or some other one.

At the time of the recent report of the comptroller of the treasury there were in the United States 6,979 banks. Of these 3,788 were national banks. Forty-eight of the national banks are in New York city, and these 48 institutions hold two-fifths of the specie and legal tender reserves of all the other banks, state and national, in the country.

Ultimatum of the silver men in the house of representatives: Repeal the purchasing clause of the law of 1890 and provide at the same time for the free coinage of silver with full legal tender quality on such a ratio as will provide and maintain the parity between gold and silver.

The fact that there are so many fools in the world fills one at times with despair, especially when the greatest fool of all is the individual one sees in his looking glass.

STILL TALKING SILVER.

The Orators In the House Make Themselves Heard.

AMENDMENTS TO VOORHEES' BILL.

The Free Coinage Clause a Lively Debate In the Senate—Not Much Satisfaction From the Behring Sea Decision—Mr. Blount Will Give a Verbal Report.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The debate in the house was characterized by the ebb and flow of eloquence and by the presence and absence of interest. It was started by Mr. McCall of Massachusetts in favor of the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law and was closed by Mr. Moses of Georgia in opposition thereto.

Sandwiched between these two speeches were remarks by Messrs. Coombs of New York, Bryan of Nebraska and Henderson of Iowa. The first named made an address from a business standpoint in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law.

Mr. Bryan made the speech of the day, and although he occupied more than two hours in its delivery he commanded the earnest attention of his colleagues throughout. He was one of the apostles of bimetallism, and his sympathizers regarded his arguments as unanswerable.

In the Senate.

The senate spent only three hours in session, but that time was well filled up. Mr. Vest's bill appropriating $200,000 for a site and building in Washington to be known as the Hall of Records was passed. Then the bill to increase the circulation of national banks was taken up and postponed for the reason that several senators had informed Mr. Voorhees that they desired more time to prepare to discuss it.

Before it was so laid aside an important amendment was proposed to it by Mr. Cockrell to authorize the redemption at par and accrued interest of such 2 per cent bonds (over $25,000,000 in all) as may be offered and to authorize the issue of new treasury legal tender notes in payment therefor.

This amendment produced considerable discussion, Mr. Sherman condemning it as an unbusinesslike proposition, and Mr. Cockrell expressing his amazement and mortification that the friend and patron of the national banks, the great gold monometallist from Ohio, should object to an amendment that would increase the amount of currency in circulation.

Another amendment to the bill was offered later on by Mr. Allen of Nebraska for the cessation of interest on the bonds on which the increased national bank circulation should be issued.

After that there were two speeches delivered—one by Mr. Berry in favor of bimetallism and one by Mr. Gallinger against tariff legislation before 1897.

The senate then came to the front with a bill directing the secretary of the treasury to coin or print $200,000,000 in aluminium or upon paper and pay off the entire indebtedness of the country at once. The bill had a lot of whereases, followed by this resolution:

That the secretary of the treasury be instructed to prepare the sum of $200,000,000 of declamatory, not promissory, full, not partial, legal tender money of the United States of America, and therefore all sheets of aluminium or silk threaded paper and cover the same into the treasury as soon as possible for same money, and then forthwith all act in the outstanding interest bearing bonds of the United States for immediate redemption.

But the something was said at the speech of Mr. Henderson by the opponents of free coinage, and taken altogether the day's debate might be put down in the category of a drawn battle.

Must Police Behring Sea.

Opinion in Washington over the decision of the Behring sea tribunal differs materially as to the measure of the benefits, if any, derived by the United States from the regulations established. Secretary Gresham is said to be anything but satisfied with the findings of the commissioners, and it is asserted that this dissatisfaction extends to the regulations. It is understood that his views are shared by other cabinet officers.

As for the regulations, they are that the United States will have entailed the cost and worry of patrolling Behring sea without benefit to its sealers, while Russia, Japan and perhaps other nations reap a harvest, the regulations being binding only to Great Britain and this country.

The Hawaiian Situation.

As the Hawaiian situation stands at present the settlement of the annexation question will depend mainly on conferences between the president, Secretary Gresham and Minister Blount. In his report the minister, according to his instructions, made no recommendations on the vital point at issue, but gave his opinion as to the relative strength of the sentiment in the islands with reference to the question of annexation. To give the president and Secretary Gresham a better insight into the condition of affairs that they might be enabled to make recommendations to congress, Mr. Blount will give his views verbally.

IN MRS. SHANN'S DEFENSE.

Doctors Say That John Did Not Die of Poison.

TRENTON, Aug. 17.—In the defense of Mrs. Shann, Rev. Albert T. Baker, rector of an Episcopal church in Princeton, testified that during John's illness he held religious services in his room frequently and that Mrs Shann always appeared to be reverent and interested.

Dr. David Warman of Trenton testified that in his opinion the operation performed by County Physician Cantwell was improperly conducted, because he neglected to look for disease as well as poison. According to witness young Shann did not die of mercurial poison. His symptoms of such poisoning were not strong enough to induce the belief that he had been killed with corrosive sublimate. Assuming that he had gastritis, his medical treatment was improper. Witness said he should not have made a slop barrel of the patient's stomach by giving him all sorts of medicine every day.

The greater part of the afternoon session was taken up with expert medical testimony. After Dr. Warman, Dr. Thomas H. Mackenzie of Trenton was called.

From the symptoms of young Shann, as described in the testimony, it would be impossible for him to say what the cause of death was. The symptoms were characteristic of many diseases. The person who disembowled him had to know a good deal about anatomy. Surgical knowledge was not necessary. The next witness was Dr. W. W. L. Phillips, the oldest practicing physician in Trenton. He was of the opinion that young Shann died of gastroenteritis, but what caused this disease he could not say. Several witnesses gave unimportant testimony, and the court adjourned for the day.

A RAILROAD RIOT.

Italians and Citizens Fought, and Twenty Were Injured.

NORTH ABINGTON, Mass., Aug. 17.—In a riot here today between the citizens and Italians working on the New York, New Haven and Hartford tracks, 20 persons were injured. The row was caused by an attempt to lay electric street car tracks across the railroad. A fire engine played on the Italians until they cut the hose.

A barricade was built in the street. Stones were thrown and several pistol shots exchanged.

Patrick Reagan received a bullet in his breast, and Patrick Moynehan was shot in the head. They will probably die. Michael McGill, John Anderson and Thomas Mealy, Consolidated men, had their heads chopped open with axes.

Of the townsfolk who were wounded, Josiah Churchill was knocked senseless with a stone and had his head laid open. Road Commissioner Augustus Wright had his cheek laid open with an ax. Constable W. Joseph Keon's rib was broken by a pickax. Constable George Cook's eye was nearly gouged out by a similar weapon. Officer Thomas Russell was covered with cuts and bruises. Policeman John H. Hollis is in a similar plight. Daniel Quinlan and J. A. Barbour required the services of a physician to dress their wounds. Governor Russell was telephoned for military assistance. He replied that he could not order out the militia until every effort had been made to quell the disturbance.

The Doctor Was a Robber.

DENVER, Aug. 17.—A holdup occurred here which beats the record. F. Cashman of Pensacola, Fla., registered at the Wellington hotel, and at 2 o'clock in the morning he arose to go to the depot. He had a very ill and feared he was going to die. The clerk ran to the street and met a man who said he was a doctor and was immediately taken to the sick man's room. The doctor asked for a pitcher of ice water, and while the clerk was after it the alleged doctor robbed his patient of everything he had and skipped. When the clerk returned Cashman had died, presumably of fright. The police were at once notified, and the robber was arrested in a hour later. He gave his name as J. E. Stevens.

Means Ruin to Seal Rookeries.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 17.—Professor Henry W. Elliott of the Smithsonian institution, who was sent to the seal rookeries on the Pribylof islands early in President Harrison's administration to investigate the subject of seal life and make an extensive report on it, says regarding the Behring sea award: "The killing of the commercial value of the Pribyloff rookeries ruined if the pelagic sealer can enter upon his work around the seal islands after Aug. 1 every season."

A West India Hurricane Sighted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The weather bureau has issued the following special bulletin: The weather bureau observer at St. Thomas, W. I., reports, barometer, 29.80; cyclone imminent." It is probable that a so called West India hurricane is moving westward and is about to cross the sixty-fifth meridian. Vessels leaving New York for New Orleans should secure sea room by keeping well out from the shore—that is, east of the gulf stream.

Fete Dowling Captured.

LONG BRANCH, Aug. 17.—Information reached here that Pete Dowling, the murderer of Robert Hamilton, the trusted agent of the late Anthony J. Drexel, has at last been captured after a lapse of nearly six years. Dowling was captured at Camden, where it is alleged he was allured by friends. Officers from here have gone to Camden after him.

PARADE OF HUNGRY MEN

A Mob of Unemployed March Through New York Streets.

RESOLVE TO APPEAL FOR BREAD.

Two Hundred Idle Cloakmakers Formed the Nucleus For a Demonstration In Which a Thousand Idle Men Took Part. Capitalists Denounced.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—New York witnessed an unusual sight—a parade of the unemployed through the streets, their rally on Washington square and their mass meeting in an east side hall. For the last few weeks a crowd of unemployed cloakmakers, clothing cutters and other mechanics have congregated daily at the corners of Third and Greene and Third and Mercer streets to seek employment. These men started off, some 200 in number, for a parade of poverty.

By the time Washington square was reached the paraders, numbering fully 1,000, seemed undecided what to do next. Somebody shouted, "Let's hire a hall," and the procession, reforming, marched eastward.

On their way to Golden Rule hall on Rivington street the paraders met Joseph Barondess, leader of the Cloakmakers union. He was recognized amid cheers. The crowd rushed into Golden Rule hall, the proprietor of which donated its use for a meeting. Barondess made a characteristic speech. He said he sympathized with the unemployed in their efforts to find work and that working people, whether organized or not, would never get their rights till they organized. Other speeches were made.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Will Appeal For Bread.

Whereas, The American workmen of different trades, are assembled in a hunger demonstration in consequence of present conditions; and

Whereas, The fact is that the monopolists of New York, London and Paris are responsible for the present misery and condition of the working masses; therefore be it

Resolved, That we ask every hungry man, woman and child to attend this mass meeting, and appeal to the public for bread.

Resolved, That we call upon all hungry workmen not to pay any rent until present conditions are improved.

A committee of three, appointed to call on Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, visited him after the meeting at his office on Clinton place and told him their grievances.

Mr. Gompers said he sympathized with their efforts to obtain work, but could not see how immediate help could be furnished, and advised them to send a committee to the conference of trade to be held Sunday morning at the International Labor Exchange. He added that it would then be decided whether or not a great public demonstration would be held.

The Social Labor party will meet this evening to determine what action they will take in assisting the unemployed.

This Suicide Was Out of Work.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The woman who shot herself in Central park on Tuesday afternoon and died in Bellevue hospital the following day was Mrs. Josephine Hoffman, of 170 Mosco ole street, Williamsburg. She had worked at pasteboard box making for H. I. Opper of 79 Spring street, table city, and for some time had been out of employment. It was understood that she had wealthy relatives in Vienna, and three months ago a man she introduced to some as her husband said to others that he had chosen rather her and remained a week before going to Chicago.

The Furnaces Are Cold.

THROUGH THE TRESTLE.

Cars Crashed Sixty Feet Down Into the Creek, and Seven Were Killed.

DANVILLE, Va., Aug. 17.—An accident occurred at the county line trestle just east of Milton. The two passenger coaches and a sleeper were precipitated into the creek below, a distance of 60 feet, killing seven persons and injuring many others.

After passing through Milton and going over the trestle the engineer, Peyton Tunstall, who says he was running at the rate of 16 miles an hour, felt the bridge giving away. He threw open the throttle, and the engine, tender and a box car got safely over, but the passenger car was too late, and the span went down under its weight, the second passenger car and sleeper following. The cars were shivered into kindling wood, and the escape of any of the passengers was a miracle.

The water in the creek had risen to the depth of 12 or more feet, and it is the general belief that the rise had undermined the foundation of the iron piers, causing the trestle to settle.

The following is the list of the killed and injured:

W. Morris, conductor, Portsmouth, Va.; W. B. Elliott, Alton, Va.; J. G. Davies, a farmer of Baskerville, Va.; George B. Elam, Durham, N. C.; James S. Long, a railroad contractor from the west, who was a passenger; Thomas Lee (colored), Winston, N. C.; Francois Jenkins (colored), Salem, N. C.

Injured—Mrs. Harvey Gleroch, Salem, N. C., slightly; J. L. Sloer, Richmond, Pullman conductor, foot mashed and hurt slightly in sides; F. B. Jones, colored, porter on Pullman, slightly bruised about the body; Davis, flagman, hurt about head and face and foot sprained.

THE BOMBAY RIOTS.

Gunboats and Troops Threaten the Rollicking Fanatics.

BOMBAY, Aug. 17.—The religious race rioting was resumed in this city, and for several hours the streets were the scenes of desperate conflicts. The fighting was of the most sanguinary nature, and many persons were killed and wounded.

The day being a Hindoo holiday, the authorities anticipated a renewal of the recent disturbances and were in a measure prepared to suppress an outbreak, but the police and the force of troops in the garrison were inadequate to cover the whole city, and before quiet had been restored in one district fresh outbreaks would occur in other parts of the city.

The rage of the mob was directed especially against the mosques, several of which were sacked and burned. All the public buildings are now guarded by troops, and the gunboats in the harbor have been cleared for action and brought into position to cover the native quarters. The local authorities are confident of being able ultimately to quell the rioting.

CALCUTTA, Aug. 17.—The cow killing incident in Bombay was made a pretext for the opening of hostilities. The enmity between the Mohammedans and Hindoos has a far deeper and wider significance.

One Fireman Killed, Others Hurt.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 17.—As the result of a fire which lasted 15 minutes last evening one fireman is dead and several others injured. The fire started in the store of W. I. Dyer & Bros., 137 East Third street, dealers in musical instruments. The burning varnish on the musical instruments made a smoke so dense that it sickened the firemen. Michael Clonan of Engine Company No. 3 jumped from a fifth story window and was horribly mangled. He lived only a few minutes after striking the street. Jerry Murphy of the same company was carried down from the fifth story. He was badly cut about the head and is still unconscious. Captain Jerry Strap of Engine Company No. 8 was taken from the third story unconscious. His injuries are internal. Chief Jackson and John Dyer of Engine Company No. 4 were both partially suffocated.

Jackson Will Lead Iowa Republicans.

DES MOINES, Aug. 17.—The result of the Republican state convention was the nomination of F. D. Jackson for governor. There were two other candidates, and the election was on the second ballot. The nominee is in New York on business and has not been in Iowa for two weeks. The convention completed its work by the nomination of the following:

Lieutenant Governor—Warren S. Dungan of Charlton.

Supreme Judge—C. H. Robinson of Storm Lake.

Railroad Commissioner—J. W. Luke of New Hampton.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction—Henry Sabin of Des Moines.

Bartsell May Be Restored.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The restoration of Dr. Bartsell to his old parish is among the possibilities of the near future. He was sent to Rondout by Archbishop Corrigan at the time Rev. MRS. MASON'S PLIGHT.

It Is Feared That She May Have Hydrophobia.

SHE WAS BITTEN BY AN ANGRY DOG.

She Was Trying to Save Her Daughter From the Animal—She Has an Aversion For Water and Shows Other Signs of Rabies—The Wound Cauterized.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Marion Manola Mason, who recently appeared at Hermanus's theatre with her husband, Jack Mason, in "Friend Fritz," while rescuing her daughter Adelaide from a vicious dog on July 24 was bitten by the animal and has since displayed symptoms resembling those of hydrophobia. Dr. S. J. O'Neil of 240 East Eighty-sixth street, who is attending her, has not decided whether the symptoms are those of the dread disease or are due to nervousness resulting from shock.

The Masons are living at 69 Bay View avenue, New Rochelle, at the end of a row of summer cottages.

Jack Mason was kept in New York until late on July 24, and his wife and her daughter Adelaide, who is 13 years old, were waiting for him at the gate when he returned.

"When I was near home," said Mr. Mason at his home, "I heard a furious barking. I thought at first the noise was made by the combined efforts of the four dogs I keep about the house. But when I heard my stepdaughter scream I jumped up the steps leading to the gate, and there I saw Duke, an Irish setter, wrestling with a strange dog that looked like a bull terrier. The next moment Adelaide stepped forward to separate the animals. Before I could call out to her to let them alone she had grabbed the dog by the ears.

Attacked Mrs. Mason.

"The dog shook off Duke's hold and with a snarl sprang toward Adelaide. My wife threw herself between Adelaide and the dog, while I aimed a kick at the brute as it made a jump for my wife. The animal caught her by the right arm and tore away the sleeve of her dress.

"When I saw the brute draw back, snapping and snarling, with foam on his jaws, I became badly frightened and looked at Mrs. Mason's arm to see if she had been bitten. That was unfortunately the case, but I didn't tell her so.

"I quietly walked into the house, got the steel knife sharpener, knocked the glass off one of the lamps and heated the steel as quickly as I could. I had attended medical lectures in the Massachusetts hospital in Boston years ago, and I knew that cauterizing the wound caused by the dog's bite might save Mrs. Mason from hydrophobia.

"Mrs. Mason had not noticed that she was bitten, as she was still solicitous about her child. Accordingly I walked up to my wife and quickly drew the heated steel over the wounds. Of course she screamed and fainted, but Dr. O'Neil, who is attending her, said it was the very best thing I could have done."

Mr. Mason added that when his wife revived he offered a glass of water to her, but she threw it to the fl or.

"She has since displayed a marked aversion to water," continued Mr. Mason, "and not a night has passed since then that she has not raved."

Jack Mason and his wife called on Dr. O'Neil the day after the woman had been bitten. He found that her pupils were dilated and that she was suffering from a high fever. She showed the same aversion to water as on the night before, and Dr. O'Neil ordered her to bed at once. He called at her New Rochelle house for five nights and administered sedatives.

On his advice three of the dogs were sent away from the house, as their barking had a bad effect on Mrs. Mason.

Hydrophobia Symptoms.

She was soon well enough to take a week's trip to her parents in Flint, Mich., Dr. O'Neil having advised a change of scene. The symptoms resembling hydrophobia have since decreased during the day, but show hardly any improvement at night.

Mrs. Mason showed a reporter the wound on her arm, which has pretty well healed. She said her daughter had received a slight abrasion on the hand during the scuffle with the strange dog, but experienced no trouble. She added that she intended to take the doctor's advice and leave the house for a few hours every day.

"I must keep my mind off the dread possibility of hydrophobia," she said, "especially as I've been foolish enough to get worked up over the stories of recent deaths from hydrophobia."

Connecticut Day at the Fair.

HARTFORD, Aug. 17.—It has been decided to celebrate Connecticut day at the World's fair Oct. 11. Governor Morris and staff and the state World's fair commissioners will leave New York in a special car on Oct. 8. At Chicago the delegation will be received by the Sons of Connecticut, and Governor Morris will respond to the speech of welcome.

McGlory Will Go to Chicago.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Billy McGlory, the ex-dive keeper, was released from Ludlow Street jail by an order of Judge McCarthy of the city court after Mrs. McGlory had paid $1,136—the amount of the judgment secured against him. McGlory intends, it is said, to go to Chicago and open a saloon and restaurant.

She Had Three Husbands In Court.

PHOTOGRAPHIC DECEPTION.

Even to the Camera Things Are Not Always What They Seem.

The camera is generally considered to be a most trustworthy witness, and the uncompromising accuracy and truthfulness of a photograph have led many artists to look upon such pictures as mere mechanical productions possessing little true artistic value. Popular Science News, however, from which the accompanying engraving is reproduced, says that this engraving shows that to the camera things are not always what they seem, and that by taking advantage of the laws of optics the camera may be made to confirm the most improbable stories of sportsmen, who from the days of Nimrod have been noted for the freedom with which they adjust actual facts and achieved results to their ideal conceptions of what should have occurred.

The illustration is copied from an actual photograph, and is apparently a conclusive proof of the luck or skill of the two hunters in capturing an enormous animal somewhat resembling a rabbit. The animal was really a rabbit of ordinary size, but in arranging the group it was suspended by a fine thread in such a position that it appeared to be suspended from the pole on the shoulders of the men, but in fact was several feet nearer the camera, its actual size being thus magnified out of all proportion to that of its captors.

The journal quoted suggests, as a simpler modification of this principle, to photograph a fish or an animal in the same picture with a two foot rule or 10 foot pole. By placing the animal near the camera it may be enlarged to any desired size. A little care in arranging the group is necessary to obtain good results, and a lens with considerable depth of focus and a very small stop must be used, but the amusing and mysterious photographs thus secured will well repay the trouble.

The Earth as an Electrical Conductor.

Steinhill, at Munich in 1837, was the first to discover that the earth might be used instead of a return wire, contact being made to the earth at the two ends by means of metal plates sunk in the ground. The earth is almost universally used as the return circuit in telephone and telegraph lines. While it is true that in the former a complete metallic circuit is sometimes found, it is not on account of the failure of the earth to conduct the current, but for the purpose of diminishing the induction caused by the presence of electric light and power circuits.

The earth plates are made of zinc or copper and are sunk in the moist earth, in a spring or in the bed of a river. It has been generally considered that the earth offers no resistance at all as to cross section to so large, although its specific resistance may be very high. The element of danger to life and property is also suspended by a fine thread in such a position that it appeared to be suspended from the pole on the shoulders of the men, but in fact was several feet nearer the camera, its actual size being thus magnified out of all proportion to that of its captors.

The journal quoted suggests, as a simpler modification of this principle, to photograph a fish or an animal in the same picture with a two foot rule or 10 foot pole. By placing the animal near the camera it may be enlarged to any desired size. A little care in arranging the group is necessary to obtain good results, and a lens with considerable depth of focus and a very small stop must be used, but the amusing and mysterious photographs thus secured will well repay the trouble.

Electricity and Cooking.

The Electrical World predicts that owing to the ability to control the temperature of cooking by electricity, the exact time and temperature required for a given dish to be done so as to bring out perfectly the best flavor will become known, and as a consequence ordinary cooking will be reduced to a simple mechanical operation, and an ignorant servant who can merely read a thermometer may be able to produce results almost equal to those of a chef. Owing, however, to the entire lack of discomfort and uncleanliness, the art of Brillat-Savarin may come generally to be accepted as a fine art, and its practice, at least so far as the cooking itself is concerned, regarded in the light of an accomplishment worthy to be exercised only by those who can appreciate its refinement.

A Land Without a Microbe.

The most ideally sterile spot is undoubtedly the moon, but an exchange states that on this particular planet the Spitzbergen group of islands, in the arctic regions, are found to be a close second. Analyses of the air, water and soil of Spitzbergen brought to light the extraordinary poverty of these regions in bacteria. While the air of the streets of Paris contains on an average 51,000 bacteria per cubic meter, that of the arctic sea contains only three. As to the water of Spitzbergen, not only is it devoid of any pathogenic micro-organisms whatever, but all bacilli are absent.

Home Magic.

The ladle is hooked over the blade of the knife close to the haft. The hook at its end is closed a little, so as to prevent it from slipping and keep it fast at an angle of about 45 degrees to the handle. You may balance this combination by resting the outer end of the knife handle on your finger, on the edge of a table or on the edge of a tumbler filled with water to give it greater stability.

At first sight the thing seems an impossibility. Try it, and you will be surprised to find after a little practice that the desired effect can be produced

THE HOUSEHOLD

DECORATIVE WORK.

A Border For a Tea-cloth, Ribbon Plaiting, Embroidery on Checked Linen, Etc.

Leaves of various forms play some considerable part in the decoration of fancy articles this season. A pretty border for a tea-cloth represents chestnut leaves arranged so that they slightly overlap. The leaves are worked so that every alternate one is an excellent imitation of a skeleton leaf, and as the linen is cut away beyond the edges of the pattern the segments of the leaves make a pretty finish of scallops all round the cloth. Ivy leaves cut out of dark green plush, apparently lined with silk of a paler shade and mounted over cardboard, are being made up into mats and letter or photograph holders.

Dainty table mats are composed of a piece of very fine matting, which is laid in the center of an oblong of coarse linen rather larger than the matting. The edges of the linen are so arranged as to fold over to the right side of the mat and are traced for embroidery. The linen is fastened at the corners with a tiny button and loop, so that it can be readily removed from the matting when soiled.

Cardboard boxes can be covered with interlaid ribbon of two colors and turned to all kinds of uses. It takes some little time to learn to plait the ribbon closely and firmly. Start with a straight horizontal piece pinned to a board, and all the perpendicular ribbons fastened to that, and then the rest is quite easy. It is an art soon acquired.

The check pattern on old linen suggests embroidery in which various stitches, stars, crosses, plaids worked in silks and linen threads are made to form excellent designs by the aid of the lines in the material. These much simplify the work.

To those who prefer crochet to any of the lines for fine needlework the revival of old fashioned crochet is fortunate, and it presents many charms, for it has been much improved in several phases. Colored linen crochet forms handsome trimmings for cushions, mantel borders and other decorative articles.

Our cut shows a handsome and useful arrangement for holding photographs. The rectangular panel is in either pongadour silk or embroidered linen, and is mounted on satin and cut off with bands of plain plush, which form pockets to receive the photos, notes, etc. It is maintained up with butterfly bows and ruched silk fringe. The back is faced with dark green silk.

Water Ices.

These are all compounded of the juice of fruit, sugar and water. By observing the following directions they may be made as smooth as ices in the best ice cream. The sugar and water must be cooked in a custard kettle to a clear syrup, the scum removed and the syrup strained through a fine muslin cloth and set to cool. Pour it into the freezer, add the prepared fruit juices and other material, if any, and pack with ice in lumps the size of an egg, sprinkling in a quart of coarse salt as it is added. Cover and fasten the ice pot and turn slowly and steadily until it goes rather hard. It requires more time for freezing than for ice creams—generally 15 to 20 minutes.

Open the ice pot, scrape down the sides and stir till smooth; then put in the white of an egg, beaten with a teaspoonful of finely powdered sugar to a stiff froth and worked smooth. A larger quantity of egg is apt to produce a milky appearance. If the granular kind of ices are desired, mix the sugar, water and juices and freeze without cooking; also omit the egg finish.

A Point In Preserving Fruit.

A very good authority on fruit preserving constantly insists that the rule followed by many housekeepers, of using a small proportion of sugar and in consequence boiling the preserve longer, is a fallacy, as the more sugar used the greater the bulk of preserve obtained, less being wasted in long boiling and evaporation, while the flavor of the fruit is more retained. A quick fire should be used and of course the preserve continually stirred, the skum being taken off as it rises. To judge if the preserve has boiled enough, drop a little into a glass of cold water. If it does not spread or mix, it is done enough. Or another way is to drop a little on a plate. If it does not run on the plate, it is sufficiently boiled and should at once be poured.

Furniture For Summer Parlors.

White sets of plain furniture for summer parlors are finished in white enamel and have cushions of dainty pink or blue and white striped ecrétonnes, sprinkled with pompadour bouquets. Others have plush cushions tied in with generous bows of ribbon, and many are draped with Indian curtains or any gayly striped fabric combined with turkey red calico. Some gilded sets are seen, in which case the cushions are of rich damask, green or red with set figures, flowers-de-luce, bees, etc., in gilt. These are not recommended for more than an occasional piece, as the effect of many is too ornate for our purpose, a fresh and simple summer coolness, says The Decorator and Furnisher

MARTIN GAINS AGAIN.

AND LACKS BUT THREE VOTES OF SEVEN THOUSAND.

The Contest now Nearing the Finish.—Subdued Excitement Increases Among the Competitors and Their Friends. The Champions Hold Their Places.

LACKING but three votes of seven thousand is Mr. Martin's score to-day. He has made another big gain on Leader Saltzman, and, as the date of decision is very near, there are many whisperings among the wise.

September will be the best month at the World's Fair, and the most popular dreman, while he may not have time to write letters to his friends telling of all the grand things he sees and hears, can at least keep on using twelve hours every day without suffering much from warm weather. Everything will be at its best when Mr. Fireman takes his trip.

August 20 is the date for the winner. Particulars of the trip on page two.

'TWAS LANTERN SLIDE EVENING.

And Dancing was Forced to Take Second Place.

DANCING formed a prominent part in a delightful entertainment given at Mr. Thomas Barrett's place, the Rockview farm house, near the mountain, in Somerset county, last night. The guests included many Plainfielders, and others were present from New York and Brooklyn. While dancing was an important feature, the event of the evening was admitted by all to be the lantern slide exhibition, which was ably arranged and given by Mr. J. Hervey Doane of this city who described the views as they were thrown on the canvas, in his usual interesting and clever manner.

The guests from Brooklyn and New York were "perfectly delighted" with the beautiful scenes shown, which were all of Plainfield and vicinity. Dancing followed the exhibit, and refreshments were enjoyed later.

FELL OFF THE PORCH.

Mrs. Haas Seriously Injured Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. Haas, who is eighty years old, and lives with Mr. Louis Bimble on Walnut street, started to go out into the yard yesterday afternoon when she missed the steps and fell headlong off the porch striking on her side. Her arm and shoulder were badly bruised. She narrowly escaped striking her head against a large tree, which stands close by. It was at first reported that her leg and arm were broken.

$1,000 IN PENNIES.

They Were Delivered at the City National Bank To-Day.

Expressman William Wilson had a tug getting $1,000 in pennies up the City National Bank steps this morning. A bystander was told if he would put the pennies in his pocket and carry them around he could have them. They were in a keg, and would make a neat pocket fot. The keg weighed several hundred pounds.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

THE PLAINFIELD LYCEUM CYCLERS' 25-MILE ROAD RACE TO-MORROW.

A Number of Entries for the Race, which Promises to be Very Close and Exciting as Some of the Best Riders in the State Have Entered.

WHEN the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers 25-mile road race starts over the Plainfield-Scotch Plains course to-morrow afternoon at two p. m., there will, no doubt be a large crowd present. There are twenty-five entries, among whom are some of the best riders of New Jersey. It promises to be a very interesting race. It is a twelve minute limit handicap and will be under the management of Captain William Kiely of the Lyceum Cyclers. The course is in excellent condition and the riders are training continually. The Plainfield riders don't intend to let outsiders carry off first honors this time if they can help it. There are three medals—first, second and third, the first being a fine gold medal and the other two being of silver. There are also thirty other prizes. The entries are as follows:

Charles Coffin, R. C. A.; James Williams, C. L. W.; George Coffin, C. A. C.; Wm. E. Rink, T. V. W.; A. S. Swarthout, N. W.; Charles Vandevender, E. W.; Joseph Bowden, Cornin Firing, M. T. V. W.; O. B. M. Shurts, N. T. V. W.; Charles L. Fisk, E. O. C.; E. H. Totten, Isaac Line, C. L. W.; Joseph Keller, E. A. Burton, J. J. Jones, W. J. E. Theirs.

Mr. J. J. Hibbitts will act as referee. The judges will be Dr. D. C. Adams, T. J. Carey, and W. H. Footstel. Timekeepers —Charles Vail, Caleb Dickenson and B. F. La Vere. Scorers—Representatives of THE EVENING NEWS, the Daily Press and the Courier. Clerk of Course, John Trainor. Starter, Wm. L. Kiely. The race will take place rain or shine.

To the Bicycle Clubs of Union County:

According to the conditions under which the cup known as the Saltonstall Cup for the two mile track championship of Union county is held, and because a club other than the present holders has expressed a desire to compete for the cup this year, it becomes necessary to take some steps for having a race. I, therefore, ask each and every bicycle club of Union county, whether privately notified or not, to send one representative to a meeting to be held for this purpose Monday evening, August 21, at 8.30 o'clock at the club house of the Elizabeth club.

HENRY L. SALTONSTALL.

Over the Irvington-Milburn course a series of races will be held by the Lafayette Wheelmen on September 4. The events will be a one-mile scratch, two-mile handicap, five-mile championship and one-mile consolation.

Did you ever notice how any kind of scenery is good enough for the beginner to get off his wheel to admire at the end of the first mile or so of his initial ride on the road?

A New York wheelman has invented a spiked bicycle tire, adapted to lace over an ordinary tire, for racing purposes or to use on icy and slippery roads in cold weather.

A new lady's safety built in France, is described as possessing "a neat little arm chair seat, made of split cane."

Wheelmen in Russia must be over eighteen years old, and must have licenses to ride on public streets.

A husband and wife recently rode from Nice to Paris on a quadricycle driven by petroleum.

License to use bicycles on public roads have been issued to 27,500 people in Paris, France.

"LETTER CARRIERS' REST" FOUND.

It had Been Placed on top of the Post Office Building.

For almost a week there has been much sorrow in the mail carriers' association—their favorite settee was lost, and search revealed it not. During all this time the letter carriers had no "seltee" to set on and in the late unlimited to sit on that they might work the "Whang-Whang" degree on them.

It said the thief is also an employee of "Uncle Sam," who was afraid to tell the carriers where it was as he might get it where the chickens got the size, so he told a friend, who in turn revealed the hiding place of the much look for "Rest." Yesterday, headed by that old soldier Charles B. Stephens, who knows no fear, three of the carriers ascended to the roof of the Post Office building, where they found their settee.

Mr. Sk——Wasn't Friendly.

One night last week as Mr. H. Gaskill was returning to his home he fell in company with an esseppe peddler. Not knowing the vicious critters of the one whom he met, Mr. Gaskill attempted to be friendly, but without avail, for Mr. Sk——turned on him and made a good attempt to do Mr. Gaskill harm. Mr. Gaskill, as soon as he found out the nature of his companion, although a brave man, took to his heels and sped toward home at a 2:40 clip. He has buried his heavy cane and does not care very much to wear some of the clothing he had on that evening.—Dunellen Gal.

THE "CORBETT FAKE."

His Name Used to Draw a Large Audience at a Ball Game.

THE Crescents were scheduled to play at Asbury Park yesterday against the "Unexcelled" team. Why the team was given that name is not known unless it was they are unexcelled as faking people. Manager Keller has been used to playing good teams and the team the Asbury Park manager promised to put in the field made him sure of a fine game and a large audience. The team as it was to have been, composed of such men as Champion James J. Corbett, who was one of the best players in the California League, would have done credit to any team to beat.

The team as it was, composed of a number of picked up players, who had probably never played together before, was a marked contrast to the one expected and the audience went away disgusted before the game was half over.

At half-past four, when the manager of the "Unexcelleds" became tired waiting for his team to put in an appearance, Manager Keller loaned him Keenan and Jones as a battery and after filling in with outsiders the game was started, Manager Keller playing first base and a man named Higby right field to make up the nine. Before this it took about a half hour to find an umpire with nerve enough to umpire such a game. Mr. Hetzel, formerly pitcher of the Newark Star-Athletics, was finally coaxed into leaving his best girl and taking the position. At about the third inning two old Princeton Giant players, Williams and James, colored, were fished up out of the sea, where they were enjoying a surf bath and prevailed upon to be the battery for the Asbury Park team.

Seven innings were play and resulted as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Crescents	0	0	2	4	2	2	*—10
Unexcelled	2	0	0	0	0	0	0—2

The Crescents play at Orange to-morrow.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William H. Creamer of Lebanon is visiting his brother-in law, Mr. A. F. Bower of New street.

Mrs. John Cox and daughter, Nora, of Park avenue are visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. Cox at Rock Hill.

Mr. J. Smith Garretson has broken ground for a new house on Lee place, adjoining Mr. Barnes' place.

Miss Lottie Clark of this city, who has been spending several weeks with friends in Round Brook, has returned to her home.

Miss Flora Zimmerman of Martinville is visiting her sister, Mrs. Firman A. Lowe, of Summit avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. Frank L. C. Martin of Park avenue, who has been spending some time at the World's Fair, has left Chicago for Madison, Ill.

Miss Phoebe Mills, of the Trinity Reformed church choir, sang in the Presbyterian church Basking Ridge, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthews and Miss Emma Schabehorn of Nyack, N. Y., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore J. Kurzels of West Second street.

The Asbury Park Journal says the following Plainfielders have registered at Asbury Park hotels: Miss Sara Gilligan, Mrs. Lizzie McKee and P. S. Pope.

Miss Cain of Summit is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Bryant S. Cain of Grandview avenue. Miss Cain formerly lived here and has friends in both the city and borough.

Letter Carrier Edward T. Van Winkle of Elm place began his vacation to-day. His route is being delivered by James Mullen, who has proven very efficient in mail service.

Mr. William O'Connor and Miss Katharine Reed, both of this city, were married yesterday afternoon, at five o'clock, at St. Mary's church. The Rev. Father Murphy officiated.

The funeral of Mrs. William Schorb took place this afternoon from the Warren chapel at two o'clock. Court Pride, Ancient Order of Foresters, of which the husband of the deceased was a member, attended in a body.

Mr. A. F. Bower of New street, who has charge of the block signal system of the Central Railroad between here and Elizabeth has been indisposed and unable to attend to his duties for a few days. Mr. Bower has been in the employ of the Company for over six years, continously, with the exception of a short time he was in the United States Mail service, which he gave up to reenter the Central's employ.

—Central avenue is being cut down to grade.

A FEW FOOL RULES.

THE WAY NOT TO GET OFF A STREET CAR.

But, Judging by the Daily Actions of Some People, the Following is Their Method.—Compare and See.

HERE was a young man whose actions in getting off a street car yesterday, the conductors say, are repeated by passengers daily. The young man got off according to the following rules, which are recommended to anyone wishing to furnish a subject for the doctor or undertaker.

1. Stand up.
2. If you have a few bundles drop them on the floor so that you can wave both hands at the conductor.
3. Pick up your bundles.
4. Get out on the platform. The conductor has rung the bell, and has told you not to jump until the car stops, but don't mind him. Just smile in a superior sort of way.
5. Be sure and get a firm hold on the brass hand rod.
6. Get the wrong foot out first. That gives you a chance to kick yourself with the other foot and so start the circus.
7. Draw a deep breath—don't forget the breath. Then, as the conductor reaches for you, and before the car has commenced to slow up—jump.
8. Keep a firm hold on the brass rod. That gives you a chance to scare the conductor and also to show your agility.
9. Unbangle your feet. Don't pull the car off the track. Just run along with it. Keep smiling.
10. Drop your bundles one at a time. You can then easily trace your way back to where you got off.
11. Don't lay down and let the car drag you. That would make the spectators think you were lazy.
12. When the car stops let go of the brass rod. Act just as though that was the way you always got off a street car.
13. Pick up your bundles and go home.
14. If you want variety, get off the car facing the other way. People will think you are an athlete then, you will turn a back somersault so gracefully.

THE JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS.

They Fill Asbury Park to Overflowing—Twelve Special Trains.

The third annual parade at Asbury Park of the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics took place yesterday afternoon, and was a great success. Delegations from the 160 Councils in the State were present, and about 8,000 participated in the march about the city. Twelve special excursion trains were run for the benefit of the members of the order and their friends. All the regular trains were crowded. As each delegation arrived at the depot by a reception committee and escorted to the headquarters on Liberty Square. Streets up the line of march were thronged with spectators, and every store and cottage was prettily decorated in the colors of the order. At the beach James Bradley had made special provision for the visitors, and all the pavilions and bath houses were decorated. J. V. Packard was grand marshal, and Frederick Gilkyson acted as adjutant. Both Franklin and Somerset Councils of this city participated in the parade. The Independent Fife and Drum corps of this city was one of the finest in line, and their drum major was the centre of attraction.

WHAT IS THE SWITCH FOR?

When is the Second Car to be Put on?

The heavens evidently took pity on the suffering mortals along the line of the Somerset street railway and gave that section a good sprinkling last evening, thus laying the dust for a day or so.

What is that switch on Somerset street for, anyhow? Simply to squeegee wagon wheels, or, was it intended to use for street cars? For a trolley road, the Somerset street line is a good one. But why have half an hour between trips! Can not the company do better than that? The trip takes about 15 minutes each way, counting all stops. Anyone, going either way, so unfortunate as to miss the car, is able to walk to the end of the line before the "dust-producer" appears again. This ought not be. Put on more cars. A more moderate speed could then be taken by each car and better satisfaction given all around.

The contract with the Borough requires that cars should be run every seven minutes.

Learn These Things.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. A well told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your pains and aches under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the earache, headache, or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but they are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. The good humored man or woman is always welcome, but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere, and is a nuisance as well.—Washington's Magazine.

Board of Pension Examiners.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette says: "The new Board of Pension Examiners for this district organized on Wednesday. The members are D. J. P. McWilliams, of that place; Dr. J. F. Berg, of Plainfield, and Dr. W. F. Patterson, of Chestnut Hill. This is not the board that was slated for appointment by the local Democratic leaders. Drs. McWilliam and Berg are both Republicans, who are re-appointed in recognition of their conscientious and efficient work in the past."

There is Still a Vacancy.

There is still a vacancy of one deacon in the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist church. Prof. A. J. Titsworth, of New Brunswick, was elected at the same time as Charles E. Rogers. Prof. Titsworth, however, declined to accept the office on account of living so far away from the church that he could not perform its duties. No other deacon has yet been chosen in his place.

No. 451 Breaks the Record.

The Central Railroad Company of New Jersey has added another flyer to its many fast locomotives. The new engine, No. 451, made by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, ran its first trip from Jersey City to Philadelphia Tuesday in one hour and fifty-two minutes, breaking the record on the road.

ON THE ATLANTIC IN A SKIFF.

Cent-a-Word Column.

Capt. Paulsen of Rahway Starts on His Voyage Across the Ocean.

TO CROSS the Atlantic in a sixteen foot Norwegian skiff is what Capt. Chris Paulsen intends to do. He started on his perilous trip yesterday. He had intended sailing sooner, but was delayed by the non-arrival of his instruments.

The boat is called a "Norwegian skiff." It is but 16 feet long, two feet shorter than the dory in which Capt. Andrews made his famous voyage; beam, 5 feet; depth, 3 feet 8 inches; length of keel, 10 feet. It has a free-board rudder and is sharp at both ends. Two water-tight compartments have been placed in each end of the boat to make it buoyant. Rubber tubes are stretched along the gunwales to keep it steady. It is sloop-rigged, the mainsail being 12 by 16 feet, and jib 8 by 10 feet. Two tanks holding 100 gallons of water will be carried. Provisions for only two weeks can be stowed away owing to the smallness of the craft. He will depend on meeting the transatlantic steamers to replenish his store of provisions and water.

Salvation Army Notes.

Camp meeting at Groader's Grove, Sunday afternoon, at three p. m.

Capt. Melvee, who has been the guest of Miss Thew of East Second street, left yesterday for a two weeks' rest at the Catskill mountains.

Lieut. Mattie Watson, late of the New Brunswick corps, has been appointed assistant lieutenant of the Plainfield corps.

Adjutant W. Hunter of Trenton, Capt. Daymond, "the boy preacher," from the New York national headquarters, and a number of others from the different New York corps will be at the meetings Sunday all day.

Feminine Charms in New England.

The naughty man of the Elizabeth Journal, a new addition to the payroll, writes as follows, and cre-dits it to someone else:

A sojourner at one of the Massachusetts beaches writes to an Elizabeth friend as "I wish you were here. I am sure the matutinal exhibition on the beach would amuse you. Truly the New England feminine charm is almost without exception situated in the head. When one looks below that, one Thanks God that He made them modest, and that the season at the seashore is short. Would to God the skirts were not!"

EDITORIAL NOTES

Solitude and Intellectual Work.

"Sheep and geese become restless when separated from the flock; the eagle and lion seek isolation," writes George Ebers in a remarkable paper in The Forum describing the formative influences of his childhood. The most blessed influence of all he now recognizes as a severe illness which confined him for a long time to his room. In that enforced loneliness and solitude so terrible to him then the genius was developed which afterward placed him among the great literary lights of Germany.

Ebers lays emphatic stress on the necessity of solitude for those who would do great work. He says again, "Our most valuable acquisition in the time of our development through nature, art and circumstance is the fruit of hours spent in quietude, desirable for our growing youth and absolutely essential for our future philosopher, poet and artist."

The beauty of the following passage is striking:

I was much gratified to hear my friend Professor Adolph von Beyer, the celebrated successor of Liebig at the University of Munich, say, in a lecture before the students, and later in personal conversation, that he regretted there was so little opportunity possible in the present day for society for seasons of quiet and seclusion. In tracing the career of others who have done more than the human average has a tendency to formulate the best in solitude becomes apparent of each one. Goethe found the quiet of early morning most favorable for composition. The teeming brains of the great physicist, Helmholtz, and the mathematician Gauss carried on most productive the silent hours or walks abroad in sunny weather. The universe opened to Kant on dark, hazy wanderings, and the famous electrician, Werner Siemens, after being incarcerated in a fortress as punishment for a duel, declared that it was while in regret he regained his freedom from an imprisonment in which work and thought had reaped incredible benefit from solitude. From quiet and solitude spring the greatest thoughts, inventions and compositions of art; hence their potentiality in character formation.

Farmhouse Conveniences.

A newspaper correspondent has found an ordinary rural home supplied with the convenience of plenty of hot water for kitchen and bathroom. There is a cold water tank in the attic. This is filled from the rains upon the roof, or a force pump might be used to lift the water. A windmill does the same office on some farms. A box lined with zinc and holding some 25 gallons is mounted near the kitchen stove, higher than the stove. From the tank in the attic cold water is let into the kitchen tank or box by a faucet. A hole is cut into the stovepipe, and through it passes down a pipe which is coiled around on top of the oven of the stove just where the fire will strike it. This pipe comes from the bottom of the tank. Midway of the tank the return pipe enters, making a complete circulation of water within the coil. The tank must not be closed tight at the top, otherwise steam explosions might occur. Common galvanized pipe is used. If the kitchen range or stove has the arrangement called a water front, then the only thing to do will be to open the holes already drilled and connect the pipe from the tank. Thus, with a little pipe, some elbow joints, solder and faucets, a zinc lined box and the use of brains, any farm cottage may be as luxuriously supplied with hot water as if it were a millionaire's mansion. In the twentieth century most farmhouses will be supplied with city conveniences. The reason they are not so now is not lack of money so much as lack of thinking and energy.

This is the age of woman's progress, yet an Alaska woman has beaten the record of any civilized woman in America, with all our higher education and lady doctors and lawyers. This native Alaska woman is a fur trader and has made a fortune the way the founder of the Astor family made his—by peddling furs and exchanging them for goods. She goes into the interior with a pack of goods upon her back and sells these to the Indians there for furs and returns to the seaport town laden with pelts, which she again sells at a good profit. Alaska is American, this shrewd lady is an American citizen, and there is no reason why her grandchildren should not set the pace for the New York aristocracy and hobnob with the British nobility. She is as good a Christian as anybody, too, this Alaska lady, she having given up two of her three husbands when she embraced the white man's religion. But the point which fixes her superiority to the white woman is the fact that she succeeded in amassing a fortune in spite of having three husbands.

The employees of the Evansville and Terre Haute railroad have originated what may be called an Indiana idea. The company gave notice of a 10 per cent reduction in their wages. The employees declined to accept it. Instead they proposed to lend the company 10 per cent of their ordinary wages till times got good. Then they would take the back pay. This is not a bad plan if employers could only see the question in that light.

It is a peculiarly encouraging sign in the midst of the present financial crash that a majority of the banks which suspend resume again in a few weeks.

A Mob of Frenzied Hebrews Wreck a Hall.

HOT FIGHT IN EAST SIDE STREETS.

They Claim to Be Out of Work, Hungry and Desperate—A Police Court Surrounded—Attempt to Stab a Police Captain.

Reserves Sleep With Their Night Sticks.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The entire force of police reserves slept last night with their night sticks handy, and today they are ready to respond at a moment's notice.

The cause of the trouble is that 5,000 unemployed men called Walhalla hall on Orchard street, occupied nearly all that street and struggled with the police until after midnight. Inspected as the manager of the hall, who demanded rent in advance for a proposed mass meeting, the crowd took possession of the premises, and when police reserves arrived two and three arrests were made, the mob determined to hold the place until the prisoners were released.

The manager withdrew his complaint against the prisoners, but the rioters demolished everything breakable in the hall and were driven out finally by the police. Seventeen men were arrested.

Three Hebrew rioters were arrested in Orchard street by the Eldridge street police. About 5,000 unemployed Hebrew workingmen had been in Walhalla hall after the proprietor had refused to rent it to them. The arrest of the three men enraged the rioters. They threatened to mob the Essex market police court if the men were not released. The men were separated and discharged by Police Justice Voorhis. They were escorted in two squads to the fastnesses of the mob at Walhalla hall. The rioters regarded the liberation of the men as a triumph over the police. When they heard the news, they marched everything in the hall.

Then they swarmed into the street shouting, "Kill the police!" Proprietor Finkelstein appealed to the police a second time. Police Captain Devery, at the head of 20 patrolmen, with clubs drawn, charged upon the mob, who at first attempted to resist.

The most stubborn fight of the day took place when the crowd had been chased out of Orchard street and blocked Grand street from Orchard to the Bowery in the block east and almost to the Bowery to the west. Police Captain Devery ordered Policeman Fitzgerald of his precinct to make the crowd move.

Fitzgerald went up and ordered the crowd to move, when one man refused. He began to talk in a loud and bolsterous manner and Fitzgerald immediately placed him under arrest. Then over 100 in the crowd tried to rescue the prisoner.

Tried to Stab the Captain.

Captain Devery and all the policemen ran around and to the policeman's assistance. Then occurred a fierce hand to hand fight. The mob used sticks, stones and anything they could get hold of. The policemen used their clubs. Captain Devery, who was in the thickest of the fray, very narrowly escaped being stabbed.

A young Jew who was in the crowd had a pair of shears with blades 10 inches long up his sleeve and was just about to stab the captain when he looked around and saw him. Devery grabbed him and got to work telling blows with his club. The fellow jumped away and was soon lost in the crowd.

Stones flew, and one hit Policeman Andy Hogan in the back of the neck and knocked him down. He was seriously hurt, but managed to get on his feet and get to work again. Another fellow hit Policeman McGibney over the head with a stick and knocked in his helmet, sending the policeman to the ground. The police managed to quell the disturbance, and the workmen started down Grand street toward the East river, with the police after them.

Two of the men were arrested. The policemen two to each prisoner, took the men through the streets, followed by a crowd of about 2,000 persons, who were jeering and hooting at them. At the Eldridge Street station they were charged with disorderly conduct. They were searched and locked up.

Tried to Hurt Cattle.

Some of them had long knives on their persons. They protested that they had done nothing and wept bitterly. Their cries could be heard across the street.

The prisoners were arraigned before Justice Voorhis in the Essex Market police court and were remanded until today. There was great excitement attending the arrests of the prisoners, and word was quickly sent to their families that they were in the hands of the police. Men, women and children followed them from the station house to the court, and the greatest excitement prevailed while the prisoners were being led through the streets. The crowd must have numbered over 1,000 people, and when the prisoners were remanded they followed them back to the station house.

A sergeant and five patrolmen from the Eldridge Street station guarded the hall all night. Around in the station were part of the reserves of five precincts held in readiness to suppress any further demonstration. There was none, however. The men who participated in the riots were overawed by the police and did not gather again in the vicinity. Police Captain Devery said, "If Proprietor Winkelstein had not had the three first prisoners discharged, the riot would not have been emboldened to wreck the hall."

Afraid He Would Be Lynched.

The proprietor says he secured their release because the crowd shouted, "Lynch, kill him!" Joseph Barondess promised to pay for the damage.

Thirteen prisoners were locked up in the Eldridge Street police station. A large crowd of Hebrews collected in front of the police station in the evening and clamored for the release of the prisoners. A number of women were in the crowd.

Barondess went to the station and made inquiries about getting bail for the prisoners. He said he might be able to secure bail for some of the men. To reporters he said: "The trouble was caused by the attempt of a large number of men to hold a meeting without previous organization. Most of these men are desperate because they have no work and can get no food for their suffering families."

When there was no reason to expect more trouble in Orchard street, the police reserves from Oak street, Madison street and Delancey street were sent back to the stations, but Acting Superintendent Conlin directed that the reserves be kept on duty at all the stations in the city until further orders.

Cleveland's Unemployed Meet.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 18.—A meeting of the unemployed of this city was held in the public square under the auspices of the Central Labor union. About 4,000 persons were present. Several speeches of a mild order were made. Resolutions were adopted calling upon Congressman Tom L. Johnson to work and vote for the Lewis and unlimited coinage of silver or resign "in order that we may not be misrepresented in congress." It was decided to continue the meetings from week to week.

More Trouble In Kansas Mines.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Aug. 18.—Forty miners who went into the shaft when the Riverside miners' convention were pelted with rocks, forced and cursed by a gang of strikers. The entire force of workers charged the strikers, who beat a rather hasty retreat, although they greatly outnumbered the workers. Several of the number who resumed work have quit owing to the fact that their wives and families had been threatened with extermination by the secret order of the strikers.

Woolen Mills Shut Down.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Aug. 18.—James Lees & Sons, at Bridgeport, paid off all their employees and shut down their woolen mills for an indefinite period, throwing out out of employment 1,125 hands. The Norristown woolen mills, employing 175 hands, and Rambo & Regar's two knitting mills, 200 hands, principally women and girls, also suspended operations.

The Bright Side.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 18.—Hayden's rolling mill, which shut down two months ago, has reopened, and 100 men resumed work. Wheeling's mill will start Monday, and the managers state that the outlook is good. The chair works, owned by the same firm, opened a week ago, when 60 men went to work. Builders report the out look in their business better.

Running on Half Time.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 18.—The Raritan woolen mills have made a further reduction, and the employees are now working on half time. The polishing mill of Bound Brook woolen mills are also working only three days per week.

Rubber Factories to Reopen.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Aug. 18.—The calender rooms of the Millville (Mass.) and Alice (Woonsocket) factories of the Woonsocket Rubber company will start on Monday, preparatory to resumption in all the departments.

Half Time In Railroad Shops.

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 18.—The Pennsylvania railroad shops in this city have been ordered to work half time until further orders. The shop employs 8,000 hands.

Railroad Men Laid Off.

HARTFORD, Aug. 18.—Orders have been received from Boston to discharge more men employed in the New York and New England railroad repair shops.

Coal Miners Strike.

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 18.—Several hundred coal miners at Trout Run, Cambria county, are out on a strike.

The Bank Will Soo.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—It is reported here that the receivers of the Madison Square bank, which closed its doors a few days ago, are going to bring suit against the clearing house officials to recover the $900,000 worth of securities which the clearing house committee took out of the bank the night they visited it to ascertain its condition. Those securities were taken to indemnify the St. Nicholas bank, which was the clearing house agent for the Madison Square.

Shaun Trial Almost Over.

TRENTON, Aug. 18.—All the testimony upon which the state of New Jersey relies to prove that Mrs. Mattie C. Shaun of Princeton killed her own son by slow poison to gain the sum of $2,000 insurance on his life is before the jury. The final speeches will be finished today, and it is probable that when bedtime comes tonight Mrs. Shaun will either be a free woman in her own house or else under condemnation of death.

Bought the Big Diamond.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—It is said that the big diamond which is the star of Tiffany's exhibit at the World's fair has been bought by Mrs. Charles T. Yerkes, wife of the Chicago street railway king, who will soon take up his abode in this city. The price paid for the diamond is quoted at $100,000. It is said that Mrs. Yerkes will wear it in a necklace that is now being made for her by Tiffany.

Barked Like a Dog.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—A clearly defined case of hydrophobia is that of a man whose name is believed to be Gregory, who was found in a prostrate barking and snapping like a dog and showing all the symptoms of rabies. But for the terrible exhaustion which followed the first paroxysm, as he tried to bite those near him, it is probable he would have inoculated others with the dread disease.

Ten Killed In a Street Fight.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—French and Italian workingmen fought in Aigues-Mortes, in the department of Gard, for nearly two hours. The police made repeated efforts to restrain the men, but were not strong enough to repress the peace. Ten men were killed, and 36 were wounded severely.

A SOP FOR SILVER MEN.

The Senate Committee Considers a Bimetallic Clause.

ACTION IS TO BE BEGUN AT ONCE.

The Finance Committee Has Made Headway at Last on the Repeal Bill—A Dull Session of the Senate—More Silver Orators In the House Heard From.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Action on the silver question is confidently looked for in the senate today. The last meeting of the senate finance committee was attended by every member and conclusions were reached which will enable the committee to report the repeal bill today. There has been from the day the committee first met into session a difference of opinion between the silver and antisilver men that apparently could not be reconciled, and although there has been a very free discussion of the matter there has been no nearer notice reached than when the conferences began.

The attitude of the chairman, Mr. Voorhees, however, gave the silver men the impression that little hope for he said that he would vote to report favorably the repeal bill, provided there was a declaration coupled with it declaring for bimetallism.

Will Be a Bimetallic Clause.

The bill, when reported, will contain such a declaration, and the vote by which it will be reported is estimated by members of the committee as 8 to 5, the minority consisting of Senators Harris, Vest, Vance, Jones of Arkansas and Jones of Nevada.

When the committee adjourned, all had been settled upon the exact form of the wordage of the bill, and particularly the language of the declaration in favor of bimetallism. It was hoped that this would be reported out of the committee this morning and the bill reported. When it is reported, the chairman will ask that a day be fixed for the taking of the vote, and the suggestion will be made that this day be almost immediately after the conclusion of the vote in the house.

A member of the committee opposed to the bill declared at dinner that he believed the bill would carry if it could be brought to a vote and that there were 36 Republicans and 18 Democrats who would vote for the bill, non-committal and four others who might be considered in the same column.

Dreary Session of the Senate.

Contrary to general expectation, neither the bill to allow national banks to issue notes to the par value of their bonds deposited to secure circulation nor any other financial measure came up in the senate. The only new proposition in that direction was an amendment offered by Mr. Gorman of Maryland to the bank circulation bill, prohibiting national banks from withdrawing circulation without a previous 60 days' notice to the comptroller of the currency and without the approval of the secretary of the treasury and limiting the aggregate amount of such withdrawals to $8,000,000 within any calendar month.

Some two hours' time was consumed in a dreary discussion of the bill to admit Mantana to the seat in the senate under an appointment from the governor of Montana, and by unanimous consent the vote on that question was fixed for 5 p. m. next Monday.

Just before the adjournment the joint resolution for the payment of mileage for the present congress came up and was passed after an energetic protest against it by Mr. Vest of Missouri.

The session of the house was an interesting one. But three speeches were made. The first, which was delivered by Mr. Daniel of New York, was addressed to rather empty benches, the members having retired in favor of unconditional repeal were well expressed.

Then came Mr. Cooper, a Democrat from Florida, and he, too, evidently took the role of the first battalion of the young orators of the house. His speech was witty and will put together, but he rather surprised his southern colleagues by placing himself squarely in opposition to the free coinage of silver and in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law.

Mr. Goldzier of Illinois closed the debate on the same line, and then the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late J. Logan Chipman of Michigan.

SAVED BY A CAT.

A Plot to Cause a Terrible Explosion Luckily Discovered.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 18.—What is thought to have been a dastardly attempt to destroy the extensive works of the Celluloid Manufacturing company was made, and that it did not succeed is due to the fright experienced by a cat in a strange place.

The attempt was made in the scrap room on the Ashbridge side, where the celluloid shavings and scraps are sent to be worked over and some goods in course of manufacture are kept. In this room about eight men are generally employed, but owing to trade dullness only one was in the scrap room. He heard something fall from a shelf about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Turning quickly, he saw a cat spring from the shelf and scurry through an open window into Ashbridge street. He started to restore a pasteboard box which had been knocked from the shelf by the fleeing stranger, and on picking it up found that it contained a candle and a quantity of inflammable cotton material. The candle had apparently been burning about an hour. It was still lighted, and, strange as it may seem, had not ignited the other contents of the box. The workman extinguished the flame. Had the stuff in the box begun to blaze and a single spark escaped into the scrap room, nothing could have averted an explosion and great disaster to life and property.

TREASURES IN THE MUD.

A Negro Digs Up Rings, Watches and Other Jewels.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 18.—Joseph Dozier, a negro, stubbed his toe in the river mud at Old Planters' plantation, six miles below the city. He was brought to light a bright, shining object—a gold ring. Digging in the mud, he discovered 11 other gold and diamond rings, some gold watches, chains, locks, earrings and other trinkets. The news was circulated among the negroes on neighboring plantations, and several came to the scene.

Over 60 more gold, diamond, amethyst and other rings were found, a dozen lockets and as many earrings. About 100 pieces of jewelry were found in all.

Dozier informed the police, and several detectives were sent to the scene to investigate. The treasure was turned over to them. The theory of the police is that the jewelry was dropped by burglars by accident or when pursued, and it sank in the mud. It is not impossible, as the jewelry is of recent fashion, that burglars have been numerous here of late.

WILL TRY RAINMAKING.

Connecticut Tobacco Growers Will Bombard the Clouds.

HARTFORD, Aug. 18.—The continued dry weather in this section, which is shriveling up the tobacco crop on the plains between North Bloomfield and Tariffville, has stimulated the farmers to an attempt at rainmaking after Western methods.

A rainmakers' association has been formed, and a farmer of North Bloomfield has decided to conduct the experiment.

He has bought in this city 55 balloons, each 30 inches in circumference. A half pound dynamite cartridge will be attached to each balloon and exploded by a five minute fuse at an altitude of about one-half mile. The balloons are to be sent up in succession. The experiment is to be tried today unless the light showers which have just fallen develop into a heavy rainfall.

Arata Was a Counterfeiter.

DENVER, Aug. 18.—It transpires that Dan Arata, who brutally murdered Grand Army Veteran Lightfoot a few weeks ago and was lynched in a highly sensational manner in this city, was chief and boss of a gang of expert Italian counterfeiters. United States Secret Agent Waller, assisted by a couple of city detectives, unearthed a box containing $2,500 in counterfeit $5 bills in the rear of Arata's saloon. The whereabouts of the remainder of the gang is known, and several arrests will be made soon.

Justice Blatchford's Will.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The will of Justice Samuel Blatchford of the supreme court bench was filed for probate. He leaves $100,000 to Mrs. Rachel Bliss Beckwith of New Haven. She is a daughter of Rev. Henry Hunter. Cordelia F. Greene of Milford, Mass., gets $20,000. His widow, Caroline Phelps Blatchford, gets his furniture and the income of half his estate for life. Samuel A. Blatchford, his son, gets the copyright of his books, valued at $2,000, and half of the residuary estate absolutely, valued at $173,000.

Says There Was Fraud in the Failure.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Lawyer Curtis H. Remy caused a sensation at a meeting of the creditors of the James H. Walker company of Chicago at the Merchants' club in Leonard street on Saturday, that there had been fraud connected with the failure. The committee will go at once into an investigation and will advise as to what course should be pursued. A meeting will be held this afternoon at the Merchants' club.

Bold Burglary at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 18.—The residence of Mr. John W Ellis of New York, on Bellevue avenue, was entered, and all of the valuable jewelry of Mrs. Hoffman, Mr. Ellis' daughter, was taken, the haul amounting to several thousands of dollars. The jewelry was in Mrs. Hoffman's room and included watches, necklaces and diamonds.

A Southwestern Relief Convention.

TOPEKA, Aug. 18.—A petition signed by state officers and state house employees will serve to get Governor Stone of Mississippi taking him to call a convention of the governors and delegates from each state west of the Mississippi river and south of the Ohio. The object of the convention is what shall be done for the mutual relief of the people.

An Aged Couple Murdered.

CHEROKEE, Ia., Aug. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Martei Shultz, an aged couple living on a farm in Pilot township in Cherokee county, were foully murdered. They had concealed about the house about $1,000, and of this the murderers secured only $250.

CALLS IT A CHALLENGE.

Mr. Bache Thinks Mr. Tull Wants to Fight a Duel.

SO HE WILL CAUSE HIS ARREST

A Descendant of Benjamin Franklin and a Prominent Philadelphia Lawyer Have an Amusing Wrangle About a Dog Down at Asbury Park.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 18.—Great big, tawny Toby, as gentle a St. Bernard as ever drew breath, has involved his master, Rene Bache, in a world of trouble. Mr. Bache is as peaceful in his manner as Toby himself and far less formidable in appearance. He is usually able to curl his anger, but he is so fond of his dog that he is willing to go to any length to protect the animal from harm.

Toby's life was threatened, and Mr. Bache so far forgot himself that he said he could understand why Joseph L. Tull could not gain admission to the inner circles of Philadelphia society. The insult elicited Mr. Tull to that point that he made various threats of violence and intimated his desire to fight a duel.

The full power of Mr. Bache's remark is not readily apparent to a New Yorker. A Philadelphian, however, must see that it was a grievous insult, for which there must have been a provocation.

He Has a Family Tree.

Mr. Bache, who comes of good Philadelphia stock, is now a Washington newspaper correspondent. His great grandmother was the only daughter of Benjamin Franklin. His wife is also a native of Philadelphia, and her great grandfather, Charles Biddle, was vice president of the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania in revolutionary days when Franklin was president of that body.

The Baches have been spending a few weeks at the Lodore, in Seventh avenue, Asbury Park, next door to Mr. Tull's handsome cottage.

This dog Toby has been the pet and admiration of the beach. Mr. Tull and his dog Frank have not entertained this general favorable view of Toby. Frank is small but aggressive in disposition. On making the acquaintance of Toby, Frank attacked the St. Bernard. This was repeated two or three times, and Toby became tired.

Benevolent, like most St. Bernards, he has never hurt the little dog, but has contented himself with sitting upon Frank for a minute or two in order to give Frank time for reflection on the folly of assailing an animal so greatly his superior in point of size.

But Mr. Tull has another grievance against Toby. Some plants in a large flower bed in front of his house were trampled a fortnight ago. His coachman declared Toby was the offender. Having no positive evidence to disprove the charge, Mr. Bache made a profuse apology to Mrs. Tull, saying he would take care that such a thing should not happen again. This did not satisfy Mr. Tull apparently, as Mr. Bache heard he had threatened to kill Toby and make matters unpleasant for Toby's master.

Toby's Narrow Escape.

Toby went across the street in front of the Lodore. He was not near Mr. Tull's house. Mr. Tull's colored coachman went across the street with Frank at the same time. Toby took no notice of the man or dog.

Mr. Tull, who was sitting on his front porch, jumped up and yelled to the coachman: "Smash the beast's head with a brick! Smash him, I say!"

The colored man picked up a brick and was about to brain Toby, when the tragedy was prevented by some ladies who ran out of the Lodore. Mr. Bache, hearing Mr. Tull's shouts, ran out into the street and told Mr. Tull to mind his own business and leave Toby alone. Mr. Tull replied with epithets and threats. Mr. Bache, forgetting the pacific maxims of his ancestor, Poor Richard, declared that he could readily understand why Mr. Tull and his family were not admitted to certain exclusive circles of Philadelphia society.

Mr. Tull is a rich and successful lawyer. He was so angry that he came near having an apoplectic fit. The dispute came temporarily to a pause at this point.

Mr. Bache started toward the beach, accompanied by his wife 10 minutes later. They had got a block away when Mr. Tull confronted them.

The lawyer proceeded to assail the newspaper man with vituperative language, incidentally threatening various kinds of violence and stating that he would knock Mr. Bache's head off. As it is by means of his head that Mr. Bache earns a living, he felt reluctant to have it knocked off. Squaring a la Corbett, he responded to Mr. Tull's remark by saying he was ready to fight him then and there, but Mr. Tull did not respond to the invitation. Mr. Tull then made some remarks which Mr. Bache construed as a challenge to mortal combat. The lawyer then walked away. Mr. Bache jumped on a trolley car and went to the office of Justice Borden. He issued a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Tull, which was duly served. It will be sought to put Mr. Tull under bonds to keep the peace.

A Deputy Sheriff Sued.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 18.—W. L. Horn of Wallingford, manufacturer of cold distilled brandy, brought suit against Deputy Sheriff Roger S. Austin of Wallingford and D. S. Williams of Meriden, claiming $10,000 for alleged false imprisonment, malicious prosecution and slander.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SOME SIMPLE BUT VERY USEFUL RULES FOR WASHDAY.

A Question of Propriety—Plain Talk For Alleged Housewives—Hygiene and Beauty—Well Dressed Frenchwomen—Too Much Housekeeping.

Here are a few rules that will lighten the drudgery of washing and ironing:

Put the clothes to soak over night in good soapsuds, putting each table and bed linen in a separate tub from the wearing apparel.

Rain water is soft, the best for washing, and it is easier to dip water from barrels or tubs than it is to pump or "draw" it.

On washday begin work early in the morning. Rub the clothes out of the water in which they are soaked, using a scrubboard. The soaking does away with much labor; rub only the parts of each garment that show soil.

Boil in suspends. Should any articles be much soiled, save them for the last, and add an extra bit of soap and a little kerosene to the boiling water. Rinse through two waters. To the second add a little bluing before putting the clothes in.

A wringer should be used if possible. If not, it will require two pairs of hands to wring the clothes sufficiently dry.

On a bright day the towels, napkins and small pieces will dry very quickly. While they are still a little damp take from the line and fold ready for ironing. The tablecloths and sheets will iron much more easily if folded smoothly and not allowed to wrinkle. Table linen requires no starch, but will be smooth and glossy if treated this way.

Starch the garments that require it the day they are washed and while they are still a little damp. Leaving undergarments unstarched is no sacrifice of neatness or daintiness, and they are really much more comfortable—some think more healthful.

For ironing, have a bright fire of such wood as will make a clean coals and little ashes. If you are so situated that it is more convenient to heat irons on the cooking stove, remove the fire pot over the firebox, put on the large griddle and set the smoothing irons in it. They will heat quicker, and it will save your stove and time.

As a last suggestion, no less practical than the foregoing, I would say do it all with cheerfulness, for a merry heart lightens labor.—Woman's Work.

A Question of Propriety.

A curious question of propriety often comes up among women which neither conventionality nor sentiment has ever wholly settled to everybody's satisfaction—that is, the line to be drawn in the sending of formal invitations to people who have recently gone into mourning. Opinion and argument go two different ways. From one point of view it is judged that to send cards to gay functions shows a lack of sympathy with the sorrow of one's friend and is as well a direct intrusion upon it. On the other hand, to ignore the names in black on one's list is, of course, to leave open the doubt that, because temporarily withdrawn from gayety, they have been forgotten. Moreover, it must be admitted that in many cases mourning is largely a matter of form This is neither regrettable nor, as it may seem on the face, heartless.

Respect for the dead is a desirable thing, even when a deeper thing is impossible. And admitting the case of those who feel most deeply, there really seems no lack of delicacy in including them in one's thought with an invitation, which must stand, if interpreted in the kindest sense, as only a remembrance. The recognition of mourning is something that no doubt will come to pass in due time. There will be less unmeaning crape worn, but until this end is accomplished and the sign of woe are reserved entirely for those whose affliction is beyond all casual comfort or interests—to be held in the mind of friends even at the inauguration of their merrymaking—will seem to many not only proper but good.

Speaking of etiquette in this particular line, a word is likely to the spirits in which weddingsare often taken. As a usual rule people in mourning classify them with any social doing—balls, dinners, teas —and decline to be present on the same theory of propriety. Of the wedding breakfast or the wedding reception, this is indeed possible, but concerning the marriage ceremony itself, whether held in a church or a house, reason appears somewhat at fault when it is treated on the same grounds with dancing a german.—Boston Transcript.

Plain Talk For Alleged Housewives.

It may well be asked with impatient curiosity what the solitary advantage is which factory work possesses over housework, and the answer is briefly this: It is faithfully, thoroughly, patiently taught for men as masters have that priceless precision of knowledge which inspires confidence, commands respect and raises the spirit of hope and emulation to the highest degree. In the factory the first step taken with raw hands is to show them an exact sample of their work.

No knowledge is taken for granted; nothing is trusted to luck; they are hardened with no responsibility. Every stage of process is conscientiously taught by practical lessons. A manufacturer wants 50 tuckers, corders, lace-workers, bronze operatops. He does not wring his hands, tear his hair and set up a wail—for all the neighborhood—that may be heard the length and breadth of the land because of the scarcity of such workers. If they are not to be had already trained, he takes the women who come in answer to his call—and it is to be observed that they do come when he summons them —and trains them, and does the thing is done.

Only a woman would expect a rosy cheeked girl who dug potatoes and ran barefoot in Ireland to handle her fine china, wash and iron her fine linen and cook her steak to a turn; and only a woman would wonder and weep where rack and ruin, dyspepsia and discomfort exist, as they rightfully came upon her. To women who want such helpers it may be said they will not come to you till you can teach them, and you cannot teach them what you do not know yourselves, the finest of all arts, the art of housewifery.—London Standard.

Hygiene and Beauty.

There are few things that women will not do or endure to attain the beauty which is at best only skin deep, except indeed the one thing needful, and that is to live hygienically. Nothing is so truly beautiful as the rounded outlines and brilliant glow of health. It is only in novels that a heroine can be beautiful after sleepless nights and days of suffering. The pensive languor, the lily paleness and the violet circles under the orbs of brown or blue, as the case may be, become in reality listless inertia, a sallow, pasty complexion and dull, red lidded eyes, to which are often added the utterly unbeautiful red nose, for lack of exercise and healthful appetite and sound, recreating sleep bring these things to pass with terrible certainty.

The Lancet, realizing that no such inadvisable recommendation of a deadly drug could have been devised as that of its power to increase personal beauty, has recently raised a warning note against the mischievous circulation of the statement that arsenic in small doses is good for the complexion. It is evident on the face of it that a substance which chemists and experts have long been trying to eliminate from wall papers and the manufacture of fabrics must be proportionately more evil in its effects on the human system when taken directly into the stomach.

"There is another thing I am advised," says The Lancet, "do so at their peril. As far as they are able, however, it will be the duty of medical men to warn the public against this pernicious practice, which is only too likely to be carried on secretly. It is not without reason that we speak thus potentially and urge practitioners to be on the qui vive in anomalous or obscure cases."

Well Dressed Frenchwomen.

The charm of a well dressed French woman's attire lies in three elements, the first being perfect taste, the second a due regard to the charms of fashion and the third appropriateness to the time and occasion for which the whole group is arranged. You will never find your genuine Parisienne going to an evening entertainment in a tailor made cloth suit, or starting on a journey (as I have seen a British matron in the act of doing) in a soiled ball dress of pale colored silk, worn under a jacket in rough, dark cloth, or donning on a similar occasion a velvet costume and diamond earrings. And in no class in France is this fitness of attire more manifest than among the servants. Your cook and your chambermaid will think no more of copying your best gowns, or of surreptitiously taking a wear out of your last season's cloaks and dresses, than they would think of executing a fancy dance in your drawing room.

They are very careful to get themselves up neatly and trimly of a holiday, but the great difference of their garb on such occasions from their ordinary working day attire lies principally in the assumption of a bonnet. If you send your maid out on an errand, she disdains to cover her head except in very cold weather, when she will probably tie on a kerchief to cover her ears and throat in a black knitted scarf or shawl. Also she will put on a clean white apron, and so arrayed she feels herself altogether respectably dressed. On Sundays and fete days she may indulge, if she be a very dressy personage, in a black net veil and a pair of the discarded kid gloves of her mistress, after the fashion she likes a neat umbrella or a sun umbrella.—Lucy Hooper in Home Journal.

Too Much Housekeeping.

Our housekeepers must have relief, but that relief can only come when we as object ourselves and our style of living to far simpler methods than those which now prevail in our homes. Domestic expenses are tricky things; they increase almost imperceptibly. But therein lies their greatest danger. Addition is easier than subtraction. A luxury soon becomes a necessity. Too many of us know where to begin, too few of us where to stop. But all this time our women are wearing themselves out by the frightful wear and tear of housekeeping on a scale which compels all too many to live in false positions. No matter how much a man may desire everything comfortable in a home, he values health and happiness of his wife above all things. If he doesn't, he isn't a man.

I concede that men are, in a measure, to blame for this excessive housekeeping. Many a man well intentioned brings burdens upon his wife because he doesn't understand what he is doing. And our women are at fault here as well. A wife should not silently assume burdens which in her heart she feels incapable of carrying out. No matter how much she may love her husband, that affection is ill directed that allows a woman to carry her beyond her physical resources, even in the noblest resolve or for the highest motive.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Growth During the Night.

It is a curious fact that night is the time which nature utilizes for growth. Plants grow much more in the night than in the daytime, as can be proved any time by measurement. Measure a vine at night, then measure it again in the morning and the next night, and it will be found that the night growth is two or three times that accomplished during the day. During the day the plant is busy in gathering nourishment from various sources, and during the night this raw material is assimilated into the plant life.

The same fact is true of the animal creation. Children grow more rapidly during the night. In the daytime, while the child is awake, it is active. The system is busy disposing of the wastes consequent on this activity, but during sleep the system is free to extend its operations beyond the mere replacing of worn out particles; hence the rapid growth.

This is why so many invalids need so much rest and sleep. The system has been taxed for years by reason of its ability to repair the tissues, and hence the organism has become worn and disabled from the accumulation of waste products, and disease has resulted.—Good Health.

A Neat Way to Eat an Orange.

On board ship a unique way is always a popular feature of luncheon. There they take an orange, and with a very sharp knife cut off a slice of skin across the top. This is placed below the orange and skewered by a fork into position. Holding the fork in the left hand the knife cuts down the peeling, which indifferently falls off or hangs down.

Then the same knife cuts the juicy meat thus left exposed into small portions, which are conveyed on the point of the blade to the mouth—one of the cases on record where a knife enters the mouth by common consent of the fashionable world. The small quantity of juice that flows down falls on the false bottom of the orange, and thus the hand is protected. The orange never eats better than in this way, and it is also, as may be observed, freed from all untidiness.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Tomatoes Stuffed and Baked.

Choose some round, well shaped and very ripe tomatoes, cut a round off the stalk end of each, so as to be able to scoop out the interior without splitting the tomato. Put what you have taken out into a saucepan, with a little butter, some chopped parsley, onions, a wee bit of garlic, salt, pepper and let it reduce over the fire, then pass through a sieve. Mix in a little breadcrumb previously soaked in stock to give consistency, some butter and the yolks of two eggs. Put the tomatoes in a dish that will stand the fire, with a little butter in it. Fill them with the above mixture, strew some fried and brown bread crumbs over, put a little butter on the top of each and place the dish in the oven for about 10 or 15 minutes.

Rubber Toys, Safe and Useful.

Rubber articles that float in water and are elastic and soft are harmless.

Black rubber dolls that are colored throughout the mass and the material of which sinks in water contain lead and are dangerous.

Red and brown rubbers contain antimonic sulphide, and when colored throughout the mass are not dangerous, as the testimony does not dissolve in the saliva or in milk.

Gray rubber contains zinc oxide and is dangerous in any articles likely to be put into the mouth.

Rubber articles colored on the surface only are unsafe.—Medical News.

She Examines Patents.

Mrs. Frances R. Lybrand of Ohio has been on the examiners' corps in the civil engineering department of the patent office at Washington for about 10 years. Railways are her specialty, and she has the annual task of passing upon about 8,000 alleged inventions, of which a dozen may perhaps be practicable. Nevertheless she likes the work and says it is fascinating, and that not a day passes but her knowledge is broadened and her mind improved. She is a majestic looking woman, with a force of character that would enable her to construct a railroad, if need were, and she has the knowledge to do it.—Boston Woman's Journal.

A Daughter of John Brown.

Ruth Brown Thompson, oldest daughter of John Brown of Harper's Ferry fame, is living on a small farm near Pasadena, Cal. She is a woman under medium height, perhaps 70 years of age or more, but she does not show her age and looks younger. Her skin is soft and white as a girl's, and her mild blue eyes are full of expression. A white mull cap, with a frill of lace about the front, crowns her head of restful silver hair, like a little gray, and a knot of white at the throat relieves her simple gown of black. She has been a woman of vigorous constitution, but is somewhat broken in health from nervous trouble.

The Work of a Clever Woman.

Of course all New Yorkers do not need to be told, but sightseers in the city may not know that the first stained glass window ever designed by a woman is in Grace church. It is well worth a visit from a stranger or resident, not only for this fact, but as well for its wonderful beauty of design and color. Its subject is "Jacob's Dream," and its author is the Miss Tillinghast whose attractive studio in Washington square, whose $30,000 tapestries for Mr. Vanderbilt and whose other equally remunerative and artistic achievements have won her deserved honor both in this country and abroad.—New York Times.

Comfort For Some Girls.

Here is a crumb of comfort for those whose wardrobe is limited to a few becoming gowns only. A young lady recently confided the following comments to his neighbor at dinner the other evening: "I do like a woman who sticks to one or two becoming dresses. She and her dress then become identified with each other, and one gets a distinct idea of a girl in one's mind. But if she is one day in blue and another in yellow and the next in red she loses individuality of the wearer is quite subservient to that of the gown, and it is just like looking at so many fashion plates or a kaleidoscope."—Exchange.

Destroying Insects.

Insects may be destroyed with hot alum. Put it in hot water and let it boil until the alum is dissolved. Apply hot, with a brush, and all creeping things are instantly destroyed without danger to human life or injury to property.

To destroy ants soak pieces of sponge in sugar and water and place on the shelves. When the sponges are filled with ants, which will be in about an hour, drop them into a bucket of boiling water.

Royal Women Who Are Deaf.

The Princess of Wales, who is so deaf that she hears nothing unless it is loudly shouted into her ear, has inherited this unfortunate affliction from her mother, the queen of Denmark, who has for many years been stone deaf. The defect of hearing prevents the latter from taking part in any society which has, in a slight degree, been inherited by Princess Maud, who is constantly troubled with a relaxed or swollen throat.

The Duchess of Sutherland.

The dowager Duchess of Sutherland can claim a distinction other than that of her recent unpleasant experience in Holloway, for she is one of the few women who have seats on the directorate board of a public company. Report has it that she displays very considerable ability in the management of a coal mine owned by a company of which she is a self appointed director.—Ladies' Pictorial.

Cleaning Cooking Utensils.

The European way of cleaning cooking utensils is one of the practices American would improve upon in order to republican institutions. The tins and pans are boiled in strong soda and water, then scoured with a solution of oxalic acid and fine sand and finally rinsed with clear water. The result is a delicious cleanliness and a shining exterior.—Good Housekeeping.

A Secret About Scrambled Eggs.

The secret of scrambled eggs is not to beat them before cooking, to have a hot skillet and to take them off while they are yet very soft. They cook a half minute after they are taken off, which of a young cook is not allow for. A dash of lemon juice just as they are going to the table in a hot dish is an addition.

Creating Ladies Instead of Women.

"The purpose of today," said Mrs. Burton Harrison, "don't trouble themselves to train up wives for the rank and file of our honest gentlemen. They create fine ladies and look about for some one to take the expense of them off their hands." And then we wonder at results!

The wife of John R. Drexel, one of the sons of the late Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia, is said to be the most beautiful woman in the Quaker City. She is tall, slender and exquisitely graceful, with brunette brilliancy of coloring. Before her marriage she was a Miss Troth.

Jane Hading, the French actress, is said to be more beautiful off the stage than on. She almost always wears black on the street, having the boldly quiet self aware that it sets off her wonderful red gold hair, languishing eyes and pale, mobile face advantageously.

An excellent wash for a child's hair is a raw egg broken into a saucer and slightly beaten. Apply with a piece of flannel. This should be used about once a week, and the results will be most satisfactory.

Try cleaning oil paintings with a sponge dipped in beer (warmed), and when dry washing with a solution of gum dragon in pure water.

Little Johnny Was All Right.

Mrs. Terwilliger had the misfortune to occupy the flat directly underneath the Brown's, and every day she was driven to the verge of distraction by the noise made by little Johnny. She was just on the point of sending a scathing note to the new Mrs. Brown, who was engaged in tying a piece of crape on her doorknob.

"Goodness gracious!" she exclaimed. "Is there a death in your family?"

"Yes, my dear," sobbed Mrs. Brown. "Is is my poor old grandmother."

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

Mr. Robert M. Fountain Elected to Fill the Unexpired Term of Mr. Connolly—Mr. Needham Explains the Republicans' Position and Mayor Saunders Speaks for His Side—Mr. Neal Leaves the Room—Assessor's Books Examined.

The Borough Council met in adjourned session last night, all the members being present except Mr. Howell. As Clerk Vetterlein was absent, Mr. Newton B. Smalley was elected clerk pro tem.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution that the Council proceed to the election of a Councilman to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Connolly. The resolution was seconded by Mr. Edwards.

MR. NEAL GOES OFF MAD.

Mr. Neal said that as there was a movement on foot to take the right to fill each vacancy away from the Democratic members, he thereby gave notice that he would decline to remain present. In concluding, he said: "I don't see how any man can follow the dictates of his own conscience and take such action." As the chair entertained the resolution, Mr. Neal left the room. The resolution was then adopted.

MR. NEEDHAM TAKES THE FLOOR.

Mr. Needham then moved that Mr. Robert M. Fountain be elected to fill the vacancy in the Council. In making the nomination Mr. Needham said he wished to speak a few words in regard to the use of Mr. Fountain's name. He said: "I want to say that it was with great reluctance that Mr. Fountain consented to the use of his name. Believing that it was the desire of a majority of the citizens in the district in which he lives to have him represent them, we finally prevailed upon him to accept. He received at the last election more votes in the second district than any other man in the district. Mr. Fountain accepted although sacrificing time and in the face of slurs which have been said against him in connection with the office. Objection has also been made by the Democrats to the filling of a Democrat's place with a Republican. I wonder if Grover Cleveland said, when there is a Chief Justice vacancy to fill, 'Was he a Democrat or a Republican?' If a Republican Senator fails, and a man is to be put in his place, is the question asked by the majority, 'Was he a Democrat or a Republican?' This Council worked in the harmony with the Democrats in the majority. I know of no objection to their actions or of the manner in which they have conducted public business. The Republican minority had the utmost confidence in them. We are not doing anything to which the Democrats, can, in my estimation, take exception."

MAYOR SAUNDERS EXPLAINS SOMETHING.

As there were no further remarks the Mayor called Mr. Hummer to the chair, while he took the floor. He said:

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Council:—I will endeavor to speak as courteous as I can. Mr. Needham do you intend to change any salaried officer by this change?"

Mr. Needham replied that he would be the last man in the world to turn a man out of office unless he gave some dissatisfaction.

The Mayor then asked Messrs. Edwards and Hummer the same question. The former replied that he would "sooner cut off his right hand than turn it to anything 'wrong' while the latter answered in the same strain.

The Mayor then continued his address to Council, in which he said: "In taking the course assumed by the Republicans one naturally looks, first, for cause for taking the power away from the Democratic members of Council. The Democrats of the Borough have elected a majority in their body. Having placed men in office to represent the party in power it is my duty to defend them for the party. If it is not the intention of the Republicans to make a change in the salaried officers, we look for a cause for the change. What have the Democrats done to deserve such treatment? Why is it, I ask over again, that the minority seek to take control of Council? I take the entire responsibility for the resignation of Mr. Connolly. It was within my power or any one of the Council not to accept it. We could have waited for another meeting. But I thought it unnecessary, as there had been no former instance and part of the Republicans to take advantage. What made me take the action I did on Mr. Connollys resignation was that I thought there would be no objection to electing a Democrat in his place. When I found it necessary to go to Europe last Summer, I fully decided at first to resign. I had a talk with Mr. Needham about the matter and he said it would be only fair to elect a Democrat in my place. Knowing that was the position with the Republicans with the Democrats would elect a Democrat after Mr. Connolly resigned, I thought best to accept his resignation, supposing that if Mr. Needham would vote for a Democratic Mayor he would not change when it came to electing a Councilman. When I received Mr. Connolly's resignation I asked Mr. Needham if he would consent to postponement of the election of a successor. He declined to vote in favor of a postponement, and said to me, 'You are at liberty, Mr. Mayor, to go away from the meeting and leave us without a quorum.' In view of the position taken by the Republicans I determined to take the action I did. I did what I knew can be done. I took you by surprise. I even surprised my colleague, Mr. Neal, who had no idea of my intention. I said "If there is no objection," I passed," Council is adjourned". A presiding officer presumes the consent of the Council and has a perfect right to put it in that way. Congress is never adjourned by motion, but by smaller bodies, such as lodges, it is a common practice to adjourn by motion.

"If it is not your intention to change the salaried officers, what are you after? I know of no transaction on our part to produce such actions. I believe had I gone to Mr. Hummer he would have granted a week's adjournment. You tell me it is not your intention to put out the salaried officers. If I thought for a moment you wanted to take the bread and butter out of any human being's mouth I would put on my hat and walk out. No man can say I am actuated to act in this Council and defy any act of a Republican majority. The laws of this nation, thank God, are better than all other countries The people say who shall represent them. The people decide who they want in office.

"When I was absent the Republican majority passed a resolution creating a monopoly in this Borough, by ordering the electric light poles of the Plainfield Company out of the borough. Not that I have anything against the gentlemen and the proper authorities should see that the law is enforced.

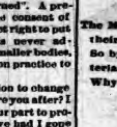
A DEAD LETTER LAW.

NO ATTEMPT MADE TO KEEP SIDEWALKS CLEARED.

The Main Streets of Plainfield Have their Narrow Sidewalks Made More So by Barrels, Boxes, Building Material and Litter of All Kinds—Why is it the Law is not Enforced?



WALK along the business portion of the main streets of Plainfield is not a pleasure. The sidewalks at best are too narrow, all this fault is made worse by the utter disregard, by a few merchants, of the law regarding blockading sidewalks. The Street Commissioner is also to blame for not enforcing the law.

There have been many complaints made. On West Front street some merchants brought to pay rent for the sidewalks. The public, according to their way of thinking, seem to have no rights they are bound to respect.

This climbing over fruit, barrels, boxes, building material, and dodging hanging objects is a first class nuisance and the proper authorities should see that the law is enforced.

A space hardly a foot and a half wide was all one merchant condescended to leave clear for pedestrians in front of his store one day this week.

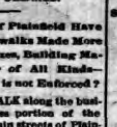
CHICAGO AND THE FAIR

THE COUPONS COMING BY SQUADS.

Several Hours Work Counting and Filing the Daily Shower of Votes for the Firemen.—Saltzman has 106 Votes Toward Nine Thousand To-day.



FOR the "Wild and Woolly West" round trip with all the trimmings, if you please," for Mr. Winning Fireman.

The votes come in the office daily like the dust which the street cars sometimes stir up—in quantities. They come by mail, male and female, big boy and little boy. It is work to count them and file them away.

Mr. Saltzman leads to-day with over 8,000 votes.

A curious phase of the contest has appeared. Contestants who do not expect to win the prize are having a "contest within a contest" to out do each other. Many have wagered that more votes will be credited to their names at the finish than will be counted for some other competitor now almost even in the race.

August 30 is the date for the winner. Particulars of the trip on page two.

A Sad Affliction.

Master Bertie Van Fleet who lives with his parents in squalid condition, in an old house on Somerset street, has been seriously ill for several weeks with typhoid malarial fever. During his ill ness the parents, which are none too substantial means of a wealthy man named Hillman, is being moved to make room for extensive modern improvements which the present owner, ex-Sheriff Coddington, is making.

The lyvalid is an unusually handsome lad, about thirteen years old, and a striking contrast to his surroundings. Until recently he has been suffering uncomplainingly, though his bed, a couch hardly deserving of the name, was minus mattress or blanket. One chair composed the furniture of the room.

Some kind neighbors, learning of the circumstances, called and did much for his comfort by presenting him with a cot, warm blankets and bed clothing. They also gave him cooling dainties to alleviate his fever, and flowers to brighten his surroundings. The boy's parent's, though poor, are kind to him, and he now shows symptoms of getting better.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Paradise of Bicyclists.

It is France, because France has the best roads of any country in the world. They were planned originally by the first Napoleon for military purposes, and the third Napoleon completed them. So perfect was the system as first laid out that few new roads are now necessary. All that is required is to keep in order those already built.

It is not so difficult to make a good road in France as in America for two reasons. One is that our hard freezing in winter upturns a roadbed with much more violence than in the mild climate of France. The other is the cheapness of labor there. Then, too, farmers persist here in using narrow tires to their wagons. In France all the heavy hauling wagons and farm produce carts must have by law tires from 3 to 10 inches wide. Thus a heavy wagon helps to roll a roadbed and make it smooth instead of cutting it into a rut.

To build a good road costs in France an average of $10,000 a mile. The annual repair of the highway afterward is no more than $7 per mile. This is because the road was so perfectly built in the beginning and also because labor is cheap. On ordinary ground a stone costing is usually placed directly upon the road. In loose and washy soil it is customary to dig down and cover the roadbed first with a depth of 10 to 12 inches of sand, gravel or rough stone. Above this is placed the costing of fine small, broken stone, which constitutes the mainstay of the track. No stone is allowed to go upon this upper layer that will not pass through a ring 2½ inches in diameter. The top costing of broken stone is 7 inches thick. Upon it is sprinkled a costing of clay or earth thick enough to fill in the interstices of the stone. The whole is then rolled and crushed with a heavy machine till the urfinted pesition to thog in the Allen street hall. One wild looking man spoke in part as follows at the Allen street hall:

Remember Chicago, where they hanged men? Why? Because they were hungry! Yesterday the dirty police arrested men. Why? Because they were hungry! But he calm.

If you are not and attempt to get what you want, the police will come here and turn the hose on you, they say.

A Parade on Fifth Avenue Suggested.

Let us parade up Fifth avenue and show those rich people how hungry we are. They have money for their luxuries. My wife and four wife have had no breakfast for three days.

"Do not fly the next time," exclaimed an excited Pole, "but when the dirty police come at you the next time resist them with all your might. Stand firm and meet them, and do not fly, but go after them."

A committee was appointed to rent a larger hall or meeting place on the east side and to report as soon as possible upon the advisability of holding a parade of unemployed men in the districts of New York populated principally by the wealthy classes. Another committee was appointed to report upon the most feasible plan for procuring bread for the hungry unemployed.

At an earlier meeting of "reds" held in the same place the principal spokesman was one Hlunk, an anarchist of the same stripe as Emma Goldman. He denounced the New York press in violent terms for opposing the projected meeting of the so called unemployed Tuesday in Union square tonight, for which 10,000 circulars have been issued and scattered broadcast through the down town districts.

Conference of Trades Unions.

A much milder assemblage was the conference of trades unions composed of members of the Central Labor ederation, the Socialist Labor party and the United Hebrew trades, which was held in the New York Labor lyceum, 64 East Fourth street. Ernest Bohn was elected chairman. Speeches were made in German and Hebrew.

An offer of 150 free dinner tickets made by a restaurant keeper was accepted, and it was decided to give the tickets to the unions whose members were unemployed. The disturbance which took place among the unemployed on the east side on Thursday was deplored and deprecated.

Henry Glynn opposed the setting aside of a demonstration by the unemployed for fear, as he said, that the police should prove as brutal as the Chicago police. They were, he added, peaceful citizens, and if workingmen could hold demonstrations in monarchical London he did not know why they should be afraid to do so in New York.

On Henry Glynn's motion a committee of 10 was appointed to arrange for a monster mass meeting of unemployed, to be held in Union square at an early date; also to act permanently for the purpose of arranging discussions and to engage a hall for a meeting to be held at the beginning of the week, the exact date to be advertised. The conference then adjourned.

Unemployed Parade In the Coke Fields.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 19.—Two thousands of the workmen in the Connellsville coke region will have a big demonstration and parade today. The destitution among these men is something fearful, hundreds of families being on the verge of starvation. Souphouses are to be opened at McKeesport to feed the unemployed.

Buffalo's Idle Army Desperate.

BUFFALO, Aug. 19.—The thousands of unemployed men in this city are demanding work and threaten insurrection if they are not provided with means for supporting themselves and their families.

Meredith Will Appeal.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—In all probability an appeal will be taken from the decision of Judge Barnard of the supreme court declaring Edward Meredith insane to the court of appeals.

Judge Stewart Declines.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Aug. 19.—Judge John Stewart declines to allow his name to be presented at the coming Republican state convention for judge of the supreme court.

Prize Fight at the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—A brutal prize fight was surreptitiously held in the stock pavilion at the World's Fair. Eleven rounds were fought. One man was knocked senseless.

ANARCHY TO THE FRONT

A Woman Harangues the Unemployed of New York.

BREAD IN THE SHOPS, SHE SAID.

The Labor Organizations Hold a Conference, Denounce Rioting and Arrange For a Monster Mass Meeting—Agitator Barondess Holds a Consultation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—While there have been no serious outbreaks among the unemployed Hebrews since they wrecked a hall, more meetings, are to be held tonight and tomorrow, and the police are vigilant.

Joseph Barondess, the agitator, made a vigorous protest to his friends and the unemployed workingmen who are his allies, saying that this Monday night was not to be allowed to address them any more. Barondess, Captain Devery of the Eldridge Street station and Acting Superintendent Conlin held a conference in the station house in Eldridge street. None of them would talk about what they had done, but it is probable that they conferred together in order to prevent a repetition of the trouble in Walhalla hall.

Advice From Anarchists.

A mixed gathering of trades unionists, who are connected with the Emma Goldman and John Most factions of the anarchistic party, was held at Golden Rule hall, 126 Rivington street. The meeting was addressed by Emma Goldman, who shot Superintendent Frick of the Carnegie works during the labor troubles at Homestead. The gist of her speech was in accord with her radical views and those of the extremist wing of the anarchists.

"If you are hungry and need bread," she said, "go and get it. The shops are plentiful, and the doors are open."

Her counsel to the already incensed unemployed laborers was calculated to incite them to the extreme methods of pillage and rapine. She denounced the prevailing conditions of society as being responsible for the hardships which the unemployed are now feeling. Emma Goldman made only a mild allusion to her dynamite policy, but declared that it might be necessary in the very near future to resort to such methods.

The hungry men kept three bartenders busy, and the bartender in the other hall had all he could do. Emma Goldman distributed pamphlets to thog in the Allen street hall. One wild looking man spoke in part as follows at the Allen street hall:

Cholera In Europe.

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Rumors of the appearance of cholera in many German cities have been current in the last two days. At Bremen the embarkation of Russian emigrants on the North German Lloyd steamships has been prohibited.

VIENNA, Aug. 19.—In the last 48 hours there have been 23 fresh cases of cholera and 22 deaths.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 19.—The number of fresh cholera cases reported in Russia during the last week is 2,113; the number of deaths, 768.

Shot His Kneeling Wife.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Aug. 19.—Cyrus Brown shot and killed his wife. He was arrested, and the jail is now being guarded by an extra force o. deputy sheriffs to prevent lynching, which is threatened. Brown's wife had filed proceedings for divorce on the ground of cruelty. She had taken refuge in a neighbor's house. Brown followed her, and when she saw him coming she ran out to him, and fell down on her knees and begged him not to kill her. Her prayer was answered by a bullet through her brain.

An Affront to Governor Flower.

CONEY ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 19.—In the parade of the State Firemen's association here there were over 9,000 firemen in line and 40 brass bands. One company absurdly called Flower's Own was attached to the viewing stand was reached, and it was said that political feeling against Governor Flower was the cause and that they would not be reviewed by him.

Pennsylvania's Naval Reserves Inspected.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 19.—The United States cruiser San Francisco, having on board the Philadelphia and Rochester naval reserves, arrived here. Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania came on the light-house tender Zizana, accompanied by his staff, went on board the cruiser and formally inspected the reserves.

Strong Defense For Actor Curtis.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Evidence for the defense in the case of Curtis was a surprise to the prosecution. Two new witnesses appeared and swore that Curtis was at Berkeley with a large sum of money early on the evening of Grant's death.

Carnage Pool Will Not Escape.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The case of Henry Allen et al. Henry Allen & Co. against the members of the so called Cordage pool has been placed in the hands of the district attorney. The indictments will be laid before the grand jury in September.

A Receiver For the Hoffman House.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Lawyer Charles J. Peshall said at Jersey City that an application would be made to Chancellor McGill on Monday next for a receiver for the Hoffman House corporation, which is incorporated in New Jersey.

The New York Herald Moves.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The Herald today contains the following announcement: "On Sunday, Aug. 20, the New York Herald will remove its present quarters at Broadway and Ann street to its new building in Herald square."

A BLOODY DANCE.

One of the World's Fair Exhibits That Sickens the Spectators.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Numerous complaints have been made today to the World's fair officials on account of the savage brutality displayed at the sun dance held by the Quaskaki Indians.

Two Indians, with heavy rawhide strings fastened through slits in their bare backs, raced around the narrow platform driven by two other Indians who seemed to take a wild pleasure in the act. Little rivulets of blood trickled down the cuts down the bronzed backs. Around and around they ran, leaping, twisting and diving till it seemed to the horror stricken spectators that each instant would see the flesh torn from the bodies.

This was kept up for an hour or more in the presence of a vast assemblage of over 3,000 people. As the dance proceeded the Indians became frenzied, and many of the spectators were so sickened by the horrible sight that they fainted.

In spite of the protests, however, the performance will be repeated on a float in the lagoon between the Machinery hall and the Agricultural building next Thursday evening.

One of the principal attractions at the World's fair next week will be the picnic of the favorite horses of Emperor Wilhelm of Germany and those of the czar of Russia.

MRS. SHANN'S FATE.

The Case to Be Given to the Jury Today at Trenton.

TRENTON, Aug. 19.—Today Mrs. Shann will probably learn her fate. The charge to the jury was given this morning. The summing up was finished with Prosecutor Stockton's address.

He told the jury that they must forget the rest of the prisoner, and in their deliberations leave out all consideration of the sentence that the court may have to pronounce should they find a certain verdict. The prosecutor admitted that the evidence against her was largely circumstantial, but in all poisoning cases this was so. The crime is essentially secret in all its nature. Even if the evidence was circumstantial, that was no reason why this dastardly and cowardly crime should go unpunished.

The prosecutor ridiculed the idea that the insurance companies had the young man's body eviscerated or that Dr. Borgen, the family physician, was connected in any way with the outrage. Only one person was interested in the commission of this ghoulish deed, and that person was the prisoner. The weak features of her recital of the occurrence were commented upon at length, and the prosecutor scored the woman severely for defaming the name of her dead son by seeking to prove that he was a drunkard and the vilest of debauchees.

HOUSE MET AT NIGHT.

There Was a Slim Attendance to Hear Silver Talk.

SENATE REPEAL BILL REPORTED.

Next Tuesday It Will Be Taken Up, and Then Both Houses Will Be at Work in Earnest—Congressmen Who Have Left For a Day or Two.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The finance committee of the senate presented, through its chairman, Mr. Voorhees, a bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman law and containing a declaration that it is the policy of the government to maintain the parity between gold and silver coins. The minority of the committee, through its spokesman, Mr. Vest, presented a substitute fixing the number of grains of silver to be coined in the dollars, half dollars, quarters and dimes on a 20 to 1 ratio.

The bill and substitute went to the calendar, and their consideration is to begin on Tuesday next after the morning hour.

The bill to allow national banks to increase their circulation up to the par value of their bonds on deposit occupied the attention of the senate for most of the day. There was a long discussion on the amendment offered by Mr. Allen of Nebraska for the circulation of national banks on which the increase is to be based and on the amendment offered by Mr. Cockrell of Missouri for the redemption in greenbacks of such new bonds as may be offered.

Mr. Allen's amendment was defeated by a vote of 39 to 11, and Mr. Cockrell's had not been acted upon when the senate adjourned until Monday.

In the House.

The new members of the house continue to come to the front. The star speech of the day was delivered by Mr. Bibby of Pennsylvania, the only member of the Keystone state who is opposed to placing against her own record in support of the United States upon a single gold standard, and who is a firm advocate of bimetallism.

He is about 55 years of age, gifted with a fine voice, a vast fund of wit and a great flow of language. He immediately took his place among the orators, the logicians and the humorists of the house.

On the other side of the question there appeared another new champion, Mr. Everett of Massachusetts, who succeeds Mr. Lodge. He is a fine speaker and attracted the attention of his colleagues. Besides these two gold delivered he has a keen appreciation of humor and commanded an interested audience.

Messrs. Haines of New York and English of New Jersey, both Democrats, spoke in favor of repealing the silver purchasing clause. At a night session the discussion was continued.

There were about 25 members present when the house met in the evening. Mr. Simpson, resuming his remarks, denounced the gold standard and predicted that such a standard would produce a revolution that would shake the government to its very foundation. He was opposed to consequent on any patch. Compromises were dangerous. The men of the south and west would not stoop down to any aristocracy, and especially they would not stoop down to a mongrel aristocracy.

Mr. Morgan of Missouri advocated the free coinage of silver.

Mr. Talbert of South Carolina appealed to his representatives of the people to lay aside all party politics and to act as one man for the benefit of the country. He appealed to them to give to the people the free coinage of silver.

He was ready to stand by the free coinage plan of the Chicago platform, as he was ready to stand by every plank of the platform upon which he had been elected. The Sherman act was a makeshift. It was a quinine pill that would do good temporarily, but would not be of any permanent benefit.

At the conclusion of Mr. Talbert's remarks the house adjourned.

A Few Nominations Expected.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—President Cleveland is devoting some attention to public affairs at Gray Gables. Evidence of this is given in the bundle of papers that arrives at the White House nearly every day postmarked "Executive Dep't. Many of the routine nominations sent to the senate were signed at Gray Gables, together with the commissions of those whose nominations have been confirmed. While at his summer home the president will give some attention to filling offices, and a few new nominations may be expected. He will return to Washington about Sept. 1.

THE POPULISTS GATHER.

Few Farmers but Many Professional Agitators Present.

SYLVAN BEACH, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The annual convention of the People's party of the state of New York assembled in a small tent on the grounds of the State Farmers' encampment and prepared to place a ticket in the field for the November election, and to lay before the American people a platform which would prevent any such financial and commercial depression as now affects the country.

There were not many farmers in the crowd. The delegates were mostly professional agitators, socialists, Socialist-Labor men, Greenbackers, free silverites, Industrial Alliance workers and converts from the Republican and Democratic parties.

General James B. Weaver and Mrs. Mary F. Lease came from the west with plenty of enthusiasm to infuse into the New York branch of the movement with which they are identified. Both made speeches.

WILL RUN A CITY BANK.

New Haven Finds a Way Out of Financial Straits.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 19.—Because of the fact that the date on which the city taxes will fall due was prolonged two months by the late general assembly the city government is in the immediate need of $100,000. Taxes are not payable until Dec. 1, and the above sum must be raised at once to meet the city's current expenses.

Rather than borrow the money outright Mayor Sargent has hit upon a plan which he thinks is much better and announced that the city would run a bank of its own, and he announced further that hereafter, until further notice, sums of $100 or more would be received at his office and 3 per cent city bonds would be issued for the same. By doing this Mayor Sargent hopes to get many of the small sums now tied up into circulation again.

EVERY BANK CLOSED.

There Was No Cash to Be Had, So They Suspended.

LEMAR, Ia., Aug. 19.—The four banks at this place have suspended. They are: The First National, capital $100,000; Lemar National, same capital; German American Savings, $50,000 capital, and German State bank, $50,000. All have a large surplus of accounts and have been ranked among the best institutions in the state. They closed because of the impossibility of getting cash.

All were in good condition for ordinary times, but withdrawals of cash had been steady and collaterals could not be realized. The action of the banks was a surprise and has caused a panic in the town. Officers of the banks say they will pay every dollar when they can liquidate advantageously.

The Massacre of Italians in France.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The fight between French and Italian workingmen at Aigues-Mortes was more serious than at first reported. At least 50 were killed and 150 were wounded in the fight. The French, numbering 300, carried every kind of weapon, from pickaxes and bludgeons to firearms. There were frightful hand to hand fights in the streets. Afterward 500 Italians barricaded themselves on a farm. They were besieged beneath by the French, and a regular battle followed. Whenever an Italian escaped he was hunted like a rat to his death.

No Drinks Between the Acts.

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—The new proprietor of the Howard athenæum refused to issue return checks to his patrons. In consequence the saloons on Howard street are losing one-third of their trade. They pleaded with Manager Lathrop in vain, and in revenge they stationed a German band at the entrance of the theater and drowned the voices of the performers. Finally the police drove the band away at Lathrop's request.

A RIOT AFTER THE FIRE

Constables Fire on a Mob In Brooklyn.

TRIED TO LYNCH A SALOON KEEPER

When the Crowd Learned That Meyers Had Refused Shelter to Children Injured In the Fire, They Looted His Saloon and Attempted to Lynch Him.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 19.—At an early hour this morning a riot was in progress in this city.

Twenty-two families were made homeless by a fire which totally destroyed seven frame dwellings in Cooper street, near the city line, and rendered uninhabitable nine others, while seven persons were injured by jumping from windows in order to escape.

Among the injured were the four children of Frank Liebler, who were taken for temporary shelter to the neighboring saloon of Charles F. Meyers. The saloon keeper, it is said, refused to admit them. This aroused indignation, which deepened during the day until it culminated in a riot in the evening, in which Meyers' saloon was demolished after much of its contents had been destroyed.

The rioters were only dispersed after several had been wounded by shots fired by deputy sheriffs from Newtown. There was not much thought of punishing Meyers for his alleged inhumanity while the fire was in progress, but when it was over the indignation against him began to make itself manifest.

Threats of Lynching.

During the afternoon threats of lynching were heard. Those who met who had crowded about the ruins, and when night came on an angry mob numbering many hundreds gathered and bitterly denounced the saloon keeper for turning the injured Liebler children from his door.

The crowd increased in size and grew restless. It soon became worked up to a high pitch of excitement and only needed a leader to give a signal which would result in bloodshed.

Little groups, composed of less than a score of men each, stood around talking excitedly when darkness set in. Finally some one passed around word that Meyers' house was to be attacked. "Arm yourself for the battle," was the command which followed. Then the little groups broke up, and the men composing them disappeared in all directions. When they returned, they were armed with axes, pistols, clubs and paving stones, and at 9:30 there was an angry army of nearly 1,000 determined men marching over the hills toward Meyers' saloon. Some one shouted, "Get a rope!" and at least 20 men obeyed the order. Then they began singing, "We'll hang old Meyers on a sour apple tree."

The saloon keeper had been warned of the approach of the mob and had a horse and wagon in readiness at the rear of his place so that he might make his escape. The saloon is just across the Brooklyn city line in Queens county.

Meyers Makes His Escape.

Quickly barring his doors and windows, Meyers extinguished the lights in the saloon, ran into the yard, scaled a fence, got into a wagon and hurriedly made his escape to Newtown. If he had delayed one minute longer, he would not have been able to get away, as the mob surrounded the house. A big, brawny fellow who acted as the leader shouted:

"Where's Meyers—come out, shoot him down!"

"We will!" was the response.

Some of the men carried torches, and when a suggestion was made to burn Meyer's house the crowd secured the idea, and the torch bearers hurried to carry it out. An old man named Liebler, who lives in a house adjoining the saloon, begged the mob to refrain from firing the place, and his appeal was heeded.

When within 20 feet of the saloon some one threw a paving stone through the plate glass window. This was the signal for a general attack, and a minute later a hundred men were tearing down the front of the building. The torch bearers were among the first to get inside. Then there was general havoc. Barrels of whisky were rolled into the street, and boxes of cigars were thrown out among those who could not crowd into the place.

Everything in the saloon was demolished or carried off, and then a visit was paid to the saloon keeper's living apartments. The carpets were ripped up from the floors; looking glasses, bric-a-brac and pictures were smashed. A search under tables and in closets was made for the saloon keeper by the men who carried the ropes. Then, when it was learned that Meyers had made his escape, the mob overturned the bar, smashed open the lockers and carried out several small casks of whisky found in the storeroom.

Deputies Fired on the Crowd.

In the meantime Meyers had driven to Newtown for assistance, the Brooklyn police having refused to go outside of the city limits. A squad of deputy sheriffs and constables arrived at the saloon in time to see the last of the whisky barrels going out of the door. They got into the place through the rear entrance, and then followed a general fight. Pistol shots were quickly exchanged, and a number of persons were injured.

One man, who had been shot in the leg by a constable, was carried to a saloon at Cooper street and Central avenue, where he was attended by a physician. Another, who had been severely injured, was carried away in a grocery wagon. He refused to give his name, as he was one of the leaders of the mob. A boy was thrown down one of the cellars of one of the burned houses and had his legs crushed.

Several women who were on Cooper street opposite the scene of the fire were trampled down by the rioters as the latter retreated from the flying bullets of the constables' revolvers.

A second and a third attack was made upon Meyers' house, and at midnight the mob was still fighting with the constables, and the riot had assumed serious proportions. The entire reserve squad of police from the Seventeenth precinct hurried to protect the property in the neighborhood of Knickerbocker avenue and Cooper street, which is within the city limits, but the policemen would not venture over the line to the aid of the Queens county authorities.

The rough element of the mob was holding high carnival. Men with small casks of whisky on their shoulders paraded the streets and sang ribald songs, while others who had looted their companions were drinking from bottles and otherwise enjoying the spoils from the looted saloon.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To George Wolfe, Charles Wolfe, Glen Wolfe, Mary A. Irons and William Irons, her husband; Mary Virtue et al. and to all whom it may concern:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Charle V. Line et al. are complainants and you are defendants, you are hereby required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainants on or before the second day of September next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you. Said bill is filed to have certain lands situate in the City of Plainfield charged with and hammered the supplemental tract of land specifically devised by the last will and testament of Isaac N. Line to James H. Line and Charles V. Line, to pay the sum value of the use of the said forty-five acre tract from the date of said will to the date of the sale of said decree in this cause; of that said named A. GOOD HEALTH

MASSAGE OF THE FACE.

Simple Methods For Removing the Traces of Time.

Dr. Buckley says that a certain amount of friction applied to the face daily will do much to keep the pores open, and by stimulating the skin to prevent the formation of the black specks and red spots so common. He recommends that the face be rubbed to a degree short of discomfort and that the towel be not too rough. This friction helps to ward off wrinkles.

A writer in the Albany Cultivator, commenting on Dr. Buckley's statments, adds: Frequent bathing of the entire body and special massage treatment for the face should be employed to remove the traces of time. Bathe the face with very hot water and use a little good soap. Wash off the soap and then with the tips of the fingers go all over the face, pressing and smoothing out the skin. Always move the fingers in the direction indicated in order to remove the wrinkles, and not promiscuously in every direction. The lower part of the face usually needs to be pressed upward. When you sit reading or have your hands at liberty at any time and are not in public, smooth out an objectionable wrinkle by gently stroking the skin. After washing the face always rub it lightly and briskly with a soft towel.

How to Get Sleep.

Sleep rules have an addition in a simple method reported by The Industrial World. It is to place the right hand on the forehead and the left at the back of the neck while counting 49. The rationale of this process is thus explained by Dr. Salisbury: The palm of the right hand and the fore part of the body are both plus (or positive) magnetic poles. The left palm and the back part of the body are minus (or negative) poles. Like poles repel, and by thus placing the palms of the hands over the various centers of plexuses a vital current is directed back into the body, its normal circuit is re-established, and its energies are guided and evenly distributed among the organs situate along its course. The physical and mental powers will become passive, contented and comfortable, all parts working together for the common good. The result will be composure and recuperation. All distracting, harassing, melancholy imaginings and gloomy forebodings will have passed away. The stomach and bowels and all their glandular appendages will renew their healthy functions, while digestion and assimilation, previously at a standstill, will go on normally. Overwork and improper food are at the bottom of our wretchedness.

What Is the Spleen?

This question the New York Herald answers as follows: The spleen is an organ lying in the depths of the abdomen, between the diaphragm, left kidney and stomach. Its shape is ovoid or quadrangular and its weight about 300 grams. What its function is, however, we should be very much puzzled to say.

The certain relation of glands, to which the thymus and spleen belong, has been attributed a direct action on the development of the nervous system. They are classed as organs of the period of youth, which gradually become atrophied as years go on.

For the purpose of throwing some light on this obscure question M. Dastre of Paris has removed the spleen from a large number of animals and has been watching the result of the operation as regards growth and development of physical strength.

The conclusions ascertained from these experiments are that both in young and grown animals the removal of the spleen produces no appreciable change either to the general health or spirits, growth, weight, development of the hair, color or in the reproductive capacity.

Simple Remedies For Sunburn.

Give the preference to mutton tallow if this homely remedy is at hand; otherwise gently rub over the sunburned surface with olive oil or with honey. Sweet cream is also excellent for the purpose. Don't scratch the itching places. Rub gently and be careful that the nails don't come in contact with the skin. As soon as you can stand it wash the burned surfaces in tepid water in which the juice of a lemon has been added. Lemon juice is a great cleanser and is besides that a wonderful tonic for the flesh and skin.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

ODD HEADGEAR.

A Fine Large Summer Hat and a Curious Kind of Small Umbrella.

Recent travelers in Tonquin have brought back an account of a hat in use in that country which for size exceeds all others. If you glance at the illustration, you will see that it has the form of a round lid or shutter, which measures more than 6 feet in circumference.

TONQUINESE PALM LEAF HAT.

Attached to each side is a cluster of seven silk ribbons, which at a distance resemble great ears. These curious hats are very artistically made of carefully chosen palm leaves and are lined inside with a fine lining of rush. As you will readily suppose, these large hats form a capital protection from the heat of the sun.

Another queer head covering is one used by the people of Corea. This is in the shape of an umbrella, however, and is worn to protect the hat. It is constructed to fold up like a fan. As soon as it begins to rain the Corean feels into one of the large loose sleeves of his jacket and produces his umbrella, which he spreads out like a fan over his hat. It has of course no stick, is not very large and does not afford much protection except for the hat, which is really all that the Corean cares about.

Mother's Little Girl.

Sleeves to the dimpled elbow,
Fun in the sweet blue eyes,
To and fro upon errands
The little maiden flies.
Now she is washing dishes,
Now she is feeding the chicks,
Now she is playing with pussy
Or teaching Rover tricks.

Wrapped in a big white apron,
Pinned in a checkered shawl,
Hanging clothes in the garden,
Oh, were she only tall!
Brushing the fretful baby,
Coaxing his hair to curl,
Stepping around so briskly
Because she is mother's girl.

ETIQUETTE

NEEDLESS CANDOR.

There Is a Fine Art In Speaking the Truth. Virtuous Reserves.

"One of the hardest questions to decide," spoke, meditatively, the observing woman, "is how far one is justified in telling the truth."

"That is easy enough," replied the careless young person, as if it was a conundrum. "Always tell the truth of course."

"I won't tell you how often you always speak it yourself," coolly remarked the observer, "but I would like to ask you to recall the most unpleasant and least popular woman you ever met. And be sure if she was not a woman who prided herself upon always telling people her opinion of them and their doings and of society in exactly what she thought upon every subject under heaven, without any regard for other folks' prejudices or feelings."

"Why—I don't know—well" slowly.

"The queer part is," went on the observer, "the self elected truth teller is feared always—not loved. Why is this? She thinks it is because she is a martyr to the cause of truth and prides herself still more on her virtue and consequent martyrdom. Is that so? She grows more and more aggressive. She takes a fierce joy in speaking the cruelest truths to the natures least fitted to hear them. She triumphs in the 'candor' and 'courage' which enable her to do it. It is a great pity."

"What is your opinion about it?" curiously, from the careless young person.

"There is a rare fine art in speaking the truth in love, never wielding it in such a way that it can do harm or crush some sensitive soul. Nor is it necessarily always right to speak at all. There are virtuous reserves.

"One may be silent if one has nothing kind to say. The haste to tell every little bit of gossip, every unfortunate or hasty speech a friend has ever uttered is not induced by 'candor,' but by pure malevolence."—Harper's Bazar.

Three Merry Sailors.

We are little sailors three,
And a good ship we have got;
Just a yard or two from land,
On a piece of wood we stand!
Never farther dare we go,
Lest the wind begin to blow;
Then we soon should drift away—
What would then our parents say?
Sailing, sailing on the sea,
We are merry sailors three!
Little boys with golden curls,
We should surely happy be!

LITTLE SAILORS THREE.

Up and down upon the wave
Now we go, for we are brave!
And we have not any fear
While the land is very near!
Yet we must feel more about,
Or we shall—there's little doubt—
Wreck the ship if we begin.
And most surely tumble in!
Sailing, sailing on the sea,
We are merry sailors three!
Little boys who golden curls,
We should surely happy be!

THE CURIOUS SHOP
IN DEATH VALLEY.

Desert Toads and Their Remarkable Ways. The Home of the Scorpions.

Among amazing animals found by a recent exploring party in Death Valley a correspondent of The Times-Democrat enumerates, besides lizards of many kinds, carnivorous rattlesnakes and queer varieties of chipmunks, the peculiar desert toads, which are found buried in the clay soil and actually baked in the solid ground, so that they have to be split out. Thus they remain for a year or two together. When a shower comes—a very rare occurrence in that country — the clay is softened, and they crawl out to enjoy themselves for a few hours. After a day or so the ground dries up, and they hastily dig into it and retire for another long period of repose. It is not difficult to imagine the hardening of the soil into permanent rock, from which these creatures might be split out a millennium hence, as is said to have happened with toads similarly buried centuries ago. When they do eat, these toads of the desert feed on insects, like others of their kind.

Death valley is the greatest congregating place on earth of scorpions, according to the writer mentioned. They are found there by millions, growing to a huge size. One measured was exactly 6½ inches long. These fierce creatures are not seen in the daytime, being nocturnal in their habits. However, when pulling up bushes for firewood, they were apt to be found among the roots. They would crawl under the blankets at night for the sake of warmth. In the morning each member of the exploring party was apt to find one or two scorpions on the under side of his blanket. They secrete such a quantity of venom in the two poison glands at the end of the tail that their sting is quite as virulent as those that rank highest among the arachnids, being above the spiders and much below the true insects.

Truffles.

The various kinds of puff balls are almost as good and in some tastes much better than the ordinary mushroom or morel. They are taken when quite young and fresh and cut up into slices like eggplant. Fried, these are particularly good, but there is one kind of puff ball, called a truffle, which grows wholly under the ground. These are collected by dogs, which are trained to tell by the scent where they lie hidden. As recently stated in Meehan's Monthly, it is believed that the truffle has occasionally appeared in America, but there is no authentic record of any places where they were found. They are usually collected in the vicinity of oak forests in the old world, and it is said that they are seldom found in the same place two years successively. So far as known all experiments to cultivate them have been failures.

The Eldest of the Booths.

Says the Baltimore Sun: "The grave of Richard Booth is in Greenmount cemetery, alongside of that of his illustrious son, Junius Brutus, and a number of his grandchildren and their mother. Very few people can recall Richard, the eldest of the Booths. No eventfully found a position in this city. He was father to two children, a son and a daughter, Junius Brutus and Jane Booth. In England he studied and practiced law, and it was said that his family belonged to Portugal, but left there and lived near London, where the name was translated to its English nomenclature, Booth. He was a great admirer of and married into the family of John Wilkes, the English member of parliament and editor of The North Britain."

Marry In Haste.

"Marry in haste and repent at leisure" is a familiar proverb in all languages. Sage, poet and humorist have all had their fling at matrimony.

A young man married is a man that's marr'd, says Parolles in "All's Well That Ends Well."

The Germans have a saying which may be rendered:

The marriage state is like a coop built stout—
The outs would fain be in, the fins be out.

A French dramatist wrote this epigram on marriage:

I would advise a man to pause
Before he takes a wife;
In fact, I see no earthly cause
He should not pause for life.

From "Ma" to "Mother."

Up to about 20 years ago the most familiar appellation for one's maternal relative was "ma." That generation still uses the same title. It sometimes creeps into print under short stories, but the novels bristle with it, and it is a far cry from the "dearest" of Fauntleroy to the "ma" of Mrs. Burnett's earlier stories. "Mamma" came in just before the war. It has been so universally adopted, and by such curious people, that a reaction from it has set in during the past year. "Mamma" made a strenuous struggle, but it has always seemed rather foreign in its tone and difficult to acclimate. Now "mother" is beginning to show signs of vigorous life.

Watering Stock.

The credit of having originated the process of watering the stock of railroad companies belongs, according to Thorne, to the late Commodore Vanderbilt. The plan of operation is simple enough, consisting only in estimating the stock of the road at a figure greatly above its real value.

Wednesday.

The name Wednesday is derived from the northern mythology and signifies Woden's or Odin's day. The Anglo-Saxon form was Wodanes daeg, the old German Wuotanes tac. The Danish and Swedish is Onsdag. In the Roman calendar it was dies Mercurii.

Testing Oleomargarine.

It is said that oleomargarine can be detected in boiling a tablespoonful of it. Boiling butter will foam without much noise, while the sham butter sputters and hisses like lard, but does not foam as decidedly as genuine butter.

Things That Are Told.

In all the wars in which Britain has taken a part she has won 82 per cent of the battles.

It is estimated that 1,700,000 square miles of the earth's surface are still uninhabited or owneriess.

The honeycomb presents a solution of the greatest possible strength and space with the least possible material.

The highest inhabited place in the world is the custom house of Antomarca in Peru, 16,000 feet above the sea.

The smallest bird is the West Indian humming bird. Its body is less than an inch long and weighs only 20 grains.

Down by the Lane.

There dwells a maid across the street—
Aland alack! and wellaway!
And once our optics chanced to meet—
Oh, bitter, bitter was the day!

For I the hour to beguile—
The maid was very fair to see;
Did meekly venture on a smile—
Oh, she is sweet. Oh, woe is me!

And thinking that the maid smiled back—
For I am very near of sight;
I seized a pen from off the rack
And large upon a sheet did write,

"Meet me at eight, down by the lane,"
Where I at eight did swift repair—
Alas! I ne'er shall walk again!
It was her father met me there.

MR. E. N. HARNED KILLED

IN THE STORM AT ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS YESTERDAY.

He was Crushed in the Ruins of a Bathing Pavilion—News of the Accident Brought to this City by his Brother.

D WARD N. Harned, principal of the Atlantic Highlands Academy, on Park avenue, was killed by a falling pavilion during the storm at Atlantic Highlands yesterday noon. The first news to reach here of the accident was brought last night by a brother of Mr. Harned.

It was in the beach end of Leslie's bathing pavilion that Mr. Harned was killed. He had been in the water for some time, and was dressing. It is supposed that he was just on the point of leaving the pavilion, as his body was completely dressed with the exception of the cravat.

The story of the storm is as follows: The black clouds came together and there was a clap of thunder. Then began the most terrible wind and rain storm experienced for many years. The lightning was almost continuous. The wind acted like a cyclone, following a path about a mile wide, and smashing everything in the way of its progress. The guests in hotels, who had been out on the piazzas, hastily filled the parlors. Windows were broken and glass fell around shrieking women. Children huddled together in corners.

The bathers who were in the surf when the storm came down, escaped to the bathing houses, and hurried their dressing in order to reach a place of safety as soon as possible.

The loss of life and property was not so frightful as had been feared. It will take $50,000 to repair damages. At one time it looked as though the whole village was doomed.

A woman who refused to give her name was seriously injured and may die.

A Swedish laborer was also killed. He was at work on a scow just off the shore. He was handling a pitchfork, which attracted the lightning. The woman who would not identify herself was struck on the shoulder by a falling beam.

The Leslie Pavilion is almost completely demolished. Trees a foot in diameter in the path of the storm were uprooted. The steeple of St. Agnes' Roman Catholic church was blown off. If the cyclone had struck the town 10 or 15 minutes earlier the church would have been full of people, and a panic of the most serious character could not have been averted.

Many guests are packing up and preparing to return to their homes.

THE POLE WAS CHARGED.

An Unreliable "Hanger" Fills a Pole With Electricity.

Owing to poor insulation on one of the hangers that holds the trolley wire, a pole in front of Dr. Mattison's, on Somerset street was become charged with electricity yesterday. The pole was charged sufficiently to give anyone touching it a shock.

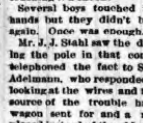
Several boys touched it with their hands but they didn't bother with it again. Once was enough.

Mr. J. J. Stahl saw the danger of leaving the pole in that condition, so he telephoned the fact to Superintendent Adelmann, who responded promptly, by looking at the wires and finding out the source of the trouble had the tower wagon sent for and a new "hanger" placed instead of the old one.

The pole was charged heavily enough to dry the earth for a considerable distance around it.

EACH WON A HEAT.

Lively Racing Between "Walkill" and "Andy."



N Saturday there was racing on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park, on the Park avenue, between Mr. John Chandler's "Walkill" and Mr. Hayes' "Andy." Two heats were trotted, each winning one. "Walkill" won the first heat in 2.33½, and "Andy" the second heat in 2.37½.

Next Saturday some exciting races are expected to take place.

BREVITIES.

—The 5.38 train from this city yesterday afternoon, took a number of Plainfielders, who started for the World's Fair.

—The case of Christianson vs. Gunther came up before Justice Nash this afternoon, and was adjoined to Thursday, September 18.

—Saturday night in the bar-room of Hotel Grenada two men came to blows. Friends of both parties interfered and the men separated.

—The Central Railroad will run another excursion to Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switchback on Labor Day, stopping at Plainfield.

STRICKEN AT HIS HOME.

A STROKE OF APOPLEXY ENDS THE LIFE OF J. C. MANCHESTER.

He was Preparing to Retire for the Night,—Death Almost Instantaneous.—He was a Life Long Republican and a Hard Worker.

Mr. John C. Manchester, 51 years old, of Arlington avenue, was stricken with apoplexy Saturday night and died a few seconds later, without regaining consciousness. He had been in town during the evening, and had returned home about eight o'clock.

About nine o'clock Mr. Manchester prepared to retire. His wife was up-stairs, where the son, Frank, and his wife live. Mr. Manchester was in the dining-room when his wife left him. He took his coat, vest and shoes off and started for his bedroom, which joins the dining-room. Just before he reached the door he fell. Mrs. Manchester, hearing the noise caused by her husband's fall rushed downstairs and found him lying on the floor.

Dr. Keeney, who lives nearby, was hastily summoned, but Mr. Manchester was past medical aid and he died immediately.

Mr. John C. Manchester was born at Little Compton, R. I. He had lived in Plainfield about 18 years. Frank is the only son. The father was a carpenter by trade, and was at work as usual last week.

He was a life-long Republican and a hard worker in his party's interest. At the time of his death he was a member of the City Republican Executive Committee. He was not much of a lodge man but joined the Ancient Order of United Workmen and its institution here.

Mr. and Mrs. Bond, returned missionaries from Macedonia, will conduct the services at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society at Warren Mission chapel to-morrow evening. The song service will be in charge of M. M. Dunham commencing at 7.45. All are invited.

NO SERIOUS DAMAGE HERE.

The Storm Not Very Severe in this Vicinity.

The storm here Saturday night was quite heavy. No serious damage is reported. The trolley wire on Somerset street was disconnected at the corner of Craig place, by the lightning, pulling the solder where two pieces of wire had been joined. A block and tackle were procured and by this means the wire was joined together so the car could run yesterday.

FIVE LIVES LOST

IN THE STORM AT SOMERVILLE SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Injured Will Probably Number Twenty-Three.—All But One Are Expected to Recover.

N the history of Somerset County no such storm as that which visited it Saturday is remembered.

So far as can be learned five persons fell victims to the storm. The dead are:

Michael Mack, aged 49, Phillipsburg.

Thomas Peters, English tourist.

Three persons drowned by the upsetting of a catboat on the Raritan River; identity not established.

The injured will probably number twenty-three. All will recover with the exception of Mrs. Ellen Murray, who was injured by being thrown out of her carriage. Her skull was fractured, and it is impossible to tell whether she will get well or not.

The Raritan River, fed to overflowing by its little tributaries, rose above its banks and flooded the fifty or more acres of flat lands that lie below the railroad tracks and form a part of the pasture of the Duke Stock Farm.

This forced the water into Peter's Creek, a large cove that lies in between two small hills, and flooded the bodies of a dozen families of poor negroes, who live in huts and shanties near the Ten Eyck brick kilns, which section is known as Lottery Fields. The water rose so rapidly that they had hardly time to save their household goods, and were camping out at the base of the hills under the brick sheds, waiting for the water to recede.

During the afternoon those who were out of doors noticed big heavy black cone-shaped clouds gathering near the Blue Ridge of the Orange Mountains. At the same time a heavy rain cloud appeared in the northwest, and suddenly a darkness fell upon the town. They heard a low rumbling and the two clouds came together with great velocity. In another second there was a terrific downpour of rain, accompanied by vivid flashes of blinding lightning. After that it seemed as if the cone-shaped cloud came down close to the earth and began its destruction at the base of the mountain, and its irregular tail dragged along over hill and dale, sweeping everything in its path. Barns were crushed like eggshells, big trees were uprooted and cornfields swept away like so much chaff. Peach trees were stripped in a twinkling, and vineyards were devastated.

Fences, vines, rose bushes and branches of trees went flying through the air in a jumbled mass. Then the hail began to descend with such force that pedestrians were driven from the streets. Window panes were smashed. Even the small bits of stained glass in the windows of St. Bernard's Catholic church were broken out and the rain that poured through did wholesale damage to the interior.

In the courtyard, which is filled with trees, the sparrows and the robins took refuge in the foliage, but the missiles came with such fury that thousands of birds fell victims. Yesterday the grass plot was strewn with their bodies.

A yachting party of Raritan people were upset in a squall. John McGloin, his sister, Mary, aged 20 years, and and Thomas Peters made up the party All three were thrown into the river. The girl and her brother were good swimmers and after a frantic struggle, managed to reach shore. Peters was drowned. He is an Englishman and all that is known of him is that he was travelling in this country for his health.

Michael Mooch was employed on the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the yards just below Somerville. He was coupling cars, when, missing stroke the coupling bolt and killed him instantly. He lived at Phillipsburg, where he leaves a widow and family.

Dewitt Brokaw, a night watchman at the Jersey Central depot at Somerville, was going to work through the storm he was knocked down by a splintered tree in front of the Commercial Hotel, on Divison street and badly injured.

WANT FLORIDA GROVE CONDEMNED.

So the Central Can Build its Road to Perth Amboy.

There is likely to be considerable legal dispute over the attempt of the Central Railroad of New Jersey to condemn its road past Florida Grove to Perth Amboy. The road will go from Bound Brook to Perth Amboy, and as the Lehigh Valley already has the right of way over the Florida Grove property, the new company have decided to traverse the water in front of the grove, by a trestle work over 1100 feet long.

Of course this would cut off the water front and wharfage of the Grove, and the owners of the property, Sheriff Acken, A. Q. Keasbey and B. A. Vail have objected.

The Central Company have as a consequence applied to Judge Beasley and have secured the appointment of J. Bayard Kirkpatrick, Willard Voorhees and Isaac S. Snedeker as commissioners to condemn the property conveyed by the riparian rights of the owners of the Grove, and to fix the price which the Central Railroad Company shall pay for it.

A TIE FOR TIME PRIZE.

WILLIS AND COFFIN WILL RACE AGAIN FOR THAT PRIZE.

S. C. Crane won the First Prize, a Gold Medal.—Isaac Line Finished Second and C. H. Flack Third.

PLAINFIELD has a coming racer in S. C. Crane. The fact was demonstrated by his fine showing in Saturday's 25 mile road race of the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers. He started third with an eight-minute handicap and made the first lap in the lead of the six who started ahead of him. This position he kept to the finish to the great surprise of everyone present, winning the first prize, a handsome gold medal. It was 2.30 when the first racers were started by Captain William J. Kiely. At 2.45 the scratch man was off. The following is the order in which they started and the handicap of each:

NAMES.	Handicap.
W. J. R. Thiers	0 Mile.
Israel Jones	10 "
E. A. Martin	9 "
Wm. Nicholson	9 "
Edgar Nicholson	9 "
Orrin C. Nichols	9 "
T. J. Burns, P. L. C	8 "
John Scott	8 "
S. C. Crane, P. H. S. A. A	7 "
J. N. Barber	7 "
Isaac Line	7 "
R. H. Totten	7 "
Chas. R. Peck, L. C. C	7 "
W. J. Mooney, U. C. R	7 "
G. B. M. Shurts, N. T. V. W	6 "
Curtis Perkins, N. T. V. W	6 "
Joel Scudder	6 "
Chas. Vandervoer, E. W	6 "
A. S. Swartwout, N. W	4 "
W. E. Rink, N. T. V. W	4 "
C. W. Coffin, U. L. C. C	4 "
James Willis, U. L. W	30 sec.
Charles Coffin, R. A. A	Scratch.

The prizes were as follows: First prize, gold medal; time prize, gold medal; cyclometer, order for pair of custom made pants, patent leather shoes, box of cigars, gold pin, gold watch, meerschaum cigar holder, shaving mug, pocket toilet case, bicycle lantern, luggage carrier, penknife, bicycle hose, and a cap.

The order in which the racers finished and the time of each at every lap was:

	Start.	Finish.	Time.
S. C. Crane, P. H. S. A. A...	2.41	4.01.52	1.31.52
Isaac Line	2.42	4.01.51	1.30.51
C. H. Flack	2.43	4.01.51	1.28.48
J. Bodden	2.44	4.06.45	1.32.45
J. Coffin, U. L. C. C	2.45	4.07	1.32
J. Willis, U. L. W	2.45½	4.08.30	1.17
W. J. R. Thiers	2.39	4.09.18	1.37.18
W. J. Mooney, U. C. R	2.43	4.06.21	1.33.21
R. H. Totten	2.43	4.07	1.24
W. E. Rink, N. T. V. W	2.43	4.07.46	1.32.46
Otto Neher	2.40	4.17.40	1.37.50

Of the 25 to start, only 20 made the first lap; 17 the second; 15 the third, and 12 the fourth, the others having dropped out owing to accidents to their wheels. Israel Jones' wheel broke down before he had ridden a half mile. He borrowed a wheel and made the first round, when he gave it up.

The contest for time prize resulted in a tie between Coffin and Willis. At the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers Club House, afterwards, the men decided to race over the same course to see who is entitled to the time prize.

The only accident to mar the pleasure of the event happened as the race was finished.

South avenue, where the start and finish was made, was lined with people. It was a very hard matter to keep an open space sufficient for racers to pass through. Acting Chief Kiely repeatedly ordered the crowd to keep back. Several times he turned his horse and pushed many out of harm's way. In spite of every precaution to keep back from injury. About a second after Coffin crossed the line at the finish he ran into a little girl. In trying to save the little one from harm, Mr. Coffin turned his wheel so that he was thrown headforemost upon the hard roadbed, badly cutting his forehead. His shoulder was also severely bruised.

Base Ball Notes.

Manager Keller has secured the New Jersey Athletic Club to play here Saturday, September 2, and the Cuban Giants for Labor Day morning. On the afternoon of Labor Day the Crescents go to Elizabeth. Manager Keller will play at home next Saturday if he can secure a first class club. If not he will accept a date away from home.

The Philadelphia Club, has secured a jewel in Turner. His friends need have no fear but what he will make his mark, for he has shown that he is fast enough for any company.

The Orange Club is immediately secured the Crescents for another game. Plainfield's base ball patrons should feel ashamed of themselves for letting a team like the Crescents entertain others, for lack of patronage at home, say those interested.

Car No. 1 Off the Track Again.

Car No. 1 seems to be establishing a record for running off the track. It hasn't missed a day lately to run off at least once. This noon as it crossed the walk at Front street in front of the Bank, it took a jump and ran toward the gutter. The motorman's prompt action in putting on the brake kept the hind wheels from leaving to track. Another car came along and pulled it back on the track.

The Weather.

On Tuesday warmer, fair weather will probably prevail, with southerly and westerly winds in most districts, and on Wednesday fair weather, with a "warm wave."

ONLY EIGHT DAYS MORE

THE LAST COUPON WILL APPEAR TUESDAY, AUGUST 30.

Ex-Chief Saltzman is Over Twelve Hundred Votes Ahead of Mr. Martin.—Fireman Newman Forges Ahead of Another Competitor.

HE entire Midway plaisance at Chicago mourns because Lily, the baby elephant, who was captured in faraway Sumatra, is dead. But Plainfield firemen will wear no crepe during the final week of the contest for the grand World's Fair trip that is to be given free next week to the most popular fireman.

Coupons will only be published eight days more and then the winner will be announced.

Mr. Saltzman has again increased his lead and is now more than twelve hundred votes ahead.

William T. Newman has passed another competitor and perhaps he, or some of his friends, is responsible for the little game mentioned in Saturday's News.

August 30 is the date for the winner.

NE VOTE in favor of Fireman

World's Fair Coupon.

HE GOT RID OF THE WASPS.

But the Fire Which Burned Their Nests Spread and Caused a Loss of $10,000.

"I'll get rid of those wasps if it takes me all day." said Farmer John B. Perrine as he left his wife in the kitchen door of his home on the Cranbury turnpike near New Brunswick, at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon. He got rid of the wasps, but at a cost of $10,000

Poking at the wasps with a stick did not dislodge them, and, after a half hour's work, he determined to set fire to the nest. He lighted a rag on a pole and applied it to the nest. It was quickly consumed, and the fire, spreading to the surrounding rubbish, was in a moment beyond control. There was no one to assist Farmer Perrine in putting out the flames until too late, and his barns, shelter pens, wagon house, and corn crib were totally consumed.

The barns contained all this season's hay and grain, and the crib was well filled with corn. The horses and cattle were saved, but there is nothing left for them to feed upon. Machinery, harness, and implements were also burned. It will take $10,000 to replace. Farmer Perrine himself for that wasp expedition, and the insurance people won't help him out for more than half that amount.

The Netting Caught Fire.

Mosquito netting in Neuman Bros' grocery store, on Wagoubure avenue, caught fire Saturday night as a clerk was lighting the gas. The netting was pulled down and the fire extinguished before any damage resulted.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Monometallist and Bimetallist.

Two members of the New York chamber of commerce—one a "goldbug," the other a bimetallist—give in The Outlook each the financial situation from his standpoint in a thoroughly clear, dispassionate manner that commends itself in this time of noisy ignorance and violent, selfish utterances.

Mr. Louis Windmueller, the monometallist, says the present panic is due to the hoarding of gold and paper money by the banks first, then by private individuals. They thus hoard money because they fear that under the continued operation of the silver act of 1890 our currency will depreciate till it is no longer convertible into gold or the equivalent of gold. They therefore hide away all gold and money convertible into gold at par, which they can lay hands on. Mr. Windmueller knows one western banker who usually keeps on hand a cash balance of $70,000. He has increased it till it amounts now to $150,000, and that sum is lying idle awaiting some possible run or emergency. That is an illustration of where the money has gone in the present scarcity, so that manufacturers cannot get at any price enough of it to continue their business. A man will not lend another $1,000 in gold, or gold paper, if there is danger of his getting it back in a currency worth only $500. "Since the failure of the Ohio Life and Trust company on Aug. 23, 1857, it has not been so difficult for the average borrower to get money," says the writer. Those who demand more money are the inflationists and silver miners.

The sole cause of the present panic is fear—fear of the further depreciation of silver and the disappearance of gold. Mr. Windmueller thinks the only remedy is the repeal of the Sherman law and no more coinage or purchase of silver. "We shall need no more currency till we have re-established confidence in what we have already issued."

In 1860 the production of the two metals was 54 ounces of silver to 1 of gold. In 1892 it was 24 ounces of silver to 1 of gold.

Mr. A. Foster Higgins, the bimetallist, tells us that capitalists want only one standard, and that a gold one, because the supply of gold is becoming smaller every year, and therefore the metal grows dearer and dearer. The gold basis dollars they have will go farther and purchase more the scarcer the yellow metal becomes. They are not averse to increasing their fortunes in that way naturally.

But this is an injustice to the debtor class, says Mr. Higgins. The great class of borrowers are "really the most enterprising and most active citizens, the ones upon whom the progress and development of the world depend." This great class demands that the basis of money shall be as near as possible an invariable standard, and only by the use of both gold and silver as money can there be even an approach to an invariable standard. The debtor class plead that "every measure tending to establish a single gold standard is attended with contraction of the world's money supply, with a fall in prices and loss to every merchant who buys depending on a fixed basis of value."

Mr. Higgins declares that the United States needs more than as much money per capita to transact business as the nations of Europe do because of our greater activities, wider distances and different states. We must have an annual increase of $19,000,000 to keep pace with our 2,000,000 annual increase in population, holding the supply per capita where it is now, $24.50. Before the demonetization of silver, although the relative quantities of gold and silver annually produced varied from three times as much to less than one-half in case of silver, yet the market prices of the two metals never varied more than 3.3 per cent from the standard. It was the demonetization of silver that caused fluctuation in value and disaster.

All of which shows how easy it was to maintain values irrespective of the yield of the metals, so long as both were admitted to coinage. It is now well proved that by no possibility can these values be maintained except by admitting both metals to free coinage upon an established ratio, and the alternative of this is to discard silver as a legal tender, and therefore practically as money. If the entire world should agree to and adopt this, it would mean at once withdrawing $10,000,000,000 of money and a contraction to at least a large proportion of that amount.

In view of the great fight in the British parliament over whether the Irish members shall have the right to vote there after home rule is granted, one is tempted to exclaim: Why have not the British any sense on this question? Why can they not take our American republic for the model of what they want—local self government of the separate states and a vote on all questions by all the members of congress alike? In order to adapt the system to England, Scotland and Wales it would only be necessary to enlarge the powers of the local governments—such as all they possessed previous to the passage of home rule in Ireland. The old regime would then be much the same as now, with the exception that the mob-Irish element would be eliminated, and by the same process the Irish would be left to manage their own affairs. If the Irish members were allowed to vote on measures affecting England, Scotland and Wales they would be much in the position of the Hessian troops in the employ of a dry goods store here all summer, who mysteriously disappeared.

LAST WEEK OF DEBATE.

It Begins Today With a Clarion Blast by Breckinridge.

MANY ORATORS ARE ON THE LIST.

Bourke Cockran, Colonel Fellows, Mr. Wilson, Author of the Repeal Bill, and Senator Voorhees Are Preparing Long Talks on Silver—China Sends an Olive Branch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The final stage of the 14 days' debate on the silver question, which is likely to terminate with the first affirmative action in congress upon the subject which brought the body together in the heat of midsummer, was entered upon by the house of representatives today. The general debate will continue until Wednesday night, and throughout the last three days of that week the debate will be conducted under the five minute rule. It will close by limitation of agreement, unless the house sooner adjourns, at 12 o'clock midnight on Saturday.

According to the official interpretation given by Speaker Crisp to the terms of the order under which the discussion is proceeding, the house will meet at noon Monday, the 28th inst., and proceed immediately after the reading of the journal to vote upon the substitute for the Wilson repeal bill introduced by Representative Bland, involving the question of free coinage of silver at any one of several proposed ratios.

It is probable that the yeas and nays will be called upon each one of the several propositions, so that it is likely to be late in the day before the vote upon the decisive question of repeal or no repeal is reached.

The Coming Orators.

The debate this week promises to be of great popular interest. Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky, "the silver tongued orator," is booked to speak today and will doubtless attract a large crowd. Representative Fellows of New York, who divides with Bourke Cockran the honor of coining and Tammany Hall, is announced for a speech on Tuesday, intended as an answer in detail to that delivered in favor of free coinage of silver by Representative Bryan of Nebraska last week.

Representative Byaum of Indiana, one of the wheelhorses of the antisilver forces, is also down for a speech on Tuesday. Representative Wilson of West Virginia, properly slated for the chairmanship of the ways and means committee and the author of the pending bill providing for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law, is expected to close the general debate on Wednesday.

Bourke Cockran will also speak, and ex-Speaker Reed, it is believed, will say something before the debate closes. There is a tremendous pressure exerted upon the floor on the speaker's list, and the time will be exhausted leaving many who must be content with "leave to print." Some time early in the week Speaker Crisp will announce the committees of the house.

It is improbable that anything will be done in the senate save perhaps to dispose of the two election cases. There were three of these, but one—that concerning Mr. Beck with's title to his seat by virtue of appointment by the governor of Wyoming—has been removed from the calendar because of the resignation of the appointee.

Senator Morrill has given notice that he will address the senate today on the silver repeal bill, and it was the understanding Friday when the senate adjourned that a vote should be taken on the election cases at 5 o'clock.

The final vote, however, is subject to postponement if it shall appear that the time is not sufficient to enable Senator Vance, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, to finish his speech.

Mr. Voorhees Speaks Tomorrow.

Mr. Voorhees is down for a speech Tuesday on the silver repeal bill which bears his name, and it is hardly to be expected that he will fail to call for h interrogations and interruptions which make the speech interesting aside from its intrinsic merits.

After Tuesday the programme of the senate can scarcely be defined. The bill to increase national bank circulation is the regular order, and while there was some expectation last week that it could be disposed of in a day or two at most it appears now that it may prove a debate which will consume the entire week.

The Butler amendment which is pending to repeal the state bank tax is one of the planks of the Chicago platform and is a subject of much greater and more far reaching importance than the mere proposition to extend the national bank circulation contained in the bill.

The senate has strong grounds on this subject, and it is fair to presume that it cannot be disposed of without a severe and prolonged struggle.

The outlook for the week is one of much talk, but little achievement.

A CHICAGO MAZEPPA.

Arabs Take a Fearful Revenge on One of Their Foes.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—As a result of a wild fight in the wild east slow inclosure in Midway plaisance four Bedouins are more or less severely hurt, and three of the sons of the desert languish in Woodlawn police station.

Just before sunrise the three men who now lie behind the bars stole from their tents, and taking out one of the horses fixed upon it a sort of harness, with a long rope dangling behind. Then they went to the tent in which Eustab Abahad slumbered. They pounced upon him and before he was fairly awake had bound and gagged him. One of the thongs was passed under his shoulders, forming a loop at the end. Through this the rope was passed and securely fastened.

Then the animal was lashed into a mad race about the inclosure. Around and around flew the desert courser, dragging the unfortunate Abahad over the soft earth. It was fearful torture. With the first leap of the animal one of its hoofs struck the victim's head, laying the skull bare for three inches. Every time the horse came near the avenging trio he was unmercifully lashed until he flew about the ring with the speed of the whirlwind. The roar aroused the sleeping camp, and soon the place was filled with the cries of the dusky men and women. Two turbaned heads rushed to the assistance of the flying Abahad, but the three Bedouins responsible for the outrage beat them back with whips and knives. There was a momentary lull when from the tents rushed a dozen brave fellows. Half of them were armed with swords and bayoneted carbines and descended upon the avengers with a yell. A fierd fight followed, in which members were freely used with bloody effect. The trio made a bold stand, but were beaten into subjection before many minutes.

A FARMER'S FREAKS.

Tears Down His Barn and Shaves Half His Face and Head.

DANBURY, Conn., Aug. 21.—William Ward White, a well to do farmer of this place, has become insane. A few days ago he tore down his barn, and the next day he chopped down two large maple trees that had been planted on the lawn in front of his house by his father many years ago. He said that he was going to tear down his house next week. He has been taken to the almshouse and placed in the insane ward until he can be taken to the state insane asylum at Middletown.

When placed in custody, the poor old man had shaved off his hair, mustache and whiskers on one side.

He owns much valuable property and fancies he owns thousands of acres of the best land in this section.

One of his vagaries is to refuse all food that is not prepared by his friends, and a short time ago, when placed under restraint for 30 days, refused during that time to touch food and water that was not brought to him by relatives or friends.

He is now trying to starve himself because, he says, his former friends have moved into the senate and perhaps to dispose of the two election cases. There were three of these, but one—that concerning Mr. Beck with's title to his seat by virtue of appointment by the governor of Wyoming—has been removed from the calendar because of the resignation of the appointee.

Senator Morrill has given notice that he will address the senate today on the silver repeal bill, and it was the understanding Friday when the senate adjourned that a vote should be taken on the election cases at 5 o'clock.

LABOR IN SORE STRAITS

New York's Idle Men Resolve to Ask For Work.

APPEAL OF ORGANIZED TRADES.

Gompers Says the Wealthy Must Be Forced to Give Relief—A Rich German Feeds a Thousand Hungry People Free—Nowark's Unemployed In Parade.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The first conference of the delegates from the various trade unions of New York to take action on the existing condition of affairs in the labor world and to devise means of remedying the unemployed and to formulate plans for a great labor demonstration was held at 237 East Tenth street. After four hours of discussion, some of it lively, resolutions were adopted and committees appointed with a view of improving the condition of affairs.

The meeting was lively at times, but good order prevailed as a general thing. One or two persons present advanced socialistic ideas, but they were promptly set upon. The general tone of the meeting was conservative, the line of coolness and prudence. The large majority of the speakers counseled obedience to the laws and confidence in the intelligence of the law.

President Gompers of the Federation of Labor acted as temporary chairman and opened the meeting by remarking upon the situation. Then Robert M. Campbell of Typographical Union No. 6 was elected permanent chairman; Thomas C. Welsh of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, English secretary, and J. Barns of Union No. 90, German secretary. The following resolutions were passed:

The Resolutions Adopted.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to ask all labor organizations and sympathizers to co-operate with the conference and assist in devising means to assist the unemployed.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to wait upon the mayor and other officials of this city and state with the view of devising and agreeing up work, to the end that new employment be furnished the unemployed. And be it further

Resolved, That the committee be delegated to call upon the civil justices and ask that evictions of unemployed workmen for nonpayment of rent be postponed during the crisis.

The other resolution passed was to the effect that a committee be appointed to wait upon an address to the people explaining the position of the conference and its reasons for its actions in the matter.

In his opening address President Gompers of the Federation of Labor spoke of the situation as lamentable and said a crisis had been reached. But one thing, he said, could remedy the evil, and that was the wise and action of organized labor.

The speaker said the blame rested with the wealthy classes. "The main thing to do," said he, "is to devise means to force these people to provide means by which the manhood and womanhood of this country may be maintained." The speaker concluded by saying: "Have we anything to gain by breaking the laws?" he asked, and there were loud cries of "No, no!"

It was explained that the conference was called because there was a general lack of cohesion among the workingmen of the city. The inauguration of public improvements as a means of furnishing work for the unemployed was advocated. It was suggested that this city inaugurate the building of a system of rapid transit, improve its streets, sewers, docks, etc. "It is a fine commentary on our civilization," said the speaker, "when criminals can be sent to prison and work found for them, while honest men walk the streets in idleness."

Delegate Davis of Cigar Makers' union No. 13 said the workingmen did not want charity. "We ask for work for bread, and they give us a stone," said he, "and cry by they will give us bullets."

Fed a Thousand Free.

Morris Hinterberg, a wealthy German, furnished meals free to 1,000 unemployed people. Circulars had been sent out notifying all unemployed persons to call at his place between the hours of 11 and 1 o'clock and get "a good square meal." Most of the men, women and children who accepted the invitation gave evidence of their need by eating ravenously. Mr. Hinterstein will continue the charity daily for the present.

Lou s Vischofsky, an unemployed tailor, was arraigned before Justice Voorhis in the Essex Market police court. He was charged with being present at a meeting in Military hall on Saturday afternoon, disturbing the peace by loud shouting of the audience to commit unlawful acts and to throw bombs at the police. Barondess, the leader of the unemployed tailors, was in court, and he retained a lawyer to defend Vischofsky, who denied having made the remarks.

"You are discharged," said the justice to Vischofsky, "because the evidence is insufficient to hold you and for the failure of the police to swear that you had made those remarks. I warn you, however, and all other people that I will hold for trial all those who make seditious remarks or disturb the public peace. You will be prosecuted if you are again disorderly and will be punished if you are not."

A man who had interfered with the officers when they arrested Vischofsky was fined $10. Barondess paid the fine.

Chicago's Unemployed Gather.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—At the call of the Chicago Federation of Labor a mass meeting of the unemployed, Metropolitan hall was completely filled with a crowd of between 1,500 and 1,800. The majority of the gathering were Jews. While the hall in the main body was of men, there was a generous sprinkling of women present. The addresses were by well known labor agitators and anarchists, foremost among whom was Lucy Parsons. Mrs. Parsons delivered an address full of lurid pictures of famine and misery and inflaming exhortations to concerted action against the dominating capitalists that set her auditors in a frenzy of wild applause as she concluded.

Newark's Hungry People to Parade.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 21.—A circular has been issued appealing to the hungry people to assemble in peaceful demonstration today at a vacant lot, corner of Bank street and Walnut place. There will be a parade through the principal streets, and speech-making will occur. Ample police provision has been made in case of trouble. The mounted force will be on hand, and sufficient men will be present to quell any disturbance which may arise.

An Appeal to Western Farmers.

SYLVAN BEACH, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The delegates and speakers to the Farmers' Alliance and People's party state convention have issued an appeal asking the farmers of the west to send food to the "idle and starving" laborers of the east.

THE FRENCH ELECTION.

The Panama Scandal Weapon Proved to Be a Boomerang.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The general parliamentary election in France was unexpectedly free from disorders and even excitement. Excepting slight disturbances in the Var, where M. Deputescam, the Radical leader, had a hot fight with his slanderers, no trouble is reported. In Paris the poll, although much larger than usual, was quite featureless. The returns have come in slowly from all districts outside of Paris. The returns received up to this morning show the election of 150 Republicans, 5 of the "Rallied," 3 Revisionists and 15 Royalists.

In 83 of the districts heard from rehalots will be necessary. Ex-Minister Jules Roche and Leon Say are among the candidates to take part in the reballots. M. Basly and M. Lemendin, the socialists who were expelled from Belgium at the time of the miners' international congress in Brussels last May, were elected. M. Papillaud, the anti-Semitic subeditor of La Libre Parole, was defeated.

According to the results already ascertained in about half the districts, the Republicans have gained a more decisive victory than was expected. The socialist vote is much below the general estimates of last week. The "Rallied" are in a very bad way. Indications are that the opponents of those implicated in the Panama scandal used this weapon too freely and produced a reaction in favor of the besmirched deputies.

FIVE WERE KILLED.

Churchgoers Struck on a Crossing by a Fast Train.

LEROY, N. Y., Aug. 21.—An accident occurred here on the Lehigh Valley railroad crossing of Lake street in which five people were instantly killed. Their names are L. J. Bovee, Mrs. L. J. Bovee and daughter Miss Ola Bovee, all of Leroy; Miss Nancy Wycks of the same place and Miss Emma Bowden, daughter of the Rev. Samuel Bowden of West Thirty-second street, New York. Miss Bowden was visiting the Bovees, one of the wealthiest and most prominent families in Genesee county.

The Bovee residence is three miles from the village of Leroy. The five unfortunates started with a spirited team to drive to church. As they approached the Lehigh Valley track the east bound Lehigh Valley flyer came thundering along at a speed of nearly 50 miles an hour. Mr. Bovee did not see it until he was too close to check his horses. Mr. Bovee made a frantic effort to get across, but the engine struck the forward part of the carriage, and a second later the mangled bodies of the occupants were flying through the air. All were mangled beyond recognition but for the clothing they wore. Miss Bovee was deceipitated.

Anti-French Movements In Italy.

ROME, Aug. 21.—The anti-French agitation, started in consequence of the massacre of Italians at Aigues-Mortes, has gained ground rapidly. A mob attacked the Santa Chiara seminary of French priests, tore down the escutcheons from the facade, trampled them under foot, smashed the windows and tried to force the doors. A company of police are stationed at the French embassy, as the anti-French agitators have threatened to sack it. In both Milan and Turin incendiary anti-French manifestos have been issued.

Trouble Feared From Italians.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 21.—The situation is becoming serious in the Italian camps along the Consolidated road between Stratford and Milford, owing to the fact that many workmen who have been discharged are unable to get money due them from contractors. They have attacked Contractor Malloy once, and it required all the constables in Milford to quell the riot. They have now given the contractors until tonight to settle.

STORIES OF THE STORM

Several People Reported Killed and Much Damage Done.

HUNTING FOR A LOST WOMAN.

Three Hudred Camp Meeting Folks Aided In the Search.—A Yacht Upset and Three People Drowned.—Men Struck by Lightning.—Animals Killed by Hailstones.

MERRICK, N. Y., Aug. 21.—For several hours while the great storm which swept over Long Island was at its height a searching party of 300 worshipers in attendance upon the big Methodist camp meeting here were scouring the woods and fields for Mrs. Andrew Foot of Brooklyn, who had disappeared.

The army of searchers was divided into little bands of 20 each and led by the clergyman who were participating in the revival. Not one of the searchers gave up until Mrs. Foot was found a mile away in a wooded swamp and carried to her summer cottage, where she lies, still unconscious. The mystery surrounding her disappearance is as great as ever.

Until she recovers consciousness no light can be shed upon the peculiar affair. It is believed that she was struck by lightning, but why she should be so far away, with a heavy storm approaching, only she can explain, and it is feared she may not recover sufficiently to tell.

A Call For Volunteers.

Mr. Foot and his family have a cottage here. Mr. Foot is a prosperous surveyor in Brooklyn and with his family spends his summers at Merrick.

Mrs. Foot left her cottage, telling her family that she was going for a short walk. No uneasiness was felt until it began to grow dark and the big storm was seen to be coming. Many persons were questioned, but none had seen her. Thoroughly alarmed, her family appealed to the congregation of the camp meeting for help. A call for volunteers followed. Three hundred men responded.

She was found over a mile from her home and a mile and a half from the camp meeting ground. She lay upon her back thoroughly drenched. In the lantern's light she was quickly seen to be unconscious, and it was thought she was dead.

It is thought that Mrs. Foot had been unconscious for a long time before being found. Physicians are in attendance upon her, but every effort to restore her to consciousness has thus far been ineffectual. They believe that she was either stunned by lightning or fell, overcome by heat, before the storm came up.

Drowned In His Room by Rain.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 21.—Michael Dehello, an Italian 60 years of age, was found drowned in his apartments in the basement of 254 Fourth avenue. Shortly after midnight on Saturday night Louis Fraser, the roommate of Dehello, woke up and found the room covered with nearly three inches of water. He tried to wake his friend, but the man refused to get up. Fraser then left him. Later when two officers arrived there they found the body of Dehello, who had been drowned. The flooding of the room was caused by the heavy rains.

The Storm Area Was Wide.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—All people outdoors within a radius of at least 100 miles from New York city got a thorough soaking from the storm that prevailed. It was a singular fact that scarcely any wind accompanied the rain in the city, yet in Westchester county, Long Island and New Jersey it blew hard enough to do a great deal of damage.

Greenhouse Damaged.

FLUSHING, N. Y., Aug. 21.—One of the new greenhouses of the John Henderson nurseries of this village, which cost $4,000, was almost totally demolished by the storm.

Lightning Struck an Alderman's House.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 21.—The house of Alderman John Birkhoper in Central avenue was struck by lightning at midnight, and the cupola of the house was wrenched off.

Killed at a Wedding Feast.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—At a wedding held in the tenement at 88 James street, a five-story building, occupied exclusively by Italians, part of the merrymaking was the distribution of sweetmeats to the children of the house and those who happened to be in the street. Ten-year-old Joseph Lovigio was on the fire escape of the first floor, and seeing the candies falling to the pavement below he tried to catch some of them. He reached out too far and went headforemost into the street. A doctor was called, but the child's skull had been fractured and he was dead.

Times Brighter In Connecticut.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 21.—While several of the large manufacturing establishments in this city are temporarily closed, there is no destitution. Many merchants report large cash sales and easier collections than during any previous August. The quarrymen at the Portland, Brownwell and Maromas quarries are the most affected, as money for the sale of stone is not easily obtained. Arrow Anna mills have been running overtime, though they stop for repairs this week according to custom.

A Whimsical Burglar.

NORWICH, Conn., Aug. 21.—A whimsical burglar went into a group of four small stores on Central wharf. He took $20 in a Hebrew clothing shop and a change of clothes. Then, strolling down on the wharf, he stripped off his old suit and put on the Jew's. He visited several other small stores and was finally discovered. The officers fired at him twice, but he escaped.

New York Democrats' Action.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Chairman Edward Murphy, jr., has nominated 11 Democratic state committee to meet at the Hoffman House in this city on Saturday next.

An Active Volcano In Washington.

TACOMA, Aug. 21.—A party who have just returned from an ascent of Mount St. Helenes report that the mountain is an active volcano.

Orange In a Financial Fix.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 21.—Tiletown is in a bad financial fix, owing to the stringency of the times.

A HEROIC LIFE WORK

DOROTHEA L. DIX ACCOMPLISHED MANY NEEDED REFORMS.

She Began With the Insane Poor of Her Native State, and Her Influence Extended to All Parts of the World—She Aided Soldiers Also.

Dorothea L. Dix died July 17, 1887, aged 85. Her life was one of toil, privation and self sacrifice. But few women or men have ever accomplished so much for their fellows. She was born in 1802, and her early life was bleak, humiliating and painful. Her father not being able to take care of her, she soon left his roof and found an abiding place, but scarcely a home, with her grandmother in Boston. Possessed of exceptional energy and ambition, she early determined to fit herself for a teacher. While one side of her character seemed that of an earnest, unenthusiastic worker, the other was exceptionally sensitive and full of beautiful ideals. She revelled in poetry and worshiped intellectual greatness, but poverty and ignorance appealed to her strongly, and she early began to work for poor and neglected children. For these she opened a school in the barn of her grandmother's house, which was the beginning of the beneficent work afterward carried on at Warren Street chapel—now the Bernard Memorial on Warrenton street.

Miss Dix also had a small day school, which afterward developed into a large combined boarding and day school. While she had charge of it, in school, which required the most assiduous labor and exercise ability, she wrote a book that became a familiar friend to many families a generation age. It was called the "Science of Common Things," and in a comprehensive, easy manner gave valuable information about the ordinary things used in the household. It had a place in almost every home and was a standard reference. One could find in it information about everything from a needle to a nutmeg, and in any perplexity "Common Things" was consulted as an oracle. This little book passed through 69 editions. Other later books were "Garland of Flora," "Private Hours," "Alice and Ruth," "Prisons and Prison Discipline."

At last, on account of poor health, the school was relinquished, and she became a governess in the family of Dr. W. E. Channing. While a member of his family she went to the island of St. Croix and obtained her first glimpse of the evils of slavery.

After her return to Boston, being in better health, she again took up school work until 1836, when she broke down, and accompanied by friends went abroad for rest and change. She had saved enough money to afford her a modest income.

It was on until this that Miss Dix was brought face to face with the horrible condition that existed in the prisons and almshouses of Massachusetts. She visited the jail at East Cambridge and found a terrible overcrowding of innocent, guilty and insane prisoners. She then visited all the other prisons of the State, finding the same horrible condition, of affairs that she addressed a memorial to the legislature on the subject, giving a graphic description of the abuses and needs of the insane poor. Her enthusiasm called the attention of Dr. S. G. Howe, Charles Sumner and others. Public opinion was aroused by the horrors unveiled, politicians were terrified, a bill for relief carried and an order passed to provide the necessary accommodations for the sane people.

Then the conviction came to her that all over the United States the same appalling story was true of the wretched fate of the pauper insane. She felt that she must visit state after state, collect facts, besiege legislatures and arouse public opinion. It was a stupendous work, but this frail woman, with a grasp of intellect worthy a statesman, accomplished it. Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Jersey all show her work today. Pennsylvania followed. She made long journeys, north and south, east and west, always carrying hope for the unfortunate. In nine years she had carried for reforms the legislatures of Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, South and North Carolina and Maryland, besides establishing an asylum at Halifax and St. Johns, N. B.

Miss Dix, on her return, became interested in the work of saving shipwrecked mariners on Sable island, which had long been called "the graveyard of seamen." While visiting the place a wreck occurred, and she saw how inadequate to save life were the means at hand. Through the cooperation of several citizens of Boston, Miss Dix sent lifeboats and other life saving paraphernalia. The day after these arrived a large ship was wrecked on the island, and by means of this apparatus 180 souls were saved.

In 1854-5 she investigated, not without opposition, the condition of insane hospitals in Scotland and found in them a repetition of what she had seen here. She at once began moving the great and cumbrous engine of English law to reform these abuses, but it was not until 1857, after years of labor and opposition, that the object was accomplished. Her attention was then called to similar abuses in the Channel islands. After 13 years of agitation a large public sentiment for the humane and scientific treatment of the demented was built. She also inspected the asylums in Rome, finding so much to condemn that she obtained an audience with Pope Pius IX. She was received with the greatest kindness, and her revelations intently listened to. Later the pope visited the asylum and found so many shocking things that at a second audience he thanked Miss Dix that she, "a woman and a Protestant, had crossed the seas to call his attention to these cruelly treated members of his flock."

On her return to America, until the breaking out of the civil war in 1861, Miss Dix devoted herself to hospital work, aiding new institutions and directing older ones. In all she founded 32 hospitals, besides two in Japan that owe their inception to her influence.

During the war she devoted herself to hospital work. She was superintendent of nurses, having the entire control of their appointment and assignment to duty. At the close of the war she was instrumental in raising funds for the great national monument for dead soldiers at Fort Monroe.—Boston Herald.

Glass Curtains.

Glass curtains are a novelty in art industry for house furnishings, according to an English paper. They are shown in Paris and have the effect of stained glass when hung. "They are made up of little squares of colored glass, each set in a small frame and of a size to suit the window. The frames at the four corners by small hooks. This hinging of the pieces gives them a certain pliability, in effect at least, and they have the virtue of easy cleansing and simple adjustment to various sizes of windows by increasing or decreasing the number of squares.

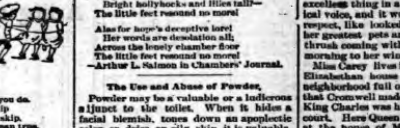
CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

The Raccoon and the Rabbit.

A raccoon and a rabbit were crossing a river together in an old tub. When about midway between the two shores, they discovered that their boat was leaking badly They had nothing with them with which to bail out the water, and neither of them could swim, so you may be sure they were badly frightened. At length the rabbit hit upon a plan which he thought might save them.



"Let us," said he to his companion, "fall to drinking the water in our boat, and perhaps in this way we may so reduce it that we shall be able to reach the other shore in safety."

The raccoon readily agreed to this plan, and both animals set to drinking with a will. But though they were able to reduce the quantity of water in the tub it continued to settle and presently went down with the two unfortunate travelers.

From this sad tale we may learn the wholesome lesson that shifting a respond blame is not the same as ridding one's self of it.—Peter Newell in St. Nicholas.

The Boy Who Killed a Chicken.

The boy was covered with mud to the top of his kilt shirt, there were mud patches on his face and hair, and he had lost his hat, but in his hand he grasped a chicken—a limp, wet and muddy chicken. It was the cause of his trouble, for he had thrown stones in the yard that afternoon and had accidentally killed the chicken. His sister had declared that she could not love such a cruel boy. Then he had disappeared and had been found stuck in a swamp.

When he saw his mother, his feelings overcame him, and he burst into a loud wail.

"My sister doesn't love me! my sister doesn't love me! I want to get losted in the woods and let the bears eat me!"

"But," said his mother, "you cried when you pinched your finger with the clothes pin, and it would hurt you sir more if the bears should eat you."

The boy was interested and dried his tears.

"I mean a kind, tame bear," he said, choking a sob.

"But a tame bear has sharp teeth."

The boy rubbed his eyes with his muddy hand and was lost in thought for awhile. Then he raised his head. His countenance was cheerful, there was not a trace of sorrow in his tone, and he cried, "I mean—I mean a nice little curly dog without any teef."—Harper's Young People.

How English Boys Train Puppies.

English boys excel all others in the way they train their puppies to grow up sound of course, but their methods are the most amazing, their hunting dogs are the most skillful, their collies "beef" beyond all criticism, and their greyhounds are fleet past all believing. You should read the records when the dogs race each year for the Waterloo cup. When an English boy trains his dog, he is very firm with him, but very kind. Young Johnny Bull never loses his temper with his faithful four footed friend. When he sets out to teach his dog a trick, he cannot him unstringly and rewards him plentifully.

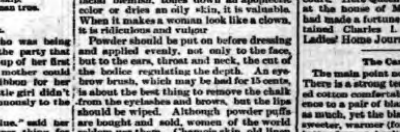
If doggie is out of spirits, he is allowed to rest until he feels better, and if painful means be administered it is done at the time and not delayed until doggie has forgotten his misdemeanor. Tossing is never indulged in, nor is the whip ever playfully flourished to strike terror to the poor fellow's heart. If it is wrong for doggie to do a thing today, it is wrong for him to do it tomorrow. And good food is fed to him on a clean plate, and he gets bones to gnaw only for his amusement, just as boys sometimes like to chew licorice root or sassafras bark, but of course they do not want it for dinner.—New York Ledger.

He Got the Autograph.

A small boy once saw Charles Sumner's frank on a public document, and, avaricious of autographs, straightway sat down and wrote to him, saying: "By the aid of Webster's Unabridged, the Latin and Greek lexicons and the assistance of my high school teacher I have made it out to be your name. If that is so, and you can do it again, please do it for me." The senator, amused by what the flippant people in these days would call the gall of the youth, replied. "I am glad," he wrote, "to learn that you have so many helps to education. It was my name. I can do it again, and here it is. Yours very truly. Charles Sumner."—New York Recorder

The Coaching Party.

Away we go
In our tallyho
From Africa to Chinatown!
With horses fleet,
The folks we meet
Must clear the way or be run down.



Now, ready all!
And do not fall,
You'll not be left surely if you do.
I'll crack the whip
And off we'll trip
And Jennie'll be a footman too.

She Liked Pink.

It was a very little girl who was being dressed by her mother for the party that was going to be the winding up of her first dancing school session. Her mother could find nothing but a pale ribbon for her daughter's braid, but the little girl didn't fancy blue and objected strenuously to the arrangement.

"But, of course, you like blue," said her mother. "It's just the proper thing for you to wear. Your eyes are blue, aren't they?"

"Oh, dear," repied the child, "I wish they were pink."—Boston Herald.

THE LITTLE FEET.

Across the lonely chamber floor,
And down the passage, through the hall,
The little feet run and no more!

There cometh through the open door
No merry voice, no laughing call
Across the lonely chamber floor.

But where the sunlight flashes o'er
Grey tapestry and pictured wall,
The little feet rounded no more!

Purchance upon a distant shore
They wander now—no more to fall
Across the lonely chamber floor.

Why comes the summer to restore
Each thing a woman-soul doth call—
The little feet rounded no more!

Alas for hope's deceptive lore!
Her words are desolation all;
Across the lonely chamber floor
The little feet rounded no more!
—Arthur L. Salmon in Chambers' Journal.

The Use and Abuse of Powder.

Powder may be a valuable or a ludicrous adjunct to the toilet. When it hides a facial blemish, tones down an apoplectic color or dries an oily skin, it is valuable. When it makes a woman look like a clown, it is ridiculous and vulgar.

Powder should be put on before dressing and applied evenly, not only to the face, but to the ears, throat and neck, the cut of the bodice regulating the depth. An eyebrow brush, which may be had for 15 cents, is about the best thing to remove the chalk from the eyelashes and brows, but the lips should be wiped. Although powder puffs are bought and sold, women of the world seldom use them. Chamois skin, old linen and scraps of merino are thought to be more serviceable for filling, instead of dusting the skin. It is all a matter of fancy, however.

For evening use powders are about the same in effect, but daylight powder should be selected with reference to the complexion and the toilet. Violet tints are not generally becoming. Blue-white is better than pearl, and flesh pink than either. The best all round powder for a complexion with a decided brunette tint is almond meal.

Powder keeps the face clean and is thought to close the skin, but it should be thoroughly washed out of the pores, not with soap, but with a good grade of cold cream.—New York World.

What Men Like In Women.

What men like best in the opposite sex is that indefinable attraction called womanliness or charm. Then up the back of hair and other attractions. But it takes a great many virtues to make up this womanliness. Men like sensibility in woman, they like a pleasant, cheerful face, the courtesy of the fireside. They like motherliness large enough to include the wants of the older as well as the younger.

They like sympathy, which means a willing ear to a tale of sorrow or of gladness. They like intelligence, but they prefer that her head should be stronger than her brain. They like women whose minds and faces are always full of, the sunshine of a contented mind and a cheerful disposition. They like a woman to possess a knowledge of how to dress well, which doesn't mean conspicuously. They like a companion—a woman who has sufficient knowledge of the world and its ways to talk well with them, who can become interested in their plans and hopes and can give a cheering word or intelligent and sympathetic hearing.

A man shrinks from a woman who open ly declares that she hates children and considers them a bore and a nuisance. He expects the maternal instinct to be present in all good women, and he is disappointed if he finds no evidence of its existence.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Author of "Wee Wifie."

Today Rosa Nouchette Carey would impress you first of all with the fact that she was a good looking woman. She is tall, slender and carries herself most gracefully. She has great, large eyes that seem sometimes blue and sometimes gray, while her hair, which is soft dark brown, is brushed off her face and braided at the back, and if you looked at it closely you would see a silver thread or two. She has that most excellent thing in a woman—a sweet, musical voice, and it would seem as if, in this respect, like looked for like, inasmuch as her greatest gift as a novelist is the gay little thrush sounding with great regularity every morning to her window for its breakfast.

Miss Carey lives in an artistically built Elizabethan house at Putney, which is a neighborhood full of romance. Here it was that Cromwell made his headquarters when King Charles was his prisoner at Hampden court. Here Queen Elizabeth used to stay at the house of Mr. Lacy, a clothier who had made a fortune and whose son entertained Charles II. Ruth Ashmore in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Care of a Bed.

The main point nowadays is the covering. There is a strong temptation to use a quilted cotton comfortable, costing $1, in preference to a pair of blankets costing five times as much, yet the blankets are far cleaner, sweeter, more healthful (if aired) and better from a health standpoint in every way. It is needless to add that the good housewife will see to it that bedding and clothes have a full airing and sunning to abolish entirely the stale, unpleasant odor which hangs around a bed and indicates the presence of an indefinite amount of insect animals. Clean sheets and sunshine work wonders with beds. If you are compelled to use a modern folding bed, be sure it has ample spaces for ventilation and that it is not put up in the morning until sun and air have worked their miracle of cleansing.—Dr E. G. Wood in Healthy Home.

Lip Soreness From Thread Biting.

Ladies who do a great deal of sewing frequently suffer a great deal from soreness of the mouth and lips and are often at a loss to ascertain the cause of the trouble. Half the time it is simply the result of biting off thread instead of using a pair of shears for cutting. In the case of silk thread the danger is quite marked, because it is usual to wax the thread in sevtase of heat, partly to harden it and give it a good surface and also perhaps to increase its weight somewhat. If this practice is followed reg ularly and very much silk thread is used, the results may be quite serious and even lead to blood poisoning.

How to Wear a Coronet.

Most coronets are made with velvet strings attached for tying them in through the hair, while others have wires, the ends of which are to be twisted each other, as the majority break up into separate ornaments and are kept in form when they are required for their original use by means of this wire. They are either placed quite forward on the head, allowing a portion of the fringe to show, or they are set on the crown of the head, and then are filled in with loops of hair or feathers. In every case the hair should be especially dressed for them, as they need to be kept firm.—London Queen.

Mr. William Tuttle of Middletown, N. Y., an uncle of Collector H. N. Spencer of North Plainfield, returned to his home yesterday morning after a pleasant visit. He is a very jolly and wealthy man, owning three large dairy farms in the Empire State.

One of the first attractions that greets the eye at the left of the 57th street entrance to the World's Fair grounds, is the Esquimo village. It is one of the most interesting exhibits in that great collection, and the first man you meet at this exhibit is Mr. G. D. Randolph, a former Plainfielder. In fact he was born here and attended school with W. J. Leonard and others. He is now a prosperous real estate dealer in Chicago, and with others is interested in the exhibit referred to, and is doing a good business, while everybody goes away well pleased with what is shown in the Esquimaux village. Mr. Randolph visited Plainfield three years ago, and renewed acquaintances among those of his childhood.

The Weather.

On Wednesday warmer, fair weather and light to fresh southerly winds will prevail, and on Thursday, warmer, fair weather, followed by rains in the lake regions.

FIRED INTO HIS MOUTH.

MR. C. M. SHAMMEAL OF THIS CITY COMMITS SUICIDES IN CHICAGO.

He Left Here About a Week Ago Without Informing Anyone of His Intentions—Money Matters Given as a Cause.

Mr. Clarkson M. Hammeal of this city shot himself in Lincoln Park, Chicago, yesterday morning. A dozen persons saw him draw a revolver, but before any one could interfere he had placed the muzzle in his mouth and fired. The bullet pierced his brain, passing out at the back of his head. Death was almost instantaneous.

Several letters were found in the pockets of the dead man. One of the letters bearing the signature of Mr. Walter L. Hetfield of this city contained the following:

There has been nothing in the papers about your coming, but any one we are talking questions is told that you are attending the World's Fair. Now, don't be foolish and stay away, but come home, brace up and take a position. You ought to make a deed of the small tract which is in Scotch Plains, Garrett's property, he sent one night, bring suit and sell it.

The letter then spoke of Hammeal's children and of a business which Garrett was conducting in his absence.

Another letter was from his daughter Carrie urging him to come home. An express receipt was found which showed that he had shipped all his personal effects home before taking his life. He wore a button of the 'Odd Fellows in his coat.

The only notice Hammeal left for the authorities was as follows: "Please notify my relatives. Clark M. Hammeal, Plainfield, Union county, N. J." Not a cent was found in his pockets.

Mr. Hammeal left this city August 10th telling no one where he was going.

The first news of Hammeal after his departure came in a letter from Chicago on August 14th, in which he declared he could no longer endure the disgrace of his failure in business. Other letters came from him indicating that he was despondent.

Hammeal about three months ago went into the butcher business with a partner upon borrowed capital.

He was a widower and lived with his son, Garret Hammeal of Elm place.

Financial difficulties are given as the cause for the act.

There was no trouble between Mr. Hammeal and the Odd Fellows as reported, as he held no office, but was simply a member of Plainfield Lodge, No 44

Mr. Hammeal learned his trade at Perth Amboy with Mr. James Gillman. He had been a resident of this city for many years. His venture into business with Mr. Ruppert was his attempt for himself. He was well-known among Plainfield butchers, having been in the employ of a number of them. They all speak of him as a man of good judgment and the last one in the world, in their opinion, to contemplate suicide.

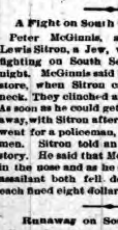
His son Garret received a telegram of his father's death yesterday afternoon, from H. H. Sigmund, undertaker, asking what to do with the body. The telegram asked to wire instructions to 73 Fifth avenue, New York. He, in company with Dr. Herbert, went to the address given last night, but found no one there by that name. Garret then sent a telegram to Chicago to wire particulars to him here.

The body has been sent for by Terrill & Cole. It is expected to arrive here Thursday morning. The funeral will be held probably Friday morning, and will be in charge of the Odd Fellows.

The son received a letter from the father this morning. It had been writ ten Saturday, and stated that he had nothing to live for.

WHEELMEN COLLIDE.

Men and Wheels Mixed Up at Bound Brook.



WHILE riding through Bound Brook last night Mr. U. B Crane of the gentlemen's furnishing store on West Front street, met with a severe accident. He was riding his bicycle without a bell or lantern, and was on the right hand side of the street when he was run into by another wheelman named Reed, who is connected with the Bound Brook Chronicle. Both men were thrown off and slightly injured. Their wheels were more or less damaged.

A Fight on South Second Street.

Peter McGinnis, an Irishman, and Lewis Sitron, a Jew, were arrested for fighting on South Second street last night. McGinnis said he went to enter a store, when Sitron caught him by the neck. They clinched and both fell down. As soon as he could get on his feet he ran away, with Sitron after him. Sitron's wife went for a policeman, who arrested both men. Sitron told an entirely different story. He said that McGinnis struck him in the nose and as he caught hold of his assailant both fell down. They were each fined eight dollars.

Runaway on South Avenue.

Yesterday afternoon as Mr. Dupee's coachman was driving along South avenue with a chicken coop in the wagon, his horse took fright and ran away. The driver was thrown out. On Fifth street one of the hind wheels broke down and the horse broke loose from the wagon and dashed down the street.

A RACCOON HUNT.

While Men were Hunting for it the Raccoon was Caught.

EARNING for its old life caused a pet raccoon's death.

Almost a year ago William Van Winkle of Park place caught a large raccoon in the mountains. Instead of killing it he decided to keep it as a pet. He procured a chain and kept the animal chained in the back yard of his grocery store at the corner of Somerset street and Manning avenue. The coon was getting real tame, but with its tameness it did not forget its love for chickens. A week ago Friday, Will's pet got loose, and after the neighbors began to lose their chickens. The coon was having a high old time living on good fat poultry. Its feast only lasted a week, however, as someone living on Jackson avenue caught him in a steel trap and then chopped him up with a hatchet to make sure of him.

While the coon was fast in the steel trap on Jackson avenue, Messrs. David D. Smalley Andrew Lutkins, Albert Smalley, Lewis Kline, Albert Taylor and "Billy" Jackson and several dogs were sure they had him cornered under Mr. See's barn on Manning avenue. They had guns, axes and clubs as weapons and swore vengeance on the chicken thief should he make his appearance. As he didn't put in an appearance, all the boies around the barn where he would be likely to come out of were stopped up with hay, and all this time the 'coon was fast in a trap a block away.

JEALOUSLY CAUSED IT ALL.

A Colored Man Didn't Want His Wife in a Room with Another Man Playing a Guitar.

A colored bride of four months applied to Justice Nash yesterday for a warrant for the arrest of her spouse, who she said had cruelly beat her, without provocation. The warrant was issued and the man was arrested by Constable Matter. The husband admitted that he had struck the woman he had promised to love, protect and cherish, at the altar only four short months ago. The cause of it all was that a green-eyed monster, jealously, which had run rampant through his noble being until he knew not what he did. He said his wife was in another room with another man who was playing a guitar, and when she came out he struck her.

The Justice gave him a lecture and sentenced him as to the law in such matters.

On his promise not to do it again he was released and the two went home together.

"ONLY EXERCISING THE HORSE."

That was the Excuse Given by Wm. Thompson when Arrested.

Sergeant Kiely, yesterday, arrested William Thompson, colored, for fast driving and abusing a horse. The horse belonged to Clarence Watson, who is starting at Lake Hopatcong with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Watson of Crescent avenue. The horse was all in foam and was bleeding from cuts made by a whip. Mr. Albert Hedden received the following telegram frm Mr. Watson:

HOPATCONG, N. J., Aug. 21.

Look after horse and let man go.

C. WATSON.

Mr. Hedden took the horse, but he didn't have anything to do with letting the man go.

Thompson was locked up. He was tried this morning. He said he had worked for Mr. Watson about four months, and that he was only exercising the horse.

Judge Coddington fined him $10.

THE KITCHEN WAS AFIRE.

The House was Burning when Mr. Miller's Family Awakened.

About twelve o'clock Sunday night a friend staying at Mr. Martin Miller's on the Washington Rock road, was awakened by the smell of smoke in his room. Hastily dressing he aroused Mr. Miller and the rest of the family. It was discovered that the kitchen was on fire. The children were carried out, for it was thought at first that the whole house was doomed. The men went to work throwing pails of water on the flames, which they finally extinguished. The fire was caused by the chimney.

BREVITIES.

—The newest furniture coverings are made of Turkish towling.

—The petit jurors for the October term of the Union County court will be drawn two weeks from to-day.

—There was a whiskey still in Cranford in 1738, but there is none of the 1893 whiskey still in Cranford. — Elizabeth Herald.

—A feature of the games of the New Jersey Athletic Club at Bergen Point on Labor Day will be the matching between "Tommy" Connell and "Willie" Day in four-mile run.

—A number of young people were out boating on the New Market lake last week when the boat capsized. Owing to the efforts of Geo. Craig, one of the party, no lives were lost.

ECHOES FROM CHICAGO.

[FROM THE CHICAGO "DAILY INTER-OCEAN" OF AUGUST 15, 1893.]

"Won't Forget His Own Town.—What Plainfield, N. J., Has Done for Chicago and the Fair.

T. W. Morrison, proprietor of the Plainfield Evening News and organizer and president for three terms of the State Publishers' Union of New Jersey, comprising several hundred New Jersey publishers, is visiting the Fair with his family. He received a copy of the Inter-Ocean at Altoona, Pa., nearly 500 miles from Chicago, while en route last Saturday and showed it around among his friends, pointing to it as an evidence of Chicago enterprise. They all secured copies and at once began looking through the advertisements to decide where they would locate. As a result many of the hotels were besieged by applicants, and the 5,000 people who comprised the ten sections of the delightful and justly popular Columbian express, run by the Pennsylvania railroad about five minutes apart, the newsboys saying that the papers were eagerly sought on all.

Mr. Morrison thinks Chicago is a big town, but is proud of the fact that as big as it is, as great a paper as the Inter Ocean has its beautiful colored supplement printed on a press made in Plainfield by Walter Scott & Co., who manufacture printing and lithographic presses of all kinds. He also notices, in going around town, that while it has a great many big railroads, the president of one and a former vice president of another lives in Plainfield, namely, Mr. A. Sheppard, president of the Santa Fe, and Mr John B. Dumont, recently vice president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul when it was the longest system in the world. He is also proud of the fact that it is on the giant batteries made at Plainfield that the great guns of the country exhibited at the Fair are manufactured, the lathes being the product of the Pond Machine Tool Works of Plainfield. Plainfield is also the town in which all the printing presses used by the Canadian government are made, they being from the Potter Press Works of that city.

Mr. Morrison noticed that The Columbian, the official morning newspaper at the Fair, giving in its eight pages the list of events of the day, and reports of what transpired day and day, is printed on the grounds in Machinery Hall, at the rate of 10,000 an hour, on presses from Plainfield, those of C. Potter, Jr.

Looking around Chicago he sees that it is the home of George Ade, the talented son of Bishop Vincent, and the editor of The Chautauquan, the greatest literary educational paper in the world. He is also a Plainfielder, and Plainfield was the headquarters of The Chautauquan before it came to Chicago.

Plainfield, Mr. Morrison says, is like Chicago in one respect: It is situated on a plain field, and has a great lake, but while Chicago has its great lake above ground Plainfield has its lake out of sight, underground, and from it obtains the purest of water, which, carried in streams over numerous cascades and waterfalls from adjoining mountains, is already filtered, and is probably the only city in the universe with this peculiarity of a natural filtered supply directly under every house. This water is also supplied by Plainfield to the adjacent cities, because of its extraordinary purity.

Mr. Morrison is also proud of the fact that in his county, Union, according to the Census Bulletin, has the best roads in the country, and while Chicago has its thirty-five railroads all centering in Chicago, Union county, of which Plainfield is a part, has more trains pass at a given point than any other place on the face of the earth, 600 trains passing in twenty-four hours at Elizabeth.

Sunday night, looking at the Ferris wheel, recalled to his mind the fact that but for a Jerseyman the electric lights which illuminate it and The Fair itself would not have been used for it is "Jersey Lightning," since it came from the brain of Jerseyman Edison.

Plainfield is known as "the Queen City of New Jersey," but Mr. Morrison thinks as he travels around that it is the queen city of the universe, considering its size. He says it is a town without debt, and spends more money on improvements, probably, than any other town of its size in the country, and the people believe in paying as they go.

The New York World recently devoted two columns to Mr. Hetfield's wealth, popularity, and enterprise. He concludes Chicago is a great town, but is proud of the fact that he is from Plainfield.

FELL FROM THE TRAIN.

Mathew Walker Receives Serious Injury to His Arm.

Friday evening as Mr. Mathew Walker of Grove street was stepping from the train at the North avenue station he caught his toe and fell upon the tracks. His right arm was badly fractured and his shoulder bruised. The injury is a very painful one and he will be compelled to carry the arm in a sling for a long time.

Mr. Love Finds a Pocket-book.

Shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon as Mr. Andrew Love, Sr., was walking down Park avenue, he stumbled across a pocket-book. He picked it up and called to a lady, who was walking a half block behind of him, to find out if it belonged to her. It did, and she was profuse in her thanks to Mr. Love. The lady was Mrs. Hall of Evon.

BEYOND DESCRIPTION.

THAT'S WHAT A TOURIST SAYS OF THE FAIR.

Buildings Blocks Long.—an Art Gallery You Can get Lost in.—The Wonders of the White City.

BEFORE going to Chicago Mr. Fireman will probably "go the whole hog" and take a westerner route and get a shave. Hair cut and shampoo.

Then, feeling comfortable, he will be in a frame of mind to enjoy "the greatest show on earth." One who has just returned from the Fair says, "I was on the go from early morning until midnight for seven days and I did not see one-fifth part of the Fair. It is simply beyond description."

Mr. Martin takes a big leap toward No. 1 piece to-day and some encouraging words he received from friends makes him sport a decidedly hopeful smile.

Mr. Salizman's friends are hustling also.

August 30 is the date for the winner.

Salvation Army Notes.

The camp meeting has been postponed till next Sunday afternoon, owing to the rain.

There was a large number at the meeting Sunday to hear Captain Daymond the "Boy Preacher" from national Headquarters, 111 Reade street, New York, who delivered a very interesting address.

On Thursday night Ensign Agnew from the candidates, department of national Headquarters and Mr. Bejorksten, the celebrated Swedish tenor singer, will be at the meeting. Mr. Bejorksten has traveled all over the country with Christine Nelson as her tenor singer.

Ten Thousand Panes of Glass Broken in Somerville.

Every glazier in Somerville and all that could be procured from other places were at work yesterday repairing the windows which were broken during Saturday's hailstorm.

It is estimated more than ten thousand panes of glass were broken in Somerville alone. The total loss in the vicinity will be more than $75,000.

Plainfield Birds Won.

There was a cocking main near this city last night between Plainfield and New Brunswick birds. Thirteen battles were fought, the Plainfield birds winning nine.

Many sportingmen were present and considerable money changed hands on the result.

Base Ball Notes.

Manager Keller hoped to have had either the Ragtowns or Aetnas here Saturday but was unable to secure them. He therefore accepted a date at Hackensack to play the Orlandos. He says it is a hard matter to get first-class teams to face the Crescents at home, and it is useless to bring poor teams here.

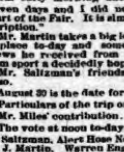
TENNIS EXPERTS AT NEWPORT.

The Tournament Began To-Day for the Championship with Seventy-Nine Entries.



TO-DAY at eleven o'clock began the largest and most important tennis tournament ever had in the United States. The prize is the championship of the United States, won for three years in succession by Mr. Oliver Campbell, who therefore owns outright the valuable silver vase emblematic of champion honors.

A similar cup is put up this year which must also be won three times in succession before it becomes the property of the winner. There are no less than seventy-nine entries for honors this year. and Dr. Dwight, of Boston, who has charge of the tournament, is referee and also vice president of the national association, has had his hands full in receiving entries and making the drawings for the preliminary rounds. This was done as follows:

The seventy-nine names were put into a hat and drawn, with the understanding that the first twenty-four names should receive byes, the next thirty names should play preliminary rounds of fifteen matches, and the last twenty-five names should also receive byes. This was done so that the fifteen winners of the preliminary rounds should aggregate the even number sixty-four, with forty-nine byes for the first round.

Mr. A. T Simmonds of the Hillside Tennis Club of this city was among those who drew byes.

Work on the Depression Stopped.

Work on the depression of the streets at the Central depot, Elizabeth, was stopped late Saturday night. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company wished to have the city agree to be responsible for any damages claimed by property-owners. This will leave the city to pay more than its share, and the demand was refused.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Youthful Offenders.

The State Children's Aid society of Pennsylvania is grappling with the question of boy and girl criminals in a praiseworthy way. Through its efforts the last legislature passed two acts dealing with this class of lawbreakers. One bill made provision for the entire separation in transit, in prison and in court of such youths from older criminals. The accused children will even have their trials separate from the older ones. This of itself is a great step forward. It is association with the wicked more than anything else that debases and ruins young ones.

The second law passed by the Pennsylvania legislature makes a discrimination even in case of the juvenile offenders which shows thought and purpose on this question much more enlightened than are common. Too many grown persons think of the average street child as a depraved little wretch, who at best is a nuisance and who is hid on society.

The Pennsylvania law recognizes that there are some children who answer this description, while others do unlawful and troublesome acts merely in a spirit of mischief or restlessness, often indeed not knowing that what they do is wrong. This class of children are not at all bad. They must do something, and they are often utterly homeless and friendless. At other times their parents themselves are drunkards and criminals. Such children, if still very young, are given into the custody of the Children's Aid society. They are not put into reformatories with the older youths, but are simply distributed among homes in the country away from temptation and wrong. There they are started toward manhood and womanhood among pure influences and healthful surroundings. The Pennsylvania law differs from most others that dispose of youthful defenders in not binding them out or making them work for a living. They are too young for that. They are placed with people of known integrity and kindliness, and the Aid society pays these persons for their keep. The society sees that they are properly fed, clothed and schooled.

Converting Sinners In Russia.

The Russian method of dealing with refractory heretics is unique in this age of the world. If one of the czar's subjects is charged with holding to or anything religious faith, he is visited and ordered to convert himself to the Greek church within a given time. An imperial ukase issued in the spring gave the heretics two months to change their theology. If, when the time prescribed has arrived, the accused has not yet had himself converted to the true faith, then he is pronounced outlawed.

To be outlawed is something not commonly understood in America. If an imperial ukase has pronounced a man and his family outlaws, it means literally what the word indicates. It means that his neighbors may rob him, seize and bind him and carry off all his goods; may drive him from his home and take possession of it themselves, as the English sparrow does the bluebird; they may even beat him almost to death, strip the very clothes off his back, and he can have no redress, for he has been formally pronounced beyond the pale of the protection of the law. If the outlawed man should be murdered, no notice would be taken of it, for he would no longer be a Russian citizen. Those pious, tender hearted souls, the emperor of Russia and his subject, recognize no man as a Russian citizen who does not belong to the Greek church.

Under the circumstances, when a man has been warned by imperial ukase that he must be converted, the best thing he can do is to be converted very quickly or else get out of Russia even more quickly.

The demonish folding bed has clutched and slain another victim. In New York city Mrs. Gorman was cleaning her bed with naphtha. She had not much sense, for while she rubbed in the explosive fluid with one hand she carried a lighted candle in the other. Naturally the fumes from the naphtha floated to the candle and burst into flame, conducting the fire to the vessel which held the liquid. Mrs. Gorman, stupefied and frightened, fell forward upon the bed. If it had been an ordinary bed, this might have saved her. But it was a folding bed, and the infernal machine closed over her and locked her in, and she could not lift the weight from her body. Before assistance were taken to an undertaking establishment after the firemen had extinguished the flames in the house.

The financial relations of Great Britain and the Argentine Republic are such that we must look upon the country to be a formidable rival henceforth in supplying not only wheat but also beef and mutton to the English market. This summer immense shipments of wheat have gone from the South American country to Great Britain, and that is believed to account in great measure for the low price of the grain here. England did not take from us what she was expected to take.

By putting an extra rim containing coils of springs around the tire of a wagon wheel it is said that all jolting of the vehicle upon rough roads is prevented. But a better way will be to get to have rough roads.

CRISP'S COMMITTEES.

The Displacement of Mr. Springer Was a Surprise.

MANY SOUTHERN CHAIRMANSHIPS

The Senate Drops Silver For the Lee Mantle Case Again—Dull Debate In the House—Mr. Breckinridge Disappointed Many—A Representative Injured.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The veteran senator from Vermont, Mr. Morrill, occupied the attention of the senate with an argument in support of the bill discontinuing the purchase of silver bullion. The speech, which was sometimes witty and serious, was read from printed slips and occupied a little over an hour in its delivery.

The bill was then laid aside, and the case of the senatorship from Montana was taken up. Two speeches were made against the claims of Mr. Lee Mantle and against the constitutional right of a state governor to appoint to the senate save only in case of vacancy happening on account of resignation or otherwise during the recess of the legislature.

The first was made by Mr. Vance of North Carolina, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, but who wrote the minority report, and the other by Mr. George of Mississippi, who joined in the minority report.

The vote on the resolution to seat Mr. Mantle was postponed until Wednesday at 5 p. m.

Speeches In the House.

The committees were appointed by the speaker, and taken as a whole they are approved. The silver debate was dull, and the large audience which had assembled to listen to Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky was disappointed.

Mr. Bynum of Vermont spoke for the Wilson bill and Mr. Hooker of Mississippi against it. Mr. Cooper of Indiana thought it inexpedient to adopt free coinage at this time, and Mr. Sperry of Connecticut took the opposite view. Mr. Cox of Tennessee advocated free coinage, and Mr. Settle of North Carolina spoke in opposition.

At the evening session speeches were made by McLaurin of South Carolina, McDonald of Illinois, Bartlett of New York and Stockdale of Mississippi.

The House Chairmanships.

The principal changes made by Speaker Crisp in the chairmanships of committees announced by him had been discounted in the public mind by the publications previously made concerning their composition. The chief surprise was therefore occasioned by the assignment given Mr. Springer.

He had generally been accorded a place at the head of the committee on foreign affairs in case of a transfer from the committee on ways and means. No one had suggested him for membership on banking and currency. The announcement of the fact as it was read from the clerk's desk was the first intimation that members had of the speaker's determination in the matter.

The committees of the fifty-second congress, those on the eleventh census, Columbian exposition and to investigate the Panama Canal company have passed into history and are not on the list this year. With the four committees previously appointed—rules, mileage, accounts and enrolled bills—there is a total of 33 named for the fifty-third congress. Upon sectional lines chairmanships of 32 committees go to the south and 21 to the north.

They states the chairmanships are divided as follows: Alabama, 3; Arkansas, 1; Connecticut, 1; Georgia, 4; Illinois, 4; Indiana, 2; Kentucky, 3; Louisiana, 1; Maryland, 1; Mississippi, 3; Missouri, 1; Michigan, 1; New Jersey, 2; New York, 5; North Carolina, 2; Ohio, 2; Pennsylvania, 2; Rhode Island, 1; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 3; Texas, 2; Virginia, 3; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 2.

The Chairmanship List.

The chairmanships as announced by Speaker Crisp are as follows:
Elections—Mr. O'Ferrall (Va.).
Ways and Means—Mr. Wilson (W. Va.).
Appropriations—Mr. Sayers (Tex.).
The Judiciary—Mr. Culberson (Tex.).

Representative Shell Hit by a Cable Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The cable line here has claimed its third victim from among the members of congress. Representative George W. Shell of South Carolina was knocked down and trundled along the fender of a cable car for some distance. He was badly cut about the head and bruised as well. Mr. Shell did not become unconscious, and his physician is now hopeful of his speedy recovery.

WAGES MUST COME DOWN.

Fall River Manufacturers Cannot Sell the Cloth They Make.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 22.—The news of an impending cutdown in wages has turned the attention of people in this city to the seriousness of the present trade situation in all parts of the country. Today cloth and the prices obtainable for it are the great topics of discussion in every local circle.

The manufacturers who voted to appoint a committee to meet with like committees from other New England centers say they do not care to consider the question of the wage schedule alone.

At the present time the schedule furnished by the Spinners' union is in reality the one under which most of the large mills are working, and it has long been recognized. This scale is based on home prices. To revise the work schedule in the first purpose of most manufacturers of influence here. They contend that such a revision may have no effect on the demand for their product, but it will reduce the cost of production to a basis more nearly akin to the present selling price of their goods. They do not expect that operatives will take kindly to a reduction, but if the mills are to be run no better wages can be paid than are to be offered when the new schedule goes into effect.

The factories that stopped did not close their gates because the help were earning too much money, but because they could not dispose of their output at any figure.

Iron Works Starting Up Again.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 22.—There is plenty of smoke issuing from consumers' chimneys of many iron mills in the vicinity of Pittsburg. The works of Phillips, Nimick & Co. are now in full operation. Three thousand men are at work at the works of Franklin's, and every department is at work except four mills and the sheet iron rolls. The United States Iron and Tin Plate company's works are in partial operation, as are the Lockhart Iron and Steel company's works at Chartiers. The Black Diamond Steel works started in full, giving employment to 4,000 people. Outside of the city there was a partial resumption at reduced wages at the National tube works at McKeesport. Three open hearth furnaces were placed in operation at the Carnegie Homestead plant. The Oliver Coke Furnace company fired 100 ovens at Uniontown, employing 200 men. Before the end of the week it is expected that other large plants will be placed in operation.

Business Fair In Hartford.

HARTFORD, Aug. 22.—A tour of this city shows that the unemployed are proportionately less than in other cities. Between 1,000 and 1,500 are out of employment or working on short time. Most of the big concerns are running full time.

Mines and a Railroad Idle.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—All the mines at Mineville, Essex county, have shut down, and by reason of the shutdown the Lake Champlain and Moriah railroad will be stopped.

Less Work For Carbuilders.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—The men employed in the carshops of the Boston and Albany railroad at Allston will hereafter work only five days in the week.

A Reduction In Wages.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Aug. 22.—The Schuylkill iron works of Conshohocken have announced a general reduction in the wages of their employees.

Running on Half Time.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The Williams' knitting manufacturing company, makers of sewing machines, has begun running on half time.

The Electric Welding Business Dull.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—The Thomson-Houston Electric Welding company of Lynn has discharged all but eight of its employees.

Shoe Manufacturers to Shut Down.

MILFORD, Mass., Aug. 22.—Colburn, Fuller & Co., shoe manufacturers, are preparing to shut down.

Mills In Olneyville Resume.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 22.—The mills in Olneyville resumed operations.

Runaway on Suspension Bridge.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 22.—A team of horses ran away with a coach occupied by Mrs. T. M. Norris of Culpeper, Va., ran away on the new suspension bridge here. In the center of the bridge Mrs. Norris jumped out and was badly injured. It is feared she will lose an arm. The rig at the same time collided with two others, and all were overturned and battered against the side guards of the bridge with great violence.

Senator Hill Too Ill to Go Out.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Senator D. B. Hill of New York, who has been quite ill at his hotel here, the Normandie, for several days, is reported to be considerably better. His ailment is an outgrowth of a stomach trouble. He is now able to be up and about, although the physicians forbid his leaving the house for several days yet.

Tobacco, Hay, Whisky and Tramps Burned.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 22.—A through east bound freight was wrecked at Lee Hall by the parting of the train. The wreck took fire, and several cars loaded with leaf tobacco, hay and whisky were consumed. Two tramps are supposed to have been burned to death.

Another Accident to the Navahoe.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The Navahoe, Britannia, Satanita and Calluna sailed in the Torquay regatta off the Devon coast. The Navahoe sustained an accident to her mainsail and withdrew from the contest. The Britannia finished first and won the prize.

Left Mary Anderson-Navarro Nothing.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 22.—The will of the late Dr. Hamilton Griffin, the stepfather of Mary Anderson, was admitted to probate. It bequeaths whatever was made to his stepdaughter, Mary Anderson-Navarro.

Young Krist Accidentally Killed.

NORWICH, Aug. 22.—William Krist, son of Julius Krist, foreman for the Norwich Silk company, was accidentally shot and instantly killed here by a companion named Sherman.

Tried Hanging, Then Drowned Himself.

FLEMINGTON, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The body of Albert Miller, aged 32 years, a silk weaver, was fished out of the sound off Point View. It is thought that he first tried to hang himself.

THEY WANT GOVERNMENT AID.

The Anarchists Advise the Idle Workmen to Steal Bread and Kill Reporters—A Big but Quiet Crowd Gathered In Union Square to Hear Speeches.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The several committees appointed by the organized labor conference for the relief of the unemployed have issued three proclamations. The principal one is addressed to the people of the United States and begins with this paragraph:

A hundred thousand men, women and children are nearing the verge of starvation in this rich metropolis of these free United States. Hundreds of thousands of others are within but a short distance from want and its attendant suffering, misery and crime. From all the sections of the manufacturing centers there comes the anxious demand for work, soon, we fear, to be followed by the desperate, despairing cry for bread.

Then follows a somewhat floridly worded recital of the condition of the working people and the announcement that organization and better hours of work would in time solve the problem and abolish poverty. This appeal follows:

The Appeal.

We therefore call upon all to contribute funds for the unemployed who seek work in vain and whose wives and little ones are starving on our streets. As a city is a corporative corporation in which all citizens are shareholders, no one has the right to live in extravagant luxury while the citizens near by are in want. We therefore call upon the mayor and the board of aldermen of the city of New York to convene a special meeting and there devise ways and means in the same manner and to the same extent as they would in case of pestilence.

As food obtained by work is more enjoyable than food obtained free as a right without work, we ask the authorities to provide ways and means for the commissioner and maintenance of public parks and the employment of the unemployed directly and not by contract. The same reasons prompt us to call upon the governor of the state and the president of the United States to call attention by public proclamation and by legislative action to the same end and in such a manner as the fundamental law will permit.

In humane men and women we entreat you to listen to the cry of labor for work and bread. As patriotic citizens we proclaim that those who control the industries and the finance of the United States are responsible for the employment of labor, and we demand of them immediate relief for the victims of a system inherited from the ages of wrong with which the poor have been oppressed.

The following appeal is signed by Samuel Gompers, Chris Evans, Andrew J. Smith, Thomas C. Walsh, Joseph Barondess, Henry Weismann and Henry White.

Advised to Kill and Steal.

At a meeting held in Covenant hall, 26 Orchard street, the first speaker, whose name could not be learned, denounced the authorities generally. When a reporter walked into the hall, he was denounced by the speaker, who said that the crowd should rise and kill the representative of the capitalistic press.

He repeated the injunction two or three times, and several times there was a similar demonstration toward the reporters. The reporters acted very quietly and took no notice.

The second speaker interjected politics into the meeting. He said the present condition of the workingmen was entirely due to the Democratic administration.

Other there were two meetings going on simultaneously in Covenant hall, one on the first and another on the second floor. In the meeting up stairs a speaker, whose name could not be learned, advised his hearers to ask no more for work; that they were makers of bread, and if they wanted it, to go and take it and let nobody or nothing stop them. They should fight all opposition, no matter what kind, and get what they wanted.

Emma Goldman was more rabid in her utterances than ever. She told her hearers to remember the fate of the men who had been killed at Homestead by the Pinkertons. She told them that if they went to another meeting at Union square not to even look at a policeman. Then she capped that with the advice, "Don't go to Union square unless you are armed."

There were more people, more speakers, more police, more platforms and more hard language in Union square at the second open air mass meeting of the unemployed than on Saturday night, when the rain dampened the ardor of even the most hotheaded. Emma Goldman harangued the meeting for two hours, first in two languages, and denounced presidents and kings, police and Pinkertons, reporters and their capitalistic employers, and especially the individual who keeps his eye on Walhalla hall, but the big crowd kept its wits.

In vain she referred to the fate of Alexander II of Russia and entreated her hearers to take sticks and stones and show the hardhearted American public what they could do. No one took the meeting, and when it was declared to be ended the 3,000 men present dispersed peaceably.

Advised to Steal Bread.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 22.—At the meeting of the unemployed which was held after they had paraded through the principal streets Emma Goldman spoke. She advised the men to steal bread if they could not get it by working. Resolutions were adopted asking the mayor for bread and asking him not to allow tenants to be ejected for nonpayment of rent.

BOY BANDITS CAPT'd.

The Red Rangers of the Passaic Broken Up.

YOUNG NEW JERSEY DESPERADOES

They Had a Hut In the Woods Filled With Spoils Taken From Country Stores.—Now They Will Give Up Their Wild Life and Go to School.

PARK RIDGE, N. J., Aug. 22.—The Red Rangers of the Passaic, or the Boy Bandits of Park Ridge, have been brought to bay their rendezvous in the forest has been destroyed, and starvekeeps here now breathe easier. These young bandits had for their haunt a nook in the center of the forest. It was a secluded spot, surrounded by a heavy growth of underbrush, through which it was impossible to penetrate save by a single path cut in a tortuous, roundabout way by the bandits.

Once inside the rendezvous, the boys had a meeting place as romantic as had those heroes of cheap fiction from which they obtained their ideas.

They had cleared away a large space in which they had built a hut, and there they spent their spare hours reading dime novels and planning new raids on the stores and houses in this vicinity.

They adopted a uniform costume, wore red shirts to symbolize the name of their band and met at stated intervals, when they transacted business in the approved bandit style. They were armed and roamed about their domains as did the heroes they patterned after.

Warned Outsiders Off.

Throughout the forest they posted signs warning persons from intruding upon their domain. "No trespassing," printed as if by the owner of the forest, was posted at intervals, and they had guards stationed to warn them of an approaching foe.

But the Red Rangers came to grief. In some way they learned that officers of the law were on their track, and when the peace minions reached the rendezvous nothing was there save the blackened ruins of their hut and the charred remains of their plunder, intermingled with the half burned remnants of dozens of dime novels. The boy bandits had scattered to their homes, where they waited for the search to end.

They owed the discovery of their existence to an accident. Mrs. Snell happened to observe one of the Red Rangers transferring a bottle of syrup from a grocery store counter to his pocket while the proprietor was not looking and exposed the theft. This bandit confessed, and Justice W. B. Smith sent officers of the law after the other culprits. They followed the beaten path made by the boy bandits to their haunt, but their only capture was enough evidence to connect the young desperadoes with many articles whose mysterious disappearance had been reported.

It is supposed that the boys made off with much plunder of which no account can be had. Their usual method in robbing stores was to wait until one person was alone and then order a small quantity of oil or another commodity stored in the cellar. Then while the attendant was procuring the article they had helped themselves to whatever they wanted.

Frederick C. Linderman, shortly after Mrs. Snell's discovery, obtained warrants for the arrest of Carl Fromm, George Reed, Percy Hennessey, Frederick Van Buskuns, Albert Fromm, Charles Latterman and George Ackerman, charging them with stealing syrup, soda, a door, lumber, kerosene, cigarettes, cigars, chewing tobacco, a bar of iron, nails, cuspidors, nails and other articles.

Pilfered Many Stores.

Among the stores from which they pilfered were those of Gerhard H. Timeyer and William Kamps. They were also charged with stealing from the New Jersey and New York railroad, the Island park, the colored people's picnic grounds and from the Foresters' hall. None of these complainants had any idea of how much had been stolen from them, but they thought it was considerable.

Justice Smith had all the boys brought before him, some of them being accompanied by their parents. George Reed admitted that the hut had been built immediately after school closed in the latter part of June, and the other boys told how they had procured many of their supplies.

Although the justice had six witnesses, he decided to let the lads off with a reprimand, which he administered with a fatherly grace. They promised between sobs to never range again.

THE CHURCHES IN DANGER.

A Firebug In Dover Is Trying to Burn Them All.

DOVER, N. H., Aug. 22.—There was a concerted effort here to burn the churches of this city. The Belknap church was set on fire back of the door and again in the tower, and although the firemen worked hard and confined the fire there the church was greatly damaged. Later fire was discovered in the cellar of the First Parish church, which was extinguished without damage.

It was discovered that boxes of brushwood had been piled in the doorway of the Advent church and fired, but the fire went out. It was also discovered that rubbish had been piled beside St. John's Methodist church, but had not been fired. People living near the Broadway Baptist church saw a man getting in the window and gave the alarm, when he ran away.

Assistant Engineer Webster found a pile of rubbish in the Central Avenue Baptist church cellar and ordered it removed. It is believed that it was piled there by the party who set the other fires. Mr. Webster found the door of St. John's Methodist church open and a lot of stuff piled up in the cellar, while the stairs were saturated with oil.

All these fires and attempts have the characteristics of the fire in Cunningham's store three weeks ago. Mayor Foss will call the city government together to offer a reward, and Chief Varney will have an investigation as to how the fires caught. Several specials have been added to the police force to watch church and schoolhouse property, while banks and churches have special watchmen.

TRAVELING IN THIBET

AN ENGLISH WOMAN'S REMARKABLE JOURNEY IN THE COLD.

She Penetrated Farther Into the Mysterious Country Than Ever White Man Did. Barriers Almost Insurmountable Overcome by Her Daring.

Brief reports have been received of the experience of a young English woman, a missionary, in the wilds of inhospitable Thibet. Now she has found a story of her adventures from the North China Daily News.

On May 5 Miss Annie Taylor, the explorer, passed through Shun-King on her way home, having completed a year of wandering.

Miss Taylor is a medium sized woman of Saxon build, with brilliant brown eyes, the complexion of a traveler, and the air of one who has suffered much. Her bearing, her bright eyes and animated expression show her to be a woman of resource and imagination, and in seeing her lively manner one begins to understand the influence she was able to exercise over the savage peoples among whom she has been traveling alone with her life in her hand. She is full of enthusiasm for the civilization and conversion of the Thibetans, which she hopes to communicate to the people of England, and this, we have no doubt, she will fully succeed in doing. Miss Taylor is the daughter of a gentleman of means engaged in business in London.

Her trip rivals in adventure, while in difficulties overcome it excels the travels of even Captain Bower and Mr. Rockhill. With the help of one Christian Thibetan whom she took with her from Darjeeling, she penetrated to within three days of Lassa and returned alive to tell the tale. But for the treachery of a Mohammedan servant whom she engaged in Kan-Soo she seems little doubt that she would have lived in Lassa itself. Miss Taylor says she first attempted to enter Thibet from the Indian side in 1887, Sikkim was not English then, and orders were given that no one should serve her. So, though she had plenty of money, she could buy nothing, and was often very hungry. Then she got fever and had no appetite. But after quinine her appetite returned, until she did not know which was worse, fever or hunger. Twice attempts were made to poison her, and for 10 months she never saw another European.

Then she decided to try to get in from China, and after spending about a year on the frontier living very quietly, not going out, but constantly receiving Thibetans in her house, she received various offers of convoys to Lassa. Before crossing the frontier, about which she had no trouble, she unhappily engaged a Chinaman whom the Thibetan name was Noga. She had two tents, four servants and thrill to get 10 really good horses by promising to give them at the journey's end a present. In her first serious adventures was being attacked by a band of brigands with white fur caps, wielding a spare horse. Two were killed, eight wounded and five out of her horses killed, besides much property lost. But a lama called out to the robbers: "They are women! All women!" and she was not pursued. Among Mongols and Thibetans it is esteemed a dreadful thing to strike a woman, so that all women go about unarmed, although every man carries weapons. As Miss Taylor says, by the Thibetan religion it is forbidden to take life whether a lion, a sheep or a man's.

On Sept. 28 the party crossed the Yellow river on yak skins blown out with hurdles laid upon them and drawn by horses. These rafts were a wash all the time, and the water was ice cold. They then found themselves in the Golok district, which is peopled entirely by robbers. Their chieftain is a woman, and laws are strictly observed in her domains, and no bribe can be taken. The Goloks relate how five Russians came through the country, and they themselves went out to attack them 500 strong, but could kill none, though 12 of themselves were killed.

Miss Taylor's hardships would require a volume for adequate description. For three days they lost their road. They had no tent. That and every comfort had to be sold, her servant having taken everything he could from her before he left. When on Dec. 24 they found the road again, they hid away in the hills for the whole of Christmas day. During all this part of the journey her sufferings from the rarity of the air were very great—palpitations, gaspings and inability to digest their barley food. Noga spread a report that Miss Taylor was traveling with a belt of gold and jewels around her waist. She had to travel by night, finding the cold almost unbearable. Ten frost on soon as pointed out, and for three nights they were only too thankful to find refuge in a cave with barely room enough for them to lie down, half suffocated by smoke, so as to obtain a little warmth.

On Dec. 31 they crossed the Drichu into the Lassa district, but had to stop near Nagjoa, within three days' journey of Lassa, owing to Noga having gone before, revealing that it was a foreigner coming. A military chief arrived, and there was a sort of trial.

In the end Miss Taylor convinced the officials of the truth of her story, saving the lives of her ten Thibetan servants, who were accused of treacherously leading her into Tibet. The chiefs told her that as far as they were concerned she could go on to Lassa, but they would lose their lives if she did, and they gave her an official and nine soldiers to protect her against the Chinese servant, besides supplying her with provisions gratis. Every where she found the Thibetans express liking for the English. They had been especially struck by the fact that the prisoners in the Sikkim war were well fed, and actually supplied with money to go home with.

On the return journey the horses, which in winter have to be fed with goats' flesh, tea, butter and cheese, suffered so from hunger that they were always tumbling down until Miss Taylor joined a yak caravan, and 200 yaks made a way for them through 20 feet of snow. On Jan. 22 Miss Taylor left the Lhassa district of Tibet, and on April 12 she reached Tachienlu after hardships such as it seems hardly credible a woman should have surmounted.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mme. Dieulafoy's Trousers.

Mme. Dieulafoy, the wife of the distinguished French explorer, has accompanied her husband on all his expeditions. She wears men's clothes, having become accustomed to them in her journeyings through wild regions, and she has obtained from the French government a special authorization to wear male attire upon the streets of Paris. To gain this she and her husband affirmed that to the best of their knowledge and belief it was absolutely necessary to her health to continue to wear the garments to which she had become accustomed. At the same time she does not approve of women making this change in their apparel unless circumstances force them to it.—Indianapolis News.

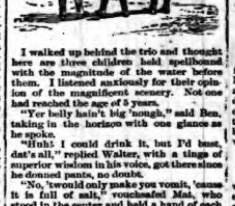
CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Three Little Philosophers.

"Look at the three kids over there," exclaimed Nancy. "What are they a-doin'?"

"They be Walter and Mat and Ben," said Sally, fixing the last shell on her "castle in Spain."

"They stand a-holdin' of hands and look in good enough to die," exclaimed Gypsy.



I walked up behind the trio and thought here are three children held spellbound with the magnitude of the water before them. I listened anxiously for their opinion of the magnificent scenery. Not one had reached the age of 5 years.

"Yer belly hain't big 'nough," said Ben, taking in the horizon with one glance as he spoke.

"Huh! I could drink it, but I'd bust, dat's all," replied Walter, with a tinge of superior wisdom in his voice, got there since he donned pants, no doubt.

"No, 'twould only make you vomit, 'cause it is full of salt," vouchsafed Mat, who stood in the center and held a hand of each boy. "My mommer makes me take a backful of salt water every time I swaller a fly."—New York Recorder.

A Plucky Little Farmer's Boy.

Jimmie Bolvin, a 10-year-old lad, living in western Canada, was leading a horse to put into a hayrake when the animal became unmanageable, knocked him down and broke his leg in two places between the hip and the knee. The accident happened out on the prairie, many miles from home.

Not withstanding the agony he must have endured, the boy crawled a considerable distance to where he hoped to find some of the haymakers, but they had gone farther away.

He lay down exhausted, hoping for some one to come. How many hours he lay there is not known. Night was at length coming on, and he feared he should die if left much longer without help.

The horse meanwhile was feeding not far off. Jimmie's untasted luncheon was still in his pocket. He called the horse, gave him the biscuit and so caught him. The little sufferer then led the animal to a rock a few yards distant, dragging himself slowly and painfully along, as before. He crept upon the rock and from there managed to mount the horse.

Once on the horse's back he rode two miles to the nearest house or tent, where he found the haymakers, who made him as comfortable as they could and then took him home to his parents.

An effort to set the broken limb, made by a neighbor, proved unsuccessful, and after nine days of misery the little fellow was taken to the hospital at Winnipeg, where the writer of this account saw him and heard his story.

"He's a brave little man," said the surgeon; "he never complains, and we shall give him a pretty good leg again, I think."—Youth's Companion.

A Little Girl's Recipe.

I don't see why the big folks all
Need to go to cooking school,
For it's easy enough to make a cake
If you make it by this rule:

First you must have an apron
That you've not afraid to hurt,
For in this recipe we use
For flour, sifted dirt.

Then dig with an iron spoon
A hole in the cool, dark ground,
And put in dirt and water,
Stirring it round and round.

And then a handful of pebbles,
You'd best put into the dough,
That's all except for this recipe
Pebbles are raisins, you know.

And when you get it all thick enough
You make it into a cake,
Then you put it on a nice, clean board
And set in the sun to bake.

Dear me! I'd most forgot to say
You must sprinkle with sugar (or sand),
And when they're done no better cakes
Will be found in Maryland.

That's all. You see, to learn to cook
You don't need to make a fuss.
Though mamma says, when she comes to the door:

"Why, Bessie, child! What a mess!"
—Ethel E. Sleeper in Good Housekeeping.

Rich Walter Hansom.

At Saratoga there lives a little boy of about 3 years who was the favorite grandnephew of Senator Leland Stanford. His mamma was a very rich woman before Senator Stanford died and left her an extra fortune. And some day it will all go to little Walter Hansom. But now his wise and beautiful mamma keeps him in simple dresses and feeds him on oatmeal and oranges, with no candy at all. She thinks that he will on such diet have a fine, strong body for the work and the responsibilities which are ahead of him.

BROILING AND ROASTING.

What Few Do Well, but Something All Should Know.

Porterhouse and sirloin steaks are the only ones that can be thoroughly recommended for broiling, and to broil either of them properly requires a double broiler and a good clear fire. Cut the steak about three-fourths of an inch thick and trim it free from fat. If it is a porterhouse, remove the tough end and convert it into Hamburg steaks for luncheon or tea. Heat the broiler and rub lightly with good butter. Put the steak in the broiler and cook over a clear fire, turning about once a minute for eight minutes. Remove the steak to a hot platter, season with salt and pepper and rub one teaspoonful of butter over each side. Garnish with watercress and serve immediately. It is a pity that all cooks who serve the public do not realize how much they would add to their reputation by sending food to the table piping hot.

For roasting, or rather baking, since the jack and open fire for roasting are things of the past in the American kitchen, the cuts known as sirloin, roast, rib and part of the chuck are commonly used, the order of their excellence being that given.

A good hot oven, to be kept at the same temperature for 10 or 15 minutes, afterward to be reduced to moderate heat, is a first requisite to the proper baking of beef. The first heat is necessary to at once form a coating over the beef and confine the juices; the second slower heat is necessary to prevent the outside from cooking rapidly while the inside remains raw. Salt the meat or wipe thoroughly with a clean cloth. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, using one part of pepper to four parts of salt. Salt lightly with flour and bake in the baking pan, allowing 15 minutes to each pound.

To make the gravy while children especially like, when the meat is done remove it to a hot platter. Pour all the fat from the baking pan; save a few tablespoonfuls. Place the pan on top of the stove and let the fat become bubbling hot; have ready 1 tablespoonful of browned flour, to which has been gradually added 1 pint of boiling water; add salt and pepper and stir all into the hot fat; cook for three minutes, stirring all the while; strain into a hot gravy boat.

For the Tea Table.

Instead of the bell which requires only a touch the fashionable bell must be lifted by its handle and tinkled in good old fashioned style. A very pretty bell with twisted handle, growing larger toward the end and finishing with a large heavily chased base, is the most popular.

Coffee cups are growing larger and more elaborate. They are decorated both outside and inside, and the handle represents the branch of a tree.

Butter knives have grown very slender.

Two-tined olive forks are seen. They are similar to pickle forks, but less curved. Fancy an oyster fork with the tines very close together and only two of them at that, and you have the olive fork.

THE HOSPITAL DRAWER.

For an Emergency Nothing Like It in the Household.

Every household should appropriate a drawer or chest for the accumulation of articles liable to be needed in case of sickness.

This drawer should contain the various articles and appliances which past experience or anticipation may suggest.

It is perhaps needless to observe that everything laid away should be scrupulously clean.

Old sheets that have been retired from regular service are always useful in sickness, and a good pile of them is a valuable feature of the hospital supply.

Old muslin is always in demand—both in large and small pieces—and these should be freed from bands, buttons and trimmings or hard seams and neatly folded in piles or the small pieces in rolls, ready for use.

Old linen is also valuable. This should be kept by itself, in rolls or bags, according to size of pieces, but even small scraps often come handy.

Rolls of old flannel should be ready for sudden demand.

Handkerchiefs too much worn for ordinary use should find their way to the "hospital drawer," as old, soft clothes are always of use in the sickroom.

A box for small articles should occupy a corner of the drawer, to hold such conveniences as a small box of absorbent cotton, bent glass tubes—one quite small for medicine, the other large for liquid nourishment and drinks. A graduated glass for measuring medicine will not be amiss, also one or two small glasses for holding medicines and drinks. These articles may be found at the drug store, as well as various other little things which may be thought of, and which it will save time and anxiety to have in readiness. A supply of safety pins, both large and small, should not be omitted from the list.

A rubber cloth for the bed should be procured when convenient and laid by for time of need.

A rubber bag for hot water is a desideratum, though bottles of convenient size and shape (flasks do very well), and furnished with corks that may be relied upon, will form a very good substitute.

For Stout Women.

For full figures and stout women who cannot wear belted waists that define their size Harper's Bazar says that there are very graceful coats, with skirt to match, of serge, cacking or the more dressy crepon. These coats have continuous breadths fitted to the waist, then widening out in what is called the bell back and also the umbrella back. There is no seam down the middle of the back, but side forms adjust it becomingly. The fronts fall straight and open, with a long shawl collar to which a collarette is sometimes added. The skirt is gored, but not too closely about the large hips, and is trimmed only at the foot, as horizontal bands higher up add to the apparent size. The vest may be close fitting and double breasted, but the preference for summer gowns is for a full vest of silk muslin or of surah, given the appearance of length by vertical insertions of guipure or chantilly lace.

MISSIONARIES TALK.

MR. AND MRS. BOND INTEREST A Y. P. S. C. E. AUDIENCE.

They Tell of the People of Turkey, Among Whom They Worked for Many Years.—They Organized a Christian Endeavor Society There.

THE fact that Mr. and Mrs. Bond, returned missionaries from Macedonia, were to speak of the customs of the people they had worked among under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. at the Warren Mission last night, was a great drawing card. The hall, under the leadership of its old leader, Mr. Marvin M. Dunham, who has been absent frequently owing to sickness, sang well. Mr. and Mrs. Bond are speaking for part of their vacation of a year with relatives on East Front street. They were here about 16 years ago on a similar vacation, and have been in the missionary work work for 26 years, 15 of which have been spent on Macedonia, and it in Turkey. Mr. Bond began by describing the course taken by them, which was by sea. He spoke of the different ways of traveling in the carriages, (callegars), which are used. They have no springs nor seats, but the traveler is compelled to sit in the bottom and be jogged along.

During the war their home was burned and a number of soldiers, hidden in their cellar, were taken out and killed. They, with the inhabitants of the village, were forced to flee to Constantinople.

The people live very poorly using meat but once or twice a year. Their homes are low and made of sun-dried brick. The bricks are made of mud, which is worked into form with the feet then pressed and placed out in the sun to dry. The houses are plastered with a similar mixture. There are no windows and but one door.

There is no such thing as courtship. Wives are bought and sold. In the village the girls are sold, and the city men are sold. The trading is always done by the parents.

Most of the people are infidels. They have now started a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in connection with the church.

In May when Mr. Bond came away there were 29 members.

He spoke of the difficulty in starting it as the people were so much opposed to it. He told of the experience had with several converts.

To oppose missionaries people would say: "Curses be any one who speaks to the masons (missionaries). May the disease of Naman be to them and the curse of God and us on them for ever."

Mr. and Mrs. Bond then sang the Lord's Prayer in the Albanian tongue, after which Mrs. Bond made an address. She is a very interesting speaker, and began by telling of the houses, saying that they had no windows, the fire was built in the middle of the room upon the floor, and there was a small hole in the ceiling or roof for the smoke to find its way out. There is one day in the year when the women will go out to make their earthen vessels or pans for cooking and baking. They mix the clay and fix their pans, while the baking is done in earthen pans which are covered with cement.

The children when very young are taught to spin and then to knit stockings.

After a girl becomes thirteen years of age she is not allowed on the streets at night.

A wedding always takes place on Sunday, except for a widower, that is on Saturday night. The bride kisses the hand of everyone present.

A "Chingle Gee" (fiddler) is at the bride's house all day and the bride is supposed to stand up all day, dressed in her best with her eyes cast upon the floor, and must not speak nor answer any questions.

Toward evening the groom comes. They are then taken to the church where they go through a series of forms. A tin crown connected by ribbons is placed on their heads as they march around the church, while some thing similar to peanuts are thrown all over them.

Mr. Charles Smith Divides Second Money.

The sixth annual four days' tournament of the Standard Keystone Company opened yesterday on the grounds of the New London Gun Club with a large attendance of the most expert trap shooters in the country. The chief event was the contest for the Standard Keystone trophy, fifty singles, entrance $5. It was won by R. O. Heikes of Chicago, with 45, second money was won by John W. Conner of Knoxville, Tenn., and Charles Smith of this city, each with 47; third money was won by J. N. Van Dyke, with 46, and fourth by J. Wolstencroft of Frankfort, Pa., with 45.

Another Pole Gets "Hoa."

One of the street railway guy wires on Somerset street became "grounded" this morning, charging the pole in front of Blumm's Hotel with electricity. A little boy touched the pole and received such a shock that he turned a somersault. Several men touched it once for fun, but they didn't touch it the second time. The current was strong enough to make them dance a jig. The trouble was reported by Superintendent Adelmann and his men. It is occurring, however, too frequently for comfort.

—Some fine peaches are daily arriving in town.

—Mr. Boehm makes a statement about "hard time prices" in his advertisement to day.

—Wheelmen are now directing their course toward Lake Hopatoong. Meta are scarce there and the girls are very pretty, they say emphatically.

—The proposed forty mile trolley road from Paterson to New Brunswick, is to leave the Springfield road at the intersection with Mountain avenue, and pass through Westfield and thence on to Fanwood and Plainfield. Of course it is all on paper yet, but really looks like a pretty good quality of paper.

—Teamsters who haul hay through Plainfield to Newark always feel somewhat skittish at night about the road to Springfield, one portion of which passes through a piece of woods, beyond Scotch Plains. They usually wait for each other so as to double up when passing that point to avoid any attack from knights of the road, who might be tempted to stop them there.

—The creature which Solomon advised the sluggard to consult in regard to a bit of information concerning the art of "hustling" has a brain larger in proportion to the size of its body than any other known being. Writers on that branch of entomology declare that ants are not only endowed with a high quality of instinct, but that they display reasoning fability and good judgment, as well as powers of reflection and ratiocination.

Knights Templar Field Day.

The annual field day of Knights Templar of New Jersey will be held at Asbury Park on Thursday, August 31st. It is the intention of the Knights to have a pleasant day at the seaside. The Grand Commandery headquarters will be established at the Ocean Hotel, on Asbury avenue. The line for dress parade will form on Asbury avenue, right on Kingsley street, at 2:30 o'clock, and the parade will be over a route a mile long. The parade will be reviewed by the Grand Commandery officers and visiting Grand Officers from New York and Pennsylvania.

In Justice Mosher's Court.

Constable Mattoz yesterday served a summons on Mr. Beerbower in the case of Dean & Co. vs. Beerbower, on contract, issued by Justice Mosher.

The case of French vs. Keely has been adjourned to Tuesday, August 29.

"AFTER THE COLLISION WAS OVER."

It was Found That Two Men and Three Wheels Were Damaged.

Three bicyclists were mixed up in a collision on West Front street, at about eight o'clock, last night.

Messrs. Louis J. Carey and Fred W. Bird were riding down the street single file. Mr. Carey was ahead. He noticed another wheelman approaching at a fast rate. Mr. Carey rang his bell. The other wheelman whose name was Wyckoff slackened up, but it was too late to avoid a collision.

Mr. Carey, jumped from his wheel. Mr. Bird, who was riding along behind did not see the other wheelmen coming until Mr. Carey dismounted. Both he and Mr. Wyckoff came together with a crash into Mr. Carey's wheel, before it could be gotten out of the way. All three bicycles were in bad shape "after the collision was over." Mr. Carey escaped injury, but both Mr. Bird and Mr. Wyckoff were slightly bruised and cut, the latter's injuries being such that he was to blame as he was riding on the wrong side of the street.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Robert Crossen of West Second street is seriously ill.

Miss Theresa Van Ness of Craig place is visiting at Martinville.

Mr. Cyrus A. Livezey of Park avenue has returned from Pottsville.

The Misses Irwin of Putnam avenue have gone to Auitsville, L. I.

Mrs. Joseph Crane of Putnam avenue has gone to Atlantic Highlands.

Mr. A. S. Newell of West Fifth street returned yesterday from Europe.

Mr. Louis Timpson and family of East Sixth street are at Morris Heights, N. Y.

Mr. Joseph Finck of East Third street is enjoying his vacation at Long Branch.

Miss Nancy Randolph of East Fifth street is visiting her sister at Perth Amboy.

The Misses Keely of La Grand avenue have returned from an extended visit at Orange.

Miss Marsh of Brooklyn is visiting at Mr. F. X. Schoonmaker's, on Putnam avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Squires of Watchung avenue are home from a delightful visit in Connecticut.

Miss Mamie Nicholas of Prospect Heights, Brooklyn, is visiting Mrs. W. R. Hoss, of Carlton avenue.

Miss Lizzie Rutledge of Warren street, North Plainfield, started yesterday to visit Friends at Jersey City.

Mr. Scott Dickson of La Grand avenue has returned to business in New York after a month's vacation.

Mr. Allan Worth and Miss Fairbairn of Westfield were guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. Van Buren of Ninth street.

Miss Jennie Randolph of East Fifth street, who has been visiting her sister at Perth Amboy, has returned home.

Miss Grace DeForest of West Second street and Miss Bella Booth left to-day for a two weeks' visit at Newburgh, N. Y.

Messrs. George, Llewellyn and William Bull of Ninth street and Henry Hart of Watchung avenue are camping in South Jersey.

Mr. William Klein of Sycamore avenue went fishing in Newark Bay, at Bayonne, yesterday. He returned last night with seven bass.

Mr. George R. Shepherd of Rose and Warren streets died this morning, at two o'clock, of consumption. His age was 43 years and eight months.

The Asbury Park Journal says the following Plainfielders have registered at Asbury Park hotels: Rev. F. J. Murphy, H. Orswell, S. Titsworth and W. L. Titsworth.

Among the Plainfielders recently to arrive home from the seashore, are Mrs. James Pope and son Willie, of West Fourth street. They have been stopping at Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Herbert Thatcher of East Sixth street starts to-morrow night for Chicago where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Fesmier, and also attend the World's Fair. She will be gone probably ten weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson F. Fulper, who have been boarding at the City Hotel have rented one of the Miller flats at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, where they have started housekeeping.

Mrs. James W. Morris, who has been spending some time at Mr. and Mrs. Rowland M. Stover's, on Ninth street, has gone to Spring Lake, N. J. From there she will go to Florida next month.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Jackson and their daughter, Mrs. Clifford Wharton, all of Crescent avenue, who have been at the Thousand Islands the greater part of the Summer, were joined to day by Mr. Clifford Wharton.

Yesterday Mrs. George Watson and her son, Clarence, of Crescent avenue, who have been spending the Summer at Lake Hopatcong, with Mr. Watson from a country residence, returned to Plainfield. Clarence went back to the Lake to-day.

Escaped from Morristown.

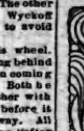
The officials at the Morristown Asylum have reported to the police that Cornelius Garity has escaped from that institution. He was a convict in the State Prison until recently, when Keeper Patterson and the prison official saw he was becoming very much demented. His removal was then ordered to Morristown, where he has been undergoing treatment since. After eating his dinner Sunday, he left the asylum by a rear door.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"WHAT IS THE LUMINIFEROUS ETHER?"

Meeting of the Victoria Institute, at which the Hon. T. F. Bayard was Present.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—



ESULTS of his investigations were given, a few days ago by Sir Gabriel Stokes, Bart., F. R. S. who now occupies Sir Isaac Newton's Professorial Chair at Cambridge University, on the subject, which he, as a man of Science, has made his speciality; the occasion chosen was the Annual Meeting of the Victoria Institute (at Loudon, England), of which he is President. Sir G. Gabriel Stokes was supported by His Excellency the United States Ambassador to England, and a large number of Home, Foreign, and Colonial members. Although the hall was darkened, and covered over part, yet many letters of regret at not being able to be present were read from others, among these the Dukes of Argyll, Westminster, Fife, and special communications were also received from Lord Salisbury, Victor Hugo, and Lord Kelvin, the President of the Royal Society. The report for the year was read by Captain F. Petrie, the Honorary Secretary, and showed that the Home, Colonial, and American members now numbered 1,850. The Society's scientific work had tended to bring about a truer appreciation of the results of scientific inquiry, and to show that there is an absence of real opposition between Science and Revelation. Sir Gabriel then described the Luminiferous Ether, which had been termed a medium whose vibrations are supposed to cause light, pervades all pace, is imponderable and infinitely elastic. He explained the results of the investigations of Home and Foreign men of science into the nature of that substance, and that it was quite conceivable that further great discoveries might be made as regards it. What its nature was we could only assume; for instance, the results of modern astronomical calculation had shown that light travelled at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, would take four years say, to go from the nearest star to the earth: now as we saw the fixed star there must be some link of connection between us and them. There were two theories of light; according to one, light was a substance darted forth from the luminous body, according to the other it was a state of change taking place, propagated by a medium intervening between the body and the observer. Sir Isaac Newton held that there must be such a medium, either material or immaterial, but the question arose how far it did extend; was it infinite like space? Science could give no answer; if it were limited what was outside? Was there not another system subject to the same or different laws? If there be such then, according to phenomena open to our investigation there can be no communication therewith. But the properties of ether are the more remarkable then its extent, the question whether it gravitates towards ponderable matter science can't answer, but if it be connected with gravitation, it cannot be imponderable. Sir Gabriel then referred to the undulatory theory of sound, and to his own suggestion to Faraday, forty years ago, in regard to the possibility of the electricity having an undulatory motion somewhat similar to that of light. Since then Clark Maxwell had shown that the velocity of light agrees with that of electricity, and Hertz had shown that the one exhibits some phenomena of the other.

At the conclusion of the address, His Excellency the Hon. T. F. Bayard, the United States Ambassador to England, as a member of the Institute, moved, and Sir Henry Barkly, G. C. M. G., K. C. B., F. R. S., seconded a vote of thanks for the address. Canon Girdlestone and Admiral Gream, C. B., moved and seconded a vote of thanks to the Chair, and the summer of home and colonial epithets for carnivorous supposed to have begun, after which the members and associates held a Conversazione in the Museum, where refreshments were served.

Runaway Horses to a Stone Wagon Get the Right of Way.

This morning a team of horses belonging to Mr. Morbus, became frightened at the cars, while left standing at the freight house, and ran away. They were attached to a heavy stone wagon. The horses ran across the switch to Fourth street, out to Watchung avenue, with the driver in pursuit. They ran around Fifth street to Sycamore avenue and so back to Fourth street, where they were caught.

Much consternation was caused among the drivers of light vehicles along Watchung avenue as the heavy stone wagon went thundering along. Fortunately the runaways steered clear of them all. No damage resulted.

The Weather.

On Thursday fair to partly cloudy sultry weather and fresh southerly winds will prevail, with slight temperature changes, followed by local rains: and on Friday, partly cloudy, sultry weather and stationary temperature, with local rains.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

China's Ultimatum.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 23—(Special)—China's ultimatum with reference to the Chinese Exclusion act, as the Geary law is called, has reached the United States, according to a despatch received to-day.

The fourth and fifth clauses read:

Fourth—That if the next Congress decides to enforce the law, China will at once retaliate; friendly relations between the two countries will be broken off and laws will be enacted looking toward the expulsion of all Americans from China.

"Fifth—That meantime instructions have been issued to all Chinese officials to take especial care to protect American citizens living in China from violence."

A Hustler Athletic Association.

The Asbury Park Athletic Association, although a young organization, is winning the reputation of being one of the most prosperous clubs in the State. It has a very large list of members representing some of the best bicycle riders in the State, and also the wonder of the world, Zimmerman.

It is managed on sound business principles by hustling business men, under whose directions three successful race meets have been held during the past three weeks. At two of the meets Zimmerman, Tyler and scores of other riders of national reputation, raced before audiences numbering as high as six thousand.

At the third meet, last Saturday, the cracks who recently took part in the international contests at Chicago, were to have been present and failed to do so. The management have arranged for still another race meet to be held next Saturday when they expect without fail to have the great riders compete.

Zimmerman always makes a good showing at the Asbury Park races. His house is near "the twin cities by the sea," and his personal interest in the Association's welfare causes him to never disappoint if he can avoid it.

Several Plainfielders will take part in next Saturday's races.

Does it Mean Cheaper Coal?

It is asserted in railroad circles that the separation of the Reading & Lehigh Valley Railroad systems means sharp competition in the coal trade that the public will be the gainer by being able to purchase coal at a lower rate than for some time past. The fact that both roads are in need of ready money is an indication that some sacrifices will be made to obtain it, and, coal being the means to this end, it is predicted that there will be a drop in prices of some extent. May the prediction prove true.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Capturing the Aurora.

Probably in no period earlier than the latter half of the nineteenth century would mankind have been irreverent enough to consider the splendid northern lights as anything more than a manifestation of divine providence made in order to fill us with admiration and awe at the wonderful works of the Creator. But the nineteenth century is of opinion that it can honor the Almighty in no other way better than by investigating his wonderful works and finding out all it can about them, and the more wonderful they are the more worthy of investigation. Accordingly the close of our century will record not the mystery of the aurora borealis solved, at least great additions to our knowledge of it. This year, by concerted action of astronomers, observations of the aurora are taken in all parts of the world at the same time.

These observations are particularly directed to ascertaining the exact connection between the sun spots and the electrical phenomenon in the sky. Dr. M. A. Veeder of Lyons, N. Y., has prepared a table of record of the appearances of the aurora for the past two centuries. This much has been ascertained—there is apt to be an aurora borealis at recurring periods when the sun spots are in a certain position as viewed from the earth, and that whenever they come around to exactly that position again there will be a repetition of the lights in the sky.

A writer on the subject says, "Auroral phenomena seem to be caused by a solar impulse that is conveyed from the sun in one direction exclusively." That is to say, if from any cause there was a storm or eruption of solar light and heat from one particular spot greater than from surrounding portions of the sun's surface, there would be a corresponding electrical disturbance in the earth's atmosphere when the rays from the sun storm reached the earth.

The Home Building Movement.

The Building and Loan Association league is wise in indorsing the action of the United States labor department in collecting statistics of such organizations in the country. The league ought to go further than indorse; it should assist the labor department by all means in its power in gathering the statistics. The building and loan association is one of the mightiest factors in our present day society and civilization. Through the beneficent agency of the building association thousands of workingmen's families have their own homes today, where otherwise they would have lived in rented quarters always.

The co-operation of women and girls who are depositors in the building association fund is remarkable. On an average probably a third of all the membership is women and girls. A gentleman at the league congress in Chicago said, "My experience is that woman in reality is the moving power behind the home building movement in the United States." Give a woman a home and she can face most of the terrors of life without flinching.

In six states of the Union the maturing value of the shares held by women in these societies amounts to $11,325,289. These admirable institutions, which are making the suburbs of our cities into picturesque home villages, will do well to keep in mind the recommendation of the league to beware of "any form of finance which promises returns very largely in excess of the prevailing commercial rate."

Lieutenant Peary by this time should be at his northern camp and have his winter quarters well on the road toward completion. If all goes well, he will accomplish more on this trip than any one recent arctic explorer has been able to do. Two objects Peary had definitely in his mind. One was to explore the detached masses of land to the north of Greenland and toward the north pole. This has never yet been done. It is not known how much is continent and how much is ice and island in that faroff frozen region. Another object of the explorer is to survey the north Greenland coast where the gap is between Independence bay and Cape Bismarck. If he succeeds in his intentions, then we shall have hereafter a definite map, where we have now only an indistinct blur or guesswork outlines. Peary has a hope in his heart that by passing from one to another of what he calls "detached masses of land" to the north of Greenland he will be able to reach the north pole itself. He did not say much about this, but the hope and aim were there. It would be a fitting crown for the close of the nineteenth century if an American should after all these hundreds of years reach the north pole.

The trade of England with Siam amounts annually to $12,500,000; that of France to only $40,000. From the bluster made by France one might have supposed the figures were the other way. Yet England quietly allowed France to do with Siam as she chose until it came to interfering, by means of the blockade, with British commerce. Then the lion very quietly put out his paw and warned France back, and France backed.

A new method of purifying water electrically has been found very effective. It is being tried in Croton lake, which supplies New York city.

SILVER FIGHT GOES ON.

Senator Voorhees Makes an Eloquent Plea For Repeal.

TARIFF BILL SOON TO BE FRAMED.

Mr. Cockrell Defends His National Bank Bill Amendment—Hepburn Creates a Surprise by Declaring Against Repeal. The House Hears Silver Talk.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—There was gathered within the walls of the senate chamber a larger attendance of senators on the floor and of spectators in the galleries than has been seen for many a day. The occasion was the announcement that the senate was to be addressed by Mr. Voorhees of Indiana, chairman of the finance committee, in support of the bill reported by him discontinuing the purchase of silver bullion. The speech occupied 1 hour and 35 minutes and was listened to from beginning to end with close and eager attention.

Both on the floor and in the galleries there was but one attempt made to divert Mr. Voorhees from the current of his speech, but he declined absolutely to yield to any interruption. There was also but one manifestation of approval from the galleries, and that was promptly suppressed and its repetition forbidden by the vice president.

The speech was followed by an argument from Mr. Dubois of Idaho in opposition to the bill as a measure to establish gold monometallism, and by one from Mr. Palmer of Illinois in support of the bill and suggesting the difficulty if not impossibility of bimetallism according to the Chicago platform.

The last hour or two of the day's session passed in a discussion of Mr. Cockrell's amendment to the bill for the increase of national bank circulation, but no action was taken upon it.

A Senatorial Dialogue.

It brought out, however, an interesting discussion between Mr. Cockrell and Mr. Carey of Wyoming. Mr. Carey asked Mr. Cockrell how he proposed to have the treasury notes redeemed. Did he propose to increase the gold reserve in the treasury?

"There is an abundance of gold there now," Mr. Cockrell replied. "Who presents greenbacks to be redeemed in gold?" "Why are you presenting all kinds of money to get gold."

"I beg your pardon. People are taking silver certificates as quickly as they are taking gold, and they are taking silver dollars as quickly as they are taking gold dollars. You have not heard of a man, woman or child demanding or specifying one kind of money in preference to another, unless it was some gold shark or shylock in New York."

"Then," suggested Mr. Carey, "it would be advisable to have such legislation as will protect the government against gold sharks and shylocks."

"There is no danger," Mr. Cockrell replied. "They cannot exhaust the gold in the treasury. They tried to, and they ran it down to $80,000,000, but it has come back."

"Do you know what brings it back?"

"The Sherman law," was Mr. Cockrell's answer; "the law that you are now taking somersaults to get repealed. Your friends say that it took gold out of the country. Now it brings it back, and yet the conditions have not changed."

The dialogue between the two senators continued for some time on these lines without any marked advantage on either side. The senate then adjourned.

In the House.

The interest in the silver debate was transferred from the house to the senate, but the adjournment of the former parliamentary body was not entirely disappointing, although Mr. Breckenridge of Kentucky, who was expected to open the debate, did not appear. Mr. Mallory of Florida was the first speaker against the unconditional repeal of the Sherman law.

Mr. Hopkins of Illinois took the other side, forcefully charging the Democrats with partisanship.

The new Populist from Nevada (Newlands) made a good impression in his maiden speech, which was a vigorous one in support of the free coinage of silver.

Mr. Bynum of Indiana made a short but decisive argument in favor of the Wilson bill.

The surprise of the day was the speech of Mr. Hepburn of Iowa, who was comptroller of the treasury under the Harrison administration.

He disagreed with his party colleagues and emphatically declared against the repeal of the Sherman law. That law, he contended, had been beneficial in its effects, and it should not be repealed.

Mr. Jones of Virginia closed the day's debate with an argument in favor of bimetallism. At the evening session other speeches pro and con were delivered.

Mr. Ellis of Kentucky spoke in favor of free coinage. Mr. McKaig of Maryland spoke against free coinage. Mr. Cooper of Texas attacked the Wilson bill. Mr. De Forest of Connecticut said he was astonished at any opposition to the repeal of the Sherman law. Mr. Arnold of Missouri advocated free coinage. Mr. Williams of Mississippi spoke in favor of free coinage. Mr. Tracey of New York spoke for repeal, and then the house adjourned—at 11:40 p. m.

Tariff Revision to Begin Soon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mr. W. L. Wilson of West Virginia, the new chairman of the ways and means committee, says without consultation with the committee he cannot undertake to outline any policy for it, but he believes they will go to work promptly at a revision of the tariff. This, he says, does not necessarily mean that a bill would be reported very soon, for the reason that the work is one that will take considerable time, and the rapidity with which the bill is completed will depend upon the mode of procedure.

Mount Confers With Gresham.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A conference between Secretary Gresham and Minister Blount was held in the diplomatic room and lasted nearly three hours. Secretary Gresham sent for Mr. Blount's reports on the Hawaiian situation, and the two considered them at length. Mr. Gresham refused to make any statement.

Delegates From Bermuda.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Samuel A. Masters and Thomas J. Watson, delegates of the house of assembly of Bermuda, are in the United States on a mission to have the duty on garden truck imported from Bermuda lowered.

Inspector Wagner Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Upon the recommendation of Supervising Inspector Steuart, Secretary Carlisle dismissed Inspector George G. Wagner of New York.

ANTI-FRENCH RIOTS SPREAD.

A Consulate Sacked by a Mob in the Island of Sicily.

ROME, Aug. 23.—The popular ferment arising from the Aigues-Mortes affair shows no sign of subsidence, although there has been no more rioting in this city. The agitation is spreading in the provinces.

At Milazzo, on the north coast of the island of Sicily, a mob made an attack on the French consulate. Arming themselves with stones and other missiles, the mob marched to the consulate and smashed about every window in the building.

The escutcheon of France over the doorway was torn down and taken possession of by the mob. An attempt was then made to burn it, but the police somewhat tardily arrived and drove the rioters off. Some of the officers seized the escutcheon and rushed into the crowd and recaptured it. This attack is likely to further complicate the trouble.

There was a renewal of the rioting at Genoa, during which an omnibus was totally wrecked. The agitation in Genoa, though nominally directed against the French, is said to be actually the work of anarchists, who are ever ready to make riotous demonstrations. Troops have been sent to Genoa to assist the authorities there to prevent a recurrence of the rioting.

According to a semiofficial announcement, Admiral Brin, minister of foreign affairs, has instructed Signor Ressman, Italian embassador to France, to inform the French government that in view of its spontaneous dismissal of the mayor of Aigues-Mortes the Italian government, appreciating the friendly disposition thus shown and placing complete confidence in the efficient and impartial action of the French magistracy for the punishment of the guilty parties, is happy to be able to consider the incident satisfactorily closed.

CRIED FOR WORK AND BREAD.

A Mob of Unemployed In Milwaukee Applies Anarchistic Principles.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—A mob of unemployed laborers marched through the streets to the courthouse and called for the mayor. When Mayor Koch made his appearance, he was greeted with cries of "Bread!" and "Work!" Several of the workmen made speeches and demanded that the city officials go to Washington to have the law which made hard times repealed.

Mayor Koch advised them to return to their homes and procure work wherever they could. He said the city would soon have money enough to prosecute public improvements and give many men work. The mob then retired. On the way to the courthouse the crowd looted a candy stand and appropriated some of a fruit merchant's stock.

A party of workmen who had just been discharged stopped a baker's wagon on North avenue and compelled the driver to give them his stock of bread. The party went into a saloon and ordered beer, which they drank and refused to pay for. Some of the agitators promise a larger and more sensational gathering.

The Riot at Gilbertown.

GILBERTOWN, Pa., Aug. 23.—Three deaths have resulted from the street car riot which started when the citizens of this place tore up the tracks of the Schuylkill Traction company because that company failed to comply with the borough ordinance. Richard Amour, chief of the company's police, who was shot while trying to subdue the fighting began by the rash action of one of his men, afterward died in the hospital. Richard Paiffit and William Hughes, spectators, were also shot and instantly killed. All is quiet today.

Buffalo Day at the Fair.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Today is known on the official list of the World's fair days as Buffalo day. It is being celebrated with enthusiasm by all the Buffalo people and residents of western New York who are in Chicago. The formal exercises were held in the New York state building this morning. Among the distinguished guests and speakers were Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, Postmaster General Bissell and Mayor Bishop of Buffalo.

Walked Forty Miles to Get Married.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—A couple of young people were married by Justice Joel Johnes, who lives three miles from this city. They told him they had walked from Rockland county, N. Y., 40 miles away, and that they had tramped the greater part of the distance bare feet, carrying their shoes on their shoulders. The man said his name was Elija Degraw and the girl's Elsie Degraw.

Diamond Rings Sewed In His Trousers.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Six diamond rings, valued at about $1,000, were stolen from the room occupied by Miss Minnie Holmes of New York at the Fort William Henry hotel, Lake George. James Walker, a colored waiter, was arrested, and five of the rings were found sewed in the bottom hem of the prisoner's trousers.

An Elderly School Principal Is Thought to Be With Her.

ANOTHER LOVER SUSPECTED TOO.

Pretty Clarice Vondersmith Tired of Washing Dishes and Disappeared From Her Home—Received a Telegram Before She Left—Her Mother Has Suspicions.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Clarice, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Vondersmith of 1797 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, disappeared late Friday night, and no trace of her has been found. Clarice, as her mother calls her, is a handsome, unusually well developed girl about 5 feet tall, with dark brown hair and eyes. The principal of the public school of a prominent ex-official of Kings county are declared by Mrs. Vondersmith to be involved in the disappearance of her daughter.

Until Wednesday last Mrs. Vondersmith was employed as housekeeper in Fred Dyer's White House at Broad Channel on the road to Rockaway. Clarie was a waitress in the house. Mrs. Vondersmith was seen by a reporter. She said:

"From all I can learn about Carrie I firmly believe she has been lured away by the principal of a school. He came down to Broad Channel about Aug. 7, while I was housekeeper there. Carrie was working hard, and when he arrived I noticed that he immediately seemed to take great interest in her and talked to her at every opportunity. He said it was a pity such a pretty girl should have to work and scrub over the dishes all day. There were a thousand other ways, he said, in which a young girl could occupy herself and be much more happy. He even suggested to her he should find a better situation for her.

Made Carrie Dissatisfied.

"Of course this made her dissatisfied with her work, and she told me one day she wanted to go away. I knew what was the matter, so I went to see Carrie myself. I declared he meant all he said; that he was deeply in love with the girl and wanted to benefit her. I was very angry, because he is a married man, although he does not live with his wife.

"I told him his attentions to Carrie would have to cease, as they were wrong and entirely misunderstood by her. But he remained at the house on my daughter's account, I think, and when I found his persecutions continued I determined to leave, so I gave up my place Wednesday and came home with Carrie. She seemed unhappy about something, but I thought time would undoubtedly kill the notions the principal had put in her head.

"On Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock I saw her tearing up a telegram and throwing the pieces in the fire. I asked her about it, and she only said it was from some one asking her for a meeting somewhere. My daughter was not in the habit of going out at night, and I was rather surprised when at 10 o'clock she said she was going to keep an appointment, but I did not question her. I have not seen her since. I have learned that she went to Broad Channel, because she was seen leaving there Saturday morning for this city on the 7:10 o'clock train with the principal.

"A friend of mine, day he went to Mrs. Noll, whose husband, Jacob, keeps a saloon at 871 Atlantic avenue, and told her to tell me that Carrie was all right and not to worry about her, as he had brought her back and sent her home. But she has not come yet. I went to Captain Dyer of the Twelfth precinct station house, and the police are making every effort to find her.

He is Fifty.

"I thought she might have gone again to Broad Channel on the beach, but she is not there now, and I have almost given up hope of ever seeing her again. I cannot understand why the principal, who is a man 50 years old, should want to take my little girl away.

"She received this letter on July 31 from the young man who, I think, has me something of her whereabouts."

NEW YORK, July 31.

DEAR CARRIE—If you can arrange it so you can come over to the beach some time this week, say Friday night or Saturday, why we will have a glorious time, but I want you to keep it a secret.

Tell Johnny I was asking for him, and some time he must come over with your mother, and at the same time want you to come, so I can have you all to myself.

Well, I don't know what else to say, so good-by.

ALF.

After reading this destroy it, as I do not want Jake to hear of it. Now you can let me know by Thursday evening what night you can come over.

"I do not know Carrie's answer, but her going away may possibly hinge on this letter."

According to Mrs. Vondersmith, the writer of the letter is summering at Arverne-by-the-Sea. The principal could not be found yesterday. He has moved once or twice recently and is supposed at present to be out of town. Mrs. Vondersmith has several friends who are searching for Carrie, and detectives have been detailed to look for her.

SPINNERS WILL RESIST.

A Cutdown Will Probably Be Met With a Big Strike.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 23.—Intense excitement prevails in local textile centers over the threatened reduction of wages by the manufacturers of Fall River. The spinners here say they will resent to the bitter end any attempt of the local corporations to enforce a reduction anywhere near the amount determined on at the session of Fall River millmen.

A reduction of wages in Fall River will mean a reduction of wages in New Bedford, as it has always been so. The local labor unions are taking action in the matter, and no branch of industry will submit passively to a reduction.

It is the prevailing opinion that the spinners in both this city and Fall River will strike rather than submit to the proposed reduction. The weekly textile payroll of this city is $60,000. The enforcement of a 10 per cent reduction would reduce it $6,000.

Secretary Ross has received information that notice of a 10 per cent reduction in wages has been posted in the mills at Slatersville, R. I., and that the spinners feel like resisting its enforcement. A request for Secretary Ross to hasten to Fall River. Secretary Ross has issued a call for the national spinners' executive committee to meet in Boston on Monday, at which time the situation of the Salmon Falls spinners and also those of other sections where reductions are threatened will be acted upon.

Affairs In Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The Inman machine shops have closed for an indefinite time. The Morris knitting mills, No. 1, in this city, and No. 2, at Akin, are preparing to close. The night employees in the No. 2 mill, numbering 100, have been laid off. The mills have been running steadily for eight years. The Sanford carpet mills are still closed.

May Close For All Winter.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 23.—Comstock, Cheney & Co. of Ivoryton, employing 500 hands in manufacturing ivory goods, piano and organ boards and actions, state that they will not run more than a week between now and October and may be closed all winter.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 23.—The first dispensary for the sale of "Pitchfork jug" was opened at Charleston. About 15 citizens were supplied with toddy bearing the state's official trademark. The business was opened by a gray headed white man, who stepped up to the alcove, gave his name, swore that his red nose and blurred eyes were not caused by rum and paid 15 cents for a pint of whisky. The sales of the day amounted to about $30. A majority of the purchasers were negroes.

An Immense Lawn Party.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—In all probability the largest lawn party the world has ever seen was that given at the Waite City in honor of the visiting West Point cadets. No less than 25,000 people attended, and it is estimated by some that the number who enjoyed the grand lawn fete was double that. The party was held on the beautiful lawns that surround the state buildings on the north end of the fair grounds.

WENT DOWN IN A STORM

Many Disasters Reported Along the Nova Scotia Coast.

SHIPS SINK IN HALIFAX HARBOR.

Twelve Persons Lost by the Foundering of a Tug and Tow.—A Steamer Loaded With Passengers Feared For.—Worst Storm In Thirty Years.

HALIFAX, Aug. 23.—Not since the memorable storm of 30 years ago, when 80 vessels were wrecked on this coast, has such a gale swept Nova Scotia. Many lives have been lost, and the coast is strewn with wrecks. Rain poured down in torrents. The wind blew a terrific gale, razing trees and houses and did much damage to shipping. The entire electrical system of the city was demoralized.

Miss Lizzie Morrissey, aged 12 years, was killed on Lockman street by coming in contact with electric light wires.

The eastern portion of the harbor is strewn with small boats, and several yachts belonging to squadrons were wrecked. An immense amount of damage was done to public parks, gardens and cemeteries.

The storm extended all over the maritime provinces, but no details are obtainable from outside places owing to interrupted telegraph and telephone communication.

Along Dartmouth shore a large number of boats have been driven ashore and smashed and three schooners were wrecked.

Schooners Sunk at Anchor.

The schooner Janie R. Captain Balcom, arrived from Marble Mountain and anchored in the cove. During the gale she dragged, and her stern struck the wharf, and she went to the bottom with a cargo of 500 barrels of lime, which burst in her hold.

The schooners Laura and Carrie A. which laid up in the cove, were also totally wrecked.

At West India wharf the schooner Daisy, coal laden, was foundered.

The storm did great damage at Upper Prospect. Many seine boats were sunk and the road was blocked with fragments of boats.

A dispatch from Pugwash, Cumberland county, reports two Norwegian barks are ashore at Northport.

It is reported that the steam tug Dorcas, with the barge Etta Stewart in tow, coal laden, from Sydney, for this port, was wrecked near Three Fathom harbor, 40 miles from Halifax, and all hands, 12 in number, were lost.

Fears are entertained for the safety of the steamer Lisbon, which left for Cape Breton and Prince Edward island with a large number of passengers and of which nothing has since been heard.

New Sisters of Mercy.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., Aug. 23.—At the Convent of St. Joseph, mother house of the Order of the Sisters of Mercy in New Jersey, the Right Rev. Bishop O'Farrell of the diocese of Trenton gave the veil to the following young ladies: Ellen Tierney of New York—in religion Sister M. Thecla; Martha Rodgers, Bethlehem, Pa.—in religion Sister M. Mercedes; Sarah Scully, South Amboy, N. J.—in religion Sister Carmilita; Ellen O'Neil, Limerick, Ireland —in religion Sister M. Josephine; Sarah Conaghan, Freeland, Pa.—in religion Sister M. James; Jane Lynch, Brooklyn—in religion Sister M. Lazarus; Alice Currier, Manchester, N. H.—in religion Sister M. Peter.

Anarchists Broke Up a Meeting.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The anarchists, after vainly trying to hold meetings at various east side halls, only to be scattered by the police, attempted to capture a peaceable meeting of the united Hebrew trades in Pythagoras hall. Captain Devery and his men were on hand, though, and the anarchists were driven out. They succeeded in breaking up the meeting and will be arrested if any of them can be identified.

Driven From Their Work.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—A mob of unemployed laborers visited the scene of the north side sewer now building and drove out of the trench 75 men who were working eight hours at $1.50 a day. The men in the ditch were willing to work, but the mob, with cries of "No starvation wages in free America!" forced them to quit.

They Favor Commercial Secession.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The World prints today opinions from a number of western governors upon the proposition of a commercial division of the United States. Governors Stone of Missouri, Lewelling of Kansas and Pennoyer of Oregon boldly favor the convention. The others heard from oppose it.

Young Morris' Hard Luck.

WESTCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 23.—A. H. Morris, the athletic son of J. H. Morris, who, together with his father, runs the race track at Morris park, has just now a disfigured countenance. He has, too, suffered a humiliating political defeat. He was worsted in a row and in an election.

Love Disappointed Noble Ladies.

VIENNA, Aug. 23.—The Countess of Thun, Princess of Schwarzenberg and Countess of Solm, all young women of great beauty and hitherto conspicuous in society, took the veil in Prague. Disappointment in love was the motive in every one of the cases.

Mr. Hamlin Does Not Want to Run.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Charles Sumner Hamlin, assistant secretary of the treasury, says he could not be induced to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Fathers Rescued at Asbury Park.

NEW JEWELRY.

The Stones of the Season and Favorite Ways of Setting Them.

Curious, out of the way gems are in great demand, but the chief surprise in the particular stone of the season. Set as a double heart in bracelets or brooches, cut en cabochon for shoe-buckles—in any and every form this stone of exquisite milky green is now displayed. Opals, too, were never more sought after than now, and one of the most magnificent necklets consists of four Hungarian opals threaded on a diamond chain of beautiful design. Pearl necklaces are never out of fashion, but the favorite idea now is to separate each white bead from its fellow by a roundel of diamonds—a plan that imparts much richness and brilliancy.

The ideal of modern jewelry is to be devoid of stiffness, and some of the prettiest bracelets consist of a linsom band of diamonds fastened round the wrist in a slipknot, which is held fast by a jeweled ball. The slender old fashioned gold neck chains, from which three tiny enameled lockets depended, are also being revived. The Alexandrite, green by day and red by night, is much affected by women of fashion for its uncanny beauty, and an enormous topaz, with a fiery crimson light in its depths, forms an appropriate center to a rising sun of brilliants. Turquoises are still exceedingly popular.

There is an endless variety in bangles. Diamond and pearl hearts are introduced into the center of gold bangles, and the heart can be removed, forming a brooch by the addition of a gold pin screwed into it. Chrysoprase is the fashionable wedding gift for bridesmaids blended with diamonds. A new design for a diamond and pearl necklace takes the form of diamond Marguerites, with a pearl in the center. The dragon fly brooch here illustrated is formed of diamonds, one large stone occupying the center.

Midsummer Capes.

Capes of alternate rows of white guipure insertion and velvet ribbon are prepared for summer wear when driving or in the evening. Pale green velvet ribbon with scalloped edges, and turquoise blue ribbon, is very effective with either white or black guipure insertion. These capes reach half way to the waist line in the back and are pointed longer in front, to be knotted on the bust or hang straight, as the wearer pleases.

The most diaphanous capes for midsummer are made of either white or black mousseline de soie. A breadth of the mousseline, with the lower selvage intact, is gathered to a pointed round yoke, which reaches to the shoulder tips, and is enhanced there by a short frill of the mousseline, which borrows with the lightest breeze. Around the neck is a high puff or a ruche of the mousseline made to tilt outward like the calyx of a flower, next she throat and face of the wearer.—Harper's Bazar.

Cotton and Linen Gowns.

Gowns made of the so called wash fabrics are in demand. And what is a wash fabric, known as the galatea twill, is no longer confined to children's use, but has been adopted by ladies for outing suits. Both cotton and linen batistes are employed, and a favorite trimming is furnished in either guipure lace or embroidery. Gingham gowns are this season—many of them—very elaborate with their full sleeves, serpentine waists and open work embroidery. Some of the most stylish of the cotton gowns are made with belted waists that look invisibly on the shoulder and under the arm. Favorite trimmings for these dresses are embroidery, guipure lace and rows of braid.

Little Folks' Styles.

In fashions for little folks the thing most aimed at just now seems to be picturesque effects. This is well illustrated in the so-companying cut, where the boy wears a modified sailor suit of brown velvet, with brown silk vest and collar, and the little girl is in a pretty frock of blue linen trimmed with white braid.

The Newest Skirts.

There is a general feeling of relief at the visible signs of a reaction against overinflated skirts. The newest skirts show neither an excess of fullness nor of trimming. Many of these have merely a low trimming of a single ruche or puff, a very full ruffle of four to five inches in depth, or several rows of folds, gathers, or rolls set quite close together and occupying not more than three to four inches of space.

Numbered with the new skirts is a very becoming one, which, unlike the bell and umbrella skirts, is not entirely round, but has a little added length that gives a sweep backward, throwing the fullness into folds behind and leaving the front plain.

The First Kindergarten.

The claim is made that in the year 1860 Friedrich August Froebel opened the first kindergarten at Blankenburg, a little village of the Thuringian forest. The idea had its inception in the loving heart and fertile brain of the great Swiss educator, Pestalozzi, who during a life of unappreciated effort, loss and disappointment builded far better than he knew and left his unfinished work a priceless legacy to the world. Froebel was born 37 years later.

Surgery for the Bed.

Nothing adds to the dignity and the effect of the bedroom like drapery arranged about the headboard of the bed, yet the canopy is not always available. The fixtures cannot always be attached without more labor and more cost than it is wise to bestow upon them, and the hangings themselves are open to objection by harboring dust. But such a simple contrivance as the drawing shown can be erected by the housekeeper herself and can readily be brushed and kept in order.

To make it, first screw fast to the wall at the proper height two iron shelf rests and upon them place a 10-inch board exactly as long as your bed is wide. From the shelf to the surface arrange in graceful folds either soft india silk, yoddo crape or cretonne of some artistic pattern and tack it fast top and bottom with round brass headed tacks. Cover the board with a strip of the material and tack fast to three sides a flounce of the same, then screw it tight to the rests. Make curtains long enough to reach the floor and tack one to each end of the board beneath the flounce. Drape them in simple folds, and by means of a handsome ribbon attach each to a hook screwed in the wall at a point even with the mattress.

The New Surplice and Blouse Waists.

A feature among imported dresses that cannot fail to be popular in the coming season is the surplice waist. This is a round girdled waist that laps across the bust in becoming fashion and is sometimes crossed in the back also. It is made in various ways, being gathered full and shirred on the shoulders when intended for a slight figure, or else left quite plain there for those who are full chested. It is trimmed with folds or lace and has about the crossed fronts next a V shaped plastron, and it is often widened by a bertha or epaulets. Large sleeves gathered down at the seam accompany this waist. The new fancy, even for day dresses, is to have these full sleeves stop short at the elbow, the arm below to be covered by long gloves. A full skirt completes the gown, or it may be close about the hips with a deep Spanish flounce. Harper's Bazar, which is authority for the foregoing, says also:

Belted waists, which the modistes call blouses, are part of many of the imported spring dress. They come in the new colors, more figured woven, with a palms of brilliant color, in china silk, in indigo blue and in nile green india silks, and also in the serge and sacking of which the dress is made.

DAINTINESS OF VEAL.

Various Ways to Cook This Much and Long Abused Meat.

Owing to the superior care now given to calves which are born late in the winter, there is a great deal of excellent veal to be found in the market early in the year. Farmers have learned how to house the young calves in warm barns, where the sun can shine on them. They feed and fatten them with systematic care, so that the meat attains to somewhat the same quality as the flesh of the animal that has the freedom of the spring fields and sunshine.

The great value of veal to the cook is not as a piece de resistance, like beef and mutton or even lamb, but as the foundation of many dainty small dishes. It is a necessity to the first class cook in making stocks, both white and brown, for sauces of all kinds. The poorest parts of veal may be utilized in some delicate dish. The brains, the liver, the sweetbreads and even the tendons of veal are esteemed delicacies. The meat of the leg, which in full grown beef is the comparatively tough round, is the fillet of veal—one of the daintiest parts.

In the last score of years we have learned the value of sweetbreads in this country, and they are no longer thrown away, as they once were. But there are many other small pieces of veal which make very appetizing dishes (if properly prepared) at a very small price, and their merits are yet comparatively unknown to the average housekeeper. Of these the breast of veal is perhaps the best known, yet it is very little used. Every part of it, except the fat and hard bones, may be made into appetizing food.

For breakfast the breast may be boned, trimmed free from fat and cut in small squares of about two inches. These squares should be simmered in stock slowly until they are so thoroughly tender that they may be easily pierced in all parts with a larding needle. They should then be pressed and should remain in prss for eight or ten hours—so that it is necessary to make the stew the day before it is to be served.

In the morning skim off any grease which may have risen to the top of the stew. Take the pieces out of press and heat up the liquid in the saucepan. Thicken it with a teaspoonful each of flour and butter mixed, taste it to see that it is well seasoned and let it simmer again for 10 minutes. Replace the veal in it and let it warm up. When thoroughly heated, dish the pieces in a circle and pour the gravy over them.

Well to Know.

Articles of plate that are not in daily use, and which may yet occasionally be wanted at a moment's notice, should be rolled in long strips of green baize, made for the purpose and with strings to tie. When not in their appointed places in the chest, they should be kept in a dry drawer close at hand. All the larger ornaments, too, should have their own bag, to keep them free from dust and as much as possible out of the reach of atmospherical changes, which more than all else go toward tarnishing their brightness.

She Had Forgotten.

After she had made her purchases and had informed the clerk as to the address to which they should be sent, she picked up her purse with her left hand and placed her parasol across her left arm, gazing the while over the counter and floor as if in search of something else.

"Excuse me, miss," ventured the clerk; "but have you mislaid anything?"

"I am sure I don't know," she replied; "but when I entered the store I am positive I carried something in my right hand."

"Did you not have your parasol or purse in your right hand?"

"No; for I remember very distinctly that I carried my purse in my left hand and the parasol on my left arm, as you see them now."

"It is very strange," remarked the clerk, with a troubled expression on his face as he searched under the different pieces of fabric strewn over the counter.

"I cannot imagine what it is was," she remarked musingly, as she placed a small gloved hand to her chin and gazed into space; "I am positive it was something, and I feel loss without it."

"I am unable to find anything here," came the muffled voice of the clerk from under the counter, whither he had dropped a few seconds before with the faint hope of being able to find the missing he knew not what.

"Oh, I know now what it was," she gleefully exclaimed, as a pretty flush spread over her face. "it was this."

As the clerk's head bobbed up from behind the counter she gave a shrick-in-her, she, with a graceful sweep of her shapely right arm, clutched a handful of her skirt in the back, and smilingly took her departure.—Harper Bruvo, Jr., in Life.

A CLYCONIC STORM IN THIS CITY LAST NIGHT.

The Wind Blew a Gale, While the Rain Came Down in Torrents,—Streets Submerged, Trees Blown Down and Chimney's Knocked off.

LATE yesterday afternoon a rain storm set in which finally took a clyconic nature and burst upon the city toward midnight with terrific force. The wind blew a gale and the rain fell in torrents. In a short time the streets were submerged and they formed miniature rivers. Pedestrians having to cross Front street at Park avenue, no doubt, would have welcomed the appearance of a boat. It was not an ordinary Summer storm. There was no thunder, there was no lightning, and there was not the brief but heavy fall of rain characteristic of August storms in this region. Instead of this, after a day of threats, manifested in an overcast sky, an occasional light shower, and an atmosphere sultry to a painful degree, there came an outburst of wind, startled those who were on the streets.

It was not a shower, but a deluge. The high wind carried the water through the air so that its volume was apparently greatly in excess of the actual fall. It was driven in sheets.

Trees were blown down in all sections of the city and borough. On Central avenue a large tree near Mr. Augustus Smith's place was uprooted. It fell across the street, breaking down the electric wires and smashing in electric light globes. Its roots took the sidewalk with them. Another tree further down the street was also blown down. On West Second street where the sidewalks were being graded down a big tree was uprooted and fell, taking electric light wires with it. On Plainfield avenue wires lay in every direction with limbs of trees. One of the big trees in Dr Hedges yard toppled over, while the others were divested of numberless branches.

Charles Johnson's grape arbor at the corner of Church and Third streets was knocked flat by the wind.

Chimneys also suffered. One on a house on West Front street occupied by Mr. Theodore Van Ness lost its top. Some of the bricks fell down the chimney and when Mr. Van Ness built the fire this morning his house was filled with smoke as the bricks were lodged in the flue, blocking the smoke and causing it to come back into the room.

The top of the chimney on Mr. David Woodruff's house on Manning avenue fell over, knocking a hole in the slate roof.

A big tree in Mr. Ruttman's yard, corner of Watchung and Kensington avenues was blown down.

The deluge swelled the Brooks until they were the highest since the great storm a few years ago which carried away the Somerset street bridge as well as a number of others. Stony brook was like a roaring river, coming down through the notch, and residents in that vicinity say it was the highest in years.

Part of the roof of the grand stand at the Crescent Oval was blown off.

The fire alarm wires were rendered useless in the eastern part of the city, by a large tree falling across the wires and breaking them on Netherwood avenue.

Several of the Western Union telegraph wires were down this morning so that communication was cut off with New York for a short time. The breaks were repaired and the wires in use before noon, however.

SHE JUMPED FROM THE WAGON.

Mrs. Thorp was Afraid the Horse Wouldn't be Stopped.

Yesterday as Mr. Thorp of West Second street had his family out for a drive, his horse became frightened and started to run. Mrs. Thorp in the excitement jumped from the wagon into the street. The horse was not running very fast, or Mrs Thorp might have received serious injury. As it was she was thrown down, although not injured. The horse was stopped before any damage was done.

STRUCK BY A PIECE OF BOARD.

An Employee of Rheaume & Co's Mill Injured.

Lewis Miller, employed at Rheaume & Co's scroll and planing mill, on East Fourth street, met with an accident this morning. A piece of a board which he was guiding against the steam circular saw flew off and struck him against the hip, badly bruising it. His wrist was also injured.

Salvation Army Notes.

Ensign May Agnew, the noted pianist from international headquarters, New York, and Mr. Bjorksten, the celebrated tenor singer, who has traveled throughout the country as Christine Nilson's tenor singer, will be at the Salvation Army hall to-night.

Wash the Globes.

If the globes of the two large electric lights at the depot were cleaned the light would be improved, as well as the looks of the globes, which are very black. When properly attended to the lamps give a splendid light for some distance around.

"BECAUSE GROVER'S GONE FISHING."

More Trouble Caused by That Angling Trip.

About a month ago Mr. Gideon Barnes of Boonton came to Plainfield and took his son Milton's wife, home with him, because Milton was out of work.

Now Milton wants a bill of separation, so he says. He says his wife sold $35 worth of furniture for $8.

Milton was laid off at the Pond Tool Works recently.

PERSONAL.

Miss Ella Dunn of West Fourth street is at Atlantic Highlands for two weeks.

Miss Jennie Baum of Vine street North Plainfield, is spending a week at Smithville.

Miss Kate Fry of Brooklyn is a guest at Mr. Chester Satterlie's on Greenbrook road.

Miss Mazzie Keegan of Manning avenue is spending two weeks at New Brunswick.

Miss Estella Taylor of Manning avenue is visiting her sister, Mrs Huff, at Dunellen.

The Misses Kate and Ella Mullen of West Fifth street have returned from Asbury Park.

A little son was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Townley of Grandview avenue last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McCardle of West Front street expect to start Saturday for Budd's Lake.

Mr. William Addis of Orange street is home from an extended visit in Sullivan county, New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. David H. Rowland of Watchung avenue have returned the Page house, 511 West Seventh street.

Mrs. Hull and daughter of Norwood avenue returned Tuesday afternoon from a two weeks' stay at Milford, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. William O'Connor returned yesterday from Worcester, Mass., where they have been spending their honeymoon.

Mr. A. G. Conant and family of Watchung avenue, who have been staying for a month past at Pepperell, Mass., are expected home Friday.

Mr. Fred. R. Martin and family of Sandford avenue, who have been spending the month of August at Asbury Park, returned home yesterday.

A number of the friends of Miss Collier, daughter of Mr. Asa Collier of East Front street, were delightfully entertained by her last evening.

Edwin L. Duck of Jackson avenue avenue has returned home after a six weeks' outing in Connecticut and Long Island, with his cousin Willis Cooroft of Brooklyn.

Mr. Jeremiah Van Winkle, head salesman in Schepels & Co.'s clothing store starts to day on his vacation. He intends to spend several days trying to hook the finny tribe in the Raritan.

Sir. Knight F. M. Hull-tt has given the Crescent Division No. 12, Knights of Pythias the use of his spacious hall on West Front street, free until labor day, for drilling purposes. The Knights expect to make a good showing at Freehold on that day, it being the Field Day of the State organizations.

About a week ago Mr. Charles Schermerhorn, manager of the Western Union Telegraph office in this city, received a letter from his son, Charles, who is a in Newberne, N. C., saying that he had been sick with malarial fever but that he was then almost well again, and not to feel worried about him. Yesterday Mr. Schermerhorn received a telephone message from Gen. Delafield of New York, who has charge of the work at Newberne, done by Mr. Charles Schermerhorn, jr., stating that Charles was very ill and that suggestions had better go South and see how bad he really was. Mr. Schermerhorn intended at first to go himself, but George Tobin kindly offered to go, he accepted his offer, and telegraphed his son that he was going to send Mr. Tobin to look after him. Before Mr. Tobin could get started Mr. Schermerhorn received a telegram from his son telling him not to send Mr. Tobin. Nevertheless Mr. Schermerhorn sent him. He will probably reach there to night.

Didn't Like to be Tied.

This morning Mr. T. A. McCarthy left his horse standing untied on Park avenue, near the corner of Front street. The horse was left untied purposely by its owner, because as soon as tied the animal would pull back until it broke loose. Sergeant Kiely did not know of this little trick of Mr. McCarthy's horse, but tied him to the nearest post. In an instant the bridle was broke into pieces and the animal was loose. Just then the owner appeared on the scene and explained why he always left his horse untied.

Mr. William T. Kirk Gets the Contract.

At a meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders Tuesday it was decided to repair the Central avenue bridge at Rahway.

Mr. William T. Kirk of this city was given the contract yesterday to do the work for $300.

In Justice Nash's Court.

Judgement was rendered yesterday in two cases by Justice Nash as follows:

Homan vs. Barton, on contract, in favor of the former for $25 and costs.

Barnett vs. Van Winkle, in favor of plaintiff for $31 and costs.

He also issued a summons in the case Howell vs. Catlino, returnable August 28.

NOW A MILLIONAIRE.

JOHN S. HOUGH OF RAHWAY HEIR OF A RICH CALIFORNIAN.

He Once Nursed His Benefactor through a Serious Illness, and now He Receives His Reward—O. S. Stewart Also Gets a Share.

POOR old John Hough, formerly of this city, now living on Central avenue, Rahway, with his married sister, has fallen heir to a large sum of money, estimated at over $1,000,000. The money has been bequeathed to him by a man in California whom Hough had nursed through a severe attack of typhoid fever. About a year ago, a lawyer from California appeared in Rahway and told Hough that his friend had died and in his will had bequeathed his entire fortune to his former nurse. Hough laughed at the man's story, and told him that when he brought some proof of the story he would then take some notice of the matter. The lawyer went away, promising to return with the proofs.

Yesterday two lawyers appeared in Hough's home and produced letters testamentary from the surrogate of the county in which Hough's benefactor died; also other documentary evidence that convinced Hough of the truth of the story.

As related by his sister, Mrs. Groves, the story is, in substance, as follows:

Hough became acquainted about two years ago with a young Californian who was very wealthy. Mrs. Groves does not know how the acquaintance came about. She says her brother very rarely spoke to her about his affairs. The Californian, who was about thirty-three years of age, was taken suddenly and seriously ill while on a visit to Rahway. His ailment proved to be typhoid fever in its most virulent form. Hough became interested in the case and conceived it to be his duty to become the man's nurse. His experience as a physician's helper had taught him many things, and he readily undertook the care of the young man. At that time, it is said, Hough did not know of his patient's almost unlimited means. Hough, according to his sister, nursed the young man safely through his dangerous illness and sent him on his way to his California home rejoicing. Before he went, however, he insisted upon Hough's acceptance of a substantial recompense for his services and also secured him that he should be remembered in the will of his grateful patient.

Hough heard nothing more of his wealthy friend, if occasional letters be excepted, until the sum ser of 1893, when two strange men called upon him in his Rahway home and said they were the emissaries of the lawyers of the young Californian, who, they explained, was dead and had made a will constituting Mr. Hough his sole heir. The men said the deceased had left an estate valued at more than a million dollars in real and personal property, and that some of the real estate was situated in the State of New Jersey. They explained that the Californian had no heirs or next of kin, and that there was, therefore, no danger of a contest over the will. They said it would doubtless become necessary for the heir of their client to return with them to the Pacific coast in order to facilitate the final adjustment of the estate.

To say that Hough was astonished would be putting the matter feebly. He told no one, however, about his extraordinary good fortune for several days, and then only in a casual way explained matters to his sister, Mrs. Groves. He received from the men the strange men several times after this, but never alluded to them in any way. His absences from home, however, began to be more frequent and prolonged, but he never vouchsafed an explanation. It was only by accident Mrs. Groves and her daughter Eugenia learned these trips abroad were made for the purpose of examining the parcels of property bequeathed to him by the dead man's will.

Mrs. Groves said a great deal of this real estate is situated in the vicinity of Central Park, and the New Jersey parcels are in Plainfield and Asbury Park. There is also much valuable land in the West, besides stocks and bonds and other gilt edged securities. Mrs. Groves declared emphatically that the value of the estate had been placed at more than $1,000,000.

O. S. Stewart of this city, a boy at the time Hough took care of the Californian, is also remembered in the will. It directs that property worth $10,000 be bought for him. The property has been selected. Mr. Hough has gone to California.

Hysterical Over the Death of Her Mother.

A waitress in Mr. McVey's restaurant on North avenue, became hysterical last night over the death of her mother. She was finally pacified, but broke out again to-day. She says her mother fitted a stove, injuring herself so badly that she died shortly afterward.

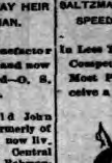
The Weather.

On Friday warmer and partly cloudy to fair weather will probably prevail, preceded by local rains, and on Saturday warmer, fair to partly cloudy weather.

BEGINNING TO RALLY.

BALTZMAN AND MARTIN INCREASE SPEED FOR A GRAND FINISH.

In Less Than a Week the Exciting Competition will be Over and the Most Popular Fireman will Receive a Glorious Trip.



RED men, and people of all nations, will welcome Plainfield's Most Popular Fireman, at the greatest exposition the world has ever seen. It is not yet known who the most popular fireman is, though it has been pretty well demonstrated who some of the most popular firemen are.

This contest, aside from the well merited reward that will follow, has centered public interest on the firemen of Plainfield, than whom there are none better.

August 30 is the date for the winner.

BREVITIES.

—The sale of property for delinquent taxes took place this afternoon.

—"Rose and Rosie" will be the next attraction at Music Hall, Thursday evening, August 31.

—Manager Keller has secured Pitcher Meekin of the Paterssons to pitch Saturday at Hackensack.

—It is said of a Plainfield policeman that he told a friend that he got two eggs in one day from one hen, each weighing 24 ounces.

—"A few honest suggestions, which should be appreciated" is the interesting heading given Mr. J. C. Allen's new announcement to day.

—On complaint of Mr. P. P. Van Arsdale a warrant was issued to day by Judge Coddington for the arrest of a number of boys, who he claims annoy him.

—The excursion of the Odd Fellows to Lake Hopatcong was postponed this morning. Word was telegraphed to the superintendent not to send the train on account of the stormy weather.

—Fred Koechli of Somerset street is subject to heart trouble. Last night he was taken ill on Somerset street. He managed to get into a store where he fell down. He soon revived and went home.

—A loaded hay wagon belonging to Mr. Wagoner "from over the Mountains" was caught in the Somerset street car tracks yesterday, and the front wheel wrenched off. A new wheel was procured.

—The girders used by the Central in going over the Streets in Elizabeth are mammoth concerns. They consist of many heavy sheets of iron bolted together, and weigh from 25,000 to 30,000 pounds each.

—Four young men of this city out driving in a party phaeton were caught in the storm last night. The wind nearly blew the curtains from the wagon. One of the party was compelled to get out and lead the horse, which was so frightened that it wouldn't go.

—Residents in the neighborhood of Harmony street complain of a gang of noisy boys who play boisterous games until a late hour nightly. They also commit depredations on private property and annoy sick people. The matter could be very easily stopped if Marshal Pangborn were regularly mounted and warrants secured for the arrest of the objectionable boys.

DROWNED IN A BUTTER TUB.

The Family was in Another Room When Baby Fell Into the Firkin.

While the family of William Wittenberg, of Rahway were at dinner yesterday afternoon, their two-year-old child, climbed down from her chair at the table, and after playing around the dining room for awhile toddled into the kitchen.

She was not missed for some time, when some member of the family remarked how quiet she seemed.

Something being needed from the kitchen Mr. Wittenberg was horrified to see the child's head down in a butter firkin containing about ten inches of water, her little feet hanging over the sides of the tub.

Restoratives were applied to the baby, but with no success, as she died in a few moments. It is supposed she was playing with the water, and leaning over too far lost her balance and fell into the tub.

The Smith Family Re-Union.

The Smiths will hold their 18th annual re-union on Aug. 30. A number of prominent speakers will be present and address the gathering, the principal orator being Rev. Frank M. Kerr of Chester. The music will be furnished by Wilbur's brass band of New York city. If clear the re-union will be held the next fair day. The officers are: Isaiah Smith, President; Abraham Smith, Vice President; James C. Smith, Secretary; Oscar Smith, Treasurer.

Bird's Nest Soup a la Chinese.

The Democrats propose to admit birds' nests free of duty, but if the workman's children want sugar candy a tax of 20 per cent. must be paid. We suppose the idea is to conform to the tones and teach the unemployed American laborers to make and eat bird's nest soup a la Chinese. They would then be able to work for Chinese wages. That is the Free Trade idea.—American Economist.

Suing for a Diamond Ring.

Constable Mattox last night served a summons on Mr. Noah Pike in a suit brought by Miss Lizzie Van Syper of Paterson to recover money she claims she paid to get a diamond ring out of a pawn shop, where it had been pawned by Mr. Pike's son Joseph. The papers are returnable before Justice Mosher on September 6th.

A Handsome Cane.

TO HAVE MORE NEW ROADS.

The Board of Union County Freeholders Held a Special Meeting Tuesday Afternoon.

THE Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders met Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of receiving the proposals for the construction of four new county roads.

There were several proposals for each of the proposed improvements, which were received and held by Director Sauer until the resolutions of the Board called for Clerk to open them. The roads to be improved are the following: Springfield avenue from Morris avenue in the township of Springfield to Essex county line, Newark avenue, from the easterly curb line of Elizabeth street, Elizabeth, to the Essex county line. Morris avenue, from the Essex county line at Robart's gap, through Summit township, to the Passaic River. Edgar Road, from Grove street to Bliss street in Linden.

The opening of the bids was the only matter which engaged the Board's attention, excepting one or two matters of a routine character. A committee was appointed to examine the Central avenue bridge in Rahway, reported that the bridge was in a dangerous condition, and recommended that it be repaired at a cost not to exceed $600.

The bids for the construction of the new roads were referred to the Committee of the Whole, and they were considered in executive session. When the Board reconvened no contracts were awarded, but a resolution was adopted deferring action until the next meeting.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, etc., with some flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Royal Tooth Powder, the best English prepared chalk, the finest Castile soap, delicately flavored. Your dentist will tell you these substances are perfectly harmless and accomplish all that is to be expected from a tooth powder. A full two ounces package of this unscented article, same as usually sold for 25c, under other names, at 15c. Sample of this powder will be given with each one dollar purchase and upwards. People of correct taste will appreciate the delicate flavor, but some people will say, "I want a tooth powder to use it, however, can be distinguished from those who don't, as the rose can be distinguished from the dandelion. This will soon send us some, but duly consider us to speak truthfully. The "Royal" is being received everywhere, and jobbers compliment us with their duplicate orders.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When We Have Enough Money.

Gaston Roosevelt, writing in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, draws a striking contrast between the French and American spirit. Here no man knows when he has enough money. The whole life is usually a scramble for wealth, and the richer a man is the harder he generally scrambles. The ambition for literary, artistic or musical fame in other countries is in the United States apt to be all centered in the one desire to be distinguished for wealth. "I do not like your country," foreigners say frequently. "All you Americans care for is to get rich. There is no leisure, no rest. Everybody is on the rush. It confuses me."

In France Mr. Roosevelt says a man considers himself rich enough when he has accumulated sufficient money to live comfortably in his own station in life. There perhaps is the rub. In America, and it is truly our glory that it is so, there is no "station in life." The highest station is within reach of the humblest, and he strives for it as long as he lives if he is a true American.

Yet the foreigner who retires on a little competency is happier. Who shall say whether he is wiser or not? With a certain little income, enough to meet his modest wants, the Frenchman retires to a place in the country or in a small town and lives at his ease, interesting himself in municipal affairs. The result is that municipal government in French towns is in the hands of the best citizens, who always loyally serve their country without a cent of pay. Municipal corruption such as we are too familiar with in America is unknown in France. Being a few degrees better off than the people among whom he lives, the retired Frenchman is looked up to with immense admiration and respect, recalling the old saying about a dog among kings.

A few of our own countrymen are wise enough to curtail their ambition for wealth and seek quiet and sweet peace in rural delights. One of these is Joaquin Miller, who, keeping bachelor's hall in his lone cabin in the Sierras, is singing some of the sweetest songs of his life such, too, was the late Prentice Mulford's favorite ideal. A little house, a few devoted friends or one's family and life is the sweet, fragrant country in the life best worth living. It enables the writer to do his best work, the philosopher or scientist to think his highest thoughts. Six hundred dollars a year, a home in the country, with roses, straw berries and fresh eggs, is paradise enough for any rightly constituted person.

Combination Among Farmers.

There are signs on both sides of the water that agriculturists are taking a lesson from the success of the various combinations and trusts of the time. In Germany farming is now being conducted on an immense scale, according to the joint stock plan. Capitalists, indeed, have turned to farming as an investment for their money. They buy or lease a number of farms, throw them into one and then run them on the principles that have made other stock enterprises so successful. They put them under uniform management, buy the most improved machinery, seed, animals, etc., at wholesale rates, then, under the superintendence of scientific farmers, till the ground. Some farms raise live stock altogether, a few producing only sheep, but thousands of them annually, which supply the cities with mutton and lamb. Beet sugar and potatoes are the product of other lands. Thus by specializing, wholesale purchase and taking advantage of the most improved methods of farming those combined capitalist farmers are enabled to raise the greatest crops at the least cost.

In this country one agricultural combination of movement has taken shape as an organization composed of farmers and manufacturers. It is called the Farmers and Manufacturers' Commercial league. Its object is business, not politics, and the intention of its members is the same as that of the great joint stock farmers of Germany—to get the most at the least cost. Its headquarters are in Chicago, and branch offices are scattered through various parts of the middle and western states.

In this newly formed league, manufacturers on their part agree through certain distributing agents to place supplies, machinery, merchandise, tools and other articles at the service of the farmer at the lowest cost. The farmer always does supply his commodities to consumers at the wholesale rate, so that he has no call to lower his prices. A further task of the league will be to bring as far as possible producer and consumer into direct communication with one another, both in the matter of manufactured goods and of the farmer's smaller crops.

Of the 356 members of the present congress, 118 are college educated. Two hundred and seven of them are lawyers and 83 are farmers. Fifty-five of them began life as farmers, but drifted into more money making occupations. All except 22 of the large number are American born. Our foreign born men seem better at voting American men into congress than at getting there themselves. There is at present only one colored man in congress, and he is from South Carolina.

Do not eat too much in hot weather. Do not eat too much at any time.

LEE MANTLE REJECTED

The Senate Refuses to Recognize the Montana Appointee.

CUMMINGS STIRS UP THE HOUSE.

The New York Congressman Says He Represents a District Where Thousands Are Crying for Bread and Work—Antiriver Men Claim a Majority For Repeal.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—When the resolution which was offered by Mr. Pefler of Kansas stood over, calling for information as to the violation of law by the national banks of Boston, New York and Philadelphia in refusing to pay promptly in currency the checks of depositors, came up early in the session, it gave rise to an impertinent and interesting discussion which lasted for several hours.

When the morning hour expired, the resolution went to the calendar, where it cannot be reached again except in the regular order of business.

After an argument by Mr. Hoar against the amendment offered by Mr. Butler to the national bank currency bill for the repeal of the 10 per cent tax on state bank notes, the report and resolution of the committee on privileges and elections in favor of the right of Mr. Lee Mantle to a seat in the senate under the appointment of the governor of Montana was taken up, debated and decided in the negative.

The vote was taken on the minority resolution declaring Mr. Mantle not entitled to a seat, and it was carried—35 to 30. As Mr. Manderson had changed his vote in order to move to reconsider, the vote had stood 34 to 31. The motion to reconsider was made and was pending when the senate adjourned.

Mr. Cummings Rouses the House.

The session of the house was not without interest, but the members are beginning to feel the effect of long hours of labor, and their attention to the speakers was rather listless.

Indeed the only speech which roused them from their lethargy was that delivered by Mr. Cummings of New York. He spoke for less than 30 minutes, but within that time he concentrated a defense of New York's Democracy against the attacks of the Democracy of the whole west.

He said that the New York Democracy needed no vindication at his hands, but the southern Democracy needed vindication before the people and he arraigned the New York Democracy.

He represented a district in which there were very few banks—fewer perhaps than in any other congressional district of the United States. He represented the teeming and toiling millions of New York. He represented a district where there were more than 6,000 workers living in one block. He represented a district where today the black flag (but not the red flag) had been raised bearing the inscription "Bread." He represented the cry of "Bread, work!"

The only work these toilers could get was from the manufacturers in New York city, and the manufacturers told them that they could not get work until the purchasing clause of the Sherman law was repealed.

The other star speaker was Mr. Cannon of Illinois. Against the opinions of a large majority of his Republican colleagues he held—and held forcibly—that the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman bill would be a mistake. He believed in standing by the Republican platform.

The debate was opened by Mr. C. W. Stone of Pennsylvania in favor of repeal, and his remarks were ably seconded by his colleague, Mr. Daizell. Messrs. Fitch and Covert of New York also spoke against free coinage.

Mr. Hatch of Missouri argued against the Wilson bill. Mr. Turner of Georgia favored the free coinage of silver, but at the highest ratio which had been proposed. Mr. Culler of Wyoming and Mr. Taylor of Tennessee both upheld the cause of silver and were re-enforced by Mr. Maguire of Colorado and Mr. Bell of Texas. Mr. Pirce of Rhode Island closed the day's debate in favor of the repeal bill.

At the evening session Mr. Hunter of Illinois said he would vote for the Wilson bill as an alternative. Mr. Dunn of New Jersey advocated repeal, as did Mr. Hall of Minnesota. Mr. Ikert of Ohio spoke of the ratio and favored one of 19 to 1. Mr. McDowell of Tennessee was opposed to the Wilson bill. Mr. Harris of Kansas voiced a free coinage sentiment, and Mr. Bell of Colorado made a characteristic western silver speech. The house adjourned at 11 p. m.

Antisilver Men's Claims.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the antisilver men in the house the final figures were presented of the poll of the members upon the questions contained in the bills now before the house. One of the numbers stated that if the friends of free coinage could concentrate their whole strength upon any one of the ratios the majority against it would be 83. But as this is undoubtedly impracticable, there being some who will vote in favor of retaining the present ratio of 16 to 1 who will not support a change to 20 to 1 and some who will oppose 16 to 1, the majority against either one will be upward of 50. When it comes to the naked question of repeal or no repeal, as presented in the Wilson bill, the member stated that the majority in favor of its passage will be at least 75.

Regulating the Debate.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—In view of the numerous requests for time in which to speak in the house on the silver question an effort is being made to secure a further modification of the order regulating the discussion, so as to confine the operation of the five minute rule to today alone, giving Friday and Saturday to general debate. The house will be in session today over 80 members may speak.

No Chinese Ultimatum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Reports that the Chinese government has sent an ultimatum to the United States with regard to the Chinese exclusion law are pronounced at the state department to be without foundation.

Lamont Goes to See the President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Secretary Lamont left the city for New York and will make a visit to Buzzards Bay.

Jack Dempsey Jailed.

RACINE, Wis., Aug. 24.—Jack Dempsey, the pugilist, arrived here, and by his actions he soon convinced everybody that he was insane. His wife will make an effort to get him to Chicago.

The Jubilee Is Dug Closed.

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—General Fame and his yacht Jubilee arrived here. She will be hauled out for repairing.

ACTRESS MARRIES A LORD.

May T. Ice, Once an American Chorus Girl, Is Now Lady Hope.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Pelican, just out, announces the marriage of May Yohe, the American actress, to Lord Hope. The marriage was kept secret until a few days ago, when it was announced to some intimate friends.

Lady Hope, who claims Bethlehem, Pa., as her birthplace, has been on the stage about 10 years. Her mother was a dressmaker and frequently traveled with her daughter on her theatrical tours. Lady Hope is still quite young, certainly not over 26, has exhibited talent at an early age, and friends sent her to Europe that she might cultivate her voice and learn to speak foreign languages.

She returned with a good knowledge of French and German, both of which languages she speaks with facility. She did not devote much attention to her musical studies, satisfied that being the possessor of three or four remarkably rich low notes she could make a sensation.

She was right, and when she appeared in Pittsburg in burlesque she quickly attracted attention, not only by her vocalization, but also on account of what may best be described as sensation.

She was originally a chorus girl with Edward Rice's company and made her operatic debut at the Bijou theater, Philadelphia, which was burned five years ago.

A Message on Hawaiian Affairs Perhaps.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Secretary Gresham and Minister Blount had another long conference over Hawaiian affairs yesterday at the state department. It is believed that the president will send congress a special message giving his views on the subject of the relation the United States should bear to Hawaii before the present session comes to an end. It is said that the administration has come to no conclusion with regard to the policy it will recommend. Mr. Blount left for Georgia to be the honor in Columbus, Ga. Georgians here express an opinion that the course of political events in the empire state of the south points strongly to his receiving the Democratic nomination for governor of Georgia. It is expected that he will return to Washington after Mr. Cleveland gets back.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New Jersey—G. N. Harris, Baleville; W. W. Tunison, North Branch.

New York—S. E. Mason, Gilbert Mills; Klan Williams, Knox; Ezra Caufield, Lockwood; F. H. Smith, Milton; Mrs. P. D. Schenck, Pulaski; J. A. McGinnies, Ripley; William Hinchliffe, Sinclairville; Peter Zimmerman, Erie.

Pennsylvania—Andrew Harter, Coburn; P. A. Burton, Dents; Thomas Brubaker, Etters; J. H. Rishel, Farmers Mills; R. F. Leathers, Flemington; F. S. Venus, Glen Rock; Mrs. Emma Spotts, Hepburn; J. F. Morris, Latimore; P. G. Benford, Lavansville; C. McDermott, McDermott; Mrs. Ella E. Leathers, Mountain Eagle; W. C. Bailey, New Freedom; J. G. Small, Reisersburg; G. B. Bollinger, Spring Forge; John Dysinger, Wellsville; John Cook, Zion.

Iowa Democrats Renominate Boies.

DES MOINES, Aug. 24.—Governor Boies was nominated by acclamation by the Iowa state Democratic convention. Boies was also nominated for lieutenant governor on the Populist ticket. The platform committee agreed on a silver plank, simply reaffirming the silver plank of 1892, the silver men uniting with the antisilver men on this compromise, which has been practically the antisilver programme for some time. The liquor plank of the last two gubernatorial campaigns is also reaffirmed and several new state issues raised, such as nonpartisan control of state institutions.

Miss Vaders In an Asylum.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Miss Emma Vaders, the actress who has been playing the leading female roles with Thomas W. Keene, is violently insane and has been taken to an asylum in Philadelphia. Miss Vaders became insane a month ago while at the Lynn House, Asbury Park. She soon recovered and two weeks ago began rehearsing "The Fool's Revenge" with Mr. Keene's company at the Broadway theater.

Hot Chase For a Burglar.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 24.—A burglar broke into the house of Dwight Baldwin in Ward street and stole a gold watch, jewelry and a pocketbook containing a large sum of money. Mrs. Baldwin heard him and began screaming at the top of her voice. In a few minutes about 20 men were on the street with Deputy Sheriff Byrne, with guns, pistols and clubs. He made his escape, however.

An Oil Well Driller Cremated.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 24.—John Goggs, an oil well driller, was burned to death by an explosion of gas at an oil well he was drilling in Robinson township. The gas was struck unexpectedly and gushed from the well in such volume that it was ignited by the fire under the boiler. An immense flame of burning gas is roaring in the air, baffling all efforts to extinguish it.

Two Lovers Swallow Strychnine.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 24.—Jose Rossi and a young woman named Abigail Salazar, both of this city, poisoned themselves with strychnine. The father of the young girl objected to the young man's addresses to his daughter.

Shot For a Deer.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Robert Fleming, 21 years old, was instantly killed by Timothy Gazine while deer hunting in the North woods. Gazine took Fleming for a deer and sent two charges of buckshot into him.

Kaiserinde's Passengers Scattering.

BUFFALO, Aug. 24.—Twenty-eight Italians have settled here. All were immigrants who had come over on the steamship Kaiserinde, whose passengers have been kept in quarantine in New York.

Bookkeeper Wentworth Arrested.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Philip F. Wentworth, the Victoria hotel's bookkeeper, was arrested on a charge of stealing $28,720 of funds belonging to the hotel. Wentworth had been missing since Aug. 5.

White Caps With Blackened Faces.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Aug. 24.—Twelve miles south on the hills, near Waymansville, eight men, with faces blackened, brutally horsewhipped Andy Schrader and his wife, a respectable couple.

Many Gamblers Gather.

THOUSAND ISLAND PARK, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Grenage day brought 5,000 members of the state grange here to listen to eloquent addresses.

An Encystation at Tufts.

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—The trustees of Tufts college have voted to establish a medical school for both sexes.

THREATS OF THE REDS.

New York Anarchists Say Wait Until Saturday.

THE POLICE BREAK UP A MEETING.

When the Binnonds Were Dulled, They Cleared the Synagogue In a Hurry—Mr. Gompers Asks Vainly For the Mayor to Provide Work For the Unemployed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—An anarchists' meeting in an east side synagogue was broken up by Police Captain Siebert and a squad of 10 men.

A man named Bolansky of 118 Delancey street mounted a platform. He began as usual by denouncing the newspapers. He worked himself into a frenzy and denounced everything and everybody from the president down to the most humble officeholder. He shrieked that the men before him should not be police and that they should not allow them to interfere with them. He said the police would not dare to attack them if they acted as they should.

"The police dare not come in here!" he shouted. "If they show themselves in here, the scenes at Walhalla will be repeated."

The Police Appear.

It was just then that a roundsman appeared with 10 men. The captain told them to clear the hall. They marched to the front and began operations. It was the liveliest incident that has occurred since the police made the east side beat. The men tore through the doorways, leaped through the windows and tore the cloches from each other in their efforts to get out. The police plied their clubs vigorously.

They shrieked and howled, and the man who had been denouncing the police ran to the platform into the cellar. In less than two minutes there was no one left in the room with the exception of the reporters and a policeman.

Later a secret meeting of anarchists was held at 11 Pike street. An excited crowd filled the hall and the steps in front of the building, but there was no disturbance.

It seems that some one had reported the presence of the crowd in the synagogue to Captain Siebert, who immediately went to the place and investigated. He stood next to the entrance while Bodansky's speech about the police was translated to him. One of the anarchists told Captain Siebert's interpreter to "shut up." The captain was in plain clothes and had not been recognized. Again the anarchist commanded the interpreter to do it. "All right," said the captain (by this time Bodansky was warming up to the charge), "we'll stop," and in a minute the police were inside.

"Wait Until Saturday."

The report of expected assistance from Chicago anarchists has led to the stationing of several official police men in the vicinity of the Pike street anarchist headquarters, and in Rutgers square. Secret meetings are held at 11 Pike street nightly. At the meeting on Tuesday night there was no little excitement over the subsequent repetition of the words, "Wait till Saturday," has led many to believe that that day will witness some outbreak more violent than any yet attempted.

At a meeting in Miller's hall, 71 Suffolk street, a committee was appointed to call on the mayor and ask him to provide business men in Rutgers square Saturday night. This may or may not be connected with the "wait till Saturday" talk.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor had another conference with Mayor Gilroy. Very little came of it. The mayor said that he did not see how as an official he could provide any system of relief, but he offered to put Mr. Gompers into communication with several private individuals who would be interested. It was understood that the large clothing firms are about to take steps for relieving the poor. The relief committee, of which Register Levy is chairman and Maurice Kinkerstein a member, met at 102 Broadway. They have collected quite a sung sum already to push on the work of feeding the hungry on the East Broadway.

A movement of Italian keepers is on foot to give free lunches and beer to the unemployed.

Germany Mourns For Duke Ernst.

BERLIN, Aug. 24.—The Duke Ernst of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha died at midnight at his castle at Reinhardsbrunn, in Coburg. The duke being childless, the throne now falls to the Duke of Edinburgh, the second son of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, who was the brother of Duke Ernst. The Duke of Edinburgh thus becomes a reigning German prince and the German court will go into mourning for three weeks.

Chicago's Unemployed Ask For Work.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—About 400 unemployed men marched to the city hall and lined up in an orderly manner on the west side of the city building. A delegation waited upon the mayor's private secretary and presented a petition for work. They asked to see the mayor, but when told his honor was not in retired in an orderly manner.

More Rioting In Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 24.—Another demonstration by unemployed workmen occurred in this city. A large number of Poles attacked a party of laborers at work on a street contract and demanded that they stop work. The police dispersed the mob.

Young McLaughlin's Big Haul.

COSEY ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Under Sheriff McLaughlin of Brooklyn and his son Hugh, Jr., were fishing from the end of the new iron pier at Coney Island. Young Hugh hauled up a striped bass that weighed 21 pounds.

A Battle Near Buenos Ayres.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 24.—The rebels have captured the town of Cordova without a blow. The rebels afterward left the town and attacked and defeated Acuna after a six hours' battle.

Street Car Strike Threatened.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—Nine hundred street railway men employed in this city threaten to strike at noon today unless a discharged employe named Magnuson is reinstated.

Won the Jabberwock Trophy.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 24.—The races of the American Canoe association for the Jabberwock trophy were held in a stiff breeze. Enoch Eaton, Jr., Troy, won.

Senator Hill's New Move.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The World's Washington correspondent sends this statement, which is printed today: Senator Hill served notice on his Democratic colleagues that he means to paddle his own canoe. He deliberately spurned the leadership of Gorman and Jones and joined hands with Peffer, Kyle, Butler, Walcott and other Alliance and silver senators in a movement which several senators designated as a covert attack not only upon the eastern national banks, but also upon the administration's conduct on financial affairs.

The Search For Annie Orr.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 24.—It was reported that Annie Orr, the missing Bridgeport girl, had been discovered here. The rumor arose from the fact that her brother, Charles Orr, of this city, consulted a clairvoyant here and was told that the missing girl's body lay at the bottom of a well. She failed to locate the well, however, and Orr concluded it was in the vicinity of New Haven. A remark he dropped gave rise to the rumor. Mr. Orr says that he had as yet secured no definite trace of his sister.

Fair Buildings to Be Sold as Junk.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—The beautiful white buildings of the exposition are to be sold as junk. They are soon to be advertised and knocked down to the highest bidder. About the only things of future use in them are the iron and steel arches and timbers. It is thought that not more than $1,000,000 can be realized from the auction.

Longshoremen Mobbed Italians.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Six Italians, while leaving the wharf of the Clyde line, pier 26, East river, where they had been working, were attacked by a number of striking longshoremen. Several were wounded by paving stones and clubs. Knives were freely used, and three Italians were badly hurt.

Fire Makes Homeless Families.

GALETON, Pa., Aug. 24.—Fire broke out in the clothing house of H. Sallowrit, and 17 buildings were destroyed, including the Methodist church and opera house. Nineteen families were rendered homeless. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin.

TWENTY-FOUR ARE LOST

Steamer Dorcas and Tow Went Down With All Hands.

A FEARFUL STORM RAGED AT SEA.

The Nova Scotia Coast Strewn With Wrecks and Bodies—A Cyclone Howling Along the Lower Atlantic Coast—High Tide at Asbury Park.

HALIFAX, Aug. 24.—The steamer Dorcas and the barge Etta Stewart have been lost, with 24 lives, and men have been sent to Shut-in Island, 40 miles from here, to see what can be done. The Dorcas, Captain Angus Ferguson, left Sydney on Saturday last with a barge in tow, both coal laden. The barge carried a crew of eight and the Dorcas a crew of 10. In addition the chief engineer of the steamer had his wife and four children on board. Miss Sadie Musgrave of South Bay, S. D., was on the barge Stewart, making the total loss of life 24.

J. C. Potts of Porter Lake arrived here from the scene of the wreck. He says the wreckage was first discovered on the shore at Porter Lake. The seas were running mountain high, and the two vessels were fast breaking up.

The body of Captain Ferguson of the tug Dorcas was found about a quarter of a mile to the westward on Half Island beach. Both his temples were bruised and his body badly injured. His watch had stopped at 2:10 o'clock. His remains were taken to Beorn. Six or seven bodies were seen floating in the surf under the bluffs at Half Island. The bodies will be recovered when the tide goes out.

Recovering the Bodies.

The bodies of Mrs. Hennis and her daughter, aged 7 years, were recovered near where Captain Ferguson's body was found. Her husband was engineer of the Dorcas and was lost with the others. The Hannan family had been at Sydney visiting relatives and were returning home.

The names of those drowned on the Dorcas are:

Angus Ferguson, captain, leaves a widow and three children; Hector McDonald, mate; Forman Norman McMurray, able seaman, Louisburg; Alexander McVicker, able seaman, Louisburg; Michael McGuns, able seaman, Halifax.

Those on the Etta Stewart as far as known were:

Captain C. Spencer, Louisburg; William Price, mate, Louisburg; P. McVicker, Louisburg; Miss Musgrave; George and James Kelly, brothers, Louisburg; A. McDonald, able seaman.

There are grave fears entertained in shipping circles here for the safety of the schooner Wallela. She left here Sunday in ballast, bound to Pictou to load.

The schooner Crescent, 30 tons, is a total wreck at Cheticamp, C. B.

Considering the number of wrecks by the storm, the loss of life is small. Several schooners are reported ashore at St. Anne's, C. B. The schooner Mary Jane, ashore at Gabarus, is reported a total loss.

An unknown schooner and several small boats were driven ashore near Tidnish. The schooner Hydra, Charlottetown for Sydney, with molasses, sugar and dried meats, is at Auld's Cove, C. B., full of water and likely to be a total loss.

Ten small vessels are ashore at West Bay, near Parrsboro. The schooner Narva is a total loss at Sand Point, and the schooner Mary Jane is completely wrecked at Big Pond.

High Tide on the New Jersey Coast.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 24.—A heavy storm set in along the upper New Jersey coast. The wind blew with great force from the northeast, making a very heavy surf. At Long Branch the breakers ran high over the newly erected bulkhead along the foot of the bluff and dashed in showers of spray far into Ocean avenue.

Here at Asbury Park at high tide the surf was sweeping in and out under the famous board walk of Founder James A. Bradley with such force that the foam from the top of the waves was carried a block inland. The next high tide is expected to work considerable damage.

At 8-abright the surf was hammering away at the cottage bulkheads with a noise heard a mile inland. At Highland Beach the surf was tearing out the old and abandoned cribwork erected to protect the Sandy Hook tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

A Body In the Cabin.

PARRSBORO, N. S., Aug. 24.—The steamer W. M. Weatherspoon picked up the wreck of the schooner Enterprise in the basin and towed her into Partridge Island pier. The body of a young man, supposed to belong to Parrsboro island, was found in the cabin. The vessel was seen off Partridge Island on Monday night, with two men and two women on board.

Cab Drivers' Riot In Naples.

THE WALLACE FAILURE.

Assets of $2,000,000, but Could Not Meet a Note For $60,000.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Wallace & Sons, manufacturers of brass and copper goods at Ansonia, Conn., with offices in Chambers street, this city, have been forced to suspend on account of the hard times, and their affairs have been placed in the hands of receivers. Wallace & Sons are one of the oldest and largest concerns in their line. The business was established in 1848 at Ansonia, and was incorporated in 1892 with a capital stock of $100,000. They employ from 1,000 to 1,400 hands. The company found not meet a note for $60,000, which fell due on Tuesday, and notes to the amount of $50,000 fall due before Sept. 1, and the balance of the notes out mature in the next two or three months. They are unable to make collections from their customers on account of the stringency of the money market and the exceptional financial conditions; creditors pressed them and judgments were threatened, being a foreign corporation. The liabilities are placed at $675,000, of which $450,000 is on open accounts, nearly all of which are past due, and $225,000 on notes. The nominal assets are put down at $2,000,000.

Investigating the Gilberton Riot.

GILBERTON, Pa., Aug. 24.—Coroner Marshall, assisted by District Attorney Ryan, are thoroughly investigating the Gilberton riot. Almost, the special officers in charge of the armed force of employes, who was shot during the disturbance, still lives. Warrants have been issued for the constables and borough officials of Gilberton charging them with riot on the oath of the Traction company officials to offset the warrants that were sworn out against the traction people. Brogan, the railway employe who started the shooting, and Weibl, his companion, who assisted him, are the only ones in jail.

How Over Quarantine.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 24.—The city is full of refugees from Brunswick, and a serious disagreement has occurred between the board of health and the city council. Immediately after the announcement that another case of yellow fever had appeared in Brunswick the board of health met and recommended that quarantine be established. At a meeting of the council held later it was decided that there was no necessity for quarantine. Now the board of health and four of six members decided to tender their resignations at once.

Abington Rioters Sentenced.

ABINGTON, Mass., Aug. 24.—The trial of Superintendent John C. Sanborn, Detective Bailey and Headman Bryant of the Old Colony division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, who with 12 others, names unknown, were charged with rioting Aug. 24, when the Electric Railroad company attempted to lay tracks across those of the defendant company, was concluded. The men were each sentenced to one month in the house of correction.

Flour Is Cheap, Bread Is Not.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The Advertiser says today: "Flour this year is cheaper than in any year since the war, but the loaf of bread with flour at $4.15 a barrel is almost as dear as when flour sold at $12 a barrel. The profits of the baker at the present time are simply enormous. To the big baking firms this year means simply a clean scoop in over last year's profits of at least $250,000."

NEW ENGLAND WIVES.

WOMEN WHO ARE MENTALLY SUPERIOR TO THEIR HUSBANDS.

A Frank Though Caustic Analysis of the Character, Environments and Disappointments of the Housewives of New England—Mental Starvation.

The wife is a peculiar creature. She is called the better half by courtesy, and she is usually treated as if she had no title to the rights which the better half ought to enjoy. Many men treat their wives as girls treat their dolls. They represent to them the luxury of life, but not companions in the struggle for existence, and it is somewhat rare to find married people where the wife takes her place as the legitimate partner of her husband in all the concerns of life. Not that women are not regarded with courtesy and treated with honor as wives and mothers, but the greater number of men are so much interested in themselves, are so accustomed to handle money and do big things, that they do not use the brains of their wives nearly so much as they delight in their affections and in their methods of dress.

This is true of society in general when you penetrate below the crust and see things as a clergyman, a physician or a lawyer sees them. It is the rarest thing in the world to find a wife who is thoroughly happy in her domestic relations who does not have some little secret or unhappiness which she confides to her best friend, who would not have her husband different if she could, and who loves him just enough to make him happy and cosses where idolatry begins.

All this is said by way of preface to the lives of the wives of the farmers of New England. They are a constituent part of the women who have to do with New England character, with the training of the boys and the girls who are to replenish the wasted vitality of our cities, and who are in many cases to take the lead in the advance of our civilization. Scattered all over New England you find homesteads regarded with veneration, or cellar holes where houses once stood, for whom great men and noble women were born and reared. Such are the places where Hiram Powers and Daniel Webster and Mary Lyon and John G. Whittier and Lucy Larcom were born. Some of the best and noblest fruits of New England manhood and womanhood expressed itself in the lives of these persons, and there is not a well settled township in all New England where it is not possible to point to this or that old homestead and be told that General Armstrong was born there, or Dr. Peabody lived there in his childhood, or here Bishop Huntington first saw the light, or there the founder of Smith college lived in early years.

New England is full of character, and when you travel through the country and see the old houses you always think of those who have gone out from them and inquire who were the makers of children, and who are trying to inspire these children with hopes and aspirations which the sluggish natures of their husbands have never aroused. Without access to books or papers to any extent, and without the opportunity to choose interesting companions, and married at an early age, they did not know themselves, these women lead isolated lives in which they suppress their higher consciousness and give themselves up to voluntary martyrdom to duty.

The wives of the farmers in New England have had no voice in church or state. They are a silent and long suffering company. Even more seldom than in our common social life do these women find congenial companionship in their husbands.

This may seem a harsh statement, but no one can avoid seeing the people as a pastor or as a physician who does not have these facts impressed upon his mind and heart a thousand times. What shall be done? If ever the farms of New England become again the heritage of the sturdy yeomanry of a century ago, the women who live upon them will have more freedom to share in their higher intellectual and moral life, men who are educated to their business, who share in the life of the community, and who know how to be genial companions in their own homes, men who go to church on Sunday and take their part in the moral upbuilding of the community. When women such as grow up in the seclusion of country homes can find such companions and such helpers in the bringing up of their children, they will not want the amenities of life in isolation, but will become all the more noble because they have suitable companionship and inspiration in their own homes.—Boston Globe.

Length of Girl's Skirts.

A little word about the length of the skirts. Each mother must regulate that by the height of her daughter. Many a girl of 16 is smaller than the one of 14, but it may be taken as a general rule that while the girl of 13 and 13 wears her dresses to her ankles, the girl of 14, 15 and 16, especially if she be very tall, wears them just a little below. Dress reform may be very well in its way, but the keeping our girls modest is of very much more importance, and healthfulness and modesty may always be combined.—Exchange.

honored housewives of New England, the outgrowth of our homes, the secluded mothers in the farmhouses, the women who have less education than they could desire, and who thirst in their inmost hearts for the careers which their lot in life has prevented them from entering upon.

Many a girl has grown to be a woman and in the quiet of a rural home without arriving to a consciousness of her gifts. She has given herself away in the fruitions of a youthful affection to the first man who asked for her heart, and after marriage and after becoming the mother of children her dormant intellectual and spiritual life has been awakened, and she has seen visions and talked with angels and heard the voice of God in the garden in the cool of the day. The New England housewife seldom has a confessor. Mrs. Stowe has penetrated into the silent lives of some of these mothers and told us how their sensitive natures were wrought upon by the New England theology, and many a New England pastor has found in these smothered lives a purity, a devotion and a spiritual life and aspiration upon a high plane which has made his pastoral visits a joy and an inspiration to his life.

The country is full of these mature women, arrived at spiritual consciousness, who are infinitely above and beyond their station, who may be the mothers of children, and who are trying to inspire these children with hopes and aspirations which the sluggish natures of their husbands have never aroused. Without access to books or papers to any extent, and without the opportunity to choose interesting companions, and married at an early age they did not know themselves, these women lead isolated lives in which they suppress their higher consciousness and give themselves up to voluntary martyrdom to duty.

Women Workers in Chicago.

Chicago leads New York in the employment of women in business. It is not easy to find an office or a store in which they are not at work as secretaries, accountants, clerks, who may be the mothers of children, and who are trying to inspire these children with hopes and aspirations which the sluggish natures of their husbands have never aroused. Without access to books or papers to any extent, and without the opportunity to choose interesting companions, and married at an early age they did not know themselves, these women lead isolated lives in which they suppress their higher consciousness and give themselves up to voluntary martyrdom to duty.

A Glovemaker's Hint.

I would say to the ladies who persist in wearing tight gloves in hot weather, do not every time you take them off wrench yourself red in the face by blowing into them. The air thus admitted does, to be sure, dry them, and they can be more easily shrunk on mass of kid when you next attempt to wear them. But there is a less objectionable way to obtain the same result. Pull them off by merely turning the fingers inside out. Let them air a few minutes, then turn them and put them away—not folded in a wad, but stretched at full length in a long glove box. You will find the result fully as satisfactory and the remedy much easier of application.—Utica Observer.

A Woman's Organization.

"Wimodaughsis" is conducted by an efficient board of directors, president and secretary, all of whom are women. The derivation of the name is as follows: It is composed of wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of the original projectors of the scheme, and the name itself is composed of the first two letters of "wife," the first two of "mothers," the first five letters of the word "daughters" and the first three of the word "sisters"—Wi-mo-daugh-sis." The word is pronounced wi, as in the word wives, mo like mo in mothers, daugh, which has the accent, being pronounced as it is in daughters, and sis like the last syllable of thesis.—St. Louis Republic.

Turning the Churchgoing Habit.

Said a considerate mother: "I want my children to attend church and I intend they to do so, but I do not expect grown people's behavior from them. I adopt Dr. Edward Stevens Hoyt's plan of allowing me to carry a piece of paper and a pencil, so that as much as they become restless or weary they may draw or write by way of diversion, provided of course that they do so very quietly. As they grow older and are more able to understand what is being said from the pulpit, the pencil and paper are left at home, and in the meantime the habit of churchgoing has been formed."

A Recipe For Beautiful Waltzing.

Miss Lolé Fuller gives this recipe for waltzing: "In ordinary waltzing, which most people do almost entirely with the feet, keeping the body as stiff as a bag of sawdust, the body ought to bend a little backward from the waist as the foot steps forward, and as the shoulders give a slight turn in the direction of the next step the head should take the reverse motion—there is the secret of lovely waltzing."

A Useful Traveling Case.

A convenient little travelling case can be soon put together with a strip of waxed cloth folded to about 8 by 10 inches. There is a flap, and the inside will hold one's brush. Outside is an oblong pocket for the comb, and on the reverse two other pockets—one about a quarter length from the top and the other about two-quarters length up. The whole is ornamented with further stitching.—Philadelphia Press.

His Greatest Help.

It is said that one of the reasons for the strong hold which John L. Burns, the labor leader and socialist of London, has is his devotion to his wife. His always insists on the presence when he has to make a speech anywhere and is said to be amusingly helpless without her. If he misses her, he calls out, "Where is my wife?" She answers, "Here, John," and the speech goes on.

Laughing Wrinkles.

The general impression about wrinkles is that they are caused by worry, but the truth is most of them come from laughing. To know how to laugh is just as important as to know when to do it. If you laugh with the whole face the wrinkles that will work loose in time, and wrinkles will form in exact accordance with the kind of laugh you have.—London Tit-Bits.

A Suggestion For the Baby's Bath.

A trained nurse makes the suggestion that it is wise in bathing very young babies to wrap them with a thin flannel towel at the moment of immersion, slipping it off when the baby has become accustomed to the water. This will prevent what is always a slight shock to young infants—the first contact with the bath.—New York Times.

Mrs. Stannard, who is perhaps better known to the reading public by her pseudonym of John Strange Winter, is reported as saying that her husband offered his hand to her within four days of their first meeting and was accepted. Her marriage is said to be exceptionally happy.

Inflamed parts will subside under the sanitizing qualities of very hot water. Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of bleeding, and, besides, if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing wounds.

A child's diet should be strictly watched over and not left to the child's own instincts. A proper amount of simple, nourishing food is the best diet for mental and physical development.

An exceptionally beautiful baby blanket is made of squares of white flannel worked with clover in the pale green and dull pinks of the flower. The border is long and short stitch in white floss.

Half the work in washing dishes is keeping the dishcloths and towels clean. Washing out once a week in ammonia water should never be neglected.

For wise people, peculiarly appropriate for the season, can always be found in our repository.
We will not say that we have the best in the world, but we do say and know that the same money cannot purchase better Harness and Carriages than our patrons are rapidly making their own. It is sometimes expedient to forget what you know, but it is never the course of wisdom to forget our select consignment of fancy traps and trappings. Save time, temper and money by purchasing of us.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," FRIDAY, AUGUST 25, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Stephen Pangborn of the borough started to-day for Asbury Park.

Mrs. Simonson and family of Second place are home from their Summer outing.

Miss Lillie Carmichael of Dunellen is spending a few days with Miss Thorn, of this city.

Miss Kate Daly of New Brunswick is visiting Miss Nellie McCann of East Front street.

Miss V. Henderson of Rockview avenue has returned from an outing in the New England States.

Mr. D. E. Davis and family of 334 East Fifth street expect to return home from Liberty, N. Y., to-morrow.

Mrs. Weigmann and daughters of East Front street have returned home from an extended stay at Asbury Park.

Mrs. George Van Nest of Jersey City has been spending a few days as Mrs. J. F. Ten Eyck's, at South Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mundy, daughter and grandson, of this city, visited Mrs. C. J. Wilson of Bound Brook on Tuesday.

Messrs. George D. Hallock, J. A. Smith and H. W. Marshall spent yesterday crabbing and fishing at Papiac. The catch is reported as very small.

Messrs. Clarence Murphy and John Van Winkle started this morning on their bicycles to Asbury Poltville, where they expect to catch a string of fish.

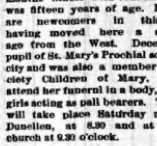
The third annual gathering of the Tingley family will take place at the grove on Mr. David Blackford's farm near New Market, on Wednesday, August 30th.

Respecting the runaway accident reported yesterday Mrs. Thorp, of West Second street, says it was a case of mistaken identity, as she did not jump from a wagon, nor was she out riding.

Elizabeth Winkler died at her home, at Dunellen, yesterday, after a four months' illness with consumption. She was fifteen years of age. Her parents are newcomers in this vicinity, having moved here a short time ago from the West. Deceased was a pupil of St. Mary's Prochial school in this city and was also a member of the Society of Children of Mary, which will attend her funeral in a body, six of the girls acting as pall bearers. The funeral will take place Saturday morning, at Dunellen, at 8.30 and at St. Mary's church at 9.30 o'clock.

RIDING ON A FREIGHT TRAIN.

Three Men Arrested in This City Last Night.



FOR stealing a ride on a freight train three men were arrested in this City last night, on the strength of a telegram sent from Jersey City to lookout for eight men riding on freight trains. The arrest was made by Policemen Frederickson and Cooney as the train stopped. They were locked up to await trial this morning.

They gave the names as John O'Brien, Dennis Murphy and John Enger.

The men appeared to be respectable, and did not look like common tramps. They said they were out of work and had no other means of getting from one city to another in search of employment.

The Judge suspended sentence and released them.

Mr. John B. Dumont's Liabilities and Assets.

The schedules of John B. Dumont, banker and broker at 40 and 42 Wall street, who resides in this city, show liabilities of $198,194, nominal assets of $244,260, actual assets of $172,260. The principal creditors are secured by stock collateral, among them being the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company for $80,290, the Central Trust Company for $30,000, L. T. Hoyt for $56,200, and Mason W. Tyler of this city, for $17,700. The principal asset is an account of Margaret Clark, showing advances of $209,391 on various stocks carried for her, but which are pledged as collateral for loans, the actual value being $148,118. The depreciation was chiefly on 2,000 shares of the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad Company, which were carried for her. His equity in Plainfield real estate is placed at $6,000 actual value, his household furniture at $2,800, (he cost $7,000,) and his cash at $3,505.

Suffering from the Heat.

Mr. E. H. Clevely's dog caused considerable excitement in North avenue by its actions, this morning. It was thought at first the animal was mad. The dog didn't have the rabies but was only overheated, as it was tied in the boiling sun, where it did not have a chance to get in the shade.

Chief Grant was sent for, but he said the dog was only suffering from the heat and so didn't kill it.

The dog at first lay on its back, kicking and barking. After receiving a ducking with two pails of water the animal cooled down.

It was afterwards killed.

Has Malaria Very Bad.

Mr. Charles Schermerhorn has received the following telegram from Mr. George Tobin, who went South to bring Mr. Schermerhorn's son home, as told in yesterday's News:

NEWBERN, N. C., Aug. 24, 1893.

Mr. Charles Schermerhorn:

Arrived O. K. With start for home Saturday at 8.30 a. m. Charley has malaria very bad.

GEO. J. TOBIN.

HE SCALDED HER DOG.

Mrs. Pullan Gets $35 Damages Against Mr. Conde.

DURING the month of March last Mr. Joseph Conde, who lives near the Pond Machine Tool Works, scalded a dog belonging to his neighbor, Mrs. Pullan. The dog was prized very highly by the latter, who is a widow.

The dog's hair all came off and the animal was a pitiful sight. A spot about six inches square on its back is still without any hair.

Mrs. Pullen brought suit last week before Justice Nodyne for damages. She retained City Judge Coddington to conduct her case for her. The Justice reserved his decision. He finally has decided in favor of Mrs. Pullan and awarded her $35 damages and costs.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE MEETING.

Mr. J. W. Van Horn Elected Overseer-of-the-Poor.

The North Plainfield Township Committee held a special meeting last night to take action on the resignation of Mr. John Mackey as Overseer-of-the-poor. The resignation was accepted and Mr. J. W. Van Horn was elected to fill the office to serve the remainder of Mr. Mackey's term.

Mr. Van Horn is a Republican and Mr. Mackey a Democrat.

The bill of the borough for half of the expense of repairing Rock avenue was received and ordered paid.

The accounts of Mr. Mackey as Overseer-of-the-poor were examined and found correct.

SALESMAN STREETER ARRESTED.

Accused of Failing to Account for Goods Sold on Commission.

James P. Streeter of East Ninth street, this city, was arrested by the Sheriff yesterday, in New York, upon an order granted by Justice Van Brunt, of the Supreme Court, in an action brought by John P. Holt and William Kedward, assignees of Noah N. Rosenberger, who failed in April, 1893.

After the failure of Rosenberger, Streeter was employed to sell goods on commission, and it is alleged he failed to account for $2,368.37, which is the amount now sued for. He furnished bail.

BREVITIES.

—Captain Hand took a stage load of Plainfielders to Papiac to-day.

—It is said the new cars for the Somerset street line are expected Monday.

—The chattel mortgage sale of Mr. Higgins horses, and wagons took place this afternoon.

—Workmen were busy to-day placing a new truck under freight car No. 2819 on a side track near the depot.

—L. B. Rhoades & Co. have had a new trestle built over their coal bins and the first car was run over it to-day.

—A constable has levied on "Doc" Vail's household goods to satisfy a chattel mortgage. The sale will take place at Justice Nash's.

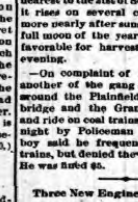
—The North Plainfield fire alarm whistle now blows at six o'clock every morning as frequently. The reason it hasn't blown for some time is that the men left in the morning before six.

—Patrick Hageney, an employee of the Easton & Amboy Railroad Co., who was struck by an engine and instantly killed at the curve east of Bound Brook, Monday, was buried in this city yesterday.

—The term "harvest moon" is applied to the full moon which happens on or nearest to the 21st of September, because it rises on several consecutive nights more nearly after sunset than any other full moon of the year, and is specially favorable for harvesting work in the evening.

—On complaint of Policeman Corsa, another of the gang of boys, who hang around the Plainfield avenue railroad bridge and the Grant avenue station, and ride on coal trains, was arrested last night by Policeman Vanderveer. The boy said he frequently rode on coal trains, but denied thereof of the charge. He was fined $5.

Three New Engines at Dunellen.



WYNCOOP Watson and Hayes are the Dunellen Engineers in charge of the three large new passenger engines Nos. 351, 354 and 355, which are being run daily between Dunellen and New York to "break them in and loosen their joints" so that they can run the flyers, and make fast time. The driving wheels are 6½ feet high. The engines are kept at the Dunellen "round house."

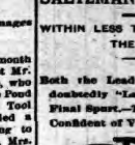
The Weather.

On Saturday fair to partly cloudy weather will prevail, with slight temperature changes, fresh south west and west winds and local rains, followed by clearing and cooler conditions in this section, and on Sunday cooler, clear weather.

SALTZMAN 1007 AHEAD.

WITHIN LESS THAN A WEEK OF THE FINISH.

Both the Leading Men are Undoubtedly "Laying Low" for the Final Spurt.—The Friends of Each Confident of Victory.



DURING the remaining few days it will probably be hard to form an accurate idea of the actual standing of the two most popular young men who lead in the contest for the trip to the World's Fair. There is a close race, evidently well founded, that there is a "massing of forces" and "some fine generalling going on."

August 30 is the date for the winner.

THROWN OUT HEAD FIRST.

James Conklin Had a Rough Experience at a Saloon.

James A. Conklin of Plainfield, says the New Brunswick Home News, was out about the head by being thrown out of Becker's saloon on Neilson street early yesterday afternoon. The man was intoxicated and it is hard to find out the truth of his story. He says that he had spent all his money there and then wanted to stay in the saloon, but that the Beckers put him out. Mr. Becker says that the man came into the saloon and wanted a drink and on being refused he started to attack Mr. Becker's son with a chair.

Mr. Becker went to the rescue and the man was thrown out of the door. He struck his head on the stepping stone and received an ugly cut. Conklin has been taken to jail and has had his wounds taken care of.

The Recorder has given him a three days' sentence, during which to sober up. Officer Smart made the arrest.

Conklin has been helped by Secretary Harry Manning, of the Y. M. C. A. at Plainfield. His home is in Springfield, Mass.

Base Ball Notes.

The Crescents play at Hackensack to-morrow.

On Saturday, September 2d, the crack New Jersey Athletic Club team will play the Crescents on the Crescents Park.

Manager Keller has secured the Cuban Giants to play here Labor Day morning. In the afternoon the Crescents go to Elizabeth. The Cuban Giants have been greatly strengthened since their last appearance here. Paterson the short stop, is said to be a crack player.

Turner, the ex-Crescent is playing a phenomenal game for Philadelphia. The Record of this morning says: "Turner distinguished himself both at the bat and in the field, making a single and a long three bagger, in addition to a phenomenal catch."

The married men and single men will play a game of ball at Somerville, Labor Day afternoon.

Their Excursion Abandoned.

The annual excursion of the Pond Machine Tool Company to Rockaway Beach which was booked for Saturday, has been abandoned. The moulders and machinists held a meeting to pass upon the advisability of having it or not, and decided that it was unwise in the face of the prevailing hard times to go to the expense of an excursion. Some of those present were among the 10 who will be laid off on Saturday night.

ELECTION BOARDS.

Appointments Made by the Board of Registration.

BY Messrs. Judge Wiley and E. S. Woodruff of Elizabeth, Elmore D. Mogfet of this city and William Chamberlain of Rahway comprising the Union County Board of Registration the appointments of election officers for each of the wards and townships throughout the county were made at Elizabeth yesterday morning.

Two Republicans and two Democrats are named for each polling district, the men being recommended by the County Executive Committee of the two parties. The following are those named for Plainfield:

First Ward—First district, George W. Moore, Richard E. Coriell, Michael De Coursey, Louis E. Wadsworth; Second district, Guillermo Thorn, Adolph Kurrhman, Sylvester Sharkey, Emil Dwyer.

Second Ward—First district, John H. Doane, William Messerschmidt, Louis M. Timpson, Herbert W. Stover; Second district, David Rand, Edward Willis, Jr., J. B. Guthridge, A. Cox.

Third Ward—B. Frank Coriell, M. Marvin Dunham, F. Bacon, W. L. Wright.

Fourth Ward—First district, E. W. Titsworth, Amos P. Gray, Michael R. Flynn; James H. Searing; Second district, James B. Higgins, John W. Dixon, T. A. McCarthy, John Kriney.

Westfield—First district, Howard P. Manning, A. Edgar Wilcox, F. R. Pennington, H. B. Kurzhals; Second district, Charles D. Reese, Charles E. Smith, J. W. R. Bennett, L. G. Theirs.

Fanwood—L. W. Miller, W. B. Buckley.

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

A Fifty Mile Road Race for Labor Day.

WHEELMEN of Elizabeth have arranged for a fifty mile road race on Labor Day. The start will be made at 6 a. m. from Westfield avenue and Chilton street, Elizabeth, and the race will be finished at the starting place. The limit time will be 12 o'clock noon.

The race will run over the following course: From starting point to Roselle, Cranford, Westfield, Plainfield, Dunellen, New Brunswick, Metuchen, Plainfield, Cranford, Roselle, Elizabeth.

Twelve members of the Crescent Wheelmen participated in a "run" to Springfield last night. They started from their club room on North avenue at eight o'clock under the leadership of Captain Haynes.

Getting Their Cottage Ready.

The State Agricultural Fair at Waverly will open on Monday, September 26th, and an effort is in progress on the part of its managers to make it this year larger and better than ever before. The Woman's Christian Union of the State are preparing their cottage at the grounds to receive the friends who may want to rest while visiting the grounds. A committee of ladies, with the State president, will be in attendance to make all welcome and tell what is being done by the women in the land for the cause of temperance.

Insurance Men to Play Ball.

Next Saturday at Boynton Beach there will be a game of ball between teams composed of agents of the Prudential Insurance Company's branch in this city and the men employed in the branch office at New Brunswick. E. W. Pepper, the superintendent of the office here who sent the challenge, was formerly an agent under Superintendent Robertson at the latter place.

For the New Brunswick Prudentials James Brown will be pitcher and D. Golden, catcher.

Thousands of Sparrows were Killed at Somerville by the Storm.

[From the Unionist Gazette.]

After the storm was over, at half past six, under the big trees where the sparrows had taken refuge, thousands of the little intruders were found dead, and in the Court House yard they were literally piled two or three deep in spots. There were probably 3,000 dead birds in the close. All the churches, except the Second Reformed, which has outside shutters, had the glass so badly broken that Sunday morning services were omitted.

They Couldn't Turn the Corner.

Two boys drove through East Fourth street at such a rapid rate this morning that they were unable to turn their horse into Watchung avenue, but kept straight ahead, making a bee line for Boomis & Rice's coal office. Two men caught hold of the horse's head and succeeded in stopping it before any damage was done.

Re-Opening of the Boys Club.

Supt. Bond is making all preparations for a re-opening of the Boys Club, Friday, September 1. The Club rooms are now on the second floor of the building corner of Park and North avenue. They were formerly on the top floor. The new rooms will be much better for all purposes.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Terrible Loss of Life at Sea.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25, (Special.)—Incoming vessels of all kinds bring accounts of loss of life and property in the hurricane of Thursday morning. Five men of the crew of the fishing smack Melinda Wood were swept from her decks and lost. One man was found clinging to the mast of the sunken ship Narragansett. He told the pilot who rescued him that the captain and crew of five had perished.

Ate Crabs and Died.

BERGEN, N. J., Aug. 25—(Special)—Four colored people ate crabs here and all have died.

New Jersey.

The manner of the white man's acquiring possession of and title to lands in New Jersey has been often and variously told; it is always an interesting story. All historians agree in naming Friday, the fourth day of September, 1609, as the day on which New Jersey soil was first pressed by the feet of Europeans.

On the preceding day Hendrick Hudson in his little Dutch "Halve," the "Half Moon," entered the Lower Bay, and the next day, dropping anchor in the Horse Shoe, sent some of his men on shore to discover what manner of men were the natives, and whether they were kindly disposed. From that day on the "Colonial History of New Jersey" bears testimony to the fact that the most equitable dealings were maintained between the Jersey people and the Indians. The Six Nations, at a meeting held for the purpose of confirming the acts of the Easton Conference—the last of a series held at different times and places, from 1736 to 1758—honored the Governor of the province by calling him Sagoriqh wenghsta, or the "Great Arbiter or Doer of Justice."

Senator Samuel L. Southard, speaking of the dealings and purchases just referred to, before the Legislature, said, "It is a proud fact in the history of New Jersey, that every foot of her soil has been obtained from the Indians by fair and voluntary purchase and transfer, a fact that no other State of the Union, not even the land which bears the name of Penn, can boast of."

On the occasion referred to the red men were represented by Shawrickhekung, or Wilted Grass, a Delaware Indian of pure, native blood. He was a graduate of Princeton College, having been educated at the expense of the Scotch Missionary Society, which had given him the name of Bartholomew S. Calvin. At the age of twenty-three he entered the Continental army to fight for independence, and at the time he presented to the Legislature the petition for pay for the Indian fishing rights, he was upward of eighty years of age, and avowing the claim of his people he warmly indorsed the just tribute paid to the State by Mr. Southard. The aged Indian closed his address with the following words, testifying to the honorable policy and solicitude which had distinguished the people of New Jersey in all their treatment of and dealings with the aborigines:

"Not a drop of our blood have you spilled in battle; not an acre of our land have you taken but by our consent. These facts speak for themselves and need no comment. They place the character of New Jersey in bold relief, and bright example to those States within whose territorial limits our brethren still remain. Nothing save beneficence can fall upon her from the Great Manitou. There may be some who would despise an Indian benediction, but when I return to my people and make known to them the result of my mission, the ear of the Great Sovereign of the Universe will be still open to our cry, will be penetrated with our invocation of blessings upon the generous sons of New Jersey."

Labor Day Outing.

The Central Railroad will run another of its popular excursions to Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko and the famed Switchback on Labor Day, Monday, September 4. A special express train will leave Plainfield at 9.18 a. m., returning arrive here at about nine p. m. Fare for the round trip $1.25. It will be duly advertised.

Interment in Somerville, N. J.

WEATHER AND CROP CONDITIONS.

Reports for the Week Ending August 21st.

OR the week ending August 21, the observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey State Weather Service report that the temperature and sunshine have been very near the normal and that in the northern, central and the eastern portions near the ocean the rainfall has been above the weekly average.

In the northern counties the dry weather was beginning to assume a serious aspect, although the light shower on the 17th was of some benefit, when the heavy thunder storms of the 19th and 20th brought the long looked for soaking rain. Though the rain was of great benefit, the wind and hail accompanying it made serious havoc in orchards and corn fields.

In the vicinity of North Branch and Somerville the destruction was widespread. Corn was blown down and the leaves stripped from the stalks.

Fruit of all kinds was shaken from the trees which were, in many cases, mere leafless from the cutting of the hail; melons and cucumbers were cut and ruined, large trees were uprooted or twisted off and grapes looked as though they were riddled with shot.

UNION COUNTY.

PLAINFIELD.—The rain of the 19th has broken the drought. It was a blessing to the farmers at this time as everything has been suffering for the want of it. The amount for the 24 hours ending 6.52 p. m. August 20th, was 2.63 inches, making a total for the week of 3.09 inches. Average temperature for the week, 72 deg. JOHN NEAGLE.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

What Women Are Doing.

What becomes of unemployed bred woman? Lida Rose McCabe undertakes to answer in the August Atlantic. Miss McCabe, in a paper read before the world's educational congress, makes remarks incidentally that public opinion expects the average girl of women's higher schools to be earning from 50 to 100 dollars and 50 cents they earn after leaving college. Public opinion is right. The dollar standard would be a good one in estimating the results gained from 20 years of any enterprise of experiment. The person who is not able to earn his own living and more is a very poor stick indeed.

Miss McCabe tells us that at least a fourth of the girls who go to college go with the object of preparing teachers in the higher branches. In this capacity they have a great demand, particularly in the hundreds of high schools which are supplementary to the regular colleges. A number of women have reached the highest rank of pedagogy, being professors in colleges and universities on equal terms with men. Among these are mentioned Alice Freeman Palmer, professor of English history in the university of Chicago, and Abby Leach, who is Greek professor in the Leland Stanford, Jr. university.

But with men, however, teaching is beginning to be with the college woman a stepping stone to other work. This has in many cases taken the direction of important special research. The best known scientific special worker among the college bred women is perhaps Mrs. Ellen Richards of the Boston Institute of Technology. Her labors have been in the field of chemistry, particularly that pertaining to practical and useful questions. Some of her special papers are "The Naphtha Process For Cleaning Wool," "A New and Ready Method For the Estimation of Nickel in Pyrrhotites and Matte," "Adulteration of Groceries."

Mrs. Richards is distinguished in Europe and America for her admirable research on ordinary food preparation. Miss Christine Ladd Franklin of Johns Hopkins university has made a specialty of mathematical investigation, as evidenced by her papers on "The Pascal Hexagram," "A Method For the Experimental Determination of the Horopter," etc.

Hundreds of college bred women become physicians, and hundreds more have entered the medical profession. Still another number finds business careers. But whatever they do they proceed shiningly and fully demonstrate the reason for being of the college bred woman.

Electrical Housekeeping.

The twentieth century will certainly bring a good time to housekeepers. In very many directions already foreshadow it. One of these inventions is the electrical oven, which is shown in Mr. Edward Atkinson's far famed Aladdin oven. The electrical range is polished brilliantly on the outside and does not heat up externally, making it the right thing for summer. Its inner surface is packed with asbestos to keep the heat within and temper it to absolutely gentle glow suitable for baking or roasting. The result is more like that produced by the ancient Dutch oven than can be obtained by anything devised since the cooking stove came in. For broiling, the electric stove is said to excel. It has its own electrical arrangement. It is placed upon the top of the range and the current simply turned on. A dinner of many courses can be cooked to perfection in this way, ashes, coal, worry and dirt all left out.

Electricity is to warm the mansion with gentle warmth in winter. The touch of a button floods it with light at nightfall. If the sun dances she hears a man in the room after all have retired, she touches a button and the bed, and, lo! a brightness as of daylight pervades the room. If the man is there his whereabouts is known. If he has ventured into a second chamber, touch of another button is touched, and the electricity is started to cooking while those who are to eat it are yet in bed.

The magnificent photographic telescope presented by Henry W. Bruce to the Harvard observatory is four times as powerful as the largest ordinary photographic telescope. Its object glass is 2 feet in diameter. That of the ordinary photographic telescope is 18 inches. The intention is to use the Bruce telescope to photograph the whole heavens, first in the northern hemisphere then in the southern.

The estimate congressmen put upon their own speaking at 10 can be gathered from the fact that as soon as members of the house learned there was to be two speeches made here a vote was reached that left Washington by the score, scattering on home or on little vacation trips—getting as far away from the din as they could. They apparently know the real value of congressional talkee talkee.

Here are some silver dollar figures concerning the silver dollar. The silver dollar contains 371.25 grains of gold of 16 to 1, our present coin contains 412½ grains of standard silver. At the ratio of 17 to 1 the silver dollar contains 412½ grains of gold, at 18 to 1, 437.8, at 19 to 1, 466.50, at 20 to 1, 516.

DRIVEN ON LEE SHORES

Many Lives Were Lost In the Big Storm.

EIGHTEEN FISHERMEN DROWNED.

A Coaling Barge and a Vessel Wrecked Off Long Island, and All Hands, Twenty-One in Number, Go Down—Shipping Damaged All Along the Coast.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The fishing schooners Empire State, with a crew of 10 men, and Ella M. Johnson, with a crew of eight men, went down in the storm off Manasquan on the Jersey coast, and all on board were lost.

These two vessels were in company with the Chocorua at midnight when the storm struck them, and after beating around all night in some of the worst weather ever known off the coast, and with a loss of the captain and her first mate, the Chocorua tied up at a wharf in this city, the only one of the three.

The storm struck the three vessels about midnight, and an hour later the Johnson disappeared. About 1:30, as near as can be calculated, Captain Perry and First Mate Joseph Francis of the Chocorua were swept overboard by a gigantic wave.

The lights of the Empire State disappeared immediately afterward, and at daybreak her masts were seen projecting out of the water about three feet.

The crew of the Chocorua say that no small boat could possibly live in the sea that was running at the time, and the dories on board could have been of no possible use to the crews of the two vessels.

The captain of the Johnson was John Connors and of the Empire State, Captain Ericson. All of the boats were from New London and were owned by their respective captains.

The three boats had only been out seven days when they were overtaken by the calamity and were to have been out for two weeks longer.

The news of the accident was first brought to the city by the Chocorua, which is tied up at present at the foot of Fulton street, East river. Sailor Dick Kelly, who is in charge of the Chocorua, thinks they were lucky to come out alive.

Eighteen Lost Off Southampton.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Two vessels, a coal barge and a towing vessel, were wrecked off the coast at this point, following in the wake of the severe storm. Six men from the wrecked vessels have washed ashore out of a total crew of 21 men on both vessels.

The barge was seen about a mile off the Southampton life saving station in a disabled condition. A short time afterward she drifted on the bar and commenced at once to go to pieces. No sign of life was visible about the vessel, and it is supposed the crew of five men were washed overboard and drowned. The name of the barge is Lykens Valley of Philadelphia, Captain Scott. Six men from the towing steamer reached shore, three alive and three beyond resuscitation.

The 15 other men of the crews are believed to have drowned, thus making a total loss of life of 18 persons.

One of the survivors of the lost steamer proved to be the assistant fireman, Albert Smith of Philadelphia. He says they left Philadelphia Monday in the steamer Panther with a barge in tow. They had bad weather all the trip. When nearly opposite Shinnecock lighthouse, a large sea struck the steamer and wrought considerable damage. They were obliged to cut the hawser and put to sea, but were soon after struck by several immense seas, and the vessel foundered. The captain, named Pierce, and himself (Smith) clung to the cabin top for a while, but were soon knocked off the shelter. He lost sight of the captain about an hour before reaching shore. The captain's body has not yet been washed ashore. The survivors were cared for by cottagers near the beach.

Much Damage at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 25.—The shipping in the harbor was badly damaged. The big Puritan of the Fall River line put in here because of the stress of weather and remained all day.

The sloop Hydross of Boston was driven into the south sea wall and crushed so badly that she sank. The schooner Diana fouled an oyster boat and was dismantled, and Austin's boathouse, on the Basin wharf, was carried away.

The yacht Frederick of New York, with two passengers—C. W. Adkins of One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, New York, and W. B. Johnson of Forty-fifth street—had a terrible experience. Their vessel was dismantled near Clinton by the storm, and they were tossed about all night without means of controlling their craft, expecting momentary destruction. After traversing 25 miles of the sound they struck New Haven harbor. They then hoisted signals of distress and were rescued.

The shore resorts suffered greatly. At South Beach the launch Ella, owned by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, was pounded to junk in a collision, and a number of small yachts were driven on the beach and destroyed.

Lightship Sunk and Crew Lost.

LEWES, Del., Aug. 25.—Captain Clampitt of Lewes life station reports a schooner ashore at Plum point shoal, sunk with decks under water and broken up. The crew is supposed to have landed in their own boat or been taken off by some other vessel. The schooner's name is not discernible.

Pilot H. Church on the steamer Holkar, which passed in the Capes, reports Southern Five Fathom bank lightship sunk and the crew supposed to be lost.

The fun-laden schooner Romera of the quarantine station was driven ashore at Point of Cape during the night. A large three masted schooner is ashore three miles above here. The buoy tender Zizania and crew of Lewes life station has gone to her assistance.

One Saved Out of Seven.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—George H. Upton, a gigantic young fisherman, lame, bruised and almost voiceless, arrived in this port on the tramp steamship Eggleston Abbey of Cardiff. He is the only survivor of the seven men aboard the fishing smack Mary and Lizzie of Portland, Me., which foundered in the storm some 20 miles southeast-southeast of South Shoal lightship, Nantucket, on Monday morning. After witnessing the death of his brother and his other shipmates he had floated 22 hours on some wreckage, and when picked up he was almost dead.

Yachts Driven Ashore.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 25.—In the terrible blow, which was almost a hurricane here, yachts Hazel, owned by J. C. Wheeler; Seven Seas, owned by Russell Pettit of New York; Oneita, owned by S. H. Crocker, a Yale man, and the schooner yacht Nora, belonging to John M. Mount of New York, were blown ashore at Black Rock. They crashed into the George hotel pier, carrying it away, and then went to pieces upon the beach.

General T. J. Whitney and other Black Rock residents rescued the party from the Hazel and the Nora's party, which included the owner, Miss Edith Feltham, Miss H. F. Feltham, Miss Grace Plain and the crew.

Fully Twenty-five Were Lost.

HALIFAX, Aug. 25.—There is no longer any doubt that fully 25 persons perished in the wreck of the steamer Dorcas and the barque Kite Stewart. Only 7 bodies have been recovered. The schooner Dorold Borden, coal laden, from Sydney, N. S., for Bay of Fundy, capsized off Wolfville, and it is feared that all hands were lost.

A Whaler In the Storm.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 25.—Four catboats which were driven ashore at Cove are completely wrecked, one being a valuable one. Much anxiety is felt here concerning the fate of the little whaling schooner Francis Allen, which sailed Wednesday.

The Diver Was Drowned.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 25.—Four pontoons and a schooner that were in tow of a Mosquitt wrecking tug were driven about two miles north of Narragansett Pier. Diver William Coolan of Staten Island was entangled in the wreckage and drowned.

Hotel Lost Its Roof.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Aug. 25.—Nearly one-half of the roof of the mammoth Monmouth House was carried away by the gale. A telegraph office was lifted bodily and carried some distance by the wind.

High Seas at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 25.—The wind has been blowing here all day at an estimated rate of 30 miles per hour, and a tremendous sea is running both outside in the bay and in the harbor.

Peaches Blown Off.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 25.—The loss to Delaware fruit growers by the gale was enormous. Thousands of baskets of peaches and bushels of pears and apples were blown from the trees.

Lifted the Hotel Roof.

BELMAR, N. J., Aug. 25.—The entire roof of the big Columbia hotel was carried away. None of the guests was hurt. The board walk was ruined.

Ashore Off Portland Light.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 25.—An unknown schooner is ashore off Portland headlight in a bad position. The life saving crew has gone to her assistance.

The Gale at New Bedford.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 25.—A gale of 40 miles an hour damaged fruit and caused many more mishaps among small craft in the harbor.

Storm Bound Steamer.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Aug. 25.—Several steamers are storm bound here. Steamer Cottage City sailed for New York, but put back.

Ten Vessels on a Lee Shore.

LOCKPORT, N. S., Aug. 25.—Ten vessels lying at anchor in the harbor here were driven ashore and will be total losses.

Farm Crops Damaged.

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 25.—The storm did thousands of dollars' damage to farm crops in central New Jersey.

Long Branch Suffered.

LONG BRANCH, Aug. 25.—The storm caused considerable damage at this place, but no loss of lives.

Tobacco and Hops Damaged.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 25.—Heavy damage to corn and tobacco and hops was done.

Byrnes Will Look After Anarchists.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Superintendent of Police Byrnes has returned to the city from his summer home at Red Bank, N. J., although its unusual vacation does not expire until tonight. The superintendent said that he returned ahead of time on account of the stress of weather and remained all day.

The sloop Hydross of Boston was driven into the south sea wall and crushed so badly that she sank. The schooner Diana fouled an oyster boat and was dismantled, and Austin's boathouse, on the Basin wharf, was carried away.

PEFFER'S BAR OF GOLD.

The Populist Senator Gives an Object Lesson.

A COLORED CONGRESSMAN SPEAKS.

The Senate Amused by a Scene Furnished by Stewart and Peffer—In the House the Silver Debate Was Enlivened by Short Speeches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—A rather amusing scene took place in the senate chamber on the question as to whether Mr. Peffer or Mr. Stewart should have the privilege of addressing the senate. Each had given notice of his intention to speak, but both had been preceded out by the discussion of Mr. Peffer's resolution as to the national banks.

The Kansas senator claimed precedence because he had been the first to give the notice, while the Nevada senator insisted that that had nothing to do with the question and that as he had been already recognized by the chair he was entitled to the floor.

The vice president took that view of the situation and recognized Mr. Stewart's rights. As the latter was offered to yield to Mr. Peffer, the vice president treated that offer as an abandonment of the floor and immediately recognized Mr. Peffer, who thereupon began a three hours' speech on the silver question.

Mr. Peffer's Bar of Gold.

He went on to argue that it was the government mintage that gave the legal tender quality to gold as well as to silver, and he illustrated his argument by the exhibit of a gold eagle and a bar of gold of exactly the same weight and purity. The eagle was legal tender in payment of all debts, but the bar was not.

"Why is it," he said, "that this coin is money and this bar is not?"

He wished to hold up the bar to view, but to the amusement of the senate he could not lay his hand on it. "I do not know where the bar is," he said, with an air of surprise, and he was advised by Mr. Butler that he had better keep his eye on it.

Having recovered the bar, he said that the coin was money and the bar a commodity, and that therefore they were not of equal value. The coin was worth $10, and the bar was worth only $8.50.

He was followed by another Populist senator, Mr. Allen of Nebraska, who spoke for an hour and a half in support of his amendment proposing to add to the Voorhees bill a provision for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

Mr. Peffer's speech was interrupted to allow the regular business to be presented. That was the motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider the vote whereby Mr. Mantle was declared Mr. Lee Mantle not entitled to a seat as senator from Montana. Notice was given by Mr. Vance that he would call up the question at 1 p. m. today.

Short Speeches In the House.

It was a dull day in the house. Mr. Pence, the Populist member from Colorado, spoke and strengthened his position as one of the rising men of the house.

A quiet, dignified speech by Mr. Dingley was the feature of the day, but his post delivery detracted materially from the able presentation of his case.

At the evening session Mr. Swanson of Virginia spoke for free silver. Mr. Maddox of Georgia opposed the Wilson bill. Mr. Grady of North Carolina was in favor of free coinage. Mr. Milliken of Maine spoke out for speedy repeal. Mr. Kem of Nebraska spoke for free coinage.

Then George Washington Murray, the colored member from South Carolina, took the floor and made a short address in favor of free coinage and bimetallism. His remarks were interrupted by frequent applause. The house adjourned at 11:55.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed:

New York—David Lyons, Peru; Mary E. Hyland, South Livonia; S. M. Ingalls, Springfield.

New Jersey—J. N. Demunn, Cedarville.

Hinson, St. Petersburg; J. W. Hunt, Shippensville; C. C. Fulton, Stanton-ville; E. L. Haslet, Tionesta; J. W. Raymond, Turkey City; P. A. McDonald, Uniontown; R. L. Logan, West Monterey; J. L. Grazier, West Freedom.

Geary Urges Chinese Exclusion.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Representative Geary of California, the author of the Chinese exclusion act, called on Secretary Gresham and urged him to enforce the law with the small amount of money on hand for that purpose. Assistant Secretary Quincy was called in, and the three discussed the matter at length. It is understood that Mr. Geary received very little satisfaction.

Waite Denies the Reprimand.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Hon. D. H. Waite, governor of Colorado, now here, denied the report that Secretary Gresham had reprimanded him. He added, "The secretary has not rebuked me to my knowledge, and it would do him very little good if he did."

The Duke Will Attend Home Rule.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—At a meeting held at Otley the Duke of Devonshire arraigned the government for attempting to pass the home rule bill and said that he would shortly be obliged to ask the house of lords to reject that measure.

Manager Grau In an Asylum.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Robert Grau, manager for Lole Fuller, has been placed in a private sanitarium by friends. Mr. Grau is suffering from mental disturbance brought about by the alcoholic habit, so his friends say.

Passenger Train Wrecked.

ALBANY, Aug. 25.—A Delaware and Hudson passenger train was wrecked near Altamont by the spreading of the rails. Several were injured, a few seriously, and a bad shaking up. the passengers escaped injury.

A Contractor's Safe Robbed.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Aug. 25.—D. A. Craige, a contractor on the railroad, being built from Galeton to Austin, Pa., was robbed of $11,000. His safe was blown open at Cross Forks.

Work Begun on San Francisco's Fair.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—The first spadeful of earth has been turned for the midwinter fair in Golden Gate park. It was the occasion of great ceremony.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS.

Blocks of Workingmen's Homes In South Chicago Burned.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—A fire which in the extent of territory it covered ailmost rivals Chicago's historic conflagration began in that part of the city known as South Chicago, and from a three story brick building at the corner of Ninety-first street and Superior avenue flames which rapidly grew in volume under a gale of wind from the west ate their way over block after block of small frame residences until they reached the lake.

Within two hours the fire had consumed at least 30 buildings and five blocks of the greatest industrial suburb of Chicago.

The 50,000 residents of the town were precipitated into a panic as the pine structures in which lived the workingmen employed in the large steel mills of the Illinois Steel company and in which the smaller merchants of the place made their homes were leveled by the roaring flames.

The local fire department was helpless, and as much of the city apparatus as could be spared was sent into the burning suburb.

Despite the rapidity with which the flames spread and the crash and panic which one time choked up the streets, no lives as far as known were lost. Several persons were hurt, some fatally. Hundreds of people, deprived of home comforts with scarcely a warning, gathered along Ninety-first street and adjacent thoroughfares. But they were not to be homeless, for the citizens of South Chicago rallied to their assistance. The word was passed down the line that the houses of those who were not losers by the fire were without exception open to any and all who had been driven out upon the streets.

South Chicago is almost entirely a manufacturing suburb and is situated at the mouth of the Calumet river, about 13 miles from the city hall. The principal establishment in the place is the Illinois Steel company, which employs at the present time about 5,000 men.

NINE PERSONS SCALDED.

A Steam Mangle Explodes and Wrecks a New York Laundry.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—A steam mangle in the Hell Gate steam laundry, at 248 East One Hundred and Fourth street, exploded and scalded nine people. Two of them, it is said, will die. The injured are:

Lena Uhl, 20 years old, of 1362 Park avenue; scalded about limbs and body; taken to Presbyterian hospital; will die.

Kate Uhl, aged 16, of 1362 Park avenue; arms and legs scalded; will die.

Ellen Vanderbeck, aged 17, of 1609 Lexington avenue; scalded about body and legs.

Kate Kane, aged 18, of 13 East Eighty-sixth street; scalded about body.

Kate Vanderbeck, aged 19; Mamie Vanderbeck, aged 21; Maggie Vanderbeck, aged 23. These nine are employed in the laundry at 1609 Lexington avenue. They were scalded about the legs and arms.

Bruno Fox, aged 18, of 360 Gold street, Brooklyn; cut on the head and face.

The explosion was caused by an overpressure of steam in the cylinder of the steam mangle.

The laundry occupies the basement of the building, which is a five story brick structure. Seventy persons were in the building at the time of the explosion, and the greatest excitement prevailed. Fire followed the explosion, but it was quickly extinguished. The engineer was arrested. The front of the building was wrecked. The concussion also broke all the windows in buildings three or four doors away on each side of the wrecked laundry.

Postmasters Arrested For Swindling.

A BURGLAR'S SUICIDE.

He Died While Handcuffed to a Detective.

CUT HIS THROAT WHEN ARRESTED.

John Kehoe, Who Had Once Been Respectable, Turns Burglar, and When Evidence of His Guilt Is Discovered He Ends His Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—John Kehoe was arrested for burglary in Brooklyn, and when the detectives found stolen articles in his room he seized a penknife from among them and cut his throat. He was manacled to a detective, and before the manacle could be unfastened he was dead.

Kehoe applied to Mrs. Hendifer of 926 Lee avenue for a furnished room about a year ago. He told her he was the son of a high official of the fire department of this city. He was about 25 years old and had every appearance of respectability. He said he was a speculator and was very quiet in his habits.

True he frequently staid out until late at night, but explained that he could not sleep. He always had a supply of fancy articles to sell, and told neighbors that he bought job lots of any sort of goods. He sold some of these goods to neighboring drug and fancy goods stores.

Betrayed by His Companion.

The jewelry store of H. H. Bolton, 2,625 Atlantic avenue, was broken into on Aug. 8, and a lot of gold plated spoons, pocketknives and cutlery was stolen. John H. Classen was arrested on the Bowery on Wednesday night charged with having committed the burglary, and some of the stolen property was found in his rooms in Henry street, this city. He told the police that his confederate was Kehoe.

Classen could not give the number of the house in which Kehoe lived. Detective Sergeant Holland of the Lee Avenue police station knew that Kehoe had been selling fancy goods below cost price, but also did not know where he lived. Detective Sergeants Michael Ryan and John Rahl of the Brooklyn office went and lay in wait with Holland for the man.

They met him at the corner of Lee avenue and Rodney street. He was a tall, rather good looking young man, with black hair and a carefully kept mustache, and was dressed in a black business suit, a silk lawn tennis shirt and russet shoes. He indignantly denied that he was a burglar.

He was taken to the station house and searched, but nothing was found that would incriminate him. A bystander told the detective where the prisoner lived, and he was handcuffed to Detective Sergeant Ryan and taken to the house. He occupied a hall bedroom on the second floor.

Detective Ryan stood between a table and chair in the center of the room. Kehoe's left hand was shacked to the detective's right hand. Rahl opened the closet and discovered a lot of cutlery and fancy goods, some of which was probably part of the goods stolen from Bolton's store. Holland stood at the door of the room to keep occupants of the house from crowding in.

Ended His Life With a Stolen Knife.

Rahl was busy pulling goods from the closet, and Ryan, with his disengaged hand, was taking the goods and placing them on the table when he felt a tug at the handcuff. Looking around, he saw him cut his throat from ear to ear with a small penknife taken from among the goods on the table. He fell over on the bed, dragging the detective with him. He died almost instantly.

The tragedy created great excitement in the neighborhood, which is the residence of well to do persons, all of whom knew Kehoe by sight and were surprised to learn that he was a thief. The police believe the things found in his closet represent the proceeds of several burglaries.

Governor Russell With the President.

BUZZARDS BAY, Aug. 25.—Governor Russell arrived here, the guest of Joe Jefferson, and went on to the president's cat-boat to greet the president. Governor Russell, Dr. Bryant, Dr. McBarnly of New York, Joe Jefferson and A. H. Woods of Boston. Governor Russell will probably call at Gray Gables before returning.

Man of Science at Fisticuffs.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—In the congress of psychical science Dr. Ernest Hart of London persisted in speaking after Chairman Elliott Coues had requested him to be seated. Secretary Young of the World's congress auxiliary then attempted to eject Dr. Hart. The doctor landed his right fist heavily on Mr. Young's eye, making an ugly bruise.

Toughs Mobbed a Spotter.

ALLIANCE, O., Aug. 25.—Detective J. T. Clippinger, who has had numerous saloon keepers here arrested for violation of the prohibition ordinance, was surrounded by a mob of toughs on the street. Several shots were fired, but he held the mob at bay until rescued by the police.

Mrs. Perrine Will Visit Mrs. Cleveland.

PLOT TO BURN DETROIT.

Waterworks Are Now Guarded From the Firebugs.

DETROIT, Aug. 25.—Superintendent of Police Stanley this weather was informed by one of the members of his detective force that a plot had been concocted by certain persons in the city to destroy the waterworks pumping station with dynamite. Then with the water supply cut off, fires in several parts of the city were to be started. The fire department useless, a fearful catastrophe would result.

The superintendent satisfied himself of the correctness of the story, and a hurried consultation with the secretary of the waterworks board resulted in a call for a special session of the water board. On the night set to do the job the works were guarded by a body of men with winchesters.

The dynamiters evidently had scouts out, and the extra men about the works frightened them away. Special policemen are now on duty at all the waterworks. It is said the persons who figured as principals in the proposed plot are known to the police and that arrests will follow.

Baseball Spectators Hurt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—What might have been a serious accident occurred just outside the Polo grounds. One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street, or "Baseball lane," runs along between Manhattan field and the Polo grounds. It ends near the grand stand of the Polo grounds, and those who wish to continue up the hill have to climb an irregularly winding wooden staircase. The crowd was pressed against the railing, which gave way, and several people fell in a mass to the ground below, a distance of about 14 feet. Several were badly hurt, but no one was killed.

Madison Square Bank Affairs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The assets of the Madison Square bank were turned over to Receivers O'Brien and Cannon with the understanding that they were to take full charge of the affairs of the bank today. State Superintendent of Banks Preston gave out the following statement of the assets and liabilities of the bank: Total assets, $1,021,267.64; liabilities, $1,083,679.67; impairment of capital, $271,312.03.

Elaborate Petticoats.

White petticoats, except for evening wear, have almost entirely disappeared, and so beguiling are the substitutes provided in their place that the change need not be regretted. Thin twilled silk in the most delicate tints is superseding glace silk, and smart understkirts are flounced with plaitings of mousseline de soie. A decidedly extravagant fashion this, for the little flounces are all too perishable and must be constantly renewed. Some of the colored lawns and batiste petticoats are simply delicious little confections. Others in white, scattered over with tiny flowers, are no less enticing. They are trimmed with endless frills and flounces, edged with valenciennes lace, which lace is much used just now for adorning lingerie of all descriptions.

Fashion Notes.

The very newest form of skirt trimming consists of frills round the hips.

A revival of the long mousquetaire gloves for afternoon wear is said to be threatened.

Emerald green and rose colorare the favorite combination in Paris at the present moment. There is a new and effective kind of cascade net in black or color, which is made up over a contrasting silk. In black it looks remarkably well over vieux rose or pure white.

A novel veil is of accordion plaited black net or gauze.

Nothing looks more ladylike than white serge, and the girls one sees wearing it give one the impression that they feel the best less than other folks. A charming costume of this material was made in the plain skirt and cost fashion and worn with a cross over waistcoat of white silk.

White duck dresses made simply with plain skirts and open jackets look delightfully cool and easy. They are usually worn with colored silk shirts.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, etc., with some flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Royal Tooth Powder, the best English prepared chalk, the finest English Castile soap, delicately flavored with Oil of Wintergreen; you can therefore perfectly understand how it accomplishes all that is to be expected from a tooth powder. A full two-ounce package of this splendid article, that is in usually sold for 25c., under our special offer we retail at 15c., but one cent will be given with each one dollar purchase of other goods in our upstairs department. People of correct ideas will appreciate this offer, but some will say, "We never use tooth powder." Those who do not, however, can use Royal Tooth Powder for the finest mouth wash, when dropped sparingly, sprinkled from the dentifrice. This will seem cruel to some, but duty compels us to speak plainly. The "Royal" is being received everywhere, and J. Myers compliment us with their duplicate orders.

WOMAN AND HOME.

QUIET HOMES NOT CELEBRATED BY A M'ALLISTER.

Mrs. Gladstone's Charities—Soldiers' Eccentric Widows—She Cured Her Husband—Women Workers In Chicago. Women as Advertising Agents.

The editor of a popular woman's journal gravely points out that the growing nervous disability of our women is owing to the enormous expansion of the duties of housekeeping.

Our women, it is said, are breaking down in an attempt to run pretentious establishments and manage irresponsible and ignorant servants. They may take cold baths and attend a gymnastic club and adopt rigidly the best hygienic rules, but they are careworn and distressed by the responsibility of taking care of homes that are museums, and giving dinners that are banquets, and seeing society that is a procession when it is not a levee.

If this is true, it is a very serious matter. But is it true? Are there no simple homes in happy, humble life where the mother is still her own help and nurse and maid? Are there no chaste and elegant domiciles where wealth is modest and unpretentious, and the lady of the house has faithful domestics who are part of the household, and whose the wear and tear of a life of show and sham are not known? We are inclined to think there are plenty such—that in fact they make up for our flemocratic commonwealth the bulk of our "better class."

We must not forget that the millions of quiet homes, where there are modest altars, have no McAllister to celebrate them. Their virtues are not theatric—they are quietly heroic.

The "establishments" of our country bear but an insignificant relation to the homes in the best sense. And by the "homes" we mean the centers, both humble and independent, where the duties of fatherhood and motherhood have not given way to the duties to society. These multitudinous units of strength are not bulletined in the fashion column. Their principals are busy fighting the fight of duty to go on exhibition. And it will be found on examination, we think, that the mothers have borne their share of the physical and mental stress without a nervous breakdown and without complaint.

Similarly there are plenty of men who have acquired wealth by honest enterprise who have not forgotten their private and public responsibilities. Their homes are not museums; they do not live at a club; their children are not farmed out; their wives are not nervous wrecks. No exhibition of what is really the best American society will suffer by comparison with the best specimens of European society. Its women need no anodynes; its men need no recuperation.—New York Advertiser.

Mrs. Gladstone's Charities.

In 1839 she married William Ewart Gladstone, whose great genius already foreshadowed his future eminence. The same day her younger sister married Lord Lyttleton. Those who were eyewitnesses of that double wedding and all the wonderful festivities in Hawarden cannot help but be indeed. In her married life Mrs. Gladstone found occupation to the full. She was always the true and careful mother, who would not give over her children's care, even to the best of nurses. She was devoted to her husband in his incessant political toils. She did not need to look around her for work. Still her assistance was from the first prompt to the furtherance of any schemes where a helping hand was needed.

Mrs. Gladstone soon became a center for philanthropic work of all kinds. She and Mr. Gladstone started Newport Market refuges, which is now carried on at Westminster, with an industrial school attached. Begun in Soho in 1863, it was Mr. Gladstone's idea, for he saw many friendless wanderers as he went at night between the houses of commons and his home. Mrs. Gladstone threw herself into his scheme, and the work was started with an efficient committee. From the beginning Mr. Gladstone has been president and his wife a regular visitor. The object of the refuge is to give shelter to persons out of work and in temporary distress, to enable them to tide over their difficulties and to find fresh employment. It does not take in the practiced casual or loafer, but weary, sore footed travelers, who have walked far in search of work and found none. Such are always admitted as far as room permits, and have the assurance of a week's lodging free, with the prospect of an extension of time if the committee see a reasonable chance of their getting work.

In the course of a single year about 18,000 nights' lodgings and 30,000 rations have been granted, and 300 men and women have obtained employment or else have been sent home to their friends.

It need scarcely be said to those who have kept pace with recent events that the most vital feature of General Booth's great work in London is following closely the model set by the Gladstone institution.—McClure's Magazine.

Soldiers' Eccentric Widows.

Several widows of great generals residing in New York lead queer lives and do droll things. One of this class makes her home in a down town hotel, and to save trouble and expense as well as linen does part of her own laundry work. Admiring residents in the neighborhood always know the location of her room by the handkerchiefs, collars and cuffs that cling to the window pane early in the morning. No one ever sees the linen set, hung on the glass or peeled off "done dry," but it is there every morning that the distinguished lady is in town, and it has constituted a feature of her attire as the white spats and red necktie of William Walter Phelps.

A second soldier's widow is a pussy cat sympathizer. Any hot night that she happens to be in New York she may be seen strolling along the deserted streets of that section of the city made famous by F. Hopkinson Smith and A. Janvier with a garden pot of water in one hand and a stock of paper cups in the other, calling in soft, persuasive tones, "Here, puss, puss, puss."

The third grandam of singular proclivities has an owlish fancy for quiet gloom. She lives alone, but constantly keeps company with kith and kin, and the rooms in her stately house are in such perpetual low light that the visitor finds it necessary to advance with like or her half-outstretched. She is never without diamond ornaments, although it is said on authority of personal observation that she spends half her life in her dining room sitting in her stockinged feet reading the daily papers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

She Cured Her Husband.

I knew of a nice, tactful woman, hardly more than a bride, whose husband did not come home one night. But he did the next morning, and stammered apologies about "business," "man from the west" and other such matters that had nothing to do with it. To his great surprise and intense relief two pieces at the point where they meet and pass each other. This will keep them in their proper places. Now wet your finger slightly and ruffle the glass anywhere between the ends of the cross. As you do so you will see the cross move by some invisible agency. The cross will keep moving until the end of the paper is immediately over the spot where your finger is. Afterward run your finger slowly around the glass, and the cross will go gracefully move in the same direction. This curious phenomenon is due to vibrations occasioned by the friction of the finger against the glass. —London Million.

A Letter About Venice.

Here is a letter written by the late Phillips Brooks, the great Boston preacher, to one of his little nieces:

VENICE, Aug. 13, 1882.

DEAR GENEVE—When the little children in Venice want to take a bath, they run down to the front steps of the house and jump off and swim about in the street. Yesterday I saw a little fellow who was swimming up the street. When he went so far, the sentry called in the string and got her baby home again. Then I met another youngster swimming in the street whose mother had tied him to a post by the side of the door, so that when he tried to swim away he was instantly brought up to another doorpost up the street he couldn't, and they had to sing out to one another over the water. Is not this a queer city?

You are always in danger of running over some of the people and drowning them, for you go about in a boat instead of a carriage, and use an oar instead of a horse. But it is ever so pretty, and the people, especially the children, are very bright and gay and handsome. When you are sitting in your room at night, you hear some music under your window and look out, and there is a boat with a man with a fiddle and a woman with a voice, and they are serenading you. To be sure, they want some money when they are done, for everybody begs here, but they do it very prettily and are full of fun.

Tell Susie I did not see the queen this time. She was out of town. But ever so many noblemen and ladies were sent to know how Toody was and how she looked, and I have sent them all her love.

Edison's Boyhood.

From an article on the boyhood of Edison in St. Nicholas we learn that young Edison never had any boyhood days, his earliest amusements being those afforded by and mechanical forces. He left marbles, ball and hopscotch to less ingenious urchins and constructed plank roads or dug tunnels and caves along the shore. Like many of the world's greatest men, Edison owes much of his fame to his mother, to whom he was a devoted son. She taught him his lessons at home, impressing him with the love and purpose of study.

Wherever he went in his boyhood days Edison had a workshop, and every telegraph office in which he tarried witnessed some electrical freak of his restless brain. In some form or other the subsequent inventions embody these boyhood contrivances. The determination, industry, perseverance, honesty and temperate habits of his boyhood followed him into manhood. The 45 distinct inventions with which he has since revolutionized modern civilization, his library of 100,000 volumes, the best equipped laboratory in the world, are but the larger expression of the tastes of the boy Edison in whom his contemporaries were unable to divine the wizard of the nineteenth century.

Mollie's Problems.

There's lots of things I cannot understand,
It really makes me feel so awful tirp;
One's why the brown comes on my little hand
Because the sun is hot up in the sky.

I never understood why birds eat worms
Instead of cake and candy, like children.
I can't see why a baby always squirms,
Or why big boys are 'fraid of little mums.

I cannot understand why doggies bark
Instead of talking like folks you and me,
And why the sun don't shine when it is dark
Instead of when it's light I cannot see.

I wonder what it is makes children grow,
And why they have no wings like little flies;
But puzzlingest of all the things I know
Is why grandma wears windows on her eyes.
—Harper's Young People.

The Sack Race.

A correspondent of the Pall Mall Budget gives an interesting account of the games and athletic sports witnessed at the annual fete at the Duke of York's military school. Here is a picture of the boys running the sack race, which, the correspondent says, afforded much amusement. I expect those of my boy readers who are at school have taken part in the pastime in their sports. It was so funny to see them boys hopped in white sacks, with their laughing, merry faces peeping out at the top, tumbling along as best they could. One boy fell down after the first few steps, and despite all his efforts could not manage to get up again until the course had been nearly run by the others. I felt quite sorry for him, and thought his gallant efforts to catch up to his rivals when he regained his feet well deserved the cheers the lookers on gave him.

WOMANLY CONVERSATION.

Keep a watch on your words, my sisters,
For words are wonderful things.
They are sweet, like the bees' fresh honey!
Like the bees, they have terrible stings.
They can bless like the warm, glad sunshine
And brighten a lonely life.
They can cut in the strife of anger
Like an open, two-edged knife.

Let them pass through your lips unchallenged,
If their errand is true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind.
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompts the words, let them be unsaid.
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on the heart like lead.

Keep them back, if they're cold and cruel,
Under her and lock and seal.
The wounds they make, my sisters,
Are always slow to heal.
God guard your lips, and ever,
From the time of your early youth,
May the words that fall be kindly utter
Be the words of beautiful truth.

The Girl Bachelor.

The term "girl bachelor" is a new coinage seemingly destined to become one of the wearers of "old maid," which has long since lost its sting, if indeed it ever had any. The girl bachelor of today is a well paid, independent, self-supporting young woman who does not see in matrimony the chief end and aim of feminine existence, and who finds in the companionship of other women and the many opportunities for helpful work all that she needs. Plenty of the most agreeable social life is to be seen at her woman's club, which benefactions, like mushrooms, are springing up all over the country. Here she meets dozens of kindly, pleasant, wise and attractive women, and thus keeps in touch with all matters of interest in the literary, artistic and social world.

Her own rooms are also the meeting place of congenial spirits. Should she wish to travel, the world is her own from the north pole to the pyramids, with every modern facility for seeing and observing within her reach. All this does not imply that women are growing averse to matrimony and family cares, but that many who are not so constituted as to find in it their chief happiness are finding other channels for their activities and are no longer doomed to the loveless contracted life of the old time "old maid."—Philadelphia Times.

Dress Hooks Are Important.

If more women understood the value of the big dress hook, their skirts would hang better than they do. Nine out of every dozen dresses in the street are shorter in front than they should be. This ugly abruptness can be remedied by sewing a dress hook on the belt line, on the outside and in front of the waist. If the skirt is heavy, two may be needed to keep it from creeping up. If there is no belt to the costume, the hanker-chief, a bow or a rosette of ribbon will conceal it, and at the same time afford one of those feminine touches that men admire so much.

The best corsets always have hooks in front and on the sides of the waist that hold the skirt bands in check, but as many of the dresses are made with round waists and shirt waists, a hook on the bodice is indispensable for fat women. Brass hooks may be had at the rate of 10 cents a dozen, those made of French gilt sell at 25 cents each, and silver ones are about the same price. Jewelers and a few of the dry goods merchants have in the corset stock sold skirt hooks, but they are 25 each. The brass hooks answer every purpose, however, and they should be used by every woman who prides herself on wearing nice looking dresses.—New York World.

Newspaper Women In New York.

There are hundreds of newspaper women in the United States who are looking toward New York as their journalistic Mecca—a paradise, where a maximum of wages is paid for a minimum of work. There are no plums for the unknown writer anywhere, and whatever may be the impression to the contrary no women in the country work so hard as the New York newspaper women. Neither are their salaries so large as is popularly believed.

The woman who a year ago did the best work on a leading, if not the leading, metropolitan journal, and whose matter was more widely copied than that of any other active newspaper writer in the United States, was paid a salary of $40 a week. Since then she has been compelled to give up writing on account of nervous prostration, brought on by overwork. Most of the New York newspaper women's salaries range from $5 to $8 a column. In an expensive city like New York $40 a week is not much more than equivalent to $20 in inland cities.—Beatrice Campbell in Writer.

Care of the Bathroom.

If you cannot afford to have the bathroom swept by thorough flushing every day and by pouring hot soda water or dissolved copperas through the pipes about once a week, there should be some other arrangement made with the plumbing, and you should have it examined at once. Sometimes the pipe in the kitchen sink is not kept perfectly free and sweet, or the closet in the basement is not properly flushed. If these be trouble anywhere in the waste pipes, it will make itself known all over the house. Try having the pipe in the kitchen sink flushed twice a week with strong soda water. It should be boiling hot. It will dissolve and carry off grease and other greasy matter by sliding into the pipe.—Ladies' Home Journal.

She Kept Her Secret.

Miriam Coles Harris, better known as the author of "Rutledge," was a pleasant summer home on the Long Island border of the Atlantic. Her most famous book was written when she was a young girl, and even her own immediate family were not let into the secret of her employment until after it was finished. A favorite cousin who was much with her at the time says amusedly: "Say what you like about a woman's capability of keeping anything to herself, Miriam certainly demonstrated that it was possible to one of her sex at least. Not a word did she betray to me, who would have been so proud to think I was associating with a real, live authoress."—Philadelphia Press.

A Hint About Handkerchiefs.

Women should realize more fully than they do what a difference it makes in their apparent years whether they wear their hair high on their heads or low in the neck. A well cut shape of the hair will take years away from their age, while one on the crown of the head will add a decade to the freshest schoolgirl.—Exchange.

"I was watchin' me little brudder Toppy sellin his papers yist'day," said Mickey, the bill poster, "an a shiny chap wid specs comes up to me an says:

"'Who's de kid?' he says.

"'He's me brudder,' I says.

"'Den he says roughly he ashamed o' meself 'cause I didn't let de kid go to school.

"'He oughty be goin where duh teach de young idy how to shoot,' says de chap wid specs.

"'Hully chee!' I says, 'I didn't know duh was such a place. Yous kin bet Toppy kin go!' I says.

"De chap tol me where to take de kid, and I takes him, and when I leaves him I says: 'Look here, mister, don't be too, now, see? Git on all de tricks, and den you kin give 'em to me. See?'

"Say! Duh hain't not'in in it! It's a dead alike! Toppy come home an he says 'Mickey, duh give you a stiff!' Duh don't teach de young idy nor nobody else how to shoot, an duh hain't nobody dere dat knows a t'ing about it. It's a round!' says Toppy.

An dat settled it. I'm lookin for de shiny chap wid specs, an I'll climb on his neck!"

"What was it you thought they would teach the young idea how to shoot, Mickey?"

"Craps," said Mickey.—New York Sun.

A FAREWELL RECEPTION

TO MR. AND MRS. BREWSTER LAST NIGHT.

Members Express their Regret at Losing Such Highly Esteemed and Worthy Members of Both the G. A. R. Post and Woman's Relief Corps.

MANY members of the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, were present in the Post rooms last evening at the farewell reception tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Brewster, who leave for the West next week.

The Relief Corps held a short meeting and adjourned, and then invited the Grand Army men to meet with them in honor of Comrade and Member Mr. and Mrs. Brewster.

Mrs. Edward C. Morse presided. Past Commander Smith and Commander Dobbins of the Post also occupied seats on the platform.

Many of the members made speeches in which they expressed their regret at losing such earnest and esteemed workers from their ranks as Mr. and Mrs. Brewster, and hoped that their stay in the West would be short so that they might again welcome them here.

Among those who made speeches of regret were Commander Dobbins, and Comrades Goodwin, Moore, Stephens Morse, Whiteley, Nash and Hand. There was also singing and recitations. Comrade Smith sang a song and Comrade Mattox recited. Six persons sang, and were accompanied on the piano by Miss Ada Nash. Mr. John H. Carney gave a recitation and so did Miss Mattox.

Mr. and Brewster spoke of their sorrow at leaving home and friends, where they had had much enjoyment.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the reception.

PERSONAL.

The Misses Betts of Ninth street are home again.

Mrs. Westervelt of New York moved to Sandford avenue to-day.

Mrs. Peter Emmons of Jackson avenue arrived home to day from Asbury Park.

The Bushnells of Central avenue returned home to-day from a month's outing.

Miss Maud Van Dyke has returned from a visit at Dr. Sutphen's, at Liberty Corner.

Mrs. J. W. Van Horn and daughter, Miss Ada, of Duer street are spending a few days at Mt. Tabor.

Mrs. William Voorhees and daughter, Miss Nellie, of Brooklyn, are guests at Mr. Johnson's, on Duer street.

Mr. Stout Johnson will start Monday on a month's vacation, which he will spend at Highland, New York.

Mrs. Honeywell and daughter of Jersey City Heights are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John King of West Second street.

The Misses Cora and Mabel King of Newark are guests at their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John King on West Second street.

Mr. E. M. Bonnell, of Irvington, is visiting his sister's home at Dunellen. She is Mrs. Gray, wife of Mr. Alvah Gray, a Dunellen merchant.

Miss M. E. Kitchen, saleswoman in Mr. Edward White's dry goods store on West street is spending her vacation at the St. James Hotel, Asbury Park.

Mrs. W. H. Sprague of 214 Muhlenberg place and her two children will start next week for Towanda, Pa., where they will spend a few weeks with relatives.

Miss S. Amelia Amerman and Mrs. William White of Newark are spending a few days as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sharp of West Sixth street. Mrs. White is Mr. and Mrs. Sharp's daughter.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes will preach at the Methodist Episcopal church to-morrow evening on "What is Happiness?" a subject that has puzzled so many of our readers, as no two of them agreed respecting it.

Mr. John T. Tingley of Dunellen will have charge of the Tingley family picnic at the farm of David Blackford, New Market, August 30. The Friendship Council Band will be in attendance. The friends and relatives of the family are invited.

The Rev. K. P. Ketcham will occupy the Rev. Dr. Yerkes' pulpit in the First Baptist church to-morrow morning and evening. His subject in the evening is one very rarely discussed. It will be "The Attractions of the Ministry as a Profession."

Bottle Stopper Factory Shut Down.

Nightengale's Bottle Stopper factory on East Fourth street shut down this morning, on account of too much made up stock on hand. It will re-open again next Wednesday. Ground has been broken for a building on Fourth street near the gas house for Mr. Nightengale, where he will transfer his plant.

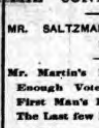
The Book of the Fair.

An admirable edition is "The Book of the Fair" published by the Bancroft Company of Chicago. It is issued in 23 parts at one dollar a part, and for excellent workmanship, authentic illustrations and information is unequalled.

THE CONTEST TO-DAY.

MR. SALTZMAN STILL IN THE LEAD.

Mr. Martin's Friends Send him Enough Votes to Cut Down the First Man's Lead Considerably.—The Last few Days of the Contest.



THE telegraphic system at Chicago is excellent, and messages by wire are about all one has time to send. There is so much to see at the Fair.

Whoever gets The News popular fireman's World's Fair trip will be very fortunate, indeed.

There is a slight change in the figures opposite the leading names. The friends of the competitors are evidently holding back. The last minute when coupons will be received will be announced in Monday's News.

August 20 is the date for the vinette.

—The Plainfield Board of Health will meet next Tuesday evening.

—Capt. George D. Morrison will lead a forty-five minute meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow at 4.15 p. m. Ice cold lemonade, free. Come.

—At a meeting of Minutonoomo Tribe, I. O. R. M., last evening, eight candidates received the Chief's Degree. There were also two adoptions.

—The New Jersey State Fair at Waverly will be held this year Sept. 4th to 8th. There will be special Labor Day attractions. See advertisement in The News for particulars.

—Friends of Assistant Baggagemaster Wagoner, who is at the North avenue station, will no doubt pay a visit to him about Thanksgiving. Yesterday a fine brood of turkeys were shipped to him from Hunterdon county.

In the City Court.

John Geisenhart was drunk and disorderly on Somerset street last night and refused to "move on." Policeman Frederickson made him move on to the lockup. This morning Judge Coddington sentenced him to pay a fine of $3 or serve ten days in the county jail.

Mrs. Newman was arrested yesterday for causing a disturbance at her brother-in-law's on West Third street the other night. She was fined $5.

Special Music at the First Presbyterian Church.

In the First Presbyterian church tomorrow there will be special music by the following:

Miss Lillian E. Kent of Elizabeth, contralto, Miss Blanche Fellows of Plainfield, soprano; Mr. Townsend Fellows, of Albany, Boss., and Mr. James Dunn, of Rahway, tenor.

Frightened by the Cars.

A horse attached to a park phaeton made things lively on Park avenue about nine o'clock this morning, by becoming frightened at a train passing over the railroad bridge as the animal was going under. The driver managed to get control of the horse after it had run several blocks.

The Weather.

On Sunday slightly cooler, fair weather and light northerly breezes will prevail, and on Monday clear, warmer weather and southerly windsare now indicated.

NUPTIALS.

Johns—MacCrady.

HERE was a very pretty home wedding at Royesfield, at four o'clock Thursday afternoon, at the charming country residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Mac Crady, when their daughter, Miss Maria Q. MacCrady was married to Mr. Henry Johns of this city.

The best man was Mr. Provost Stout of New Brunswick and the bridesmaid Miss Gertrude Sharp of this city, a cousin of the bride.

The ushers were Mr. Arthur Van Fleet of Somerville, a cousin of the bride, and Mr. Abram Amerman of Raritan.

The bride was beautifully attired in white silk, and the bridesmaid wore a pretty gown of pink crepe.

The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of a wedding march from Lohengrin played by Miss Beavers of Glen Gardner.

The rooms were very prettily decorated with golden rod.

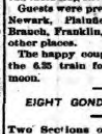
The gifts were both beautiful and useful, including silver, glass and linen.

Guests were present from New York, Newark, Plainfield, Neshanic, South Branch, Franklin, Royesfield and many other places.

The happy couple left Somerville on the 6.35 train for an extended honeymoon.

EIGHT GONDOLAS WRECKED.

Two Sections of Empty Coal Cars Crashed Together.



WRECKED between Grant avenue and Evona were eight large goodola coal cars about three o'clock this morning. The accident was caused by the train parting and the two sections coming together on the down grade-four were completely blocked for some time so that tracks Nos. one and three were used. Passenger trains going East were compelled to use the side tracks.

Some of the cars were knocked off the trucks and the ends smashed in.

The wrecking crew was sent for and began working at an early hour clearing the tracks.

TOOK ANOTHER MAN'S MONEY.

After He Had Treated Him at Blimm's Hotel.

A man who claimed to hail from Paterson and gave the name of Devine, caused no little excitement on Somerset street last night. He had been in town about two or three days and has been living, it is said, on the generosity of the Salvation Army people, claiming that he was out of work and unable to get any. Last night he fell in with another German, who took him in to Blimm's saloon to have a drink.

The partner of which the friend laid down a two dollar bill. Mr. Devine picked up the bill and made a rush out of the door up Somerset street and down Craig place with four or five young men after him. He was overtaken near Grove street, where after a time he consented to share the money with them. He then got his bundle and left town.

Corner Stone Laying To-Morrow.

Indebted to the Merchants' National Bank.

Simmonds & Newton, wholesale dealers in coffee, formerly at 108 Front street, New York, have been adjudged indebted to the Merchants' National Bank for $9,211 on three notes. The firm dissolved in January, 1892, and went into liquidation.

Mr. Simmonds resides on Watchung avenue, this city.

Base Ball.

A very interesting game of base ball was played on the Crescent grounds this morning between the Crescent Juniors, who have been playing much good ball lately, and a Metuchen team. The score at first was in favor of the Metuchen team, but by very heavy batting by Kane and Hefferen the Crescent Juniors won by a score of 17 to 16. It took ten innings to decide the game. Umpire, J. Sutphen.

Hot Enough?

The thermometer registered 96 in the shade here at three o'clock this afternoon. It seemed even hotter because excessively humid.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

ANOTHER STORM COMING.

Humidity 92 Per Cent. at 11 A. M.—Sailing Craft Still Limp Into Port.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26, (Special.)—Local Forecast Official Dunn of the United States Weather Bureau said this morning that another West Indian storm is brewing off the Florida coast, and that the conditions as reported from Florida stations of the weather bureau are precisely similar to those which preceded Thursday's big storm.

The humidity stood at 75 per cent. at 8 o'clock, and rose so rapidly that at 11 o'clock the very unusual degree of 92 per cent. was indicated by the official registers.

The temperature was 77 deg. at 8 o'clock and 81 deg. at 11 o'clock.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of Central Lodge No. 48, A. O. U. W., held the 24th day of August, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted by the Lodge:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, in His all-wise Providence, to remove from us, by sudden death, our brother, John C. Manchester, and

WHEREAS, We are thereby reminded of the uncertainty of life and the immutable certainty of death, therefore be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we deeply deplore our loss and portend to the family of our deceased brother our sympathy in this their hour of affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded in the book of records and a copy be sent to the family of our late brother and published in the Plainfield daily papers, and be it further

Resolved, That as a token of respect to our late brother, we drape our charter for a period of thirty days.

LEWIS R. BLACKFORD,
WILLIAM J. REID,
HENRY LIEPER, } Committee.

Resolutions on the Death of Mr. Manchester.

At a meeting of the Republican City Executive Committee, held on August 24th, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, We have heard with deep regret of the sudden death of our late associate, Mr. John C. Manchester, a member of this committee, and whereas, during his connection of several years with this committee, his wise counsel and faithful discharge of every duty imposed upon him as a member of this committee, as well as a citizen, won for him the esteem and admiration of every member of this committee; therefore be it

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolutions be sent to the family of our late associate, with expressions of our respectful sympathy, and that it be published in each of the city papers.

J. B. COWARD, Chairman.
Secretary.

Amusements.

"Hoss and Hoss" is announced to appear at Music Hall Aug. 31. At the box office it is said to be one of the foremost comedians of the day. He will appear in his famous characterization of Satigeratics lawyer, "Judge Hoss." Mr. Collier will be supported by a company of capable comedians. The piece has been entirely re-written since last seen here, and while the famous Bowery Ball has been retained many new lines have been introduced and an entirely new second act in which the place of the court room scene, which latter has been transferred to the third act.

Home again from their Summer vacation, the burlesque of Rice's "1492" is welcome at the Palmer Theatre. This wholesome frolic, with its gorgeous glitter of scenic splendor, its exquisite mock-chivalry, its perfection and inimitable fun is the ideal light diversion of the time. Its interpreters seize, with artful adroitness, upon every point of the hour, for playful and inoffensive satire. Snap, sparkle and incessant vivacity of mirth administer to every sense. Many novelties follow with bewildering rapidity. "1492" has so many novelties that it is practically a new entertainment. E. E. Rice's Columbian Guard March, Col. Jack Haverly and twenty girls in superb satin costumes and silver plated armors, has created a furore.

Heaven versus Plainfield.

BY JULIA HARVEY CARRINGTON.

[From the Outlook. Published by the Newark Jersey Athletic Club of Jersey City.]

St. Peter was in a talkative mood,
And "Jack" met him in the Way,
"We thought we had things about perfect,"
He said, "but we've been making improvements up our way."

We've had to build an annex to Hades—
An improvement on the part that is hot;
For some folks were not satisfied with milk and honey,
And streets paved only with Gold.

Old Heaven was good enough until lately,
When some spirits came up, and would not stay;
They said it wasn't equal to their Home on Earth—
They'd come from "PLAINFIELD, N. J."

Re-Union of the Thirty-Third Regiment.

On Labor Day, September 4, the Thirty-third Regiment New Jersey Volunteers will hold its annual reunion at Morristown. The authorities have given the veterans permission to use the Old Court House. The visiting veterans will be taken care of by Torbert Post, G. A. R., and the Ladies' Aid Society. Among the prominent visitors expected is Major General George W. Mindil, of Philadelphia, who was formerly Colonel in command of the Thirty-third. The regimentshas a grand record, having fought from Missionary Ridge to the surrender of Johnson.

TOO MUCH RAIN NOW.

Farmers Complain that their Crops Are Ruined.

VERY farmer who was praying for rain last week now complains of too much.

The heavy storm of Wednesday night was not without its effects on the crops through out the State. Early in the month the crops were suffering from want of rain, and now they are suffering from too much of it. On Sunday night the farmers were jubilant over the rains of Saturday night and Sunday morning, and felt that there was some hope left for their crops. This feeling, however, was dispelled when they awoke Thursday morning and, looking around, saw the extent of the damage done by the storm. The peach trees were swept almost entirely of fruit; the tomatoes, not fully recovered from the heat of the early part of the month, were cracked open by the heavy rain, and now there are grave fears that the potatoes will rot in the fields from too much water.

The peaches probably are the most affected by the storm, and are all on the ground, where they are rotting fast.

Tomatoes were in fine condition Monday morning, but the heavy rain of Wednesday split them.

Pay Debts.

A to B—I owe you two dollars, here is one in part payment.

B to C—I owe you two dollars; here is one in part payment.

C to A—I owe you two dollars; here is one in part payment.

Thus the movements of one dollar cancel indebtedness amounting to six times its value, and so infinitum. The morals are too obvious to need a diagram.—Ex.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Seal Fishing History.

Canada seems to take satisfaction in the fact that the committee of arbitration on seal catching decided that Behring sea was not a mare clausum. We present the Canadian newspapers assurances of our distinguished consideration and solemnly declare that Americans are no less satisfied. For four years now we have lain awake nights wrestling with that mare clausum question. Was Behring sea mare clausum or wasn't it? Now, it is settled that it is not. The American people can put the two words quite out of their heads, and sealers need not go gunning for their prey with a Latin dictionary in their lockers any more.

The United States claimed four years ago: 1. That Russia asserted complete jurisdiction over Behring sea as inland waters. 2 That England conceded this claim of Russia. 3. That Behring sea was not regarded as a part of the Pacific ocean in the treaty ratified between Russia and Great Britain in 1825 and was therefore Russia's own private sea. 4. That these especial Russian rights passed to the United States when we bought Alaska in 1867. 5. The United States had, therefore the right to protect all the seals in the waters of Behring sea. To every one of these claims the arbitration commission has answered no.

Then the commissioners laid down a working plan for seal catching in the future which will bring about in another way the main point the United States was contending for—protection of the animals. They decided that henceforth neither Americans nor Canadians nor British subjects of any class shall catch seals within 60 miles of Pribylov islands, where the animals resort for breeding. Furthermore, during the months of May, June and July each year neither Yankee nor Britisher shall take any fur seals at all. Finally, no ships shall go sealing except regular licensed sailing vessels in the proper season, and the animals must not be hunted with nets, guns or dynamite. So that hereafter Yankee and Canadian must learn to spear seals like a native Alaska Indian. This will be interesting.

The point of an argument lies in its application, however. The point of special interest, the one which pleases the Canadian newspapers, is that the United States will be obliged to indemnify Canadian sealing schooner owners for all losses suffered through the seizure of their vessels when they were fishing outside the three mile shore limit. We shall also have to pay damages to those schooners that were lying idle, abstaining from seal catching pending the decision of the Behring sea question, so as make up to them the lost time.

However, the agreement reached by the arbitration commission must be ratified by the United States and Great Britain and must be agreed to besides by the world's maritime nations before it can become binding. The Toronto Globe remarks, moreover:

> One thing is very apparent—the regulations ought not to be seriously disappointing to our neighbors. None of their privileges in this very profitable calling is abridged in the slightest degree. The issue of the island will likely remove the slaughter of 100,000 animals yearly, and the American treasury will be enriched to the extent of $300,000 or $400,000 a year as rental and the royalty on franchise. The close season will affect them but very little, whereas it cuts off three best months of the year from outside hunters.

One plan suggested for helping banks out of their difficulties in tight times is that the separate small country banks should be merged into a few central ones, something after the manner of a trust. Each country bank should maintain its own individual existence as before, but instead of standing alone it would merely be a member of the great central trust or machine. It would practically be the country branch of a large central bank in one of the great cities. The general management would be located at the central headquarters. If this were done, when one of the branch banks became embarrassed the resources of the whole trust or combination would be at its command to restore it. The central banks might be located in one of the largest cities in each section of the Union, their branches extending through all the adjacent states. The banking business of Great Britain is chiefly managed in that way.

It is terrible to have the Victoria disaster investigation develop the fact that the great ship went down so speedily because the bulkhead doors between her water tight compartments were open and remained so constantly whether the vessel was at sea or on shore. So the hundreds of brave men met their deaths through carelessness. The water rushed into one open compartment after another till all were full, and the Victoria sank immediately.

Professor W. T. De Witt Alexander, the commissioner from the Hawaiian government to assist in pleading the cause of annexation, is of Hawaiian-Kentucky descent. His father was a missionary to the islands from Kentucky, and Professor Alexander is not only one of the most scholarly men those islands have produced, but he is a man of first rank in scientific attainment even when compared with the savants of Europe.

MR. HILL'S PLAIN TALK.

The New York Senator's Speech Causes a Sensation.

HE CRITICISED THE PRESIDENT.

He Will Vote For the Wilson Repeal Bill, but Not From Any Hope of Patronage, He Says—Five Minute Speeches In the House.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The speech made by Mr. Hill in the senate was remarkable in many respects and is today the chief topic of comment in congressional circles.

Mr. Hill began by saying that there were those who did not wholly agree with the president in his diagnosis of the malady now affecting the laity politic and who did not heartily join with him in the rosy conclusion that the financial millennium is to come the moment the Sherman law is repealed. There were some who had given the subject attention who believed the cause of the present depression was deeper and beyond the Sherman bill and that its repeal would leave laid in the evil hours of 1873, when the country unwittingly laid aside the financial policy that had been its guide since the foundation of the government.

Three Distinct Causes.

The existing financial disturbance, Mr. Hill found, was attributable to three distinct causes:

First—It was the natural and inevitable result of many years of real or fictitious prosperity.

Second—Some portion of the present panic could be traced to a concerted effort on the part of the monometallists to produce it in order to discredit silver.

Third—But no matter what else may have contributed to the present financial condition, it would not be denied that the silver purchase law had been, at least in part and possibly the most largely, instrumental in producing existing complications.

Mr. Hill did not believe that simple repeal of the Sherman law would at once restore abundant prosperity, but that many years would be required to recover from the present disturbance. He compared his course in declaring for repeal with the president's course in failing to refer to it until this late day.

He was a bimetallist and stood for free coinage as a proper ratio. Had the Sherman law been repealed at the last session or in special session on March 5, the United States would have escaped the present panic and precluded the closure of the Indian mints.

Independent, free bimetallic coinage of the United States was not consistent with the economic of monetary science. While repeal would not bring parity, it would facilitate it by bringing that new tangled concatenation—gold monometallism, begotten in the embraces of ignorance with rapacity—at last to an unequivocal and crucial test. The permanent remedy for our financial difficulty was to return to the bimetallic [illegible] existed prior to 1873.

Favors a Reduced Ratio.

Mr. Hill favored the increase of the national bank circulation as proposed in the pending bill. Continuing, he said he regarded the question of ratio as not timely at all as of the least consequence, but if changed at all it should not be enlarged, but diminished to 15½, the Latin union ratio. He was opposed to the return to the footsteps of any administration that sought to place the Democratic party in a false position and lead it into the very camp of the enemy. The platform upon which the Republican votes to carry out any such suicidal policy.

He did not believe, however, that any such course would be taken by the president by his own volition or even under the inspiration of indiscreet advisers until clearer sentiment shall be furnished than now exists. He deprecated unduly action in the formation of a definite financial plan and predicted the failure of the attempt to impose a gold standard on India.

Meanwhile the prompt repeal of the Sherman law was demanded as a measure of temporary relief. Let us legislate upon the financial question, said Mr. Hill, and then return to our homes, next December resuming the consideration of a permanent system.

His distinguished colleague and himself would cheerfully vote for the repeal bill, "unawed by power and uncorrupted by federal patronage." He predicted the passage of the bill by the senate and that the republic would weather the present storm.

When he declared that the president, if he favored bimetallism, could not rely upon support from him or from Democratic senators and would have to rely upon the votes of Republican senators, a significant smile of amusement and self complacency passed through the whole Republican group, while on the Democratic side of the chamber there were looks rather of annoyance than of pleasure.

He announced that the wishes, views and suggestions of the administration would have no influence on him, but that he himself and his colleagues would vote for the bill unawed by power and uncorrupted by federal patronage.

The speech occupied in its delivery a little over an hour and a half and attracted close attention on the floor and in the well filled galleries. For the next hour there was a far different scene in the chamber. Not a score of senators were present. The galleries were almost empty, and Mr. Stewart was on the floor making a speech on the silver question.

Afterward the house joint resolution as to town site selections in the Cherokee outlet was laid before us, discussed and passed, the amendment of the committee on public lands requiring the trustees to be bona fide residents of Oklahoma territory being defeated by a large majority.

Notice was given that one of the financial measures (Mr. McPherson could not particularize which) would be pressed to a vote next week, and the senate adjourned until Monday.

Five Minute Speeches In the House.

Nothing sensational transpired in the house. Addresses from the speeches delivered by Messrs. Burrows and Springer, there was none that commanded the attention of the membership, and indeed these two speeches were not listened to with the interest they deserved.

The day was a day of calm—the precursor of the storm that will come today. A large number of members addressed the house, but for the greater part they wasted their eloquence on empty benches.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—The crew of the yacht Jubilee left because of dissatisfaction with the mate.

THE TRIP OF THE BELL.

Programme For the Journey of the Columbian Liberty Bell to Chicago.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 26.—The Columbian liberty bell committee, who have headquarters here, announce that the Columbian liberty bell will be taken to Chicago by way of New York, Newark, Trenton, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, Columbus and Indianapolis. This morning the bell arrived in New York by the Citizens' line from Troy. It will be brought down Broadway Monday morning and will arrive in Jersey City at 11 a. m.

The car carrying the bell will be attached in most cases to local trains, stopping at local stations in order that people along the line may be able by being at the station at that time to see the bell.

The committee will welcome contributions of flowers from patriotic societies or individuals all along the line, and these flowers will be carefully saved and pressed and sent to Liberty lovers throughout the land as a memorial of the trip.

The committee request that members of the Grand Army of the Republic, Sons of Veterans and other uniformed patriotic organizations in towns through which the bell passes arrange to act as a guard of honor each at their railroad station, arranging the children and other contributors of flowers so that as little time as possible shall be taken at each stop.

The car carrying the bell will leave Jersey City on train No. 55 at 1:15 Monday, Aug. 28.

THE HOME RULE BILL.

Passed to Its Third Reading With Some Enthusiasm.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The strangers' galleries of the house were crowded to suffocation by persons eager to witness the last scenes in the report stage of the home rule bill. The proceedings of the evening were disappointingly tame. Timothy Healy, anti-Parnellite for North Louth, got the floor about 10 o'clock and talked until 11. The house became restless and declined to listen longer to talk against time. Cries of "Divide!" drowned Mr. Healy's voice, so it was impossible to hear a sentence during the last five minutes of his speech.

Then the speaker began to put the 18 government amendments standing in the name of John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland. Only two of the 18 were challenged by the Opposition. In each division the government majority was 35.

When the last amendment was pronounced carried, the Liberals and Irish, who had shown only slight enthusiasm during the previous proceedings, burst out with loud and repeated cheers. The Opposition remained silent. The speaker announced the third reading of the home rule bill for next Wednesday, and without further demonstration the house adjourned.

Conspicuous in the front row of spectators up stairs throughout the evening was Frank Slavin, the prize fighter.

TROOPS IN NAPLES.

The City Occupied by the Military on Account of Rioting.

ROME, Aug. 26.—The striking cab drivers still riot in Naples. Four regiments of infantry have taken up special trains to the city. The military and rioters had three encounters during the afternoon. More than 1,000 persons were arrested. Many of the men who led in the anti-French agitation started after the Aigues-Mortes massacre are said to have joined the rioters.

Within the last three days the garrison in the insurgent town has been increased by 12,000 troops. The regiments are camping in the principal squares of the city. The protest has issued a proclamation to the people informing them that the city has been occupied formally by the military and that all further disorder will be repressed by summary action of the troops.

Fears For the Fishing Fleet.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—It will be a day or two before the full extent of damage done by the recent cyclone will be known, but all day reports of the storm's work poured in from all points of the compass. It is feared that a whole fleet of fishing boats have been sent to the bottom and scores of lives lost. This may be the case with the local fishing fleet of 100 vessels in the Fulton market, and of which there are now some 20 fishing smacks to be heard from.

Ex-Speaker Reed on the House Rules.

ASHBURTON, Aug. 26.—Ex-Speaker Reed, a minority member of the committee on rules, said: "The Democrats have adopted some of the innovations of the Fifty-first congress, and I think it a great pity that they did not include all of them. But it requires some time for the Democrats to digest and comprehend an idea. I expect to make a remark upon the subject when it comes before the house."

Massachusetts Democratic Meet.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—The meeting of the Democratic state committee at headquarters today promises to be an interesting one, as there are a number of important matters to be acted upon. In addition to setting a date for the holding of the state convention there are several vacancies to be filled, including the place made vacant by the resignation of Chairman Josiah Quincy.

Football on Bicycles.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—At Schwalbach's beer garden, a resort on Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, eight members of various bicycle clubs of Kings county played football for five points on their bicycles. They played in teams of five within a radius of 100 feet with a Rugby ball.

Rear Over by a Cable Car.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—A woman who gave her name as Bridget Lawson and her residence as 46 Downing street, who was much under the influence of liquor, was knocked down and run over by a Broadway cable car.

Bank Cashier Arrested.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Aug. 26.—Trouble over the failure of Seymour's bank culminated in the arrest of Assistant Cashier Maxiner on the charge of taking money collected on a depositor's claim.

New York Republican Committee to Meet.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The Republican state committee will be called to meet in this city at the Fifth Avenue hotel some day next week, probably either Thursday or Friday.

No Cholera In Brunswick.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 26.—The Brunswick board of health bulletin announced that there was not a case of fever in the city nor was there a suspicious case.

Cortis Wins the Tournament.

ROCHESTER, Aug. 26.—The tennis tournament, with Fritz Ward barred, resulted in a victory for Gurney Cortis.

A BANDIT KING CAUGHT.

His Haunt Was In Garret Mountain, New Jersey.

HE AND HIS GANG LIVED IN CAVES.

At Night These Jersey Outlaws Robbed Stores and Houses—A Detective Waited For Gibbons With a Revolver—A Three Months' Sentence.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 26.—The king of the Garret mountain gang of bandits, who make life uncomfortable for residents of the southern section of the city, was brought to bay by a revolver in the hands of Detective Mulhenny. He made no resistance, but quietly took a seat in the two other officers, who took him in the patrol wagon to the station house, where he gave his name as Patrick Gibbons and his age as 35. He is of medium height, stout and as fleet of foot as a deer.

The king's clothes are worn and his hair unkempt. He has spent the entire summer in his secret mountain haunt and cave, making occasional nocturnal visits to the city to plunder. His gang, however, has usually done the work while he has awaited them.

A Lair In the Woods.

The chief rendezvous for the gang is a thick cluster of cedar trees behind the peak of the mountain beneath the liberty pole placed on Garret mountain by the centennial committee last July. The officers knew it was foolish to attempt to capture the outlaws in their own lair. The last time Gibbons is known to have lost his mountain home on a thieving expedition was on Sunday.

From the high rock he saw several young men preparing to swim in the canal. He came from his hiding place by way of a secret path, and when the bathers were in the water he rifled their pockets, taking money and jewelry. He had no difficulty in making his way back to the edge of the mountain, where he was safe. It was this robbery that upset him in his freedom. Detective Mulhenny was instructed to be on the lookout for him.

For several nights the officer had secreted himself behind a large bowlder at the base of the mountain.

He was there until after midnight enjoying a smoke, when his attention was arrested by the sound of rolling stones and footsteps on the mountain side. In the distance he beheld the mountain king walking cautiously along a narrow path on his way to the city.

The officer waited until Gibbons was within a few feet of him. Then he sprang from behind the bowlder and commanded him to hold up his hands. Gibbons was at first disposed to draw his own revolver, but the stern voice of the officer warning him that if he moved hand or foot he would be shot convinced him that the best policy was to submit.

The King In Jail.

Justice Van Cleve committed the king to the county jail for three months. In this connection his record will be investigated by the police authorities, and it is believed that before his term expires he will be called upon to answer a number of charges for burglary and highway robbery.

It was the custom of the gang to waylay farmers who were on their way to market with produce and help themselves to the contents of the wagon.

At night they broke into stores and houses in the city. A few weeks ago a large quantity of jewelry was found in one of the mountain caves. The jewelry was the proceeds of a robbery in Bloomfield, and the property was identified and returned to the owner. Gibbons' gang, it is thought, had some share in the robbery. Hereafter the police will make a determined effort to break up the gang, even if it becomes necessary to search the huts and caves in the mountain.

Murphy on Hill's Speech.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—David Murphy, in speaking of the speech which Senator David B. Hill delivered yesterday on silver in the United States senate, said: "It was a financial speech, and it was one of the most convincing arguments ever delivered in the senate. That is the general opinion in Washington. Mr. Hill's speech," he continued, "was carefully prepared, and it seems to me that the Democratic party can safely stand by the argument advanced by him. There were certain personal allusions in that speech that have been better left out, but in the main it was good, straight, honest Democratic doctrine and will go far toward quelling the early repeal of the Sherman law."

Quarries on Short Time.

BANGOR, Pa., Aug. 26.—The slate regions are beginning to feel the effects of business depression. The Bangor, Union and other quarries will work but five days a week. At Pen Argyl the United States Slate company cut its employees down to four days a week and reduced wages 10 per cent. The men have struck.

Actor Curtis Acquitted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The jury in the case of M. B. Curtis, "Samuel of Posen," for the murder of Policeman Grant, returned a verdict of acquittal. The jury on the first ballot stood 9 to 3 for acquittal. This is the third trial of Curtis. The jury in the first two trials disagreed.

Strook His Wife With an Ax.

JAMAICA, N. Y., Aug. 26.—John Bapp, a German farmer, residing in South Woodhaven, struck a quarrel with his wife and struck her in the head with an ax, inflicting a wound that may prove fatal. He was arrested.

MEXICO'S CIVIL WAR.

Colonists Trapped In a Canyon and Many Slaughtered.

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Aug. 26.—A startling report comes from Monclova of a fight between two factions in Coahuila. The Cardena men, seeing a party of Galan men approaching near Nadadores, 25 miles from Monclova, took a position in a canyon commanding four sides of a hollow square. The Galan men fell into the trap and were exposed to a deadly fire from the hidden foes on every side. They at last hoisted a white flag and surrendered.

About 30 of Cardena's men were killed, while their opponents lost 50 killed and wounded. If this report is corroborated, it is the most sanguinary battle which has yet taken place between the two factions. A large number of representatives of both factions went to the depot to meet General Reyes, but were disappointed. It is said now that he will be here today. It is said that he has carte blanche from President Diaz to settle existing trouble in Coahuila and that he will appoint General Ramieres of Saltillo as governor.

A report has reached town that Colonel Trevino with 800 Cardenas is camped on a little river four miles south of Piedras Negras. It is said that their mission here is to meet with General Reyes and have a conference regarding affairs in Coahuila.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED.

Savings Banks No Longer Have Use For the Thirty Day Notice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—It is now almost a month since the organization of savings banks in New York and Brooklyn decided to avail themselves of the right accorded them by law to insist upon depositors giving notice of their intention to withdraw deposits. The 30 day notice was the one generally adopted, although a few of the banks made the limit 60 days. Most of the banks have now cancelled this order.

During the severe money stringency, when the notices were posted, many depositors, moved by forbodings of disaster, hurried to the banks where they had money on deposit and gave notice that at the end of the time limit they would be on hand to draw their balances.

They have had abundant time to think since that time, and excitement has given place to confidence. People who thought they could not live a moment after the 30 days without drawing their money take an entirely different view of the situation now, and there is not a savings bank in either city that has not received numerous letters recalling the notices of withdrawal.

THE STORM'S VICTIMS.

A List of the Men Who Were Lost on the Coal Barges.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—Assistant Engineer Albert Smith of the Reading Railroad company's steam collier Panther, which, with the barge Lykens Valley, was lost off Long Island, arrived here. Of the 20 persons on the two vessels only three were saved, as follows: Assistant Engineer Albert Smith, Fireman Edwin Cummins and Seaman Victor Egland, all of Philadelphia and all employed on the Panther. Mr. Smith is not positive as to the name of the latter.

Following is a list of the dead:

Steamer Panther—Captain George W. Pierson, Mate John R. Newton, Second Mate Otto M. Johnson, Engineer Henry C. Moore, Steward William Dilley, Firemen Elvy Jeffreys and Frank Wilhalm, Coal Passer William Timoney and Seamen Arvid Johansen, Andrew Johnson and Frederick Larsen. All resided in Philadelphia except Johansen and Larsen, whose addresses are unknown.

Lykens Valley—Captain Alfred F. Sylvester, Somerville, Mass., Engineer Robert Allen, Newark, N. J.; Oiler Hiram Blodgett, North Brookville, Me., and Deckhand Peter Rideout of Newfoundland.

Do Not Know Mrs. Schacklett.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Mrs. Mary Schacklett of Philadelphia, a silver haired but handsome woman of 51, was found wandering the streets looking for one J. K. Landers of California, to whom she said she was to be married here. She was well dressed, wore diamonds and carried considerable money.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—The story telegraphed from Chicago relative to the appearance there of Mrs. Mary Schacklett, who claims $200,000 and a new home, to meet a Californian who had promised to marry her, finds no confirmation here of her statements. At 1200 Arch street Landers is known her, and Aaron Thompson, who was said to be her lawyer, says that he has no client of that name.

Lowell Mills Start Up.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 26.—The full plant of the Merrimac mills print works, in all employing 2,000 operatives, will start up Monday morning on full time and run permanently. It is not anticipated that any future development will affect this. There is still better news. There has been a conference of Lowell mill treasurers, and the decision is that there will be no cutdown of wages either now or in the fall. The other mills shut down will probably follow the Merrimac and start up.

Outlaws Surrounded In a House.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 26.—There was a desperate fight between a band of negro burglars and highwaymen and officers near Thompson Station, in Williamson county. Two officers surrounded the house which the robbers used as a rendezvous. In the fight which ensued one of the posse, Sinner, was badly wounded and one of the negroes, Tom Thompson, the leader of the gang, killed. The house was full of pistols.

Better Times Reported.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The Commercial Advertiser publishes a breakdown of opinions upon the present commercial depression gathered from all over the country. Most of these opinions are to the effect that the worst of the depression has been passed and the near future will see a decided improvement in all the lines of commercial and manufacturing business.

Killed a Cornered Outlaw.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 26.—Officers surrounded a house containing Coley Dowdell, the outlaw who is wanted for a number of crimes in Alabama, and when the man refused to surrender and attempted to shoot he was himself shot down.

A Body Seen In the Whirlpool.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 26.—While a party of visitors were looking at the Whirlpool rapids the body of a man came into view. The body is believed to be that of Edward Brennan of New York.

Vanderbilt's New Yacht.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's new steel twin screw yacht Valiant arrived here. She is the finest private yacht afloat.

The Quakers' Annual Picnic.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 26.—The annual picnic of the Society of Friends was held at Wardell's grove, Clintondale.

STRANGE SEA STORY.

A New Haven Man Says He Was Captured by Pirates.

ESCAPED ONLY TO BE WRECKED.

Norton, Washed Ashore on a Plank at Atlantic City, Tells a Weird Yarn About Robbers and the Gale—Rescued In an Unconscious Condition.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 26.—According to his later version of it, the case of Louis Norton, who was washed ashore here, appears more plausible than it did upon first appearance.

Norton says he is a clothing merchant of New Haven. He says on the afternoon of Aug. 12 he went in bathing near New Haven, having gone out in a boat and leaving his clothes and valuables there. While he was swimming about a boat in which there were two swarthy appearing men was brought up to his, and then the occupants began rifling his clothes of the contents, among which were $200 in money, a gold watch and other valuables. He objected to this proceeding, when one of the men hit him over the head with an oar, knocking him unconscious.

A Prisoner In the Cabin.

When he recovered his senses, he was lying in the cabin of the boat belonging to the men. He stayed at that place all night, and in the morning the boat set sail, continuing through the day until night, when anchor was again cast at what Norton thinks was the upper end of Long Island sound.

The next afternoon the smugglers put a case of champagne, several cases of claret and some other goods in a package and rowed away toward the distant shore, leaving the schooner at anchor and Norton bound hand and foot on board.

The prisoner at last loosed the ropes with which his hands were tied and then untied his feet. He made his way to the little cabin, where he found a knife, and fearful that the thieves would return he cut the anchor rope, and getting the sail in position sailed away from the scene of his disaster.

Through the night he kept up his course out to sea, and when morning broke no land was in sight.

He passed several vessels during his trip. He lost all idea of time and never saw land. Last Wednesday evening he was struck by a storm and his boat dismasted.

Wrecked In the Storm.

Thursday morning the vessel capsized, and he grasped a plank as a last resort. For 18 hours he drifted about on this plank, clinging for his life, and was about giving up when he struck the end of Young & McShea's pier here.

He worked his way in from piling to piling until his cries attracted the attention of J. H. Brode, a bathhouse keeper, who, with the assistance of Chief of Police Eldridge and two patrolmen, brought him ashore in an unconscious condition. He was soon revived, however, and told a seemingly incredible story.

Norton is an intelligent and well educated man, and though his story is deprecated by many he appears to be thoroughly honest in what he says and certainly bears the marks of a strong battle. His father at New Haven, who has been notified by telegram, has not yet been heard from.

May Yohe's Marriage Denied.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The report that Lord Henry Francis Hope had married Miss May Yohe, a burlesque actress, rather better known in America than in London, is denied. Miss Yohe herself says she did marry Lord Hope. While it is said by some who ought to know that at one period of her checkered career she possessed a bona fide husband from whom she has never been legally separated, on the other hand Lord Hope's friends and family strenuously asseverate that in no sense can he be considered a married man.

Charges Her With Two Murders.

DENVER, Aug. 26.—Frank Ladd, a blacksmith, called at police headquarters with a woman whom he wanted held for two murders alleged to have been committed in Philadelphia 17 years ago, the victims being her lover and a boarder, who discovered the first murder. The woman went under the name of Blanch Brown, but her real name is Maria Kirk or Maria Sterling. The woman denied the story and was discharged, whereupon Ladd said he would swear out a warrant charging her with the murders.

Boomers Flocking to the Strip.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Aug. 26.—The rush of homeseekers to the Cherokee strip, which will be opened to settlement Sept. 16, has begun, and hundreds of men, women and children are arriving on every Santa Fe train. By actual count 138 prairie schooners arrived and proceeded toward the strip line, where they joined the boomers' camp.

A Gold Train Coming East.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 26.—Ten million dollars in gold packed in canvas bags came into Kansas City on the Santa Fe train from San Francisco. The money was guarded by 10 United States deputy marshals armed with winchester rifles. The gold is for the subtreasury in New York city.

The Air of Pike's Peak Killed Her.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 26.—Mrs. J. L. Blood of Amsterdam, N. Y., in attempting the ascent of Pike's Peak, was taken ill at the Half Way House, the altitude being too great for her. She was carried back to the Antlers hotel in this city, where she died.

The Runaway Buffalo Boys.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Two runaway boys from Buffalo are at police headquarters, waiting for their parents to come and take them home. They are Patrick Stock, 13, of 125 East Eagle street and Leo Selling, 14, of 96 Elm street.

A Spiritualist's Body Cremated.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The body of Henry Clark Bowen, the father of Charles Albert, who died at his home, 286 Lexington street, Brooklyn, was taken to Fresh Pond and cremated.

Texas Cattle Loss Assessed.

CONVENTION PLACE FIXED.

New York Democracy Will Select Saratoga for Oct. 3.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The Democratic state committee are in session in the Hoffman House today to fix the time and place for holding the state convention.

Ex-Mayor William S. Kirk of Syracuse and Colonel John F. Gaynor of Fayetteville had a consultation with Senator Edward Murphy, Jr., chairman of the Democratic state committee, and Lieutenant Governor Sheehan. Messrs. Kirk and Gaynor said after the meeting had been decided that the Democratic state convention would be held in Syracuse, Oct. 3.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.
To George Wade, Charles Wade, Mary Wade, Mary A. Irons and William Irons, her husband: By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Carrie V. Line, wife of Isaac Line, Isaac N. Line, Jr., Jane Line, an infant by James H. Line their next friend, namely: Susie J. Line, Arthur D. Line, Clarence Line and Emma F. Line are complainants, and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainants on or before the second day of September next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you. Said bill is filed to have certain lands situate in the City of Plainfield charged with the value of the forty-five acre tract of land conveyed by the last will and testament of Isaac N. Line to James H. Line for life, remainder to his children, and the value of the use of the said forty-five acre tract from the date of said thereof, April 2, 1888, to date of final decree in this cause; or that said testamentary trustee, as executor as aforesaid, may by decree of this Court, be compelled to make sale of the said Plainfield lands, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purposes, and that from the proceeds of the sale he may be ordered to invest a sum equal to the value of said forty-five acre tract, and the interest thereof during the life time of the said James H. Line to Carrie V. Line, the present owner of said life estate, and to divide the principal among the children of said James H. Line at his death, and for general relief, you are made defendants because it is alleged in the bill that you have or may claim to have some interest in said lands under the last will and testament of Isaac Line, deceased.
Dated, July 1st, 1893.

WAYS OF THE INSECT WORLD.

Marvelous Architecture Wrought by Paper Making Wasps.

With only the tools given them by nature the inhabitants of the insect world mold and manufacture homes for themselves and families and safe storehouses for their food. Often their workmanship is wonderfully beautiful and exact. According to naturalists, there are about 900 species of wasps, each species in its form, habits and architecture following the plan of its ancestors.

NEST OF A PAPER WASP.

In the cut is depicted the elegant structure of the paper wasp which is graphically described by Professor John Martin as follows in The Prairie Farmer: Layer upon layer of fine gnarled pastes made from wood pulp, ground and masticated by the strong mandibles of the wasp, form a rainproof shelter with entrances at the lower end and hallways and doors between the layers, the inner and outer doors not corresponding lest cold drafts chill the tender larvæ, or eggs. Fastened to the roof of the structure by a firm pedicel, or stem, is the upper tier of cells, which are completed first, even before the casing is finished. This tier forms the receptacles for the first brood of wasps. When finished, other supports are fastened thereto and another tier of cells made after the manner of the first, and this is followed by a third.

In this light and airy structure, in shape and size often resembling the heart of a great ox, the economy of the wasp family is carried on. The young in every stage of development, ranged side by side, are always suspended head downward. As soon as the first young emerge fresh eggs are laid in the cells, thus keeping them all occupied. Although paper made from wood fiber is usually used by these wasps in the construction of their nests, yet observers record occasional instances where real paper was utilized, the insects moistening and chewing it until it was of the right consistency for their work. In nature the neat described measures about 7 inches in diameter.

Fire Protection.

America and Europe have chosen diametrically opposite policies in the matter of fire protection. Over there they do not bother so much about putting out fires, for they do not have many, and each is generally isolated, and even if it burns itself out in the building where it started there is not much danger of its spreading to contiguous structures and rise to great proportions. Hence they are satisfied with rather inferior machines and much smaller fire departments. Here we do the reverse. We spend enormous sums annually in insurance, in keeping up costly and finely disciplined fire departments, in buying the latest improved engines and apparatus.

The question is often asked by those who look into the matter, Which system is most economical and best in the long run? The Mining and Scientific Review believes that a system better than that of fire engines is that of numerous hydrants, liberally supplied with water under high pressure by means of tall standpipes and stationary pump engines. Each building might be its own fire department on that plan, and the plant, after first investment issued, cost nothing except when in use.

Experiments in Physics.

To drive a needle through a nickel, particularly if the needle be a fine one, seems at first sight an impossibility. It is, however, a very easy matter if you set about it in the right way. All you have to do is to thrust the needle through a cork, allowing the point to project slightly, and then with a pair of cutting pliers nip off all that remains exposed at the opposite end.

PIERCING A NICKEL WITH A NEEDLE.

Place the cork and nickel as shown in the illustration, and then let the coin rest on a piece of soft wood, and keeping the cork in position with the left hand hammer away vigorously on the top of the cork.

The needle being steel is harder than the bronze of the coin, and the cork preventing it from bending to either side it may be driven through the nickel or any other coin of like substance with perfect ease.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, etc., with some flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Royal Tooth Powder the best English prepared chalk, the finest Castile, delicately flavored. Your dentist will tell you these substances are perfectly harmless and accomplish all that is to be expected from a tooth powder. A full two-ounce package of the unbranded article, same as is usually sold for 25c., under other names, but which we retail for ten cents; will be given with each one dollar purchase and upwards. People of correct ideas will appreciate this offer, but some will ask: "Why do you sell for 10c.?" Simply because we have eliminated from those who don't, as the rose can be distinguished from the dandelion. This will seem cruel to some, but duty compels us to speak plainly. The "Royal" is being received everywhere, and jobbers compliment us with 50 or 60 duplicate orders.

A TRIAL OF ROYAL TOOTH POWDER WILL DELIGHT YOU!

GOOD HEALTH

ERYSIPELAS OF THE FACE.

Recent Antiseptic Methods For the Cure of This Distressing Disease.

A recent medical article in the European edition of the New York Herald gives some interesting hints respecting the antiseptic methods of treating erysipelas. The disease is undoubtedly infectious, and persons attending erysipelas patients should be protected against all danger of contagion. The treatment recommended is that suggested by M. Peirini, a physician of Galati. He begins with disinfecting the intestinal tube by the following purgative formula:

Calomel	0.80 centig.
Scammony	0.40 centig.

Mixed and divided into two wafers, they are taken in the morning, half an hour apart, on an empty stomach. At the same time he employs a local treatment by a solution of sublimate in collodion according to the following formula:

Corrosive sublimate	0.10 centig.
Collodion and castor oil	0.60 gm.

The latter preparation is applied twice daily for the treatment of the diseased surface, taking care to lay on the collodion thickly over the border of the swelling and the adjacent healthy surface. On the second day, and until the fever disappears and the redness dies out, the antiseptic treatment is followed up by the following pills, two of which are taken every other hour:

Sulphate of quinine	2 gms.
Iodoform	0.80 centig.
Pain balsam	ss. q. s.
Extract of gentian

The Pasteur Treatment of Rabies.

Nothing succeeds like success, and therapeutic methods will always be judged by the proportion of well authenticated cures ever well authenticated failures. In France and Italy especially, says The Lancet, the Pasteur treatment of rabies is steadily gaining ground, mainly on the strength of statistics which, leaving controversy on one side, present to the world an unusually impressive total of successful cases.*

During 1892, according to the annals of the Pasteur Institute, 1,726 patients were treated for bites inflicted by rabid animals. Of these 1,700 lived, giving a mortality of 0.99 per cent. But if we wish to judge of the real efficacy of the antirabic inoculations we must admit into the percentage only those of the fatal cases in which the first symptoms of rabies manifested themselves more than 15 days after the last inoculation. Now, of the 7 persons who died in 1892, 3 only were seized with rabies in less than 15 days after the end of the treatment. The definite results are consequently the following:

Persons cured	1,720
Deaths	4
Mortality per cent	0.23

This last figure is the lowest hitherto obtained.

Poulticing the Ear.

Dr. Albert H. Buck, writing in The International Medical Magazine, says that while heat is one of the best remedies in painful inflammations of the middle ear, and the poultice is one of the best methods of applying heat, as usually put on the poultice has little effect. What should be done, he says, is first to fill the external auditory canal with lukewarm water, the head resting on the unaffected side upon the pillow. Then a large flaxseed poultice is applied over the ear as hot as it can be borne. The column of water is thus kept warm and acts as a conductor of heat between the poultice and the inflamed surface.

Carbolic Acid as a Germicide.

New methods of overcoming disease germs are many, but Sir Joseph Lister, the eminent English physician, has returned to the use of carbolic acid for antiseptic purposes, in the strength of 1.20, believing it to be germicidal to most of the pathogenic micro-organisms.

ETIQUETTE

A WOMAN'S NAME.

The Etiquette of the Signature and the Address on the Card.

As far as the etiquette of the signature is concerned, Harper's Bazar says "There is one unvarying rule for women, married and single. It is never right nor in good form to sign one's name with the addition of Miss or Mrs. You are Mary Emily Jones, not Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald Jones, to whomsoever you may be writing. It is unnecessary to tell your correspondent of your married style and estate, you may do so and in one of several ways. Please remember that a correspondent should not be left in doubt as to this, much embarrassment being frequently caused by the omission, in letters between strangers, of exact information as to whether the writer is married or single. You may readily indicate all you wish to tell.

"You may place Mrs. P. F. before the Mary Emily aforesaid in parentheses. You may write Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald out fully and plainly in the left hand corner of your sheet before your proper signature, or you may simply inclose your engraved visiting card in your letter, this being on the whole the most elegant and also the most convenient method of showing one's relation to society. The exception must be remarked here that the visiting card is out of place in an exclusively business letter—one which has not even remotely a social bearing."

Card etiquette is one of the finest and most delicate points by which a woman classifies her acquaintances. Its laws are unalterable, its sins of omission or commission among the few that are absolutely unpardonable. Concerning the name on the card an authority tells that the name engraved in script through the center should have the address below it in the right hand corner, the day for receiving in the left corner. This name should never include a husband's title or profession, but spell out the given name in full, and not be written with the initials alone. A daughter in the first year of her social life has no card, but engraves her name on her mother's card. After this probationary year the eldest or the only daughter in a family writes only Miss before her family name. The younger daughters write the full name. It has been decided that on a widow's card the dear name so long borne, so hard to relinquish, may be retained with perfect propriety for social use, though in all practical matters the widow writes her own Christian name instead of that of her husband.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

Interesting Statistics Regarding Those Belonging to the United States.

Previous to the Revolutionary war, according to Thorne, there were only five public libraries in all the colonies outside of the libraries of colleges and academies. Three hundred and eighty-six libraries of the list have 10,000 volumes each and upward, 208 being libraries that are free to the public under certain restrictions and 178 charge a subscription fee for their privileges. Of the 10,000 volume libraries 120 are libraries of schools and colleges, and 266 are libraries belonging to states, cities or societies. There are 11 libraries in the United States having over 100,000 volumes each, among which are the library of Harvard college, 400,000 volumes; over the Astor library, New York, 280,000 volumes; the library of congress, 400,000 volumes and 130,000 pamphlets; the library of the Boston Athenæum, 121,000 volumes; the Boston Public library, 220,000 volumes, and the New York Mercantile library, 200,000 volumes.

Interesting Facts About Gum Arabic.

Most of our readers are acquainted with mucilage as it comes from the manufactory in a neat bottle, accompanied with a brush for applying it to the paper or scrap that is to be pasted, but few perhaps really know much about gum arabic, the substance which dissolved in water makes the mucilage. What, then, is gum arabic?

"It is the juice from the bark of the senegia tree, which grows in the dry countries around the Mediterranean. This juice hardens as fast as it runs and forms in lumps at the foot of a tree. Morocco is the best producing country for this gum, and the native Moors make most of their money from it. About the 1st of January the Moors encamp along the borders of the forests, to gather the yearly harvest of gum. The Moorish boys go through the woods and gather the lumps from the outside of the trees, where it forms much like the gum from our wild cherry does. The gum is loaded on camels and carried to sea ports, where it is sold. When it is gathered, it is a very nourishing food. A lump the size of a hen's egg will last a Moorish boy a whole day, and a man will live on six ounces of it a day. There are several kinds. There is 'Turkey picked gum,' 'Gedda,' 'Amrad,' 'Senegal,' 'Barbary,' etc., owing to the country it grows in and the species of senegia that produces it. There is a kind that comes from Australia, another from East India, etc.

Gum arabic is used for many purposes besides that of making mucilage. It is used in medicines, in the manufacture of candy, to give luster to crape, silk, etc., to stiffen the fibers in cloth when finishing and in calico printing. So useful, in fact, is this substance that it is imported into the United States in large quantities, as high as 1,500,000 pounds being imported in a single year.

Shellwork In the East.

Nothing goes to waste in the extreme orient. Everything, no matter how humble, is utilized in some way or another. Thus, for example, says the Jewelers' Circular, the outer horn of shellfish is used for food. The shells are not thrown away as in the western world. Some are reserved for the button maker, others for the jeweler, some for the cabinet maker, others for the glue boiler.

An ingenious way of using shells is as buttons, sleeve links and hairpin heads. For the purpose a small shell is employed ranging from a quarter inch to an inch in diameter. It is cleaned and polished and half filled with molten solder. Before the metal cools a wire loop or hairpin is inserted in the middle of the molten mass. The loop becomes the shank of the button, which is strong, neat and very attractive. The cost of the button ranges from 20 to 80 cents a dozen. Sometimes the wire loops are of silver, when the figures are of course considerably higher.

More ingenious are the shell cups, saucers and spoons made from the larger types of tropical univalve shells. In making cups and saucers a strong shell is selected through in about the same manner as cocoanuts when intended for dippers. They are cleaned and polished, and the convex surface ground slightly, so that it will stand without spilling or tilting. The spoons are made by sawing the round superior surface of the concave in such an angle as to partially intersect the spindle or major axis. This becomes the handle of the completed spoon. According to the size of the shell, the result is a dessert spoon, tablespoon or a ladle containing a quart.

Origin of the Peach.

Nothing is now more universally accepted than the fact that the peach is an improved variety of the almond. The almond has a stiff shell around the stone, which splits when ripe and exposes the stone when mature. This outer skin has simply become fleshy in the peach, so that is all that gives it its specific character, explains Meehan. It seems now certain from investigation in the history of ancient Babylon that in their gardens, now nearly 4,000 years ago, the peach was cultivated then as it is now. It must have been many years before this that the peach was improved from the almond, and this fact goes to show the great antiquity of the fruit.

Things Chemists Do.

Chemists now turn scrap iron into ink, old bones into leather matches, the shavings of the blacksmith's shop into prussian blue, fusel oil into oil of apples and pears, the drainings of cow houses into fashionable perfumery, beggars' rags into new pilot coats, cesspool filth into ammonia and tar waste into aniline dyes and saccharine.

Their Cases Somewhat Similar.

There could hardly have been a greater contrast between two men who had been chums at school and afterward at college.

The first had a tinge of gray in his hair, wrinkles on his face, and was round shouldered from long hours spent over a desk. He was trudging slowly homeward.

The second was well dressed, and when he walked had a more elastic step than the first. But he wasn't walking; he was driving as usual. There were some lines of care on his face, but altogether he looked prosperous and happy.

"That man's worth half a million," said one of the two men who had stopped to speak to the first.

"And that man ain't worth $500," said the other, nodding toward the one who was trudging along on the other side of the street.

"I know them when they were both poor," said the first. "Both started out to become rich, and for a year or so it seemed an even thing. Each was striving and struggling for the same end."

"I know, and one failed."

"Both failed."

"I mean one failed to get rich."

"Both failed to get rich. The other went into bankruptcy and paid ten cents on the dollar. That's how he did get rich."—Detroit Free Press.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH.

CORNER STONE LAYING FOR A NEW HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

Ceremonies Conducted in both German and English Yesterday Afternoon—To be Known as St. Peter's Evangelical German Lutheran Church.

ST. PETER'S Evangelical German Lutheran Church is the name of the new house of worship to be erected on Grove street, at the corner of Mercer avenue, the corner stone of which was laid yesterday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies.

The services began with singing from the church book. After prayer by the Rev. E. Klonka, the pastor of the congregation, and more singing, the Rev. F. Moldenke, D. D., of New York, addressed the assemblage in German.

After singing from the church book again, the Rev. T. T. Heinchmann, D. D., of Brooklyn, made an address in English. He said in part:

"I extend my congratulations to the members of this congregation and to the Rev. Dr. Moldenke on their at last commencing the erection of a house of worship. Brother Moldenke has presented the wants of this congregation before Conference and Synod. I rejoice to be able to be with you at the corner stone laying of your church. There is a large number of you here and you must have been slumbering not to have had a church here before. This is a delightful spot for such a place, and I again congratulate your prosperous location. There is wonderful activity in the country, at least there has been until very recently, but it is slumbering just now. It is good to build, particularly this kind of a building. Millions are spent in building business places and public institutions, also places of education—schools. These are all occasions of rejoicing, but the laying of a corner stone of a building like this should be one of more solemnity. A city is judged not by its houses and buildings but by the churches. Churches are a testimonial of a community and are of unknown influence. I have never visited your city until to day, but I see a number of churches, and I congratulate you people of Plainfield on your houses of worship. It speaks well of you.

"This holy little edifice will not be very elaborate, but it will be a place where sinners may say, 'What must I do to be saved?' I rejoice that there is to be a church where German is to be preached. It is not well understood by Americans why Germans want churches where services are conducted in their own tongue. A German can attend worship in an American church and take part in the services, but it does not reach him like his own language.

"The word German is not well-known by many Americans.

"They call us Dutchmen and apply the term Dutchmen to us. But we are different people. There are many who look upon the Germans as heathen. God forbid that the great German nation should be called heathens, and you also send Missionaries there, but it is a wrong impression. The Germans are a Christian people.

"I am proud that you are to erect a German church here. It is a pity no church has been built here before this. It must be because of a lack of confidence in God. It is said the Germans are a little slow. You must show them now that you are not slow German Christians. I rejoice that a German Lutheran church is to be erected, and you must not forget what a grand heritage you have.

"In 1685 in New York a committee was sent to Albany to demand the abolishment of the laws governing corrupt practices. At the head of this committee was a man named Luther. Soon after this a picture of Martin Luther was seen by a man and he asked a friend 'who is Luther.' The friend replied, 'He is the man who went to Albany at the head of that committee.' If Martin Luther is not better known we are glad to build a German Lutheran church, in order to let it be known who he is.

"The German Lutherans are the fourth strongest Protestant organization in the United States. A church of which so little is known in this city has thousands of followers in New York and Philadelphia.

"I am sorry that English will not often be preached in this church at present. But the day will come when English will be preached here. I rejoice because it is a German Lutheran church, not only Lutheran but Evangelical German Lutheran as well. The Evangelical means that we do not believe in Martin Luther, but in his doctrine.

"May God prosper you. You will soon have a beautiful place to worship in the German tongue. Again I congratulate you and your pastor, St. Peter's Evangelical German Lutheran church."

The address was followed by more singing and then the Rev. Mr. Klonka laid the corner stone, in which was placed a box containing the following:

A New Testament.
A hymn book of our congregation.
The history of our congregation.
A picture of our church, cut and presented from the Daily Press.
The map of Plainfield and North Plainfield, presented by THE PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.
The June, July and August number of our church paper, Lutherischer Zionsbothe, and our Sunday-school paper.
Copy of "Der Jugend Sonntagsblatt," our Sunday-school paper.
The Knoppe Kirchlicher Anzeiger" with the "Nationnelle Tages" from Koppe in Germany.
Copy of the "Lutherischen Kirchenblatt."
Copies of all papers of this city, THE EVENING NEWS, Daily Press, Constitutionalist, and Courier, 40 coins from Germany, Switzerland, Germany and a few of China. Between the American coins was one three cent, and one ten cent bill, also a three cent silver piece.

The names of the German ministers who were present at the services: Rev. Fischer from Bethlehem, Pa.; Rev. Meyer from Elizabeth, N. J., Rev. Oswald from New Brunswick, N. J., and those who delivered the address, Rev. T. T. Heinchmann and Rev. F. Moldenke.

The ceremonies then concluded with the benediction.

MR. WARREN ACKERMAN DEAD.

His Death Very Sudden at His Home in Scotch Plains.

Mr. Warren Ackerman, known throughout the United States for his connection with the cement industry, died at his home in Lyde Park, Scotch Plains, very suddenly Saturday night, in his sixty-fifth year. He was for many years head of the Lawrenceville Cement Company and was a very wealthy man, having made most of his money by furnishing rubber goods to the government during the war. For these goods he was paid in government bonds, which he held until they sold at a premium. He retired from active business two years ago and devoted his time to improving his homestead property and the beautiful Glen Side Park, formerly known as "Feltville, a deserted village." Seventeen years ago he married the daughter of Isaac L. Platt, of New York, one of the founders of the Chemical National Bank. He was a member of the Reformed church. His widow survives him.

Mr. Ackerman was born in New Brunswick. His first business venture was with the Goodyear Rubber Company.

He moved to Scotch Plains about twenty-seven years ago.

His death was very sudden as he had been in the best of health apparently. Thursday morning he said he did't feel quite as well as usual, and did not go to New York as he intended.

Saturday morning he was taken seriously ill and Dr. Lowrie of this city was summoned. The physician said he was suffering from acute Bright's disease which caused death by uræmic poisoning.

Deceased was a brother of ex-Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman of this city.

CASHIER F. H. GARDNER'S DEATH.

He Died at Ocean Grove Yesterday.

Cashier Frank H. Gardner, of the City National Bank, who has been too ill to attend to his duties since February last, and who has been since June at Ocean Grove, died at the latter place yesterday.

Mr. Gardner was held in high esteem by all who knew him and was one of the pillars of the First Baptist church, of which he was treasurer. He was for some time Superintendent of the Warren Mission Sunday-school.

He was teller of the City National Bank from its institution until about five years ago, when he succeeded the late Mr. J. M. Myers as cashier, which position he held up to the time of death. During his illness Mr. Arnold was acting cashier. Mr. Gardner was the first teller the bank had.

A wife and four children, one son and three daughters survive him.

Deceased's father is still living at Plainfield, Mass. He is very feeble and is about 75 years old. One sister lives with the old gentleman. He had two brothers living, one in Westfield and one in Philadelphia.

Mr. Gardner was formerly from Brooklyn, and moved here about twenty years ago.

Since his first illness, Feb. 11, Mr. Gardner had been confined to his bed most of the time. About the first of June he rode down to the bank one day with Mr. Wentzell. Then he went to Ocean Grove and was taken worse about July 1st, and had since been in bed.

The funeral will take place in the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock.

In the City Court.

There were a number of cases in the city court this morning.

Michael O'Hara was arrested last night for being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $5.

Michael Welch and Patrick Keely were arraigned before the Judge, charged with fighting. Welch pleaded guilty, but the latter pleaded not guilty, and trial was set down for Thursday at nine a. m.

Edward Marshall, charged with being drunk and disorderly, pleaded not guilty. He will be tried Thursday morning.

On complaint of Mrs. Baden of East Fourth street, Sergeant Kiely yesterday arrested Frederick Baden for fighting and beating his better half. Judge Coddington fined him $10.

Not Our James Donahue.

James Donahue and John Wilson were arrested in Scotch Plains for holding up people and demanding money. They were brought to this city for safe keeping until this morning when they were taken before Judge Hoke at Penwood.

Mr. James Donahue of this city called at THE NEWS office this morning and requested us to state that it was not James Donahue of Plainfield that was arrested.

Died from Fast Driving.

A young man hired a horse at the Metropolitan Stables yesterday to go driving. He returned about eight o'clock last night and about ten o'clock the horse died. It had been driven too fast and became overheated.

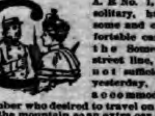
Fined Them White in Bed.

Two New York bicyclists, boarding at Kew Market were caught by Officer Vandervieg on Liberty street last evening for riding without a light. Judge Coddington was in bed, but he signed an order allowing them to go with a fine of one dollar each.

CROWDS TROLLEYING.

RUSHING FOR THE MOUNTAIN TOP TO GET COOL.

The Cars Insufficient to Meet the Demand—More Coming—What the Cars Earn.



A. B No. 1, the solitary, handsome and comfortable car on the Somerset street line, was not sufficient, yesterday, to accommodate the number who desired to travel on the cars to the mountain, so an extra car was added from the Front street branch, and those Plainfield trucks and boxes of Plainfield are differently made. The Plainfield trucks are flat at the bottom and those of North Plainfield concave. The object is to overcome the liability to wreck carriage wheels. The Plainfield car was running shortly after the tracks. It was said that the wheels and tracks did not correspond. Another Plainfield car was expected to be out properly balanced. New cars were expected to-day.

The Park branch has been on this route regularly is said to be the best paying line of the company, the carriages being placed at $25 daily. An expert has figured that the Park carries an average of two and a half fares per mile per hour for ten hours. The Somerset street car makes two miles per trip, and makes two trips per hour for 17 hours a day or 34 trips.

If this but ten hours for a day—the usual day's work—the revenue to pay would thus need to be only $5. But as the Park averages twenty days for one day's pay, the average earning, if only on the same basis, would be $17 per day.

It will thus be seen how exceedingly profitable the Somerset street car is likely to earn $20 per day.

Yet nobody has thought got any thing worth speaking of for the valuable franchise, giving the use of the streets by the company.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Stelle of Park avenue is home from the World's Fair.

The Rev. Milton Craft of Virginia is visiting at his home in this city.

Mr. John Everly of East Second street is spending his vacation at Rahway.

Mr. Garret Drier of West Front street started for the World's Fair this morning.

Mr. Charles Schermerhorn, accompanied by Mr. Tobin, arrived home yesterday from the South where he was taken so seriously ill as to necessitate some one going for him and bringing him home, as half of his family is now at THE EVENING NEWS. He stood the trip fairly well. As soon as his health will permit, he will go to a mountain resort and recuperate.

The 35 Plainfielders, who went to Milton Pike, last Sunday, to attend the Conference of the Seventh-day Baptist church, left this morning for Chicago to visit the World's Fair. Among the party are the Rev. Dr. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, Postmaster Pope and wife, President of the Board of Education George H. Babcock and wife, Capt. Frank Hubbard and wife, and J. H. Titsworth of the firm of Charles Potter & Co.

DR. BARNES'S HAPPINESS

HOW THE ELOQUENT DIVINE DEFINED IT LAST EVENING.

"He who Trusts in God and Serves Him will Find that Whatever Circumstances may be His They can Truly be Called Happiness"

APPT is that people that is in such a case; yes, happy is that people whose God is the Lord" was the text of a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Barnes at the Methodist Episcopal church last evening, on the subject "What is Happiness?" the question proposed to the public by THE NEWS. Notwithstanding the severity of the heat there was a good attendance.

The Doctor said in part, "It is always well to define words. Happiness, as used in seeking a definition it is wise to study their roots. Happiness has its root in 'hap,' which means 'fortune,' 'chance,' 'luck,' or 'good fortune.' The real meaning of the word, is therefore, the things which happen to us, the kind which comes to one, whether helpfully, or harmfully from outside himself. It does not mean the feeling the man, and joy, sorrow, etc.

So, some, after emphasizing the teaching of the word, that there is no such thing as luck, chance, etc. Every thing must originate in God, and there is a sufficient cause. All that happens to one must, therefore, be a result of an efficient cause.

Generally speaking, happiness is "That condition of one's surroundings as bring to him a feeling of pleasure than of pain."

David had prayed for his people that their temporal affairs might be prosperous, and the 'happenings of Providence should be bring peace and plenty. But, as though prompted by a higher truth he adds, "Happy is the people whose God is the Lord."

The teaching of the word is that the happenings of men are under Divine supervision, and more especially is this true of the Christian. God is constantly, and in all matters, interested in the welfare of his children. He does not bring to men all of their surroundings, but he is so directing them that they work out for the Christian good unfailingly. So the word teaches us to be hopeful under all happenings. It is not the old creed, For, for the heathen to whom we are to accredit the occurrences of our life, but as consistent Father. If trial happens, his sufficient grace also happens; if sorrow happens so does the consolation of God.

He who trusts in God and serves him will find that what ever circumstances may be his they present to him exalted happiness, as they will afford him a great preponderance of pleasure and profit, until they shall develop into the "exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

AMONG THE WHEELMEN.

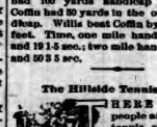
A Five Mile Handicap Road Race Next Saturday.

On Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, there will be a 5-mile handicap road race in North Plainfield for boys between the ages of 12 and 15.

It possible the tie between James Willis and George Coffin for time prize in the Plainfield Lyceum Cyclers 25-mile race will be raced off next Saturday.

At the bicycle races at Waverly Saturday, James Willis of Westfield won the one and two mile handicap races. Willis had 100 yards handicap and George Coffin had 50 yards in the one-mile handicap. Willis beat Coffin by about three feet. Time, one mile handicap, 2 min. and 19 1-5 sec.; two mile handicap, 4 min. and 50 3-5 sec.

The Hillside Tennis Club.



THERE were many people at the Hillside tennis club grounds on Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon. The four courts were occupied all the afternoon, more players being present than could conveniently occupy them. There was no regular tournament and many players carried on the game.

Mr. Albert Simmonds, who is just back from the United States tournament at Newport was one of the visitors during the afternoon and did some good playing.

The next club tournament will be held on Labor Day.

There will be tea on Saturday, September 2d.

Among those present Saturday afternoon were: Messrs. Albert Simmonds, Fred Walz, Wadsworth, J. H. P. Wheeler, H. Simmonds, S. West, J. Hurrell, L. Walz, A. Case H. West, Medlock, Morris, Dameral, Carl Walz, Lee Simmonds, H. Elder, Howard Beebe, Irving West, F. Hunter, Dorman.

To Save Travel for the Central.

The Commissioners appointed to investigate the value of, and condemn Rocky Grove met yesterday at Perth Amboy.

The Commission was appointed at the instance of the Central Railroad, which intends to build a branch connecting Perth Amboy with the main line at Bound Brook, which will shorten the route from the shore to Philadelphia. The plan as proposed is to build their tracks on piling along the shore front of Florida Grove, which would effectually close it as an excursion resort. The Central tracks now form the chord of a triangle, with Elizabethport at one point, and Perth Amboy and Bound Brook at the other points. The proposed route would save the railroad about twenty-two miles of travel.

—The Crescents were beaten at Hackensack Saturday by the Oritanis by the score of 8 to 6.

—The case of Miller vs. Schoonmaker was adjourned to day by Justice Mosher to September 11.

—The Crescent Juniors defeated the Rheaume team Saturday in a game of ball by the score of 13 to 4.

—There will be a handicap running race at the Crescent Oval Labor Day morning. Heckman will be scratch man.

—A carriage driven by Frank Linke caught in the frog of the street-car tracks in front of the Somerset street school yesterday afternoon. One of the back wheels was wrenched off.

—At two o'clock yesterday morning one of the guests at Rotel Grenada was awakened by water trinkling in his face. Investigation showed that some one had left the water turned on which flowed the tank, running through the flooring and into his room.

The Weather.

On Tuesday fair to partly cloudy, slightly cooler weather will probably prevail, preceded by rain on the coasts of this section and northerly winds, with strong northeasterly winds or gales off the coasts of Long Island and New Jersey, followed by clearing; and on Wednesday clear, warmer weather.

Runaway This Afternoon.

About half past two this afternoon, a horse attached to a buggy in which Messrs. Charles Wood and Willie Dayton were seated, ran away on Watchung avenue. Both young men were thrown out. The horse was caught in Bleiser's alley. Neither was hurt and no damage was done.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A Cyclone Coming.

New York, Aug. 28. (Special)—The Washington authorities are inclined to believe that the approaching storm will move inland over the lake region and if it does New York will entertain a hurricane for several days, whereas if, it shoots northward along the coast it will affect only slightly or not at all.

Amusements.

(Contributed.)

"Hoss and Hoss" is one of the drawing cards of the theatrical season. The reason for this, it is said, is because Manager W. G. Smythe keeps fully abreast of the times and is continually adding new material to what has always been a strictly first class comedy. Willie Collier, the bright particular star of this organization is among the best of America's comedians. He has always been a legitimate, his methods original and his work is true to life. In addition to this he has invariably been surrounded by a company of sterling comedians, singers and dancers, and the public feel sure that whenever he appears, it will get its money's worth. The announcement is made that "Hoss & Hoss will be produced at Music Hall next Thursday night and the indications all will point to a most successful engagement. The company this season is said to be stronger than ever, and will include among others Sherman Wade, Jas. B. Gentry, Thomas D. Daly, J. R. Marcuse, Jr., Miss Ida Conquest, Helena Collier, Louise Allen Collier, Maude Helen Reimer, Mae Davenport, together with many others.

Caught in the Act.

James Watson, a first-class tramp hailing from Brooklyn, was caught at one o'clock Sunday morning by Marshal Pangborn as he was entering the home of Henry Wedemeyer of 215 Somerset street. His mode of entrance was by the cellar window of the rear part, and will include among others Sherman Wade, Jas. B. Gentry, Thomas D. Daly, J. R. Marcuse, Jr., Miss Ida Conquest, Helena Collier, Louise Allen Collier, Maude Helen Reimer, Mae Davenport, together with many others.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Peoria and Madison Streets.

It is an outrage on the American nation and not to be borne if the pagans mistreat our missionaries in Turkey and China. By all means let congress take it up and make war if necessary, so that only our missionaries be avenged and our national honor satisfied.

But meantime, how about the corner of Peoria and Madison streets, Chicago? A woman evangelist, Mrs. Rice, a devoted and eloquent Christian lady, has been trying to hold open air meetings there. She said nothing incendiary, nothing unlawful. She was only preaching the sweet, thrilling old gospel, bringing the good tidings of Christianity to those who chose to listen. Two thousand people gathered about.

This is what happened, according to report of the Chicago Tribune:

> She had been talking only a few moments when certain tough characters could be seen moving to the center of the crowd, where Mrs. Rice was preaching. At first they contented themselves by jeering her remarks and using the most obscene and profane language. Then some one in the crowd threw a stick or stone which struck the woman in the back, and the next moment there was a perfect shower of decayed fruit, sticks and stones.
> Mrs. Rice asked that the collection be taken. While this was being done the crowd quieted down, but no sooner was it finished and the money handed to the preacher than some one in the crowd shouted, "We want that collection."
>
> As if the roughs and toughs had been waiting for a signal the Switchmen's Union Band from all sides of the chair upon which Mrs. Rice was standing.
> Realizing that further attempt to conduct the religious services would be impossible, Mrs. Rice sought to dismiss the meeting and asked the crowd to join in singing the doxology. The tough element present tried to drown the good old tune by singing ribald songs at the top of their voices. They realized that the services were about to close and that their "fun" was over. Then they pushed forward until they crowded her from her position on a small box.
> The defenseless woman was knocked down and kicked while lying on the ground. She was badly bruised and seriously injured. She was carried to a store on the corner and medical assistance summoned. No arrests were made, as the persons who were directly responsible for the outrage could not be apprehended.

The Circus End of the Capitol.

The eyes of their countrymen are on the senators at Washington. In ordinary times the dullest spot in this Union is the United States supreme court room in the capitol, and the next dullest is the United States senate. If there is any undignified, frisky bobbing around and tendency to a free fight, it is usually found in the house, whose members are supposed to be younger and less wise and which does not have a reputation for dignity to maintain. One would as soon expect want of solemnity at a funeral as in the senate.

Yet now the tables are turned. The fun is in the senate. The house is sure of itself and knows how it is going to vote in any case. But in the erstwhile dignified wing former chums and comrades are at daggers drawn and ready to eat each other alive over the silver question. Party lines are so confused that in some cases it is matter of doubt whether they will ever be found again. The gobbling declares there are no such things as parties, that they have degenerated and demoralized the currency of the whole country. The silverite retorts that the people of his section would just like to get hold of some silver dollars, and they would hoard them away as their most precious treasure. Then the gold opposition sneers a large sneer, and the fight goes on.

The hard work it has been to keep even an outward semblance of peace only the Almighty and the members of the "steering committee" know. Really, old boys, remember the British parliament a few weeks ago and take warning.

It is all very well to laugh to scorn the rainmakers and the airship projectors. Anybody can do that. But nothing is more certain than that the next century will see both air navigation and rain production accomplished facts. Busy schemers and dreamers tried their hands for centuries on every great invention before it became practicable. Every gain to the race represents not so much the genius of one or two men as the sum of the efforts of all the brave cranks who toiled during their lives to accomplish the task and then died without seeing their dream realized. It may be that the rain the inventors are looking for will come out of the ground instead of from the clouds and that our forests, fields and gardens will be refreshed at will through a perfect and universal method of irrigation, perhaps from reservoirs that catch the water when it is plenty and hold it till it is scarce, but the day will surely come when mankind will know how to perfect itself through the resources of science.

While 2,000 men were struggling and fighting to get 40 places to dig sewers in Denver recently, Minnesota farmers were sending in cry for laborers across the Union. There were serious fears that help enough could not be secured to save the wheat crop. At the same time, however, it is asserted that Minnesota is overrun with tramps and unemployed men who stroll from place to place and feed on the rural districts. They will not work because the wages are too low. These fellows ought to be tied up and whipped.

Chicago always did soar in her own mind, but now a Chicago man believes he has built a balloon machine which will enable him to soar in the clouds. It is 200 feet long, of tubular form, and is propelled by wheels which are expected to "grip" the air. Next!

IDENTIFYING VICTIMS.

Mangled Bodies From the Long Island Wreck Recognized.

TRYING TO PLACE THE BLAME.

The Danger Signal Found Set and the Brakes and Shutoff of the Engine as the Engineer Had Said They Were—Some One Made a Murderous Blunder.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., Aug. 28.—There still remain in the morgue at Newtown the bodies of several mangled victims of the accident to the Rockaway Beach train on the Long Island railroad as yet unrecognized.

Both the morgue in Newtown and the hospital in Long Island City have been besieged by anxious seekers after the missing members of their families. The scenes as some of the mangled bodies were recognized were a heart rending, women fainting and men falling on their knees to weep.

Fully 200 persons did not find those they sought among the dead or wounded and went away with intense relief, in sharp contrast with those who found loved ones dead and mangled.

At the scene of the accident wrecking trains and a big force of railroad employes have been working to obliterate the painful evidences of the disaster. The three smashed cars were piled up and burned, the twisted rails and broken switches were repaired and the blood pools hidden under shovelfuls of sand.

The Blame Not Fixed.

General Manager E. R. Reynolds and Superintendent W. H. Blood state that the cause of the accident is still unknown; that it is a question of veracity between Tower Switchman Hall and Engineer Concrite of the Rockaway train. The latter had reported that a heavy fog prevailed at the time, which was true. He declared that signals were set at safety, by-meeting a clear road, and he went ahead without reducing speed.

Suddenly Fireman Robert Price, his companion, exclaimed, "My God, there is a train ahead!" Looking ahead he saw through the mist the two red lights that always hang at the rear end of a train, and he declares that he immediately reversed his engine and put on the steam brakes. Then he and Fireman Price jumped for their lives.

When the wrecked engine was examined in the morning his statement as to the reversed lever and steam brakes was found to be true. The only remaining question was as to whether he or Nutt was right about the danger signal.

In the morning it was set at danger, and Nutt insisted that it had remained so ever since he set it to warn Engineer Concrite. Manager Reynolds and Superintendent Blood took all these statements and will hold a rigid investigation Monday.

George Hannet, 81 Webster avenue, Long Island City.

James Coughlin, brakeman, Manhattan Beach train, 48 Fifth street, Long Island City.

How It Happened.

The accident happened at half an hour after midnight. It was over an hour before any news of it reached any outside place. It came by a messenger, who walked into Long Island City. The railroad company were standing in cry for laborers across the Union. There were serious fears that help enough could not be secured to save the wheat crop. At the same time, however, it is asserted that Minnesota is overrun with tramps and unemployed men who stroll from place to place and feed on the rural districts. They will not work because the wages are too low. These fellows ought to be tied up and whipped.

smokestack was carried away, and its huge boiler resembled a pin cushion from the timbers of the wrecked cars sticking in it. Upon these timbers were human beings impaled, some dead and others gasping their last. High upon the top lay the dead body of a man, yet unidentified. Upon one of the timbers was impaled the body of Mrs. Oscar Dietzel. Upon another was the body of Sidney Weinstein, a boy 13 years old.

The Harlem Road Accident.

BREWSTERS, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The following is a corrected list of the killed and injured in the head on collision near Dykemans on the Harlem road. The killed are:

Daniel Ponetiers, engineer of train No. 39.

William Elliott, engineer of train No. 13; William Beel, fireman of train No. 13; Nellie Reid, aged 19, of this place.

The injured were: J. A. Banks, trainmaster, scalded, Dutch Flat, nebraska; Joseph Kospiski; scalp wound and prostration. James Finegan, baggage master; badly bruised.

FASTED SEVENTY-SIX DAYS.

A Stubborn Sailor Starved Himself For a Hunger Strike.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Antonio Bastchich died in a seaman's boarding house after having fasted for 76 days. During that time he refused to swallow his lips. Just before he died he called for food, but it was too late. He had only taken a few mouthfuls when the end came. The coroner and a big force of detectives say that death was caused by "general debility due to voluntary starvation."

Bachelich was a sailor and when in this city made his home with Lucas Bacnich.

On Sunday, June 11, when he went to the breakfast table there was neither knife, fork nor spoon at his plate. He felt himself insulted at this seeming neglect and left the table, refusing to eat, and despite the efforts of those interested in him refused to partake of any kind of food until he finally surprised those at his bedside by asking for food, and a meal was quickly brought to him. He took a little beef tea, but before he finished it fell back in the arms of an old shipmate dead.

He was a stalwart man, weighing over 190 pounds when he began his fast. Only his frame remained when he died.

BURGLARS IN A CHURCH.

Besieged by Angry Farmers, Who Will Starve Them Out.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 28.—Eight men who were surprised while burglarizing the farmhouse of William Hardesh in McCandless township are held prisoners in an old stone church near Sample Station by armed farmers, who surround the building. The burglars are also armed and have refused to surrender. The men are desperate and say they will shoot down any of the besieging party attempting to enter the church.

The siege has lasted since 10 o'clock Saturday night, and the farmers have decided to starve the robbers out. Burglaries have been of frequent occurrence in McCandless township of late, and the farmers organized to rid the county of the thieves, who are believed to be members of the notorious Neff gang, which has terrorized the farmers in the northern part of Alleghany county for years.

Charged With a Foul Conspiracy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—In the bill for divorce filed in the superior court by Mrs. Bella H. Hassett against William E. Hassett of this city some most astonishing charges are made. It is alleged, and the allegations are supported by written evidence, that Hassett conspired with the wife of a wealthy farmer named Stone, now living near Nashua, Ia., to murder Stone, get a divorce from his own wife and then marry the widow of Stone, who was more than ready to put her own husband out of the way.

Walcott Has a Silver Speech.

Senator Walcott has also announced his intention of addressing the senate on Wednesday in favor of free coinage of silver, and he is sure of a large audience on the floor and in the galleries.

The annual bank extension bill is likely to be taken up at the first opportunity and pushed as rapidly as possible. It may be that a vote can be reached on the Cockrell amendment relative to the deposit of bonds in the treasury early in the week, but there still remains the formidable Butler amendment repealing the state bank tax. If this threatens to consume an undue amount of time, it is probable that the bill will be sidetracked in order to allow Mr. Voorhees to forward discussion and action upon the repeal bill which came from the house.

This result may be hastened if the precept plan of the silver men takes shape—namely, that instead of an attack to the bank bill an amendment providing for free silver coinage.

The Wilson bill is expected to reach the senate not later than Tuesday. It will be promptly referred to the finance committee, and from that time on the committee will hold daily meetings until it is prepared to make a report to the senate.

It is within the bounds of possibility that some senator may create a turmoil at some stage by endeavoring to call up the Peffer resolution directed at the New York banks, but this can be done only by a majority vote.

VOTING IN THE HOUSE.

After Fourteen Days of Discussion the Roll Is Called.

FIXING THE SHERMAN LAW'S FATE.

When the Momentous Question of Repeal Is Settled, the House Programme Is Uncertain—There Will Be Still More Oratory In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—When the house of representatives met at noon today, a sea of faces in the galleries looked down upon the crowded floor, for almost every member was in his seat. Action on the Wilson repeal bill was about to begin.

According to the previously arranged programme the house began voting on the several propositions included within the order adopted 15 days ago for the consideration and disposal of the silver purchase question. The vote was to be taken first upon the proposition to provide free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. This failing, other votes were to be had upon 16 to 1 voted upon. Then the house was to be given an opportunity to say whether or not it would restore the Bland-Allison act of 1878.

All these are connected with the repeal of the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman law of 1890. That is doomed in any event. Finally, all these having failed, assuming that they would fail to secure a majority of the votes cast, the house would then take the naked issue of unconditional repeal.

Future Programme Uncertain.

On Tuesday the report of the committee on rules recommending the code for the government of the Fifty-third congress will be taken up, and, it is believed, adopted without much delay. There is no intention manifest at this time to antagonize the committee's recommendations, and after explanation of the effect of the proposed changes by Mr. Catchings and probably some further observations by Messrs. Reed and Burrows, the minority of the committee, a vote is expected.

After the rules have been adopted the programme for the house is fiscellish. A recess for three days may be taken, which will give members and employes an opportunity to recover from the unusual and exhaustive strain of the immediately recess, or the house may determine to continue in session that members may present the bills already prepared and waiting to be introduced, but whether at once or later in the week, a bill day will be provided. A small avalanche is expected of measures which failed to secure favorable action in previous congress, establishing at once calendars of considerable magnitude and giving the new committees plenty of material for examination and report.

In the senate the week begins tamely with the Mantle case in the foreground. It had been agreed that a vote shall be taken at 2 o'clock today upon the pending motion of Senator Vance to lay on the table Mr. Manderson's motion to reconsider the vote by which the senate declared that Mr. Mantle was not entitled to a seat in the body. There has been some expectation that Senator Morgan, who was absent when the vote was taken, would be in his seat, and there is an intimation that there has been a change in the views of some of the senators who voted against Mr. Mantle's claim, for all his friends are confident that the decision of the senate will be reversed.

Senator Gordon is set down for a speech on the 4th of bill Tuesday, and it may be that he will take occasion to further expound his theory of financial relief based upon the temporary suspension of the state bank tax.

Walcott Has a Silver Speech.

Senator Walcott has also announced his intention of addressing the senate on Wednesday in favor of free coinage of silver, and he is sure of a large audience on the floor and in the galleries.

The annual bank extension bill is likely to be taken up at the first opportunity and pushed as rapidly as possible. It may be that a vote can be reached on the Cockrell amendment relative to the deposit of bonds in the treasury early in the week, but there still remains the formidable Butler amendment repealing the state bank tax. If this threatens to consume an undue amount of time, it is probable that the bill will be sidetracked in order to allow Mr. Voorhees to forward discussion and action upon the repeal bill which came from the house.

This result may be hastened if the precept plan of the silver men takes shape—namely, that instead of an attack to the bank bill an amendment providing for free silver coinage.

The Wilson bill is expected to reach the senate not later than Tuesday. It will be promptly referred to the finance committee, and from that time on the committee will hold daily meetings until it is prepared to make a report to the senate.

A MANIAC'S DEED.

Cut a Stranger's Throat With a Razor and Then Killed Himself.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 28.—A double tragedy occurred here. One victim was Charles H. Connors, aged 30 years, and the other Andrew Gibson, aged about 45 years. Gibson cut Connors' throat with a razor and afterward ran naked through the fields for 30 minutes, slashing and tearing his own throat until he inflicted wounds from which he died. Connors was going toward his home with a companion when they heard cries "Murder!" coming from a window in a four story house in Healy street. Connors left his companion and ran up stairs toward the place from which the cries were coming.

At the head of the stairs he was met by Gibson, who was flourishing a razor. Before Connors could learn what was the difficulty Gibson made a slash at his throat and cut a gash 6½ inches in length. Connors ran down stairs, crossed the street and ran into John Doyle's restaurant, where he fell upon the floor and expired in about 15 minutes without making any intelligible statement.

Meanwhile Gibson, clad only in his night shirt, had run into the street and crossed over into some lots near the baseball grounds, yelling like a maniac. He was flourishing a razor about his head and at times drawing it across his throat. He was disarmed and taken to the City hospital. Gibson talked rationally and said he thought Connors was attempting to kill him. Mrs. Gibson says that her husband was all right until he awoke and began shoving about the room. She finally became frightened and ran to the window and called for help. It is thought that he was partially out of his head.

HER PRAYER ANSWERED.

A Woman Asked That the Board of Excise Commissioners Be Paralyzed.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Samuel W. Wells, secretary of the board of excise commissioners of Cumberland county, N. J., is dead. The commissioners have the power of issuing liquor licenses, and they have been acted on all sides, especially by the women, to refuse to give licenses. On Aug. 15 at Bridgeton, the Woman's Christian Temperance union met in the Central M. E. church and prayed that the excise board might not issue any more licenses.

One enthusiastic woman, the wife of Grocer Townsend, prayed that God would paralyze the board and remove its members before they granted any more licenses. At Pitman Grove camp meeting the next day in a revival the woman repeated her prayer. The board continued its hearing of applicants and intended to wind up its work on Sept. 1.

Wells, the secretary, had voted for a number of licenses. On Saturday it seemed as if Mrs. Townsend's prayer had been answered. Wells was found in his office paralyzed. He died Sunday. The woman heard the news of Townsend's death and was horrified. The other members of the board do not know whether to grant more licenses or not.

Josiah Quincy Resigns.

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—Josiah Quincy has mailed a letter to President Cleveland in which he tendered his resignation of the office of assistant secretary of state. Mr. Quincy's letter to President Cleveland set forth in the first place the exigencies of the Bay state campaign. Mr. Quincy then declares that on his loyalty, his sense of what is right, his natural pugnacity and his belief that the best interests of the Democratic party in Massachusetts will be served by his taking the chairmanship of its state committee lead him to this decision.

War Between Bankers.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 28.—Several St. Louis banks have received a letter from the First National bank of Chicago, which is accepted as a declaration of war between that western metropolis and New York. It comes in the form of an explanation why Chicago cannot accept drafts on New York and other eastern points and credit them at par. The most cogent reason is that money in New York now is at a premium.

A Veteran Theatrical Manager Dead.

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 28.—Angelo Torriani, Sr., of this city, died suddenly at his summer house at Oceanic of heart failure. Mr. Torriani came to this country in 1848 with an opera company in which were the father and mother of Adelina Patti. The latter was with the company and was then about 3 years of age.

Amateur Train Robbers.

STILLWATER, Minn., Aug. 28.—A train on the Northern Pacific was held up by train robbers 15 miles west of here. There were five men in the gang, and they were apparently amateurs, as they only secured $60 out of $5,000 which was in the express car, the messenger hiding the balance and other valuables.

Think the Johnson Is Lost.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Skippers of fishing craft who came through the cyclone that struck the neighborhood on Thursday are inclined to think that the Ella M. Johnson is lost. She is the only smack of the Jersey fleet of about 75 vessels unaccounted for.

The Spree Cholera Infected.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—The occurrence of two cases of cholera at Nordhaiin on the canal fed by the Spree leaves little doubt that the river is infected. The authorities have therefore ordered the closing of all the river baths.

No Fire Alarm System, High Insurance.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The city having failed to procure a fire alarm system, the Lumbermen's Association of New York has increased the rates of insurance 20 per cent.

An Old Lady's Fatal Fall.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Yager of 922 Jerolemon avenue fell from a third story window and was instantly killed. She was 90 years of age.

Captain Spencer Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Captain J. B. Spencer, commander of the American line steamship Illinois, died at the Pennsylvania hospital of peritonitis.

Chicago's Day at the Fair.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—The city authorities have decided to make Chicago day at the fair Oct. 9—the anniversary of the great fire.

No Yellow Fever In Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 28.—The report that yellow fever existed in Memphis is without the slightest foundation.

Chicago's Unemployed Orderly.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—On the lake front the unemployed held a quiet, orderly meeting.

Cholera Deaths In Naples.

ROME, Aug. 28.—There were eight deaths from cholera in Naples.

CLOSED HIS LAST DEAL.

"Old Hutch," the Famous Speculator, Utterly Ruined.

FORCED AT LAST TO SELL HIS SEAT

His Recent Deal In Wheat Left Him Completely Bankrupt—In His Day He Has Been Worth $10,000,000.—An Eccentric Character.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Benjamin Peters Hutchinson, the greatest operator ever known on the Chicago board of trade, has probably ended his career as a speculator forever. Over two years ago he failed and since then has not figured "on 'Change" to any great extent. He has now sold his certificate of membership on the board, and this may be called the last act of his speculative career. Only twice since he returned from New York has he appeared on the floor of the Exchange. When the Cudahy-Fairbank-Wright deal collapsed, the old man was an interested speculator.

A few days ago he made a deal in wheat. He got on the long side of the market, and there were calls for margins. To meet them he was obliged to sell his certificate of membership for about $900. It was bought by Armour & Co. for one of the employees of the firm. With the money thus obtained the once great plunger made his margins good. But it took the last of his collateral to do it.

Once Worth Ten Millions.

Five years ago Mr. Hutchinson was reported to be worth anywhere from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000—all made in speculation.

He has always been peculiar in his habits and spent most of his time when not on the floor of the Exchange in a small room on the upper floor of the board of trade building. Here he slept and cooked his meals. After he returned from New York he resumed this life instead of going to the beautiful residence of his son, Charles L. Hutchinson, down on Prairie avenue, where he might have been comfortable. Why he chooses to live apart from his family is a secret known only to those most interested. Both Mr. Hutchinson and his son refuse to discuss the question.

Young Mr. Hutchinson is too busy with his duties as president of the Corn Exchange bank, as receiver for Cudahy and in many other ways to have much time for the discussion of such questions say way, even if he were so inclined. He is of a different stamp from his father. He does not speculate. He saves. The consequence is that while his father had to sell his board of trade membership to help him out in a pleasure deal young Hutchinson is investing in good paying properties. It was the son who paid the fine of old speculator's failure, April 28, 1891, that his son received the news calmly, because he had never approved of speculation as a means of livelihood.

The Fatefol Deal.

The deal which brought ruin was one in which Mr. Hutchinson had a line of 3,000,000 or 2,000,000 bushels of July corn bought up at 69 cents. A portion of this was closed out at 62 cents.

When the crash came, the old gentleman was too much broken down in spirits to face the inevitable. He boarded a train and went down into Indiana and did not return for five days. During that time all the trades were closed out and differences amounting to $100,000 were made good by his son. Since Jan. 1, 1891, "Old Hutch" had lost $1,000,000 or $2,000,000, all that was left of his large fortune.

When he came back, he was cordially received, but he felt the difference between being the greatest plunger on the board and being a ruined man too keenly to stay here.

He went to New York, where his career is well known. But he was not satisfied there. And when he came back here he was not satisfied with the experience he had gained in former years on the board. He felt the old desire to speculate. He did and lost the right to do so on the floor hereafter. Nowadays he may be seen around the haunts of the hangers on of the board of trade men talking with the "pikers."

Mr. Hutchinson is a New England Yankee. He was born in Lynn, Mass. As he is now far on in living while he was still young, it is not remarkable that he should have learned to make shoes.

Irving's Workmen Held.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Five members of the Henry Irving theatrical troupe, which arrived yesterday from Southampton, were detained by the government inspector under the alien contract law. They were G. Biggs, Master Gus Man, a first cabin passenger, and George Alexander, Henry Powell and William Templeton, calcium light men, second cabin passengers.

Refuse to Pay Mrs. Shaun.

TRENTON, Aug. 28.—Counsel for Mrs. Mattie C. Shaun of Princeton, who was recently tried for poisoning her son and acquitted, has received notice to the effect that the Manhattan Life Insurance company refuses to pay the insurance on her son's life. There are two policies, amounting together to $2,000.

Mutual Life Abandons Spain.

MADRID, Aug. 28.—The Mutual Life Insurance company of New York is winding up its business in Spain because the government has imposed heavy taxes and burdensome restrictions as regards investment of funds on all foreign insurance associations.

Brunswick's Appeal For Help.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 28.—The necessity for immediate relief for the needy who were left without means of livelihood is urgent. Contributions have been received from various cities and towns, but there is yet much distress.

The Oyster Crop Is All Right.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 28.—Oystermen have just completed the examination of the beds in this vicinity and find a very promising crop—larger than usual. It was thought that the entire crop was a loss.

A Storm Victim Identified.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 28.—The body of the unknown steward of the schooner Mary E. Tilley, lashed to the rigging Sunday, was identified as Walter Kenney, Pontoon of New York.

Died In Her Stateroom.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 28.—An unknown woman died in an apartment fit on board the steamer C. H. Northam on its way from New York to this city.

Oklahoma Wants to Be a State.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., Aug. 28.—The statehood executive committee called a mass statehood convention for Purcell on Sept. 30.

Bishop of Killaloe Dead.

DUBLIN, Aug. 28.—The Right Rev. William Bennett Chester, Protestant bishop of Killaloe, died here.

BULLETLIKE HAILSTONES.

Some Weighed a Quarter of a Pound, and Rome Was Fiercely Pelted.

ROME, N. Y., Aug. 28.—This city was visited by a violent electric storm. Rain fell in torrents, accompanied by hailstones of enormous size. The most of them were tomato shaped, and many of them weighed a quarter of a pound each. In striking the flagging they popped like pistols. Every unprotected skylight in the city was broken, stores were flooded and goods damaged. Plate glass half an inch thick was broken. Tin roofs were broken and set leaking. All the greenhouses in the city were destroyed and the plants and flowers badly damaged. Fruit trees were stripped and melons destroyed. A farmhouse on the outskirts of the city was struck by lightning and burned.

A canal driver in the employ of James Nally of Oswego was struck on his head with a hailstone, which cut through the woolen hat that he wore and made a bad wound in his head. The roof of the new Kingsley memorial chapel, erected at a great cost, was badly damaged. Several costly cathedral glass windows in St. Mary's church were destroyed. The hail lasted about 10 minutes.

Two miles south of here no rain or hail fell. It is not thought that the great hop growing region was visited. To the north and west the storm had a wider range, and a great deal of damage was done. The barn of a farmer named Schram, living four miles from here, was set on fire by lightning and burned with its contents, which included a horse, two colts and a cow.

TERSELY TOLD ITEMS.

The Russians are preparing to seize Herat.

The New England railroad is to reduce salaries.

Fred Ferris, a convict, has escaped from Auburn prison.

Prince Yobaritz, heir to the throne of Japan, is at the World's fair.

Jacob Bock of Chambersburg, Pa., killed himself because he lost his pension.

Hon. John T. Morizan, one of the board of the Behring sea arbitrators, has returned home.

In a riot of the unemployed at Chicago three policemen and several rioters were injured.

Twelve Mexican bandits tortured and murdered a white man while robbing him at Vanhorn, Tex.

Three families who have been camping on an island eight miles from Norwalk, Conn., have not been heard from since the storm.

The Epworth League Color Line.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 28.—President W. D. Caldwell of the Memphis Epworth league received a telegram from the proprietor of the Hotel Endeavor at Chicago stating that he did not entertain negroes and offering to furnish accommodations for the members of the league of union who visit the World's fair next week. The offer was accepted. The feeling against the Hotel Epworth is high and the action of delegates of Memphis in boycotting it will be indorsed by all the leagues in the south. Unless the northern leagues throw the colored brother overboard the southerners will undoubtedly secede.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

FAMOUS DOGS.

The Huge and Intelligent St. Bernards and Their Noble Work.

Our readers have all heard of the St. Bernard dogs which are kept by the monks of the mountains to rescue travelers who may be lost in the snow. They are great, strong fellows, with warm coats, and they know just what they are expected to do. All St. Bernard dogs are descended from those kept by the good monks of St. Bernard hospice. The stories of their wonderful deeds would fill a large volume.

A FINE ST. BERNARD.

St. Bernard is the name of a pass in the Alps mountains. At the highest point, more than a mile and a half high, the monks built a hospice, or hotel, about a thousand years ago, and monks have lived there ever since for the purpose of giving shelter and food to travelers who pass that way.

Being at such a height, it is very cold, a lake near by being frozen over during nine months in the year. The snow falls sometimes to the depth of 40 feet and of course makes the path impassable. In the blinding snowstorms the traveler who fails to reach the hotel before night soon finds himself exhausted, and benumbed with the cold he lies down to die.

Now comes the work of the dogs. Being strong creatures, with thick, shaggy coats, and withal being used to the cold, they do not suffer like other breeds. The monks tie a warm blanket on each one's back and send him out to look for belated travelers. If he finds one, almost covered perhaps with snow, he will dig him out and try to revive him. If he succeeds, the man will take a drink from the bottle of stimulant tied to the dog's neck, and the dog will lead him to the monks' house. If the man does not quickly revive, the dog will run back and bring some of the monks to his aid. Our picture is that of a fine full grown St. Bernard.

A Lucky Boy.

Some boys have a great deal of luck. Probably the luckiest boy in the world ever knew was the little Maidstone (England) boy, who had a very narrow escape while flying his kite some five or six years ago. Not looking where he was going, he stepped backward and fell into a quarry 40 feet deep, to the horror of some persons walking near. The string of the kite, however, being fastened round his wrist, the boy was lowered gently into the pit, the kite acting as a parachute, and instead of being dashed to pieces he escaped unhurt. Perhaps this means that he is destined to make his mark in the world. The great Lord Clive, when a youth, tried three times to shoot himself, but the pistol missed fire each time.

The Hippopotamus.

This is a big word, and it is the name of a big animal. It lives in Africa and is always found in the water or near it, and it is sometimes called the river horse. It has an enormous mouth, and each tooth weighs from five to eight pounds. The teeth are the best kind of ivory, and a single tooth is worth from $20 to $40.

Though so large and powerful, the hippopotamus is quite harmless, unless it becomes enraged. As it eats nothing, however, but grass, roots and other vegetables, it does an immense amount of mischief to the gardens of the natives. It is hunted for its flesh, which is valued as food, as well as for its teeth, and its skin, which makes a very strong leather.

A Story For Little People.

It was a nice large nursery, and at a little table on one side sat Willy, and at a little table on the other side sat Lily, while not far from them sat nurse in her rocking chair knitting socks for her two children. On each table there were four plates and a cup and saucer and a small jug of milk. On the plates were half an orange, half a currant bun and half an apple.

"KISS AND BE FRIENDS."

"And now," said nurse to the children, "you can have your feast, and as you have both exactly the same on your plates there will be no quarrelling."

Willy began to peel his orange, and then he put it down. Lily poured some milk into her cup and drank a very little, and then pushed the cup away.

"Is it not good?" asked nurse.

Willy took a bite of his piece of orange, and Lily tried to do the same, but instead of eating it she began to cry, and when Willy heard her he began to cry too.

"Why, what is the matter?" said nurse.

"Should we never play together again?" sobbed Willy. "Shall we always have to eat by ourselves?" sobbed Lily. "Yes" said the nurse, "as long as you quarrel you must be kept away from each other." "I will not quarrel again," said Willy.

"I will not quarrel," said Lily.

"Kiss and be friends," said Willy, jumping up.

THE HOUSEHOLD

FINE EMBROIDERIES.

The Exhibit by American Women at the World's Fair.

The following agreeable comments upon the needlework of American women, as shown at Chicago, occur in The Decorator and Furnisher:

The American has a greater freedom in following out her own fancies and original designs than the English woman or the Frenchwoman. In grace her work resembles that of the latter. Yet she is less hampered by the traditions of the Louises and of the renaissance. She is given to conventionalizing natural forms, such as the rose, the maidenhair fern, even the native grace of our maize, rather than the airiness of the rococo period or the ribbon outlines and cupids of an earlier date. In other words, the American woman is less hampered by the traditions than the women of older nations. She has the aerial delicacy of a country of sunshine and brightness.

In linens the American section of the Woman's building shows the usual delicate and graceful forms and light elegance that characterize our country women.

Instead of ruling imported linens many of the ladies of Chicago now use an "Acadian cloth" or "cajun" woven by the descendants of the Acadians in New Orleans and other parts of the southland. It is of coarse hand woven and is not only extremely durable, but faultless. It comes in shades of pale blue and buff and is a delightful material for the needle.

Tablecloths of dark blue linen are wrought with white thread in short stitch or in satin stitch after other designs in silk, floselle in renaissance patterns. In fact, these designs seem to have a rejuvenescence, judging by the displays in foreign exhibits, whether seen in the Woman's building or elsewhere. White on white is seldom found in these sections. Among Irish embroideries are many of the finest tablecloths. Let stand two hours before serving.

Macaroon Ice Cream.

Pulverize 4 ounces of macaroons, heat a pint each of milk and cream to the boiling point, then remove from the fire and stir in a half pound of granulated sugar until dissolved. When cold, freeze, and when quite stiff stir in the pulverized macaroons. Let stand two hours before serving.

Hints From Good Housekeeping.

The roots and tough stalks of celery chopped fine and grated are invaluable for soups and dressings.

A little of the grated rind of the fruit is much more delicate for flavoring lemon than the extract.

Orange peel dried and grated makes a fine yellow powder that is delicious for flavoring cakes and puddings.

Pour boiling water over raisins and let them stand a moment before seeding. It lessens the labor wonderfully.

In using melted chocolate in cooking first mix with it a part of the sugar before adding it to the other ingredients.

In making sauces that are thickened with flour mix the flour and sugar thoroughly before adding the boiling water, to prevent lumping.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, etc., with some flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Regal Tooth Powder, the best English prepared chalk, the finest English Castile soap, delicately flavored. Your dentist will tell you these substances are perfectly harmless and accomplish all claims to be expected from a tooth powder. A full two-ounce package of this unique article, which is usually sold for 25c. under other names, but which we retail for ten cents, will be given with each one dollar purchase and we feel sure that our customers will appreciate this offer, but some will say, "We never use a tooth powder." Those who do use it, however, can be distinguished from those who don't, as the rose can be distinguished from the dandelion. This will seem cruel to some, but truth is to be spoken always. The "Regal" is being received everywhere, and judges compliment us with their emphatic decision.

A Handsome Screen.

The screen long ago became one of the most popular items in our home decorations and has consequently developed from its original simple form of one or two leather plain panels to an article combining the purposes of a cabinet and sometimes even of a tiny tea table with its own original use.

An example of a fashionable screen is given in the cut. Its commodious shelves will hold a quantity of china. The drapery lies are of plain gold silk, a contrast to the central panel of gold silk embroidered with clematis. Above this the fulled gold silk is crossed with a dropped tied in the center with cord and tassels. Level with it on the opposite fold is a panel of gilded lattice work backed with silk, and a frill is carried across the top of the screen.

A Pleasing Finish For Doors.

An attractive method of finishing doors and other interior woodwork is the following, mentioned by the Journal of Building: The doors of hard wood are filled with a heavy dark filler. They are then polished in wax, which gives a semibloom appearance that is somewhat pleasing. Ornamental beaded nails made of white metal are then driven in the door at regular intervals, but in a way to form a somewhat elaborate design. Each of the doors leading into the same hall is finished in different designs, as far as the nails are concerned, but the prevailing color is the same throughout.

Queens Toast.

The special merit of queens toast is that it can be made with a fresh fire when, from lack of livecoals, the ordinary toasted bread is an impossibility. To a well beaten egg add a pinch of salt and a teacupful of sweet milk; stir thoroughly and dip in over the bread. Melt enough butter to grease the bottom of the frypan thoroughly, but be careful not to scorch it. Add enough bread to cover the bottom and cover quickly. It can be browned on one side or both sides, as preferred. Be careful not to burn or fry hard and serve on a warm dish.

Lemon Pie.

Mix 1½ cups of sugar with 2 heaping teaspoonfuls of flour, add the well beaten yolks of 6 eggs and the whites of 2 eggs beaten stiff, the grated rind of one and the juice of 2 lemons and a cup of ice water. Line 2 plates with a crust and rim, fill and bake in a moderate oven. Make a meringue with the whites of 4 eggs and a cup of powdered sugar.

WATER FOR HOUSE PLANTS.

Suggestions That May Be Followed to Advantage and Profit.

Some plants require more moisture than others, and the cultivator must study the needs and nature of her surroundings to find this out. But one thing to be remembered is that a soggy soil that holds the water long is wholly unfit for successful plant growing except in the case of aquatics. The idea is to supply water which may drain through the earth rapidly, while yet enough is absorbed to help the plant in its growth. A healthy plant needs soil that is well drained and aerated as the water quickly, for water supplies fertilizing matter to the roots by converting the nourishment from the soil into liquid form which the roots can absorb more easily.

Never give water when the soil is moist, but wait until it is dry. Do not imagine that a big dose of water is always the remedy when the plants wither or have insects on them. Many a poor flower has been drowned. Be careful, too, that water does not stand in the saucers or boxes under the plants. This will cause mold and sogginess and will weaken if not rot away the roots.

Cold water is chilling to tender house plants, and the best rule is to use that which is warm to the hands. Rainwater is supposed to contain ammonia and is better than well water. If hard water is all that can be had, add a little soda to it—a piece the size of a pea to each gallon—and then add enough boiling water to bring the whole to the right temperature. Boiling water is sometimes used successfully, but it is rather risky. Water at from 75 to 150 degrees is warm enough for ordinary use. Never wet merely the top surface of a potted plant, but moisten the whole ball of earth. If the earth has become hard and dry, set the whole pot into a pail of warm water till it is soaked through.

The morning is the best time to water plants—the earlier the better. No water should be given plants when the hot sun is pouring down upon them. If a plant must be watered, then remove it first to a shady place, for the hot sun simply bakes the plant soil when the roots can have a chance to drink up the moisture. Plants in bloom require more water than at other times, and failure to supply it at this time greatly impairs the size, brilliancy and lasting quality of the blossoms.

Derivations of a Few Common Names.

Blankets, it is said, were named after their first makers, three brothers of Bristol, England, named Edward, Edmund and Thomas Blanket, who established a large trade in this article of woolen goods, and were the earliest manufacturers of it in the middle of the Fourteenth century.

Calicoes, we are told, came from Cambray, a town in French Flanders famous for its fine linens and damask originated in Damascus.

Calico is derived from Calicut, on the Malabar coast, and muslin from Mossoul, a city of Asiatic Turkey, giving evidence that though these goods are nowadays to India add the fact they were originally pro-fessed thence.

Children and Sunday.

There is a home, at which I am a frequent visitor, that has among its inmates several children, and these little ones hail the coming of Sunday with delight, looking forward to it from the very dawning of Monday morning until the close of the long week. They have toys with which to amuse themselves during the week, but the very choicest, loveliest and most prized of them all are saved until Sunday, upon which day they are brought out and given them.

These children especially love to draw, each and all of them, and upon Sunday they are provided with any amount of material—drawing books, pencils, rubbers and paints. They have some very dainthly made drawing books, fashioned by their mother's hands, made of pretty drawing paper and tied with bright baby ribbons. The pencils, too, are better (of finer lead and enameled surface) than the "every day" ones. As a matter of course, soiled fingers are not permitted to touch the dainty books, and therefore upon Sunday the little hands are extraordinarily clean.

The child old enough to appreciate this kind of amusement are well supplied with toys, the finest and most attractive among those in their possession being kept for Sabbath use only, of course. Among the toys reserved for the holy day are a great number of beautiful stone blocks; another (although there are enough of these to bring out a fresh one for every day in the week) is a lovely doll, exceeding all other dolls in beauty of face, form and dress.

During the time these little ones play in a children's room or nursery, or in the family sitting room only, but on Sunday the pretty "best room" is thrown open to them, and, in their Sunday clean attire, their best beloved playthings in their possession, they seem inspired to be gentle and polite.—Detroit Free Press.

A Queer Collection.

Not long ago, while a gentleman was out hunting, he found four young foxes, so young that their eyes were not yet open. Those he took home with him alive and gave them to a cat that had recently had a litter of kittens. The cat received them very kindly and is devoted to them. This cat has also adopted a mouse, which she will not allow to get out of her sight. It is very remarkable to witness the cat lying in her bed with one kitchen, three young foxes and a mouse, as happy as though she was the real mother of them all.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Corinne's Reason.

Corinne had been in Sunday school,
And she learned a verse to say:
"Repeat it, dear," a lady urged,
Who called to see mamma one day.

Corinne thought hard, then frowned a bit.
"I can't just look today of then,
'Cause why," she hastily explained,
"I haven't on my Sunday hat."

How He Saved Himself.

"Talking about the battle of Gettysburg," he said dreamily, "I had a narrow escape from being killed at that point."

"Tell us about it," suggested half a dozen voices.

"Oh, there's nothing to tell," said the stranger modestly. "It was through no bravery of mine that I escaped. I have always been in the thick of the fight if any fight was going on where I was, and there is only one way of accounting for my not being hurt upon that occasion."

"And that?" Everybody leaned forward to hear his reply.

"I wasn't there."—Detroit Free Press.

"M. A."

According to a New Zealand paper the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, M. A., never fails to have these initials written after his name; but sometimes, in places where masters of arts are rare, the cabalistic letters fail to make their proper impression.

A deacon in an out-of-the-way township read to his congregation the written notice of Mr. Hughes' impending visit thus:

"The pulpit of the Methodist church will be occupied on Sunday next by the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes' ma."

He added the gallant reflection, "And we have no doubt the old lady will give us a very telling discourse."

BOUND TO WRECK IT.

TWO ATTEMPTS TO WRECK A FAST EXPRESS.

At Pickels Mountains, Near White House.—The Last Attempt almost Successful.—A Large Tie was Placed Across the Track.

WITHIN the past month two attempts have been made two miles west of White House, to wreck fast express trains on the Central Railroad. The place is in the deep woods, on top of Pickels Mountain. In each case it was the same train, only going in the opposite direction. The unlucky engine is 879, Engineer "Hank" Foster, and Conductor "Tex" Munn.

The first attempt was made on a Saturday afternoon nearly four weeks ago. It was made on Train 13, which leaves Annandale, five miles west of where the wreckers got to work, and does not stop again until it nears Elizabeth, a distance of forty miles. The crew of a local freight train going west discovered the obstruction five minutes before the express dashed by, and removed it. A large tie was placed across the rails and stakes were driven in front of it so it could not be pushed off by the cowcatcher. This attempt was kept quiet.

The second attempt was made last Saturday morning, on the same train going west. It is known as the Easton express. When the train left White House at 10:31 Engineer "Hank" and his fireman noticed the thickest part of the woods, saw something dark on the track. He shut off steam and applied the air brakes and sand, but could not stop entirely and ran into the obstruction. A valve rim on the engine was broken.

An investigation showed that old ties had been laid crosswise on the track and heavy stones piled on top. These were removed and the train proceeded slowly. A determined effort is being made to find out who the wreckers are.

BREVITIES.

—The "Spider and Fly" will be the attraction at Music Hall Labor Day.

—The Pastime Athletic Club will hold a field day on the 31st, for boys under 17. Entries close Aug. 29, with A. Wagner and A. Crane.

—A Miss Marshall of South Plainfield lost a gold watch in this city, on Saturday. It was found soon afterward and returned to the owner.

—The city park needs a little looking after. The limbs of trees blown down by the recent storms lay prostrate on the ground, blocking up the paths.

—Mr. P. Gerry of South Plainfield lost a valuable black trotting horse, on Friday, the animal stepped on a stone and broke its leg. It had to be killed.

—Thomas MacDonald, one of the carriers of THE NEWS, while on his route last evening was bitten in the right leg by a dog belonging to Mr. Geise of Brook avenue.

—On Labor Day the Central Railroad will run another of its popular excursions to Mauch Chunk, Glen Onoko, and the famed switch back. The fare from this city will be $1.75.

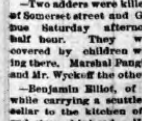
—The North Plainfield Public School will re-open Sept. 19th. Saengerbund Hall has been rented by the School Board to be used until the new addition to the school is finished.

—The Grocer's Association last year did not have cars enough to accommodate the crowd who wanted to go to Papiac on their Labor Day excursion, and many people were left. This year they have secured many cars for their excursion next Monday. See ads.

—Two adders were killed at the corner of Somerset street and Grandview avenue Saturday afternoon within a half hour. They were first discovered by children who were playing there. Marshal Pangborn killed one and Mr. Wyckoff the other.

—Benjamin Elliot, of Scotch Plains, while carrying a scuttle coal from the cellar to the kitchen of his home, fell and struck his head. He arrived at the bottom before the coal and the anthracite lumps struck his unconscious form and made many bruises. He is not seriously injured.

"Wally" won Both Heats.



ON the Gentlemen's Driving Park, Saturday, the trotting was largely attended. Two heats were trotted, the figures indicated the order the horses came in:

	1st heat.	2d heat.
J. Chandler's "Wally"	1	1
P. Donohue's sorrell mare.	3	3
J. Hayes "Andy"	2	2
Mr. Collins' bay gilding	4	4

Time, first heat, 2.39½; second heat 2.34.

Mr. Robert Pettit Won the Badge.

At Dunellen, Saturday, the Middlesex Bowling Green Club bowled from 1.30 to six o'clock. Mr. Robert Pettit won the badge. He won 7 games and lost 1; Fred Weigel won 6, lost 2; H. A. Willis won 4, lost 4; Alfred Evans won 4, lost 4; P. W. Fick won 3, lost 4; Edward Christine won 3, lost 3; W. E. Linstead won 3, lost 3, Geo. G. Ryan won 1, lost 7.

FOOT CRUSHED AND AMPUTATED.

Far From Home, Out of Work, and Penniless.

Edward Wilson, a laborer living at Bloomfield, N. J., while endeavoring to jump on a coal train about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, slipped under the wheels and had his left foot badly crushed.

He was conveyed to Muhlenberg Hospital in this city, and at eight o'clock last evening Dr. Long amputated the foot.

The man is 34 years old and married. He was out of employment and had come to Bound Brook to look for work. Being unsuccessful and having no money to travel home, he attempted to get on the coal train. He is spoken of as an industrious man.

A TERRIFIC GALE.

Many Trees Blown Down Around the City.

A terrific gale of wind struck Plainfield about four o'clock this morning, knocking down many trees around the city and breaking off innumerable branches. At the corner of Seventh street and Park avenue a large tree was blown against the electric light wires. On Fifth street, near Liberty, a tree was blown down. On West Second street a tree was uprooted, and fell against a house.

Electric light wires were damaged considerably on West Fourth street. At Mr. Rockefellow's store on Park avenue a rear door was blown shut with such force that the glass in a window was shattered.

A Raftan Stabs a Roselle Man

James Sweeney, a burly raftsman, on Sunday night severely stabbed William Radford, at Roselle, with a knife. The village authorities had a hard time of it before Sweeney was secured, as he fought three constables and a number of other persons. He was taken before Judge Woodruff, and committed to the county jail in default of $1,000 bail. The prisoner tried to escape while being taken there, and had a terrible struggle with the three constables who had him in charge. They nearly fractured his skull with their clubs before he succumbed, and even at the jail entrance he renewed the contest. His head was a mass of cuts and bruises and his clothing was saturated with blood when he was locked up.

Coffin and Willis to Race Saturday.

The Lyceum Wheelmen held a meeting last night and finished arrangements for the race between Messrs. Coffin and Willis, the two speedy wheelmen who finished tie in the recent twenty-five mile road race.

The conditions of this deciding race, and the officers in charge, will be the same as on the previous event, with the exception that the start and finish will be made at the foot of the Netherwood hill instead of at Scott's as heretofore.

A very close and exciting race is expected as the two riders are evenly matched and each determined to win.

Entries Close Thursday.

All those wishing to enter the 5 mile road race for boys between the ages of 13 and 15, must enter their names with Israel Jones, janitor of the Park Club, before Thursday night. The entrance fee is 10 cents, and there will be four medals awarded, one of which will be for the best time. The start will be made at the corner of Washington and Willow avenues, and the course will be from Washington avenue to Mercer, to Sycamore, to Willow, to Washington.

Very Low Rate to Chicago.

The Gen. Wadsworth Post, No. 75, of Somerville has obtained very low railroad rates to Chicago via Washington and Baltimore & Ohio railroads. The Post starts next Monday and says "everybody welcome to go." It attends the National Encampment for two days only and the World's Fair for six days. See advertisement.

The Wind Helped Him.

This morning Mr. Mehl of West Second street started to cut down a tree in front of his place. He cut the side towards the house first. When he was about half through the wind finished the work and blew the tree against the house, breaking the glass in one of the windows and knocking the shutters off.

Many Lake in the Toils Again.

Mary Lake, an old offender, was arrested last night for drunkenness by Policeman Vanderweg. She pleaded so hard for mercy this morning that the Judge suspended sentence and let her off. She promised never to "get drunk any more."

Blew One of the Trucks Across the Track.

The strong wind this morning blew one of the United States Express Company's hand trucks from the side platform upon the railroad track. It was knocked off by a passing coal train.

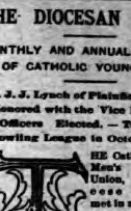
The Crescent Wheelmen's First Annual Dinner.

About fifteen members of the Crescent Wheelmen will ride to Rahway, by way of Elizabeth, this evening, to enjoy their first annual dinner at the Rahway House.

THE DIOCESAN UNION.

MONTHLY AND ANNUAL MEETING OF CATHOLIC YOUNG MEN.

Mr. J. J. Lynch of Plainfield Honored with the Vice Presidency.—Officers Elected.—To Start a Bowling League in October.



THE Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union, of the Diocese of Newark, met in monthly session at Institute Club House, Newark, Sunday afternoon. Seventeen societies had delegates present, representing two thousand members. The meeting also being an annual one, much important business was done.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—T. G. Fitzpatrick of St. James, Y. M. C. A.

Vice President—J. J. Lynch, C. Y. M. L. of Plainfield.

Recording Secretary—J. J. Blauvitt, St. James Y. M. C. A.

Corresponding Secretary—D. Fitzpatrick of Institute Y. M. C. A. Newark.

Treasurer—W. Evans, St. Joseph's Lyceum, Jersey City.

D. Galbraith, one of the C. Y. M. L. delegates, was appointed one on the Executive Committee. The Union will start a bowling league about October.

The C. Y. M. L. of this city will try hard to win the prize.

On Thanksgiving Day the Union will have a field day. A number of prizes will be given in the events: such as running, jumping, target shooting, between different teams, bicycle races, and a foot ball game between the best players in the Union.

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

Plainfieldeers Elected President, Vice Presidents, Treasurer and Secretary.

The Rev. E. C. Davis, of Alfred Center, N. Y., preached at the Seventh Day Baptist general conference at Milton, Wis., Sunday morning. Following this the annual session of the American Tract Society was held, the president, Charles Potter, of this city, in the chair. The reports of the corresponding secretary and treasurer were presented. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Charles Potter, Plainfield.

Vice President—George B. Babcock, Plainfield.

Treasurer—J. F. Hubbard, Plainfield.

Secretaries—F. E. Paterson, Dunellen, and A. L. Titsworth, Plainfield.

Base Ball Notes.

Saturday's game on the Crescent Oval should be a brilliant contest. The New Jersey Athletic Club will bring its strongest team, including the famous Westervelt-Curtiss battery, who have won so many games for their club. For two years the club has held the championship of the amateur league.

The Cuban Giants will play here on Labor Day morning.

Acknowledgment.

We are pleased to acknowledge the receipt of four excellent photographs from Mr. John Neagle, the observer at Plainfield, N. J., illustrating the damage done at that place by the storm of the 8th, of which he gives a graphic account in the "Observers' Notes." The photographs are excellent models of amateur work, both in style and finish.—U. S. Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau.

Mary and Her Poodle.

Mary had a poodle dog,
His hair was black as jet,
And everywhere that Mary went
That dog was sure to get.

She carried him to school one day,
Which was a grave mistake;
The last I heard of him he was Asleep on the floor in the hall.

It grieved the heart of Mary sore
To lose her curly pet,
So she, too, hopped into the pond
And both got very wet.—Ex.

The Weather.

On Wednesday cloudy to partly cloudy, clearing weather will prevail, preceded by rain in the south, with high local winds, mostly from north and west, followed by clearing, and on Thursday warmer, fair weather.

CORRESPONDENCE

Doesn't Like Dr. Heischmann's Remarks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Will you kindly permit me to refer to a report in your valuable paper, which seems to have been very much discussed in the German circles yesterday and to-day and puzzle not only Germans but even Americans?

It is asked how Dr. Heischmann in his address on Sunday, at the laying of the corner stone of the German Lutheran church, could speak in a way as if there was not a trace of a German Protestant church in Plainfield till now? Did he not know that there has been one of most staunch not three blocks away from where he spoke? Without doubt the venerable doctor knew that, but it must be considered that he represents that branch of the Lutheran church which considers itself to be the only adherents evangelical church on earth, and therefore can not have much consideration for any other church whatsoever. From his stand point of view the Doctor must be understood and excused. F. K.

HUFF'S BENEFACTOR REVEALED.

It Was Charles Easthoff who Left Millions to His Former Nurse.

The carefully concealed name of the millionaire who died recently and left his vast estates to John B. Huff of Hanway, now Junior Editor of the Sun, while in the absence of Janitor Allen, absent on his vacation, has at last leaked out. It was Charles Easthoff, an unmarried man, who inherited six wealth from his father in Bellefonte, on the condition that none of the family connections in the East, with whom the elder Easthoff had quarrelled, should receive any benefit from it. Young Easthoff came East shortly after his father's death and made his home with Mrs. Huff. He was taken ill with typhoid fever about ten years ago while in Plainfield and Huff nursed him back to health. An affection sprang up between the rich young man and his less fortunate nurse, and on separating Easthoff stacked that Huff should become his heir if he outlived him.

Young Easthoff died in Philadelphia eighteen months ago and kept his promise to Huff. It is said the young man's estate will reach $5,000,000 at least.

Relatives of the deceased at once began to contest the will, and Huff has made a settlement with all but one of them, and that claim is soon to be adjusted also, though the terms are kept secret.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., held on the 28th day of August, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted by the Lodge:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His all wise Providence to remove from us by sudden death our brother, Clarkson M. Hazelhurst; and

WHEREAS, We are thereby reminded of the uncertainty of life and the immutable certainty of death, therefore be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we deeply deplore our loss and extend to the family of our deceased brother our sympathy in this hour of affliction; and be it further

Resolved, That as a token of respect to our late brother, we drape our Lodge for a period of thirty days.

The Merits of Country School.

There is more reading done in our farm neighborhoods than in our cities, and the good typical farm home has its newspapers always and its magazines quite frequently. Nor are the district schools so inferior, though their quality varies much from year to year. With a good teacher in charge, the country district school is better than the city graded school, because it is more free from mere machinery and better adapted to develop the individuality of pupils. Hundreds of men and women of high standing and wide experience today are thankful for the little wooden country school-house of their childhood days, in which the educational methods pursued were infinitely more scientific than those followed in the towns in many of our city schools.—Albert Shaw in Sketch of Leland Stanford, August Review of Reviews.

Amusements.

[Court-Suited.]

"Hoss & Hoss" to be presented at Music Hall next Thursday night by Willie Collier and his company par excellence, is one of the very best farcical entertainments in American. Its tour throughout the country during the last four seasons has been one of unqualified success, and has proved a source of amusement to those who have witnessed it and of profit to the managers. The reason for this is apparent from the fact that the company is always kept composed of the best farceurs and comedians that money could procure, and in addition to this it has always been kept fully abreast of the times.

Failures for a Week.

Bradstreet's reports 456 failures in the United States during the week, against 459 in the preceding week, and 188, 198, 194, and 176 in the corresponding weeks of 1892, 1891, 1890, and 1889. The Middle States had 123, New England 81, Southern States 46, Western States 168, Northwestern States 82, Pacific coast 56, and the territories 9. Canada had 47, against 36 for the previous week. Of failing enterprises, 81 per cent. were of those employing capital of $25,000 or less, and 12 per cent. those with $5,000 to $50,000 capital. Forty-nine failures were reported with a capital each in excess of $50,000.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Psychic Congress.

The first international psychic congress ever held is notable in the fact that it attracted so many scientific gentlemen to its deliberations. The next 10 years will witness great progress in the investigation of those subtle nerve and mind forces which have been so misunderstood and so inextricably blended with superstition and fraud that level headed, intelligent persons may well be pardoned for condemning the whole as humbug.

Hypnotism, however, is generally accepted as fact. That the French professors of the Nancy school have wrought some cures by its agency is also well certified to. Mind reading and thought transference as possible occurences are likewise accepted by thousands of intelligent persons. That psychic investigation has progressed thus far out of darkness and stillness is due largely to the Society of Psychic Research, both in this country and in Europe.

Naturally the members of this society take considerable part in the proceedings of the congress in Chicago. The paper read by its honorary secretary, F. W. H. Myers, on the "Evidence of Man's Survival After Death," shows the direction in which this gentleman's investigations have tended. Dr. Elliott Coues of the Smithsonian institution, Washington, chairman of the congress, has been, in connection with Mrs. Cones, investigating for several years the subject of the alleged movements of furniture and other objects without contact of any apparent force, and the two prepared a paper giving the result of their study.

Professor Oliver J. Lodge, professor of natural sciences in London, sent a paper on the cataleptic or trance state, Professor Charles Richet of Paris was one of the eminent scientific men who witnessed the famous experiments with Eusapia Palladino, the Italian medium. He gave his opinion of it in a paper for the psychic congress, a paper which does not bear out the belief that Eusapia converted the professor to spiritualism.

One of the important contributions was by Dr. J. E. Purdon, "Nervous Attractions as Demonstrated by the Sphygmograph," an instrument which, when applied over an artery, shows by means of a tracing on paper the changes in the force or tension of the blood.

The Great American Headliner.

It takes considerable time for foreigners to appreciate the mission of the great American headliner and to understand that every large American newspaper has on its staff an individual whose chief value consists in the fact that he can write display sentences calling attention in large type to occurrences, sometimes great and again small, as the case may be.

He must know that each kind of type to be used in the heading contains just so many letters to a line and exercise his ingenuity accordingly. Usually he counts the letters on his fingers when he conceives a thrilling headline to see if they will fit in. The columns of city newspapers being of about the same width usually, it often happens that two or three rival journals will come out with exactly the same heading to a sensational event. It is curious to observe the rut of thought into which the head living mind runs.

Lately a man who had lived a double life died suddenly, and his unconventional conduct was thus discovered. Headlines of the different papers next morning in the city in which he lived were eloquent. One paper said in letters half an inch long, "Death Betrayed John Smith;" another, "Death Tore It Off;" yet another, "Death Disclosed All." A fourth remarks, "Death Revealed All."

The types of large vessels of the American navy are three—first, the heavy battleship of from 10,000 to 12,000 tons, like the Indiana; second, the armored cruiser of from 8,000 to 9,000 tons, like the New York; third, the protected fast cruiser of from 7,000 to 8,000 tons, like the Columbia and Minneapolis. Secretary Tracy estimated that for our complete navy 12 of the heavy battleships were needed, to be used in actual fighting and in coast defense. Eight would be needed on the Atlantic coast and four on the Pacific. When the Iowa is finished, we shall have four such ships. The smaller vessels under construction and recommended for the navy are light draft torpedo cruisers and gunboats capable of navigating inland waters. The last mentioned craft are of about 1,000 tons displacement, and the approved length for one of them is 230 feet; its cost, $250,000.

Pearl river harbor is 10 miles from Honolulu on the island of Oahu. Though it is our only coaling station at or near Hawaii, yet the entrance to it is also locked by a coral reef. It will cost half a million dollars to blast this out and otherwise prepare the harbor for occupancy by our heavy naval vessels. No preparation for deepening the work has been made by congress.

Those who really need vacations will not get them, and those who do not will soon sojourn by the sea or mountain. The Bible idea still exists: "To him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

When New York learns that Chicago is the greatest diamond market in the world, it will feel worse than ever.

DEADLY WINDS.

Savannah Wrecked by an Awful Cyclone.

FORTY LIVES WERE LOST.

The Town of Kernersville, N.C., Swept by a Hurricane.

Three Hundred Buildings Were Mowed Down, and People Saved Their Lives by Taking Refuge In the Cellars—Nine Vessels Swept Ashore on the Georgia Coast, Many Disasters at Sea—In Savannah the Winds Wrecked Block After Block of Houses and Swept Northward, Leaving Destruction Behind.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 29.—Forty lives have been lost and millions of dollars' worth of property destroyed in this neighborhood by storm. Nine barks have been blown ashore.

The wires are almost useless, but meager details of great loss of life and property come from Brunswick, further south along the coast. Three has been wrecked, and the indications are that a path marked by wind and rain has been made across this state and South Carolina to Charlotte, N. C., and from there toward the coast again to Petersburg, Va. The wind began rising early in the afternoon and soon was blowing at a rate never known here before.

Houses were crushed and their occupants killed. Roofs were wrenched off the more substantial buildings, and the loss to the storm by the route which followed the wild rush of winds is very heavy.

Out on the water the elements battled until no one knows how badly shipping has suffered. The loss of life must be heavy, for few craft could weather such a storm.

The people here and at Brunswick had warning of the coming storm and took to flight. But for this the loss of life would have been terrible. Whole rows of houses are wrecked, and everything in the path of the wind went down.

A Town Wrecked.

KERNERSVILLE, N. C., Aug. 29.—A hurricane passed through this place from northeast to southwest. It lasted only five minutes, but left a path of ruin four miles wide.

Three hundred buildings, mostly residences, were wrecked. The house of W. M. Phillips was swept off its foundation, carrying the family with it. Mr. Phillips' daughter was killed, but the rest of the family escaped with serious wounds.

No other deaths are reported, but 10 persons are severely hurt, and the list of slightly injured is very long. After the hurricane had passed all the physicians of the city were called out and were soon busy among the ruins. A heavy rain followed the wind, adding to the severity of the situation.

Many had warning of the danger and took refuge in cellars and vaults. Many in cellars saw their houses lifted from their foundations. One house was blown into a lake 500 yards away. Hundreds are homeless.

The academy and postoffice buildings were damaged to the extent of $10,000. Among the buildings almost completely destroyed are the colored school building, the First Baptist church, the large roller flourmill, the furniture factory, the box factory and the saw works. Debris from them are scattered over a wide area.

Seven large tobacco factories were badly wrecked, and the rain pouring in afterward ruined many thousands of dollars' worth of manufactured tobacco. Tin roofs were lifted from store buildings, allowing the stock to be deluged. Many horses and cattle were imprisoned in the ruins of stables.

In the country orchards were swept out of existence, cornfields leveled, giant oaks uprooted. What remained after the hurricane had gone was damaged by water. The section is deluged.

The Storm Strikes New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The edge of the storm reached here this morning and promised to be almost as severe as the one of last Thursday.

The second storm, like the first, had its birth among the West Indies and has been since pirouetting up the coast, gathering velocity with each league traversed and following directly in the track of its destructive predecessor.

The last storm almost completely destroyed telegraphic communication along the coast, so that the furious progress of visitor No. 2 is marked with a great deal of uncertainty.

Where it has already struck, however, so far as could be learned, owing to the miserable telegraphic facilities, the coming storm was as destructive as the first, and the Florida coast is reported to be strewn with the wreckage which it left in its path.

In anticipation of the easterly and southerly gales which will be ushered by the cyclone the danger signals have been ordered for the middle and north Atlantic states. The ominous red light, warning mariners of the approaching danger, was displayed on the Equitable building tower last night. As a result outbound sailing craft turned into the shelter of the Atlantic highlands in the Hudson and will remain at anchor until the angry visitor from the West Indies has passed this neighborhood on his way to the north Atlantic.

Keeping a Close Watch.

The weather office people are keeping a keen lookout for the storm. They have watched its progress up the coast, and they said yesterday that if it did not veer out to sea before reaching the latitude of Norfolk it would surely strike this vicinity some time today.

At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the cyclone was almost central over Charlotte, N. C., and was then traveling at 30 miles an hour. It was doing much damage too. Its watery eastern edge struck this latitude before breakfast this morning.

From observations taken at a late hour last night, when the storm's center was over Lynchburg, Va., the indications pointed to the storm taking a more inland course than was at first expected, and the observers were inclined to believe that the storm would switch toward the northwest before coming much nearer, and travel toward the lakes. New York would in that event escape the worst of the blow, but continued bad weather would be the result in this vicinity.

Washington was getting some of the storm last night. It was raining heavily there, and the wind was screeching over the streets at 25 mile gale. In Lynchburg nearly 7 inches of rain had fallen, and water was then coming down in buckets.

BAD NEWS OF PEARY.

He Has No Dogs Yet, and His Ship May Be Frozen In.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Aug. 29.—Further discouraging news concerning the Peary arctic expedition comes from Labrador by the mail steamer just arrived. According to the last report Peary was at Davis inlet on Aug. 5 and on the 6th had reached Nain. There he tried again to purchase dogs, but failed. He offered the Eskimos 40 cents each for dogs, but as they are worth 24 or 25 each the Eskimos would not sell, so Peary left for Okkak, the next Moravian settlement. As he would not pay greater prices there either, he could not get dogs.

Then he announced his intention of going to Hebron, Ramah and other settlements farther north, making every effort to secure dogs at those places, and if unsuccessful would depend upon getting dogs at Disco, Greenland, as a last resort.

Dogs now are doubly necessary to Peary, as the barrels all perished before Nain was reached and consequently it is impossible for the expedition to accomplish anything without a far greater number of dogs than was at first considered necessary. It is believed here that Peary's chances are suicidal and that if he was determined to wreck the whole expedition he could not adopt better means. The steamer has been delayed a month behind her regular time, rendering it problematical if she reaches her destination at all, and it is almost certain that she will be frozen up before the cargo and supplies are unloaded.

SIX WERE DROWNED.

An Iron Ballasted Yacht Capsized In Lake Champlain.

WHITEHALL, N. Y., Aug. 29.—George P. Witherbee of Port Henry and six young companions, who were sailing in Witherbee's yacht, the Alpha, were capsized in Lake Champlain. Witherbee and five of the boys were drowned. Their names were: William Gildea, 13 years old; William Broadnax, 14 years; Eddie Jubert, 13 years, and John Whitman, 12 years, all of Port Henry, and Albert Brush, 13 years, of Brooklyn, who was a guest of Jubert. Joseph La Barge, 11 years old, saved himself by swimming to the Vermont shore.

The yacht was 24 feet boat and was considered a strong and substantial one. Witherbee was 32 years old and an all around athlete. He was graduated from Cornell college in June and was elected captain of the 'Varsity football team shortly before graduating. He had been a member of the 'Varsity crew for three years. He was a competent yachtsman, but the boat was ballasted heavily with iron ore, and when a stiff squall struck her she went over without warning.

Witherbee died in a heroic effort to save young Brush's life. The yacht has been raised, but only four bodies were recovered.

THE BLAME PLACED.

But the Long Island Railroad Authorities Will Not Test the Whims.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., Aug. 29.—There have been no further deaths among those injured in the Long Island railroad disaster of Sunday evening since that of August Jakobson Monday morning.

The investigation into the cause of the accident by General Superintendent Blood is practically closed. It was admitted by Lawyer Kelly, counsel of the road, that the investigation had fixed the responsibility, but would not say upon whom, whether Engineer Concrite or Signalman Knott. He referred all questions to Superintendent Blood, and the latter positively refused to be interviewed or give the result of the investigation. He declined to affirm or deny the rumor that both Knott and Concrite had been found guilty of negligence.

At St. John's hospital all of the remaining 14 wounded ones are resting easily, and except possibly in the case of James Thompson a favorable outcome is now expected in each case.

Yellow Fever Stamped Out.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Mr. H. S. Haines, vice president of the Plant system, has received telegraphic advices that the quarantine restrictions against Brunswick, Ga., and Port Tampa, Fla., established by Charleston, Savannah, Wilmington, Ga., and Albany, Ga., have been removed. Yellow fever at Brunswick has been stamped out.

Dempsey Is Not Insane.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Jack Dempsey, the one time invincible middleweight, arrived in this city from Chicago, and a reception was tendered him at the Columbia Athletic club. Dempsey looked to be in good condition, though a trifle fleshy. His manager says the stories about his being insane are untrue.

KIN TO MRS. CLEVELAND

The Claim of an Old Woman In Jersey City.

SHE ASKED AID OF THE PRESIDENT.

She Says That the President Was Angry With His Servants For Admitting Her to His House—Some Money Which She Expected—The President's Condition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The Press today prints the following:

The Jersey City health board sent an inspector to abate a nuisance in a rear tenement at 344 Wayne street. He found a bright minded old woman living in filthy rooms on the top floor, who told him she was related to Mrs. Cleveland. The neighbors called her Mrs. Folsom.

"I am sorry you find my rooms so disordered," said she. "I would have cleaned up if I had known any one was coming." The inspector made arrangements to improve the sanitary conditions of her apartments and listened to her story.

Her Claim to Kinship.

She said she was Mrs. Francis Bennett Morris, widow of a Union soldier who died in Libby prison in 1863.

"My half brother, Colonel John B. Folsom, said she, "was Mrs. Cleveland's grandfather. She was the daughter of Cyrus Folsom, my brother John's youngest son.

"I came to Jersey City two years ago. I supported myself for years by giving temperance lectures. My son has a family and has done what he could to support me, but he is out of work.

"I have called on Mrs. Cleveland several times at her home on Madison avenue. She once appointed a day and listened to my story an hour and a half.

"Mr. Cleveland was to have collected $30,000 on Cyrus' estate, and I came last for a share of the money, but I have not received any of it. I believe it was Cyrus' intention to leave some of his money to me.

"I walked all the way up from a down town ferry to Mrs. Cleveland's house on Sixty-eighth street because I was penniless.' Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Cleveland was home at the time, and a servant gave me some tea and toast.

"Mr. Cleveland came, and seeing me was very angry. He said to the servant, 'If this occurs again, the person will lose his position. Mrs. Cleveland has given me $7, and that is all I have received from the Clevelands."

Mrs. Norris' son, Louis E. H. Norris, lives with his family at 73 Ivers avenue and has been employed in the Dixon crucible works, but was laid off with others three weeks ago. He says he kept his mother for five years, paying her rent and board and giving her money. Her habits were such that he was unable to care for her.

Mr. Norris' wife said his father was a descendant of Lord Hollingshead and never Nevertheless the widow got a pension until she married one Lang, who deserted her after three days.

Lamont and Cleveland Is Sick.

In the same paper appears this story: Secretary Lamont surprised and alarmed a prominent Cleveland man who asked somewhat pointedly about the plans in regard to appointments yesterday by saying: "Mr. Cleveland is giving very little attention to party politics. The financial situation demands all his attention, but Mr. Cleveland is a sick man, perhaps a very sick one."

Secretary Lamont spoke with a seriousness and earnestness that alarmed his friend.

The steward of the Fall River line steamer Plymouth, who has frequently seen Mr. Cleveland during the many journeys to Buzzards Bay and since he became president, said after Mr. Cleveland's last journey:

"He looks to me like a very sick man. I never saw a man change physically for the worse as he has within four or five months."

Three Boys Drowned.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 29.—A triple drowning accident occurred in the Merrimac river here. Edmond Bourgeoise, 28, and Samuel and Alexon Bouchard, brothers, 18 and 15, were swimming, when one of them was seized with cramps, and the other two went to his assistance. All three went down together.

Imprisoned For Election Frauds.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—Joseph P. Kidd, James Thompson and Hugh O'Neill, election officers convicted of having received bribes here, Edmond Rowe-McAleer congressional contest in November, 1890, were sentenced to two years and six months' imprisonment and $100 fine each.

SENATE'S TURN NOW.

The Wilson Repeal Bill Under Consideration Today.

PROMPT ACTION IS NOW PROMISED.

Silver Men Acknowledge That Their Defeat Was Complete—Secretary Carlisle Gives His Views—Mantle and Allen Not Entitled to Seats in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The passage of the Wilson bill to repeal the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman law by the house transfers the scene of action and the interest today to the senate. The silver men acknowledge that their defeat was complete.

In one sense the voting was uninteresting. When it was seen that the antisilver men were in a strong majority upon the first vote taken, the galleries relapsed into their usual buzz of conversation, and on the floor the members and unpublished allies retired to the cloakrooms to fight the great battle over again in a genial mood.

The silver men felt chagrined at their overwhelming defeat, but they took their overthrow philosophically and found in their late opponents men who were too generous to say aught of ungraciousness.

How the House Voted.

The story of the day's voting is told in the shortest and most instructive manner by the following table:

	Yeas.	Nays.	Majority.
16 to 1	124	229	105
17 to 1	100	240	140
18 to 1	103	239	136
19 to 1	102	228	126
20 to 1	121	222	101
Bland-Allison act	136	213	77
Final passage	109	219	110

The votes in the house were remarkable for the very high percentage of members recorded. On the last roll call 350 members responded to their names. Snell and Graham were paired, leaving but three representatives out of a total voting strength of 354 apparently unaccounted for.

One of these—Mr. Cooper of Wisconsin—would have been present and voting, but was called out of the city by a telegram announcing the approaching dissolution of his father. Speaker Crisp did not vote, leaving but one whose absence was unexplained—Mr. Newlands of Nevada. Not in many years has there been a question before the house which so thoroughly enlisted the interest and consideration of members.

One of the causes of the unexpectedly large vote against the free coinage of silver was the changed attitude of members from the southern states. It had been supposed that these were practically solid in favor of free coinage. But an analysis of the vote at once shows that this was not the case to a large degree.

The vote upon the restoration of the Bland-Allison act made the best showing for the silver men.

What the Vote Showed.

The vote of some of the eastern states was as follows:

	Yeas.	Nays.
Connecticut	—	4
Maine	—	6
Massachusetts	—	13
New Hampshire	—	2
New Jersey	—	8
New York	—	33
Pennsylvania	2	28
Rhode Island	—	2
Vermont	—	2

The affirmative vote was made us thus: Democrats, 112; Republicans, 17; Populists, 9. The negative vote was: Democrats, 103; Republicans, 110. A comparison of seven separate votes taken shows that at no time did the antisilver men have less than 77 clear majority.

Their greatest strength was shown on the 17 to 1 amendment, when the vote stood 100 to 240—an antisilver majority of 140. On the final passage of the bill the antis mustered the same strength as this, but owing to a desperate rally of the silver men their majority was cut down to 110.

One of the surprises of the day was the lack of strength of the 20 to 1 amendment, which was supposed to be the strongest proposition that the silver men had in reserve. As a matter of fact it was weaker by three votes than the 16 to 1 proposition, and the majority against it was 101. The vote that gave the silver men the greatest comfort was that on the re-enactment of the Bland-Allison act, and on this amendment they succeeded in reducing the majority against them to a low point. Some of the day—77—the vote standing: Yeas, 136; nays, 213.

Secretary Carlisle's Views.

All the members of the administration took the greatest interest in the votes on the Wilson bill. Secretary Carlisle especially so. He received in his office in the treasury department the official announcement of the several votes as soon as they were flashed across the wires. When the first vote was received, which showed that free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1 was beaten by 103 majority, he said the majority was greater than he anticipated and that he would have been satisfied with 60 majority.

At the conclusion of all the votes Secretary Carlisle stated that he was very much gratified at the result and felt that it would do much to restore public confidence. He expressed the hope that the senate would take speedy action on the silver question.

In the course of a conversation Secretary Carlisle was asked if the present stringency was due to lack of money. He replied at the time, and denied (that things have so)

"No greater mistake could be committed than to assume that the present financial embarrassment is caused by an actual scarcity of money in the country. The fact is that the amount of currency of all kinds in the country outside of the United States treasury on the 25th day of the present month was over $1,500,000,000, a greater amount outstanding on the 1st day of the month and $70,94,783 more than the amount outstanding on the 1st day of September, 1892, when business was active and prosperous. There is money enough to transact all the legitimate business of the people, and the only thing is that it has been withdrawn from circulation and hoarded. The true remedy is to restore confidence and credit, and thus put the money now in the country in circulation again."

The Senate Busy Too.

The question of the right of the governor of a state to appoint a senator to fill a vacancy caused by the expiration of a regular term (and not happening by resignation or otherwise) was decided by the senate in the negative. The final votes in the two cases from Montana and Washington, declaring Mr. Mantle and Mr. Allen not entitled to seats, were 32 to 29. There was no vote necessary to be taken in the third of these cases—that from Wyoming—Mr. Beckwith having resigned his appointment more than a month ago.

The remainder of the day's session was occupied in the consideration of the bill allowing national banks to increase their circulation up to the par value of the bonds deposited by them to secure circulation. The amendment which Mr. Cockrell had offered some time ago—to allow the redemption of the $25,000,000 in 2 per cent bonds and payment for them in a new issue of legal tender notes—was rejected—23 to 39.

Another amendment was offered by Mr. Cockrell and discussed at great length—to allow the holders of any United States bonds to deposit them in the treasury, receive their face value in greenbacks and on repaying the greenbacks to get back their bonds with the interest which had accrued on them while in the treasury, less 1½ per cent. No action was taken on the amendment.

The house bill to repeal the Sherman act was laid before the senate and referred to the committee on finance. Mr. Voorhees, chairman of that committee, announced that there would be prompt action by the committee today. The senate then adjourned.

What the London Times Says.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Times says: "It is evident that the severe and continued depression of trade has worked a very decided change in the popular views. It seems improbable that anything will come out of the Voorhees bill. It is the expiring effort of the silver party. Silver, deprived of the support of the Sherman act, will sink to a level too low to suit the bimetallist notions of a proper ratio or to facilitate the establishment of a double standard. The passage of the Wilson bill will not produce the unlimited improvement in the situation that is expected in some quarters because the Sherman act is not the only obstacle to commercial prosperity. Fiscal blunders and unsound speculations count for much."

A Single Standard Victory.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Daily News expresses the opinion that the repeal of the Sherman act will prove a serious blow to bimetallists throughout the world, but a great victory for common sense and the single standard.

THEY MADE IT UP.

General Hamilton and His Wife Reconciled and the Suit Withdrawn.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—General Alexander Hamilton and his wife have been reunited, and by the terms of a verbal agreement made between them last Thursday afternoon will live together in either this city or Washington. The arrangement between them was brought about through the efforts of Lawyer F. R. Vollmer, who was a partner of Robert Ray Hamilton and is counsel for General Hamilton.

Mr. Vollmer convinced Mrs. Hamilton that she made a grave error in bringing her suit, and he arranged for a meeting between husband and wife.

Several meeting were held last week, and for a long time there was little to indicate an amicable adjustment of difficulties. It was Thursday afternoon when a settlement was reached. Mrs. Hamilton withdrew her allegation that her husband was incapable of managing his affairs, and it was agreed that when they went to live together again the general should control his income, just as he does now.

The general was very penitent, and when the reconciliation was brought about there was a touching scene. Both husband and wife agreed tearfully that there had been a misunderstanding which would never occur again.

Interscholastic Tennis Games.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 29.—In the interscholastic final match between C. R. Budlong of Brown and R. D. Thompson of Princeton the former won, 6—2, 6—4, 6—3. J. Howland beat G. S. Bryan in the consolation finals, 6—1, 6—1.

FASHIONS

At the Sea Shore.

There are bathing suits galore. Few are becoming, and many are indecent. Considering the demand for bathing suits, the wonder is that there are not more attractive costumes in which women may array themselves for a dip in the sea. A variety of materials is employed, the most popular of which are serges, flannels and washing silks. The common error committed in making these suits is that of overtrimming. In point of fact, the more simple the fashion of these garments the better the wearer appears after once coming in contact with the salt water.

BATHING SUITS OF SERGE AND FLANNEL.

In the cut are shown two suits. The first one is of serge. It is made with a full blouse, with round neck, and a circular skirt trimmed with braid at the hem. Drapery of wash silk is knotted on the shoulder, forming a short sleeve, and brought to the front with a knot at the center of the neck and another knot with ends at the waist. The second suit is of blue flannel. It is fashioned with a full skirt, banded with braid. The full handkerchief waist, overlapping in front, forms a V shaped neck. There are no sleeves. The deep collar of white flannel is finished with bands of blue braid at the hem, and an anchor is embroidered in the corners with blue. The knots and sash ends at the side are also of white flannel.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Bright Little Girl.

The children have had their innings at Long Branch, N. J., and they gave a pretty exhibition of their grace and skill in the big casino adjoining the West End hotel. Professor Warwig, who had charge of the carnival, spent two weeks training the little ones in fancy steps and measures, and so rapidly did the children take to the instruction fun that on the evening of the entertainment not a single mistake or mis-step was made by any one.

EDNA SPRINGER.

Next to Mary Young, as Princess Carnival, little Edna Springer was the prettiest and most graceful child dancer of the entire corps de ballet. She took an important part in the "Ratcatcher of Hamelin" dance, and as the "charmed girl" danced the most difficult steps with wonderful grace and ease. She also recited "Long, Long Ago," in which she told how her grandmamma used to dance, and when she had finished the poem she glided through the steps of the minuet with a stately grace that won her two recalls. Little Edna lives in New York in the winter, and loves her dancing lessons more than her dolls. The picture shows her in the minuet.

A Pretty Incident.

I saw two children, the boy, I suppose, about twelve, a fine, golden haired Scotch laddie, with bare feet, carefully mended clothes, a worn bonnet and bright, open, ruddy face, sulow with health. Clinging to him was the most fragile fairy, with long, brown ringlets of a fashion of forty years ago, great blue eyes and alast—for her exquisite face seemed destined to blossom into superior beauty—a bent and twisted limb and a crutch which held her up with one arm, while the strong boy steered her with the other.

They had not yet gained the object which they sought, and I wandered after them, not from mere curiosity, but drawn by the magnetic attachment that seemed to radiate from one to the other. "Now, Jessie," said the boy, "it will be all right; you just hold on." "But, Jock, the pennies will nae buy it, I doubt." "Oh, never you mind, we'll see." Then they came full in front of the object of their search. It was a dwarf rose, full of bloom, and the boy, with all the certainty of youth, stepped forward to the old woman.

"Please, mem, d'ye ken what may be the price of you?" Then his face fell, for the price was evidently far beyond the coppers which he held so tightly in his little hand.

WHITE,

OF PLAINFIELD.

He just whispered to the girl, a great tear gathered in her eye and rolled slowly down the beautiful face. I stepped forward, but some one was before me, and the boy and girl passed out of that crowded show, the boy holding the plant with his protecting arm so proudly, and the girl with her face shining with joy that words fail to tell.—London Figaro.

Dorothy's Prayer.

Little Dorothy was tired, oh, so tired, as she knelt at her mamma's knee and tried to say her prayers, as she did every night. She was so tired that her dear little head was heavy, and the lights made blurs before her eyes, and the room seemed going in a whirl like a merry-go-round.

"Now," said her mother, when she had said her prayers, "ask God to bless grandpa and grandma, Aunt Susie and Uncle Will, mamma and papa and little brother."

"Mamma," asked Dorothy very gravely, "do you think God would mind very much if I was to just jump the family tonight?"

Her mother told her that she must complete her prayer as she always did, and the heavy head nodded from side to side as she tried to say reverently:

"Bless grandpa—grandma—Aunt Susie—Uncle—Oh, mamma, I'm so sleepy, an God knows the rest better'n I do."

And climbing into her little white bed, Baby Dorothy went to sleep with never a thought whether she wakened here or there. And the mother, watching her tranquil slumbers, felt sure that God did know the rest and had Dorothy safe in his keeping.—Detroit Free Press.

A Thankful Little Fellow.

Little children teach those of larger growth many a lesson. Would that older people were always as thoughtful for their blessings! Little B. had just recovered from a tedious illness and was wild as a colt with the pleasure of being out again. He was invited to a picnic and came home brimming over with the happiness he had enjoyed. That night, when he said his prayers as usual at his aunt's knee, he added of his own accord, "I thank thee for giving that picnic and letting me go to it."—New York Tribune.

A basket fresh filled with the gifts of posies.
Here is one of her favorite roses.
Two little shoes. Without any help,
In order to know how the dickens feels
You want the picture—I'm sure you do—
Why, you'll love Helen, and she'll love you!

HOW TO MAKE SALADS

SOME VALUABLE HINTS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER'S BENEFIT.

Lettuce Makes an Excellent Foundation for Several Salads—Nasturtium, Tomatoes, Celery and Cabbage Salads—Game and Fish.

In warm weather, if there is any dish which will tempt a wavering appetite it is certainly a well made, prettily decorated, ice cold salad. It requires art to make a good salad. Perhaps genius is necessary to the preparation of a perfect one. Sidney Smith prided himself upon the excellence of his salads, and wrote a rhymed recipe for the mayonnaise. But many a little housewife has the requisite qualities to enable her to make nice salads without any assistance save her own keen sense of taste, quick perception and excellent judgment. Fortunately it is not often necessary to go from the hot kitchen to prepare a salad, as it may so frequently be made of left overs from the table or vegetables fresh from the garden or refrigerators. The materials used in salads are numerous and should always be of the best.

Lettuce is so pliant, having no antipathies and not a trace of self assertion, that it readily incorporates with its own mild flavor any taste or smell that may be added, and therefore furnishes a most desirable basis for a salad. Its crumbly, golden green appearance, especially when fringed and curled, commends it to the eye as much as its faintly delicate flavor does to the palate. A lover a pinkness in which shrimps and lettuce makes an ideal dish for a summer evening tea.

Nasturtium salad should be made of white heads of lettuce dressed with picked nasturtium, oil and lemon juice. If served in a delicate glass dish and decorated with nasturtium blossoms the salad is appetizing and beautiful. Green beans boiled, slightly before the beans form, boiled in salt water until tender, then chilled and covered with a mayonnaise which contains a new suggestion of onion juice, will be found quite acceptable. Cold cauliflower dressed with cream sauce and ornamented with chopped olives and pimentos makes a pretty salad. If oil is not desired melted butter may be used. Garnish with thin slices of cucumber or a green pea salad. It may be served with a regular mayonnaise dressing.

Tomato salad may be made in a variety of ways. The easiest way is to dress with cayenne pepper, oil and lemon. Either a red or yellow tomato is pretty enough with out decoration. So also are beets, one of the hardiest products of the garden. An excellent plain salad is made of hot sliced beets cooked for a while in a little water, vinegar and sugar. Make a red sauce of the water left steaming with cornstarch and gold butter, and pour over the beets. It may be served hot or cold.

Small green cucumbers furnish material for an excellent salad. It is little wonder that this vegetable was one regretted by the Israelites in the desert. Egyptian cucumbers are said to be especially fine Some of our varieties are much more delicious than others, but most of them are good if picked from the vines with the dew still upon them. Cucumbers should always be served ice cold. It is a great mistake to let them stand, as so many do, in salt water, as this destroys the crispness. Add a little onion juice and good vinegar, season with salt and pepper, and serve garnished with broken pieces of ice.

Celery cut up in small pieces, covered with a good mayonnaise, and garnished with its own pretty leaves, makes a fine salad. It is invaluable in combination with various kinds of meat salads.

Though the cabbage is a plebeian vegetable, yet its gastronomic capabilities are numerous. Shakespeare alludes to it by its odd name, "Wonder of good cheape." When the heart is compact, white and crisp, it may be sliced very fine, salted and served with a dressing made of sour cream whipped to a foam, and containing a little bit of sugar. If the sour cream is not thick or yellow enough add the well beaten yolk of one egg. This is also an excellent dressing for cold boiled potatoes cut in cubes and decorated with rings of white of egg.

Hard boiled eggs as a salad and garnished with lettuce and parsley make a pretty and appetizing dish. During the heated term it is sometimes desirable to serve meat in salad form. Chicken is the best material for this purpose, although veal will serve as a substitute. A good recipe is as follows: Cut the meat of two chickens into small pieces and an equal quantity of celery. Add two teaspoonfuls of chopped olives and the same of capers. Make mayonnaise of three yolks of eggs, adding drop by drop the olive oil, stirring to the consistency of cream, adding now and then lemon juice. Add salt and cayenne pepper to taste. Mold the chicken on a platter and pour over it mayonnaise. An alternate dressing may be made as follows: Yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of flour, one of butter, one of sugar, one of mustard, one of salt, one of cayenne pepper. Mix to a paste with vinegar. Add a cup of boiling water. Cook till thick. Cool and add four tablespoonfuls of butter.

Lobster, salmon, move oysters, whitefish and ham may all be used as salad. Salmon requires chopped cucumber pickles. The oysters are best made with lettuce or celery. The ham can be used with either cabbage or celery.

As a relish for roast duck or game or sauce salad is good. Slice six oranges for eight persons. Grate the rind of one and add the juice of one lemon, three tablespoonfuls of salad oil or melted butter, a pinch of cayenne pepper, and pour over the oranges.

Several herbs may be advantageously used in making salads, such as chervil, a bottle of extract of celery and a bottle of spiced vinegar are convenient in salad making. The latter should be flavored with mint, parsley seed, mace, onions, cloves, pepper, nutmeg, salt and sugar. Many of the materials used in salads, such as cress, lettuce and celery, are quieting to the nerves, lead to babus sleep and are therefore healthful as well as appetizing. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It Fits Over a Common Lamp.

A device has been patented for the ready boiling of milk, tea, coffee, etc. It is peculiarly suited to the requirements of a nursery. The device, which consists of winged plates connected together, their upper edges being flattened and extending at right angles to their vertical portions, can be attached to any lamp chimney. The lower edges of the plates are provided with notches or corrugations that constitute an extension which fits in the opening at the top of the chimney. The upper edges of the chimney fit in the notches in the edges of the plates and thus keep the appliance steady. It can be placed on and removed from the chimney with rapidity, and does not interfere in the least with the illuminating qualities of the lamp.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, etc., with some flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Royal Tooth Powder, the best Carlsbad mineral chalk, the finest Turkish Castile soap, delicately flavored. Your dentist will tell you these substances are perfectly harmless and accomplish all that is to be expected from a tooth powder. A full two-ounce package of this unexcelled article, cannot be usually sold for 25c. under ordinary circumstances, but while we last for ten cents will be given with each one dollar purchase and upwards. People of correct ideas will appreciate this offer, but some will say, "We never use tooth powder." Those who do use it, however, can be distinguished from those who don't, as the rose can be distinguished from the dandelion. This will seem cruel to some, but duty compels us to speak plainly. Royal Tooth Powder is being received everywhere, and pleases and compliments us with their duplicate orders.

Lobster di New burg.

A good recipe for lobster di Newburg: For six or eight persons, use the meat from a lobster or lobsters weighing about four pounds, 4 tablespoons of butter, 2 of brandy, 2 of sherry, 2 teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth of one of pepper, half pint of cream, the yolks of 4 eggs and a slight grating of nutmeg. Cut the meat of the lobster into small, delicate slices. Put the butter on the stove in a frying pan, and when it becomes hot put in the lobster cook slowly for five minutes, then add the salt, pepper, sherry, brandy and nutmeg and simmer for five minutes longer.

Meanwhile beat the yolks of the eggs well and add the cream to them. Pour the liquid off the cooking mixture and stir constantly for one minute. Take from the fire and pour into a warm dish. Lobster di Newburg may be served as a fish course at dinner or luncheon. A garnish of triangular bits of puff paste may be added, or the lobster may be served on toast. No mode of cooking gives a more delicate or elegant dish. Special care must be taken to stir the mixture constantly after the cream and beaten yolks are poured over the lobster until the frying pan is taken from the fire.

How to Keep Silver Bright.

To keep your silver bright without constant cleaning, which is injurious to the plated articles, dissolve a small handful of borax in a gallon of hot water with a little soap, put the silver in and let it stand all the morning (or afternoon, as the case may be), then pour off the suds, rinse with clear cold water and wipe with a soft cloth.

Anybody Can Arrange This Corner.

Every household needs a lounging place, and the following plan can be adopted wherever a restriction in funds would place a regularly made sofa out of reach:

Buy an ordinary cot with woven wire springs. Cut off the legs two inches and remove the head and footboard. Buy a hair mattress to fit and cover it with cretonne, buttoning it down at intervals of four inches like a cushion for a seat. Tack a box plaited flounce of the cretonne around the edge of the cot on the four sides. Finish the top with narrow gimp. Make four or five feather pillows two feet square, and cover them with material that will contrast prettily with the cretonne. The result of these simple directions will evidence the truth of my opening remark.

Peanut Taffy.

Some gloomy day when young folks yawn
And wish the weary hours were gone,
Go to your storeroom and there find
Brown sugar, heavy—almost wet.
Send some one to the corner grocery
A quart (real) roasted you'll get, and,
Set all the children shelling these;
And some time when it you please,
When these are shelled, chop—not too fine.
Butter some pieces set in dishes;
Then take a pound of sugar, two
Tablespoonfuls of molasses brown,
And a pan as I molt—see brown—
But not a drop of water. When 'tis done
And like thick syrup quickly runs,
Your chopped up peanuts lightly salt
And turn them in. If there's no fault,
Stir fast a minute, pour it thin
And cool, and then the fun begins.

The Chafing Dish.

The chafing dish should be as much a part of the family life as is the tea tray or the fan, of course, in those families where the chief object is to keep the lords of creation comfortable and happy, and consequently the mental sunshine undimmed. Many a man who did not want any breakfast or who was out of sorts with his dinner will fix himself up a savory mess in this convenient article and be happy again. A good chafing dish can be bought for $3, or a very admirable substitute, a little alcohol lamp, at 75 cents, with an agateware pan set over it. One of these will look very cozy opposite a smoking urn or coffee pot on the breakfast table.

Carpets and Microbes.

In most homes the carpet comes up only once a year, by which time it is as full of microbes and accumulated filth as its instersticses will allow. No wonder, then, if our rooms preserve a musty smell in spite of the perfidious cleaning of windows and vigorous sweeping, which only displace a portion of the dust to settle promptly elsewhere in some less accessible spot.

Fixed carpets are even more objectionable and unwholesome in bedrooms, for there they absorb the fetid emanations of the night and soak up various decomposable materials for future use.

The ideal would be a polished floor, garnished with rugs in sufficient number to give an aspect and feeling of comfort, while admitting of easy exposure to the salutary influence of air. And light rugs, carpets and curtains ought to be frequently shaken and hung up to the air, if they are to remain sweet—not once a month or year, but twice or thrice a week, if not oftener. At this price only can we hope to deprive confined spaces of their native unwholesomeness, would place a regularly made sofa out of reach:

Buy an ordinary cot with woven wire springs. Cut off the legs two inches and remove the head and footboard. Buy a hair mattress to fit and cover it with cretonne, buttoning it down at intervals of four inches like a cushion for a seat. Tack a box plaited flounce of the cretonne around the edge of the cot on the four sides. Finish the top with narrow gimp. Make four or five feather pillows two feet square, and cover them with material that will contrast prettily with the cretonne. The result of these simple directions will evidence the truth of my opening remark.

A Doctor's Advice.

"You have a severe case of indigestion," said the physician to his new patient. "You should be very careful to eat only warm food, as it promotes the flow of gastric juices. Avoid ice cream and that sort of thing. I am afraid you aren't sufficiently careful about taking hot meals. In the hurry of business people frequently devour cold lunches in the middle of the day. That's where they make a mistake."

"Try to avoid that indigestion," he went on. "Avoid if you have to neglect your office duties a little. May I inquire, sir, what your employment is?"

"I'm a dre eater round at de Universal museum," was the reply.—New York Herald.

WHEELMEN DINE.

Crescent Wheelmen's Annual Dinner at Rahway.

REVIOUS to riding to Rahway for their annual dinner the Crescent Wheelmen's secretary sent out no notice to the members, consequently only a few of the members enjoyed the feast last night.

Only those who could be seen or notified by Captain Haynes were on hand to start at five o'clock.

They went by way of Elizabeth, arriving at the Rahway House, where the feast was spread, at about seven o'clock. It did not take them two hours to ride the distance as a stop was made at Elizabeth.

Speechmaking followed the dinner, at which President Leggett, Dr. Adams, Captain Haynes, ex-Councilman Buckle, exercised their oratorical powers.

BOARD OF HEALTH MEETING.

An Ordinance Discussed Relating to Sanitary Regulations.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health held last night. Only three members were present, Presidents George W. Rockefellow, Secretary Oliver B. Leonard and Mr. Sorrell.

An ordinance, to be presented to the Common Council, for action, on plumbing and sanitary regulations, was to have been adopted, but as two members were absent, it was only discussed. Final action was deferred until a full Board is present.

Reports were read showing that there had been only four cases of contagious diseases during the past month. The members say that this is a very favorable report for the month of August.

—The ten mile team race of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey will be held over the Elizabeth Cranford course on September 9 Silver cups will be given to the teams finishing first and second and a gold medal will be awarded for the best net time.

—Recently $50 belonging to Mr. Goldman, the enterprising "Leader" dry goods and notion merchant of Front street, disappeared. He recovered it through a servant girl in his employ. The story got out that the money had been stolen, and lest there might be any imputation unjustly cast upon the servant referred to, Mr. Goldman requested that nothing be said of the matter in the local newspapers. As there was no charge and no arrest it seemed only reasonable that his request be granted. It has become public property, however, through other channels and it is only just to Mr. Goldman and his servant that their statement of the matter be made.

Wasn't Used to the Cars.

The Somerset street trolley car frightened a gray horse tied at the curb this morning. The horse broke loose and turned into Craig place, where the conductor of the car and another man caught it. Both men had hold of the bridle. The animal backed across Somerset street dragging the men with it. It then became manageable.

FOR THE MOST POPULAR OF OUR FIREMEN.—FINAL COUNTING OF COUPONS TO-MORROW.

The Respective Friends of Ex-Chiefs Saltzman and Martin Make a Lively Contest for the Prize.—Sketch of the Popular Favorites.—Both Worthy of the Honor, though Only One can get the Prize.

EX CHIEF HORACE J. MARTIN.

EX CHIEF AUGUSTE SALTZMAN

We present above the portrait of ex-Chief Horace J. Martin. Mr. Martin has been a life resident of Plainfield, having been born in this city March 14, 1850.

His business career began when seventeen years of age, at which time, in consequence of his father's failing health, he assumed entire charge of the business, that of horse-shoeing, and at the death of his father, three years later, he succeeded to the business, and has followed it ever since, with the exception of one year's absence at Montclair, N. J.

In the treatet of 29 Mr. Martin's shop, then situated directly over the brook, was washed out into the middle of Somerset street, and his loss by water was very heavy, but with his characteristic pluck he rebuilt at his present stand, a little farther north, where he continues to pound silver dollars out of hot iron.

An evidence of the trust and confidence reposed in him by the community in which he lives, is the fact that he has been for five consecutive years elected Township Clerk of the Township of North Plainfield, and in the same Clerk whose election was contested last Spring by his opponent, who maintained that he had been illegally counted in, but who very wisely withdrew the suit before it reached the court. Mr. Martin's associates in township affairs speak of him in very commendable terms.

Among other things that may be said of Mr. Martin is the fact that he possesses a voice in which there is some music. For two years he served the Trinity Reformed church on the corner of Second and Grant streets, of which both he and his estimable wife are members. He was formerly one of their choir, leaving the position in the Fall of '91, to accept a similar one in the Congregational church on West Seventh street, where he continues to act as precentor with entire satisfaction.

Early in life he began to take an interest in fire matters, and in the year 1878 when but nineteen years of age he became a member of Engine Co. 2, being obliged to conceal the fact that he had not yet reached the age which under the rules of the fire department would admit him to membership.

Very soon after Mr. Martin had joined this company he was made its Secretary, of which position he served creditably re-elected and continued to fill it until the year 83 when business called him to Montclair, to which place he moved his family and remained for one year.

While a resident of that pretty little town a very handsome residence in the wealthy district was almost totally destroyed by fire. At this fire Mr. Martin, true to the fire instincts that had been bred in him, was very active, and those who had bravely turned out to do what they could to help and save, immediately recognized him as the one to lead, and by common consent he was made the commanding power, though owing to the lack of any fire apparatus whatever but little could be accomplished.

Immediately following this, however, a meeting was called to consider ways and means for fire protection. Mr. Martin was made president of an association at that time formed, and from which has grown the now efficient and fully equipped fire department of Montclair.

Mr. Martin returned to Plainfield in the year 1884 and naturally resumed his membership with Engine Co. No. 2, serving there as assistant foreman for one term. He was then advanced to the highest gift of the company, that of foreman, in which position he served for a full term.

While connected with Engine Co. No. 2, Mr. Martin was for several consecutive years their representative to the Relief Association, and served on several important committees, and always with entire satisfaction to those with whose interests he was entrusted.

In the year 1890 Mr. Martin, having become a resident of the Borough of North Plainfield, was tendered, unsought and unsolicited, the position of Chief of the North Plainfield Fire Department, an appreciation of his worth by those having the appointing power, being thus shown. Mr. Martin served in this position for one year and a half, resigning because of his inability to get from the fire committee such attention for his department as he deemed them entitled to, not however until he had seen the department grow from a membership of four men to its present efficient number for the protection of property. Mr. Martin justly feels proud of Warren Engine Co. No. 1, in which company he continues in active membership, retaining also an honorary membership in Engine Co. No. 2.

Ex Chief Martin is a thorough-going all-round fireman, and is also a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association, having served as an active fireman over 15 years.

Ex CHIEF AUGUSTE SALTZMAN of the city of Plainfield, whose portrait is presented above, is universally regarded as one of the most efficient, thorough-going and enthusiastic firemen in the community in which he dwells, and his long experience and association with the different organizations pertaining to firemen and fire matters, throughout the State and elsewhere, has made him considered a reliable authority in their affairs.

That Mr. Saltzman is held in high esteem not only by the firemen of his own town, but elsewhere is evident by his honorable record, and the large vote he has received in this contest, having led almost continuously from the start.

Mr. Saltzman moved to Plainfield in September, 1870, and has ever since resided here.

In February of the following year he joined the Alert Hose Co., No. 1, and immediately became one of its most active members.

In 1873 he was placed in command of the company by his election as foreman, having previously served in the capacity of second and first assistant foreman.

The members of Alert Hose Co. continued Mr. Saltzman at their head for six consecutive years, and, when the election of Chief of the department took place in 1886, he was made the choice for that position by the firemen of Plainfield, serving one year. He then re-entered on the active membership roll of his company and has continued an active member until this day.

That his devotion to the interest of the firemen and services rendered have been appreciated, and in part rewarded, will be seen from the fact of his election to the Presidency of Anoskeag Council of Plainfield Order of American Firemen. It is also shown by his election as National Treasurer of the Order of American Firemen, and Treasurer of the State of New Jersey Order of American Firemen. He was elected President of the Exempt Firemen's Association of the city of Plainfield, which position he has held for three years, and that of Vice President of the Firemen's Relief Association of Plainfield for a similar period. For the last five years he has been chosen a delegate to the New Jersey State Firemen's Association, and was also delegated by the local organization of Plainfield to the convention of the State Exempt Firemen's Association, and was among the first to assist in the organization of that institution, filling important positions on the different committees, and he has particularly active as a member of the Executive Board. At their last convention in the month of June of this year, he was honored with the position of second Vice-President, by virtue of which his name is placed on the roll of life membership of that organization. He is also an honorary member of Engine Company No. 2, also delegated by the local organization of Plainfield to the convention of the State Exempt Firemen's Association, and was among the first to assist in the organization of that institution, filling important positions on the different committees, and he has particularly active as a member of the Executive Board. At their last convention in the month of June of this year, he was honored with the position of second Vice-President, by virtue of which his name is placed on the roll of life membership of that organization. He is also an honorary member of Engine Company No. 2, also delegated by the local organization of Plainfield to the convention of the State Exempt Firemen's Association, and was

"Prisoners and Paupers."

Crime, poverty and disease are the three factors that multiply the sum of human misery. Henry A. Boles has given some startling facts in regard to the first two factors in his book "Prisoners and Paupers." He has investigated the charitable, penal and reformatory institutions of various states of the Union, and the fact that impresses him most forcibly in connection with them is the frightful waste of "human sympathy as well as of public funds."

Certainly the time has come when for its own sake society must put out its hand and stop by force the increase of crime and poverty. It is also time that a good deal of maudlin writing and speaking about the wrongs of the downtrodden classes was shut off. The downtrodden classes should be carefully strained through a wire sieve, so to speak, and separated into d. t. who will work and d. t. who will not work under any circumstances. Really it would be best for the public welfare if the second class could be put upon an island all by themselves and left to work for a living or starve.

An alarming increase of criminals and paupers comes from our foreign population, Mr. Boies finds. Within the last 10 years our criminals have increased 50 per cent faster than the population. The cost of keeping up penal and charitable institutions has increased in proportion to population five tinses as fast. Is this to be permitted to go on? The rapidity with which criminals are increasing among the negro population is an uncomfortable feature of the case. What is society going to do about it?

An invention which promises to be a boon to printers has lately been patented by a New York man. It is a composing stick which is held in a socket, the socket being kept in place by a belt around the body. The stick can be adjusted at exactly the right height. Thus the compositor will be left free to stick type with both hands. This unique composing stick has also a device by which the type is guided as it is put in position, so that the compositor will not have to follow it with his eye. An arrangement of spring band and sliding plate also keeps each letter in place as the line is formed, so that the worker does not have to hold one letter with his thumb till the next one is set. The whole machine is simple, light in weight and easily adjusted.

Before the time of Thomas A., the Edison family were chiefly noted for living a long time. Thomas A.'s grandfather lived 103 years and enjoyed almost every minute of them. The wizard's father is now 90 and one of the jolliest old boys on record. He expects to be as old as his father was. He has perfect health, is as full of life and good humor as a boy and is offended if anybody fancies he shows the slightest sign of old age, such as breaking health or infirmity of mind. Certainly he displays neither as yet. He makes light of walking 10 miles at a tramp any day. With this ancestry Thomas A. has a good many years in which to experiment yet, and it is quite within the possibilities that he may be able to extract power direct from coal before he dies.

Bismarck in a recent speech to delegates from German chambers of commerce told what he thought of millionaires in unmistakable language. He said: "Commerce and agriculture ought to go hand in hand. Although the latter in the present depression deserves all consideration, it ought not to be favored at the expense of trade and industry. The bitterness with which millionaires are regarded in Germany is not justified. It would be much better for Germany if she possessed, like England and America, ten times as many millionaires as she now has."

At the time of the Baring failure in 1891 the New York banks helped the London banks substantially in their straits. The Bank of England is now returning the kindness by facilitating the movement of gold to America. This is partly to relieve the American money stringency, partly also to enable British merchants to get in a good stroke of work in the way of making large purchases of breadstuff in the United States while the price is down.

About this time of year the household departments of newspapers contain numerous recipes for making salads, giving red pepper, mustard, vinegar, eggs, sugar, garlic, spices and many other things as flavoring substances. But the individual who has tried simply a dressing for salads or vegetables of just the best quality of olive oil and lemon juice will not exchange it for all the heathenish mixed up sauces in the universe.

HUNDREDS LOST.

The List of the Cyclone's Victims Increases.

THE COAST WRECK STREWN.

Great Damage Done All Through the Northern States.

In One Locality In Georgia Alone Fifty One Hundred Persons Were Drowned or Crushed—An Island Swept Clean—Fifty Vessels Dashed Ashore, and Some Left High and Dry—The Wind Picked Up a Railroad Track, Ties and All—Several Persons Struck by Lightning.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 30.—A special from Port Royal, S. C., brings the startling information that fully 100 lives have been lost at Port Royal, Beaufort and neighboring points by drowning during the storm.

Over 50 of these were seen by the correspondent, and his information regarding the others who received from reliable sources. Of the 100 persons killed and drowned only six were white, the others being negroes.

The negroes were so frightened and terror stricken that many were killed and drowned by not leaving their cabins to seek places of safety.

Twenty persons were drowned on Paris Island. No news has been received from St. Helena, four miles from Beaufort.

It is believed that fully 25 lives were lost between Port Royal and Seabrook—all negroes.

Every house in Beaufort and Port Royal was damaged to some extent, and a number of barges and craft were wrecked and blown ashore. The Crosser Mining company loses $50,000. The total losses are estimated in the neighborhood of $900,000.

Disasters at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 30.—The list of fatalities is gradually growing, and it is impossible to tell to what extent it will grow. Several bodies of drowned persons have been picked up, and search is now being made for others who are missing. Every hour seems to bring some new story of a death or a wreck of the storm. The fatalities already reported are:

A. G. Ulmer, assistant cashier of the Central Railroad bank, was drowned on Hutchinson's island.

R. Miller, his dairyman, has not been found, and it is supposed that he was also drowned.

Tony Holmes (colored), crushed in a house on Hutchinson's island.

Three unknown negroes, drowned on Brampton's plantation, four miles from the city.

Lewis Gagnett (colored), ran into a live trolley wire.

A 5-year-old boy, drowned on Hutchinson's island.

John Williams, Mary Butler and Sarah Green, drowned on a rice plantation south of the city.

Two unknown sailors, drowned at Tybee Island.

At Tybee four negroes engaged in clearing the railroad tracks were drowned.

A sailor and the cabin boy on the schooner Harold, which is on her side on North Beach, are drowned.

It is reported that eight of the crew of a terrapin sloop which went ashore on the south end were drowned.

Fifty More Missing.

Forty to fifty other persons are reported missing, and it is supposed, as nothing has been heard from them, that their bodies will be found later.

Twelve barks and barkentines, which were anchored at the quarantine station, were blown high and dry upon the marsh, and some of them were carried by the storm across the marsh one and a half miles distant from the station. One of the vessels at Tybee was completely capsized, and three clubhouses on the island were blown entirely down. Others were flooded, and the people sought shelter wherever they could find it.

The wires are all down, and Savannah is almost entirely shut off from telegraphic communication. The north end is practically demolished. The water swept with tremendous force over this part of the island, railroad tracks being carried from 200 to 500 feet. An empty train is in the woods. The trains on all roads are coming irregularly, and some have entirely stopped to repair washouts.

Vessels Blown High and Dry.

More than 30 wrecks have been reported as far north as Tybee. Fifteen are on and off Tybee were wrecked or badly damaged.

More than that number of smaller craft are missing and are believed to have been lost. The schooner Lena Smith, reported ashore, lies high upon Tybee beach just west of the wharf. Six unknown vessels are reported ashore on Tybee beach from the outside.

The other disasters which occurred to the shipping between the quarantine station and Tybee roads are:

The Norwegian bark Harrold, which is lying on the Tybee beach. The Norwegian bark Linden is at the quarantine station high and dry in the marsh, with her foremast gone.

The Norwegian bark Elma is also up in the marsh at quarantine. The Norwegian Loyal is in the marsh near the quarantine station, with all of her masts gone. The Portuguese bark Audacia is high and dry and is considered to be a total wreck. The bark Mexico, which was lying at the upper quarantine wharves, is now in between the latest row of pilings of the wharf. How she got there is a wonder. Apparently she must have been lifted over the outside pilings. The British barkentine Genesta is high and dry on McQueen's island just abreast of Venus Point. She is apparently in good shape, with everything standing.

The only vessel that rode safely to her anchorage during the storm was the bark Cosmine.

Two of Sanford Ross' dredges, Nos. 5 and 7, are on McQueen's island about half way between St. Augustine creek and Lazaretto creek. The dredge Tommachichi is over in the marsh high and dry, having been blown from Venus Point across Long island.

The Ormus was blown from her dock across the river to the Savannah side, and afterward was blown over the river again and now lies high and dry on a shoal opposite Jefferson.

The steamer had steamboat Abbeville and oysterboat Fred F. Brown, belonging to the Oyster Canning and Cultivation company of Brunswick, are ashore at Smart's wharf. The Abbeville is a complete wreck.

Freaks of the Hurricane.

The steamer Bannan, from New York to Cardenas, Cuba, Captain Hansen, came into Tybee Island very badly damaged. The revenue cutter Boutwell arrived, bringing Captain Bannen and family from St. Catherine's island. Much damage was done on the island.

The three masted schooner Beatrice Mc. Lean of St. Johns, recently ordered to Savannah by the quarantine authorities of Savannah, had put into St. Catherine's for an harbor and was drawn high up in the woods on the west side of St. Catherine's island, and the schooners Mary and Maid of the Mist near the Florida passage.

Nothing has been heard from the steamship City of Savannah, now many hours overdue.

Tybee island is about wrecked. Had the island been washed away, the demolition and destruction could not have been much worse than it is. Houses were blown, burned, washed away and otherwise demolished. The railroad track was blown from the ground, and parts of it stood up along the line like a fence. Rails were twisted, and spikes were pulled from the crossties.

The railroad track was a complete wreck, part being blown several hundred feet from where it was lying over into the woods. To get a train up from Tybee a new track will have to be built over almost the entire distance. Wrecks are not a circumstance to the wretched condition into which the tracks were twisted by the winds as if they were playthings. At least half the trees of the island have been blown down or badly damaged. Damages to buildings in Savannah are being rapidly repaired.

The Storm In New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Not for years has one storm done so destructive fishing work as the two just passed. Shipping men do not recollect any such tales of wreck and disaster as soon as have been brought into port during the last few days, and now before the tale of disaster wrought by one storm is ended there comes a second storm more widespread in its fury and much more disastrous in its effects.

Nearly every incoming craft reported damages of a more or less serious nature, and several crews of abandoned schooners have reached port.

The harbor was the scene of some lively experiences. Ferryboats ran irregularly or not at all, and water communication with many suburbs was suspended.

Damage at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 30.—Heavy damage was done here by the storm. The side walls of Proctor's Opera House were toppled over, and the steeple of St. Paul's church was badly damaged. The oyster beds are thought to be almost entirely ruined. The harbor is unusually well filled with ships which put in for safety and have remained all day.

Wrecks Off Portsmouth.

BOSTON, Aug. 30.—The storm was the worst known off City Point for 20 years. The damage to yachts and small boats in this section is estimated at $10,000. A number of wrecks are reported off Portsmouth, but the sea is so rough that tugboats and Isles of Shoals steamers have been unable to move out of the river.

Three Victims of the Storm.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The bodies of three unknown drowned men were washed ashore from the Hudson river. Two were found opposite Rockefeller's estate at Tarrytown, and one was picked up at Riverdale. It is supposed that the men were drowned from a canalboat wrecked in the storm.

Flying Signals of Distress.

BEAUFORT, N. C., Aug. 30.—A three masted schooner, unknown, with lost sails, is flying flags for immediate assistance off the bar; also an unknown large vessel with mast gone is flying colors of distress. The bar is impassable, and for some time assistance cannot be rendered.

Captain, Mate and Vessel Lost.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Aug. 30.—The three masted schooner Three Sisters was wrecked and abandoned off Cape Fear. Her commander, Captain Isaac Simpson, of Market Hook, Pa., and Mate Johnson Heede of Park avenue, Baltimore, were washed overboard and drowned.

Blown From a Bicycle and Killed.

MINEOLA, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Benjamin Smith of Mineola, aged 16, while riding a bicycle on the Jericho turnpike, was blown from the bicycle under a market wagon driven by Farmer Theil, of Westbury. His neck was broken, and he died five minutes later.

Blown Off the Boom.

HUNTINGTON, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Richard Hoolahan, aged 28 years, was drowned off the schooner Annie Derckson at Cold Spring harbor. The wind was blowing a gale, and Hoolahan was out on the boom taking a reef in the mainsail.

Blew One Hundred Miles an Hour.

MOUNT WASHINGTON, N. H., Aug. 30.—The wind blew from the northeast at times with a velocity of upward of 100 miles an hour. The wind was so high that no trains have reached the summit since Monday.

Charleston Shaken.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 30.—This city has again stood in the track of a cyclone which has shaken the old city to its foundation stones. The damage to property cannot be told, and the loss of life is unknown.

Lightning Killed Three Children.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 30.—Three children—Lawrence Blair, aged 11, and two little girls named Fulman—were struck and killed by lightning while they were playing under an apple tree.

Railroad Bridge Burned.

CARLISLE, Pa., Aug. 30.—The Philadelphia and Reading railroad bridge at Brandtsville, this county, was struck by lightning and totally burned.

Dock Destroyed and Yacht Sunk.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Aug. 30.—The gale on Saratoga lake destroyed the Thomas Lake House dock and sank the steamboat Nellie Price.

Hop Yards Damaged.

FORT PLAIN, N. Y., Aug. 30.—A heavy wind has been raging in the Mohawk valley. Much damage has been done to the hop yards.

Peach Crop Damaged.

MILFORD, Del., Aug. 30.—The storm has about ruined the remainder of the peach crop in this section to the extent of 150,000 baskets.

A Bark Missing.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The bark Tremont, from Mobile July 2 for Fayal, is reported as going ashore during a hurricane.

Rough In Newburg Bay.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Canalboats had a serious time in Newburg bay.

A Sixty Mile an Hour Gale.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 30.—The wind blew at 5 40 miles an hour velocity.

CRISP TOOK THE FLOOR.

The Speaker Sharply Answers Ex-Speaker Reed.

LONG FIGHT IN THE SENATE BEGUN

Voorhees Offers the Senate Committee's Bill as a Substitute For the Wilson Repeal Bill—Silver Men Say They Will Prolong the Struggle.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The chairman of the finance committee was, as he had promised to be, very prolific in reporting to the senate the action of the committee on the house bill to repeal part of the Sherman law.

As soon as the reading of the journal was finished Mr. Voorhees rose and reported back the bill with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. It was placed on the calendar and will be, according to the notice given by Mr. Voorhees, pressed for consideration to the exclusion of other business.

The substitute is, word for word, the same bill that was reported by the finance committee two weeks ago.

The first speech against the substitute was made by Mr. Gordon of Georgia, who argued that there should be delay before the repeal of the Sherman law, which he wanted to be immediate and unconditional.

Mr. Teller made a long argument to show that the Sherman law had not produced the existing financial stringency.

A resolution which Mr. Stewart had offered last Monday, inquiring of the secretary of the treasury whether there will be a deficiency in the revenues of the government during the current year, was referred to the finance committee after a long discussion.

Silver Men Will Make a Long Fight.

There was an interesting executive session of the senate, at which there was an understanding of politics and silver. After a batch of names had been acted upon Senator Gorman, acting for the steering committee, submitted a proposition that at the extraordinary session of congress financial matters, and they alone, should receive the attention of the senate. A brief speech was made by a leading Democrat urging that such legislation should be speedily transacted and that thereupon congress should adjourn.

This stirred up the silver men from the west, who at once began an assault upon the proposition suggested by Mr. Gorman. They took the ground that the session would be a long one, and stated that they would never give up their fight for silver, and prophesied that Dec. 1 would find congress still in session and discussing the financial question. It is said that there was some plain talk on both sides of the silver question, and the general sentiment when the session adjourned was that the senate was further apart than ever. Nonaction was taken on Mr. Gorman's suggestion.

Crisp Answers Reed.

The feature of the house proceedings was the debut of Mr. Crisp as a speaker on the floor. He was led to leave his chair by some caustic criticisms made by Mr. Reed upon the proposed code of rules, and his appearance upon the arena of debate was warmly applauded. The discussion between the two leaders was very animated, but led to no conclusion.

Mr. Reed twitted the Democrats upon their partial approval of the rules of the fifty-first congress, but, in a humorous vein, and contended that they had no gone far enough. He then, in a more serious manner, argued in favor of the rights of the majority, which rights had been firmly maintained in the fifty-first congress. Now the house was in the habit of dodging measures instead of meeting them.

He criticised the provisions of the rules which, he claimed, vest in the committee on rules with the authority which should be vested in the speaker. He also adopted the system of rules which would give to the majority control and take away from the fillbuster his opportunity to stop the consideration of a measure. It was better to have a speaker exercise power in the full light of public opinion than to exercise it in the committee on rules or in cloak room.

Then, for the first time this session, the speaker took the floor, having called Mr. Richardson to the chair, and replied to the criticisms of the gentleman from Maine.

He said there were provisions in this code which were taken substantially from the rules of the fifty-first congress. Neither himself nor any member of the committee on rules would refrain from reporting rules simply because they were part of the rules of the fifty-first congress. So much of those rules was to be commended; very much of those rules had been by the country absolutely condemned. [Applause.] The gentleman from Maine, when he stood up before the country and spoke of the rules of the fifty-first congress, failed to speak of the practices adopted in how the rules were adopted which were so odious to the country. [Applause.] The first section in the fifty-first congress which was odious to the country was the action under any rule, but it was the arbitrary, high handed action on the part of the speaker without authority of rules, without authority of any one.

Need Has Regrets.

Mr. Reed, in reply, said that it was unusual for the presiding officer of this body to leave his exalted position and partake in the discussion on the floor. It was even a question whether he ought to do it at all. But of this action he made no question. The gentleman from Georgia alone was the judge of his action. If the gentleman did not believe that the other members of the committee on rules were competent to the position, it was for him to decide when his powerful aid should be thrown into the balance. He (Reed) regretted that the speaker had taken the floor not only on general principles, but because he had introduced into the debate a certain amount of partisanship, thereby showing that those not of the house had survived the measures of the fifty-first congress the present speaker had not. To what had been said about that personality he would not reply, for he would not allow this debate to degenerate into a personal question. [Republican applause.]

The debate was continued by Messrs. Springer, Bentner and Hooker, who contended that the membership of the committee on rules should be increased; Pickler, who agreed with Hooker on this point; Cummings, Hepburn and Bryan.

Then the subject was dropped, and Mr. Springer introduced a bill to provide for the coinage of the seigniorage silver in the treasury. Referred. The house then adjourned.

UNDER DOCTORS' KNIVES

That Alleged Operation on the President's Jaw.

IT IS CONFIRMED AND DENIED.

Dr. Hasbrouck, Who Administered the Anesthetic, Gives the Details of the Operation on the Yacht—Mrs. Cleveland Did Not Know It—Denied at Gray Gables.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The Advertiser today publishes an interview with Dr. Hasbrouck concerning the operation performed on President Cleveland at Gray Gables. The article says:

The operation was performed by Drs. Bryant (who is still at Gray Gables), Ferdinand Hasbrouck, the eminent dentist of Lafayette place, and a third surgeon whose name for professional reasons has so far been withheld. The statement made was by Dr. Hasbrouck, the dentist, who was called upon for the assistance of his skill in the administration of nitrous oxide gas, which was the anesthetic given to render the President unconscious before the surgeons began to use their knives and saws.

The truth concerning the president's condition has been concealed for nearly two months, although Mr. Cleveland himself announced publicly just before he last left Washington for his summer home at Buzzards Bay that his health was seriously shattered. Dr. Hasbrouck said:

"The president's disease is or was—for the operation may have been successful in removing it—a growth in the bones of his left upper jaw and the adjoining bones of the nose. The operation consisted in removing the diseased portions of the bone and was performed about 10:30 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, July 1, while the president was on board Mr. Benedict's yacht, the Oneida.

"The diseased bone was cut away piece by piece and perhaps an inch or more of it so removed. While the operation was in progress the president revived from the effects of the anesthetic, and I was obliged to administer it to him a second time.

"Mr. Cleveland stood the nitrous oxide very well, and no bad effects were produced by it. He rallied very quickly. The operation, so far as I could see, was an entire success. The loss of blood was not great."

Another Confirmation.

The Press also prints today an interview with Dr. Hasbrouck, in which he gives the details of the operation. The article says:

Dr. Hasbrouck's stay on the yacht was of two days' duration. It was thought that a second operation might be necessary, provided a secondary hemorrhage occurred, which seemed extremely probable on account of the excessive flow of blood during the operation. In this event another operation would have been necessary, so that Dr. Hasbrouck and his anesthetic had to be kept at hand ready for the emergency, which fortunately did not occur.

Gas instead of ether had to be used in Mr. Cleveland's case, as severe hemorrhages were anticipated, which might possibly lead to a flow of blood into the windpipe. In such event suffocation might easily occur before the effects of the ether had passed away, whereas one recovers from the gas very quickly and by coughing ejects the blood from the lung passages.

Mrs. Cleveland Kept In Ignorance.

While the president's jaw and mouth were swathed in surgical bandages two weeks after the operation, physicians, by Mr. Cleveland's direction, concealed from Mrs. Cleveland the nature of the operation which had been performed and the awful malady which it was hoped to uproot.

Outdoor exercise and sea air have a powerful effect on Mr. Cleveland at all times, and Dr. Bryant has been with him out in the boat much of the time for two months in the hope of building up his system and increasing his vitality. A healthy healing of the wound in the inside of the upper jaw is all that is necessary to make his complete recovery probable, and that is now believed to be assured.

Secretary Lamont is said to be the only member of the cabinet who was taken into the confidence of the president and his physicians, and it was Secretary Lamont's remark to a politician, quieted by The Press yesterday, which gave the New York friends of Mr. Cleveland the first intimation that his life was in peril.

F. J. Edwards, the well known correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, made public the fact of the operation without confirmation from Dr. Bryant or Dr. Hasbrouck.

The World's Denial.

The World, on the other hand, has this dispatch from Gray Gables:

There is absolutely no foundation for the current revivals of old stories that Mr. Cleveland is suffering with cancer or any other serious ailment. Boston newspapers which have reached Buzzards Bay contain the statement sent out from Philadelphia that an operation is now being performed upon Mr. Cleveland. The World correspondent had at Gray Gables a long talk with Mr. Cleveland and found him in excellent health, cheerful and vigorous.

Mr. Cleveland said: "I am feeling very well, better than when I came here. I have been out on the water a good deal, but not so much as I hoped to be. Still I have enjoyed a good use of that boat you saw there and have enjoyed the cool sea breezes."

The story which found a new birth in the evening newspapers began its career early last July. It was then said that Mr. Cleveland was suffering with cancer and that an operation had been performed. The story was denied promptly at Gray Gables by Dr. Bryant and Colonel Lamont.

Wrecked by a Landslide.

NOT TO MARRY SANDOW.

Lillian Russell Was Very Angry When She Heard the Story.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Startling reports to the contrary notwithstanding, the fair Lillian Russell will not marry Eugene Sandow, the strong man now giving exhibitions in Chicago—so the sister of this popular singer declared yesterday.

To be sure a large picture of the strong man, ornaments Miss Russell's mantel, but when the singer's sister read an interview with the muscular professor in which he apparently declines to stamp out the rumors of the little romance between himself and Lillian she said:

"Mr. Sandow does not say anything positive in his talk. He does not appear to be very sure. Well, I'm sure—sure that there is not a spark of truth to give foundation for such a report. If my sister wished to marry, I don't think she would find any difficulty in procuring a husband, but now I believe matrimony is farther from her her thoughts than any other subject. We leave for New York Monday, and Lillian will spend six or eight weeks in Europe."

Will J. Davis, manager of the Columbia theater, where Miss Russell is playing, declared the story false, but, adding: "When Miss Russell heard about it, she became so mad that she could hardly sing. It simply made her sick."

FIGHT WITH CIRCUS MEN.

Forepaugh's Show In Difficulty In a Vermont Town.

HYDE PARK, Vt., Aug. 30.—Forepaugh's circus exhibited here. The attempts of Sheriff Martin of Montgomery to arrest one man met with resistance, and Sheriff Stevens of Lamoille county called a posse and assisted. A general fight ensued, in which the circus men used bludgeons, knives and pistols, but the officers succeeded in putting 13 men in jail. Officers Stevens, Town and Waite were severely handled, but pluckily held their ground and effected the arrest of most of the gang. All the property of the circus off the railroad track was attached. It is not certainly known whether or not Forepaugh was personally present, but officers are in pursuit of one man supposed to be he who took an early leave. Collateral was finally deposited, and the circus proceeded to Richmond today.

Drowned In the Surf.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 30.—Bernard L. Lynch of this city, 63, stopping in a cottage at Pleasure Beach, about five miles from here, and Benjamin Meade Carroll, 21, of this city, were drowned in the surf. Lynch was on a veranda near by with his wife and daughter and rushed down to the water and tried to rescue Carroll. Lynch also became exhausted and drowned in the sight of his wife and daughter.

A French Protectorate Imminent.

LONDON, Aug. 30. — Dispatches from Bangkok and Singapore to The Pall Mall Gazette says that a French protectorate over Siam is imminent. The Gazette therefore urges that all chambers of commerce in Great Britain hold a convention at once and agree upon a protest to the government against permitting France thus to execute a policy ruinous to British trade in the east.

A Plague of Grasshoppers.

HAMBURG, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Like a revistation of the plague of Egypt, grasshoppers have settled down upon the farming districts in this section of western New York and eaten everything green in sight. The loss will be very large. Acres on acres, which a short time ago were fresh and green with ripening crops, are now bare and barren wastes of leafless stalks and branches.

New Liberty Bell Reaches Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The Columbian liberty bell, manufactured at Troy, Troy, N. Y., now being transported to Chicago, arrived in Washington and remained several hours, being viewed by hundreds of citizens. The bell was bedecked with flowers in profusion, and on the car occupied by the bell were several daughters of the Society of the American Revolution.

Women Saved the Crew.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—In the southeast gale the bark Marsha B. Thacher of New York was driven ashore one mile west of the Point Lookout life saving station on Point Lookout, and 11 men were rescued from the burning hull of the wreck by an improvised life saving crew, consisting of two women, a 15-year-old girl, a boy and three men.

Paymaster Sullivan Guilty.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The court martial which has been trying Paymaster John Clyde Sullivan of the navy at the Mare Island navy yard for alleged embezzlement of about $12,000 and irregularities in his accounts has found him guilty on all the charges and sentenced him to dismissal from the navy.

Republicans Advocate a New Party.

DENVER, Aug. 30.—The Times prints three columns of interviews with leading Colorado Republicans, in which they advocate entire separation from the Republican party and the formation of a new organization, which shall have for its motto and issue the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council have fixed the thirty-first day of August, A. D. 1893, at eight o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 109 Park avenue, in the City of Plainfield, as the time and place for hearing all persons interested in the petition of Edward Mulford, the commissioners appointed by the Common Council for the purpose of the improvement described, "An Ordinance to widen Madison avenue from the southerly line of Front street to the northerly line of Second street to the northeasterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey," approved June 5, 1893, so much of the street proposed to be widened and laid out in Madison avenue by the report of the commissioners of the street from Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey. The alterations proposed to be made to widen said Madison avenue so as to open the same shall be of the uniform width of twenty-five feet on each side of the center line thereof, such center line is described in said ordinance and shown on map on file in the office of the City Engineer, and the alterations proposed to be made in the width of Madison avenue from West Front street to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., dated 1893, made by F. A. Dunham, civil engineer.

The lands and real estate intended to be taken for such purpose are all those lands within the boundaries of either side of said centre line between the southeasterly side line of West Front street and the northwesterly side line of Second street and the northwesterly side of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, as shown on said map and plan of the same, to which reference is hereby made for the more particular description.

By order of the Common Council.

Dated August 16, 1893. E. RUNYON, City Clerk. 8 16 14

GETTING EVEN.

He Had Plenty of Time, So He Didn't Mind.

Custom House Inspector in New York (to suspicious looking passenger)—Hold on a moment! What is that in your ear?

Suspicious Looking Passenger (just landed)—Nothing, sir. Nothing at all but a piece of cotton, I assure you.

[Examining.] "Perhaps not, but I'll just take it out and look at it. If you've got any valuable concealed in it they must be mighty small. I don't find anything. That bale of cotton is too tall. I'll trouble you to let me take a look at it."

[Tremblingly.] "There's nothing the matter with my hat, I assure you. It's the latest London style. Try it."

"With your leave, my friend, I'll examine it. Ha! I thought so! It's got a false top. [Spends fifteen minutes examining the false top and finds nothing.] If there's anything concealed in that hat it's a little too slick a job for me. What's that you're holding behind you?"

"Upon my word, sir, I—it's nothing but a little valise."

"I'll inspect it, if you please. H'm—just so! Nicely furnished compartment! I'm up to all these dodges, my friend. [Ransacks secret compartment in vain. Nothing there.] Step into the office, with me, my friend. One of your shoes looks larger than the other. Take it off, if you please. Ha! false sole! I suspected it. [Searches false sole with much thoroughness. Same result.] By George, if you've got anything hid about you you're keeping it pretty well hid. Take off your upper garments. Now you're getting on to it. Porous plaster, eh? Guess you hadn't heard of the fellow that tried to work that game on us the other day and lost $600 worth of diamonds on the strength of it. [With considerable trouble gets porous plaster off and finds nothing.] Say, what kind of a joke is this you're putting up on my anyhow?"

"Don't you want to see the black lump on the back of my neck? I had a mighty fine carbuncle there once."

"You needn't be so everlasting fresh about it. I'm only doing my"—

"Wouldn't you like to inspect my trunk before I put on my clothes again? I might have a false diaphragm, you know."

(Crustily.) "That'll do, sir. My time is worth ten dollars an hour, and I can't waste any more of it on you."

"My time isn't worth ten dollars a week. Go ahead."

"I'm done with you, sir."

"Nothing else you want to overhaul?"

"Nothing."

(Putting on his upper garments again.) "Then you may keep that porous plaster as a little memento. Lovely morning, isn't it? Good day!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Theatrical Duel.

It was subsequent to the first visit of Erastus Cauliflower, son of old Cauliflower, to the theater, that a cloud of trouble hovered for an indefinite period over his bright horizon. One morning his mother went to the foot of the stairs and said persuasively:

"Erastus!"

A hoarse voice answered from beneath the coverlids.

"Avaunt! Thine eyes are marrowless!"

"Erastus, get up and don't speak again spoke."

"Exeunt Cauliflower."

"Vanish, thou spectral shape! Resolve to vaporish air!"

"Why, Erastus, dear, what's the matter?"

"Cry sleep no more to all the house! Macbeth doth murder sleep!"

Then the fond mother held a hurried conversation with the equally indulgent old man.

"I'm afraid," she said, "that he's got the complaint pretty badly. You know it's about and if it's catching and there's—you—and—me—oh, Cauliflower, do go up and see if he ain't in a high fever—see if he's got a knife or a pistol."

Cauliflower made a rapid ascent to the upper regions, which was followed by a rapidly executed administration of a peculiar piece of leather termed a trunk strap, accompanied by his vehement adjuration:

"Dost thou not made for sportive tricks, will wallop thee, Erastus Cauliflower, until thy rich blood warms 'neath the chastening blows! Wilst rise up, stage struck youth?"

And Erastus didst answer, as he pranced around in pain and a blue hickory shirt. "Oh, pa, I will." —Texas Siftings.

Unnecessary Expense.

Among the many stories told of Nantucket by old residents and frequent visitors is one in point, while it seems almost improbable, is nevertheless vouched for by unimpeachable authorities.

Some years ago a man in Nantucket was tried for petty larceny and sentenced by the judge to three months in jail. A few days after the trial, the sheriff, accompanied by the sheriff, took his prisoner on the Boston boat, when they passed a man who was busily sawing wood.

The sawyer stopped his work, touched his hat politely, and said, "Good morning, judge."

The judge looked at him earnestly a moment, passed on a little way, and then turned to glance backward, saying to the sheriff:

"Why, isn't that the man I sentenced to three months in jail the other day?"

"Yes," replied the sheriff, with some hesitation; "yes, that is the man. But you—why, you see, judge—we—we don't happen to have anybody else to jail just now, and we thought 'twould be a sort of useless expense for us to hire somebody to keep the jail for three months just for this one man so I gave him the key and told him if he'd sleep there nights I guessed it would be all right."—Youth's Companion.

The Penalty of Genius.

I can scribble tragic verses
Full of sonorous grams and curses;
I can write up catchy headlines that will suit

On the slightest provocation
I can thunder in oration,
That will silence my opponents and scatter them post haste.

If I dabble in philosophy,
I am lauded with the praises of the man I

I've as sarcastic as nearly charming,
And a have quite alarming
I ornate among the maidens when I walk upon

A YARD OF SILK.

Mr. Noboddy Encounters a Heap of Trouble.

"Oh, I'm so tired!" said Mrs. Nobody at luncheon one day.

"What in the world have you been doing to make you tired?" wonderingly inquired Mr. Nobody. "I pay for the services of several servants, and I can't imagine how a woman surrounded as you are manages to weary herself."

"It is very kind of you, my dear, to offer your services," she responded, "and now that I think of it, I believe I'll take a yard of silk which my dressmaker says I need to finish a gown she is making for me. If I'll give you a sample of the goods will you bring a yard of it home with you this evening on your way down town?"

Mr. Nobody was about to say he was very busy, but just then the thought occurred to him that it was a good opportunity to impress upon his wife's mind what a simple thing it is to do shopping, so he replied:

"Why, certainly, my dear; it will only take half a minute of my time. I can just as well get it as not."

A half hour later Mr. Nobody laid a sample of extraordinary black silk before a salesman, remarking as he did so that he wished a yard of the same material. The salesman studied the sample very carefully, felt of it, held it up to the light and finally asked:

"Was this sample bought here?"

"I don't know," said Mr. Nobody, wondering what in the world that had to do with the matter. Then the clerk, after showing the sample to another salesman, came back and said, "Very sorry, but we're nothing in the store to match that."

"What!" said Mr Nobody in a dazed sense of mind, "can't match common black silk? Why, I've bought it here at three stores. Here a clerk took down about fifty pieces of silk, all but two of which he put back. Then he carried to the front of the store. Mr. Nobody, who was becoming anxious to get back to his office, closely followed.

"This piece," said the clerk, "is the right color, but it is too heavy; this one is the right weight, but not the right shade. Sorry, but neither of them will do," and Mr. Nobody in a perplexed state of mind turned on. At the next store the salesman took a great deal of time and went about the work of matching silk as though he were the only man on earth who knew just how it should be done. From a large number of pieces he selected three, which he took to a place where the light was good. Mr. Nobody took an active interest in the deliberations. "This piece would do, only it is too heavy; this is right in weight, but off in color; this one is right in weight and color, but you see it's too in gloss. Very sorry that none of them will answer."

Mr. Nobody groaned, remarked something addressed to no one in particular and started on. The afternoon was fast wearing away and it was beginning to grow dark. The stores were crowded and hot as ovens. Mr. Nobody's collar was melted and his stock of patience was reduced to a remnant; but he assured himself that he would buy that piece of silk if it took all summer. In the next store hope shone brightly for an instant. "This piece of silk," said the salesman, "is all right in weight, color and gloss, but the twill is not the same as the sample and could not be used with it."

From that time on Mr. Nobody had no recollection of what happened. His mind seemed to have become dazed in his memory from that moment. All he remembers is that he asked by the police, who discovered him as his house. He is just now recovering from his nervous spell of brain fever, but the doctor says it would prove fatal if any one should mention shopping to him during the next six months.—Chicago Times.

TOMMY ON MUSIC.

He Writes An Essay That Is Worth Printing.

"Now, Tommy," said the new teacher, "you must learn to speak well and write well, and to do this you must have practice, so you can write one essay a week. Is there any subject you would prefer?"

"No'm," answered Tommy, hoping to escape the forbidden task.

"Then," said the teacher, "I will give you one. You may write your first essay on music."

Poor Tommy was discouraged. The idea of a boy like him writing an essay on music! All right, he wasn't going to be bluffed, and he told the teacher he would do it.

The next Tuesday afternoon the teacher was handed the following:

ESSAY ON MUSIC.

All noises are of two kinds—musikel and otherwise, generally otherwise.

When music begun nobody is sure. Meb he when Adam waked up on creation mornin and went out to kill a Spring Chicken for Eve's breakfast, he heard the first Cow singing contralto, which made our forefather feel very sad. It made him went to go in the house and hear Eve singing "Sweet Violets" to little Cain, who was afterwards a murderer, and no wonder.

Several hundred years after that "Only a Pansy Blossom" was composed, and then began the Dark Ages.

Now music rules the world. (I found that in a book.) No other art or science ever had so many followers—not even Poker. And that is why we have Gilmore's Ochestra and Thomases Band and the High School Ockestra.

Among the greatest musikians the world ever seen is Monark and Beethoven. Sepho gave piano, violin and harmony les sons in ancient Grease, and became so famous that she had a ferryboat named after her.

Monark is best known by a picture called "Last Hours of Monark."

Sappho, Monark and Beethoven are dead, but Joe Flinn still lives, because he wrote "Down Went McGinty."

I will close my essay with some sweet music of my own.

Of all sweet words that tongue can speak,
The sweetest are these, 'no school next week.'

Her Reason.

Even an artistic judgment depends on "the point of view." A lady who saw that her servant girl seemed to take a certain interest in the objects of art in her parlor said to her:

"Which one of these figures do you like best, Mary?"

"The Venus, mum," said Mary, pointing to the armless Venus of Milo.

"And why do you like the Venus best?"

"Sure, it's the aisiest to doost, mum," answered the girl.—Youth's Companion.

FROM "THE HANDBOOK OF PLOTS."

A Sample Plot Selected from "Every Man His Own Novelist."

The following from "The Handbook of Plots, or, Every Man His Own Novelist," an extract from which has been given previously, is capable of expansion into a full blown novel and seems to be worthy of reproduction:

I.

The beautiful girl was in love with the young man, but he was poor, she was extravagant, and her father owned a wealthy son-in-law. As she sat in her boudoir, bathed in scalding tears (she couldn't bear a cold bath), she cried, "Alas! must I give him up?"

II.

The young man pleaded with her to fly with him, and she had almost made up her mind to do it and abjure fine clothes forever when the gruff father appeared and told him to begone. He promptly bewent.

III.

The wealthy suitor pleaded and refused to be magnanimous or anything else except her husband, and finally after waiting for three days to hear from the young man she yielded to the wealthy suitor's pleadings and the gruff father's commands and promised to let the suitor pay for her fine clothes in the future.

IV.

The gruff father promptly wrote to the young man, informing him of the beautiful girl's betrothal to the wealthy suitor, who didn't suit her, and told him that his acquaintance in that ward would be a signal for the unceremonious gif forcwave yo pacilage on the little house that he had mortgaged to buy the beautiful girl flowers.

V.

The young man just as promptly came into both the ward and the precinct, appeared one night at the beautiful girl's window, informed her that he had discovered a terrible secret, in view of which she had better continue in the path she had chosen, but he advised her to make the wealthy suitor deed her half his property before the marriage.

VI.

The beautiful girl came again in tears at the time that the young man was arrested as a burglar while trying to get away from the house, but she recovered in time to act on the suggestion regarding the wealthy suitor's property.

VII.

The church was brilliantly lighted and there was a fashionable assemblage present, but the bride faltered as she walked up the aisle, asking herself: "Will he be there? Will he see me?"

VIII.

She funively glanced around and grew pale as the ceremony proceeded. She had hoped against hope that something would happen to stop it, but at last the final words were said.

IX.

The beautiful girl almost fainted as they turned away from the altar. She gasped as she saw the young man standing there with a revolver, and one of the bridesmaids had to support her.

X.

"Two years ago you were in New York," said the stranger to the groom.

"I was," said the groom.

"In merc sport," continued the stranger, "you one evening called a young woman your wife and introduced her to some friends as such."

"Alas! I did," admitted the groom.

"Accepting as the law lays down," said the stranger, "that constituted a common law marriage. This young woman is free, and I now arrest you for bigamy."

[NOTE.—Any one can finish this story. Has she the young man and half the wealthy suitor's money? What would she say? How did the young man get out of jail? Oh, he just sent out the way they usually do in novels. Of course he couldn't admit that he had been at the beautiful girl's window.]

At the Soda Fountain.

A nice party of girls went into a drug store. "I will treat," said the little redhaired one.

"Oh, no; you treated last time," objected Katie with the curls.

"Say, Mis have never treated at all," shouted some others.

"Well, go on," said Mia.

Then they all smiled at once at the soda water man.

"Vanille?"

"Lemon—strawberry—chocolate—coffee —vanilla—one—the—one—yes—me—too!" they said, but they said it all at once, and it sounded a good deal as this looks: "Lemstraw—chockberrycoffa—yesterme—tooth ache—me—stat!"

"Which shall vanilla?"

This from the soda water man, who was just as calm as anything.

Red Hair had changed her mind. Then they all changed their minds and swapped 'fif choices, and they all said again:

"Coffberrychocktis — lemon — toovanillatooth—ache—me—stat!"

Meanwhile he had done a chocolate.

"Which lady takes chocolate?"

"Oh, I guess I will," said Mia.

"I think I'd better wait to take yourself first," Red Hair criticised, with much candor and ill humor.

"Well, go on, take it yourself."

"Me! Oh, I don't want chocolate, I want coffee."

"Well, who will have it?"

Nobody wanted it. Mia began to breathe hard.

"You are all just as mean as you can be," she panted.

"I am sure you should not ask us to have soda if you won't let us choose our own choice," Red Hair said with severity.

Then they all bolloxed together at each other, and presently the fur flew out. At their voices died away up the block and silence settled over the drug store the soda water man heaved a sigh and drank the chocolate, wearily, pensively as he wiped his chin. "This here trade's going to ruin my temper."—Philadelphia Press.

A Born Sport.

"Great snakes, man!" said the expert who was going over the books, "how came you to get out so many worthless accounts? You must have known fully two-thirds of them people were the poorest kind of pay."

"Yes," admitted the "business man" "that's so. But just think of the excitement I had in wondering whether I would ever get anything out of them or not."—Indianapolis Journal.

Getting Off Cheap.

"Do you think you will be acquitted?" asked a New York gentleman of a prominent man who was indicted for a serious offense.

"Well, I think so."

"Has your lawyer given you good grounds to think so?"

"No," responded the hopeful client, "but I have given him grounds to think so. I've decided him all my real estate as his fee."—Texas Siftings.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, orris, with some flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Royal Tooth Powder, the best English prepared chalk, the finest French Castile soap, and orris flavored. Your dentist will tell you these substances are perfectly harmless and accomplish all that is to be expected from a tooth powder. A full two-ounce package of this unexcelled article, same as is usually sold for 25c., under other names, we have put up for 15c., and these will be given with each one dollar purchase and upwards. People of correct ideas will appreciate this offer, but some will say, "We never use tooth powder." Those who do use it, however, can be distinguished from those who don't, as the rose can be distinguished from the dandelion. This will soon cruel to some, but duty compels us to speak plainly. "Royal" is being received everywhere, and 3 fibers compliment us with their duplicate orders.

What Was in the Box.

A naturalist, who is absentminded to a degree, recently received a box by his silver wedding. Just as the first guest arrived one of the daughters was sent to summon the father, who was all ready, and came into the parlor. The daughter noticed that her father carried in his hand a small wooden box, and as he shook hands with the nearest guest she saw him drop it. The never relished joke, but she gave a sigh of relief when she saw that the box was apparently empty. The naturalist, however, uttered a cry of dismay, and instantly went down on his hands and knees in an attempt to gather up something. "Have you spilled anything, father?" she asked. "Spilled anything!" he echoed, in evident indignation at such a question. "I have lost fifty fleas that I have just received from Egypt!" The effect of this intelligence on the family was nothing in comparison to the effect the astonishment had upon the company before the evening was over.—Argonaut.

OSCAR SMITH DROWNED

WHILE OUT IN A BOAT DURING THE RECENT STORM.

A Young Man of Sterling Qualities and Just Entering Upon a Bright and Promising Career.—His Sudden Death a Terrible Blow to his Relatives and Friends.

Oscar Bennet Smith, aged 26 years, one of the best known and universally liked young men of this city, was drowned in Penobscot Bay, Maine, during the hurricane of Tuesday, August 29, while out in one of Tuesday, August 29, while out in a boat. He had been staying at Isle au Haut with his sister Miss Gertrude and brothers Messrs. Robert and Franklin. The news of his sudden and untimely death was a shock so great to his relatives and friends that it is hard to realize, although, alas, too true.

The details of the accident are unknown yet.

A HIGHWAYMAN ON FRONT STREET.

A Man Stops a Boy and Demands His Money.

About nine o'clock last night as Edward Staats, a messenger for the Western Union Telegraph office, was on his way to deliver a message on East Front street, he was held up by a man, who caught hold of the boy's coat in front and demanded his money. Young Staats was so frightened he couldn't speak for a moment. Finally he managed to tell the man that he didn't have any. The boy when released ran to Special Policeman Hope's house on Richmond street and told him of the matter. He also came back and told Chief Grant about it. The policemen could not find any trace of the highwayman.

PERSONAL.

The Misses Coard of Ninth street are home from their Summer outing.

Mrs. Green and daughter of Park avenue have returned home from a sojourn in New York State.

Mr. George Hummer and family of 53 Warren street will start on Saturday for Flemington, N. J., to stay a few days.

The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, has returned with his family, from the Catskills.

Harry F. Curtis, press agent for Huntington's circus is in town. "Bob" Whitnah or of this city is one of the riders in this circus.

Mr. J. P. Emmons has returned from a Summer outing at Avon and is now at home once more at 41 Prospect place, North Plainfield.

Messrs. Robert Wyckoff and William Stevenson spent yesterday fishing and crabbing at Papiac. They succeeded in catching 50 crabs, but "nary a fish."

Among the Plainfield folk recently return home from outings are the Rev. Dr. Richards, pastor of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, and family, who have been Summering at Lake Placid, N. Y.

Mr. Andrew Love, Jr., accompanied by his sister and Mrs. James Love, left town this morning for a few weeks stay at Rowlands, Pike county, Pa. They will make the Buxton House their dwelling place for the present.

The funeral service of Percy, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Middlesworth, occurred last night at eight o'clock. Pastor Barnes and Hand officiated. Interment was made this morning in the family plot at Somerville.

Kept from Her Pension by an Omission in Her Marriage Certificate.

An omission in a marriage certificate is keeping a worthy woman from receiving a pension. On December 9, 1866, Henry P. Harding and Miss Mary Bootle were married in Brooklyn by "E. D. Murphy, pastor," in making out the certificate the name of the church was omitted and the woman, therefore, cannot get her pension. Mr. Harding was injured in the war and died February 17, 1878. Mrs. Harding can get her pension, it is said by those who know, if it can be ascertained in what church she was married.

Marshal Panborn has interested himself in the case and has been trying to get Mrs. Harding her pension.

The Weather.

Tingleys Old and Tingleys Young; Tingleys Big and Tingleys Small, Gathered at Mr. David Blackford's Farm, Near New Market, Yesterday.

VERY farmer for miles around Farmer David Blackford's homestead, near New Market, stopped work yesterday to attend the Tingley family reunion. It was the third annual gather-ing of the relatives and friends of this old family. The reunion was under the management of jolly old John Tingley of Dunellen whom everybody for miles around knows. He is a familiar figure on Plainfield streets, having sold garden truck here for many years. He is always ready to joke with friends and it's seldom that he meets his match for wit.

Three generations of Tingleys were there—big Tingleys, medium sized Tingleys and little Tingleys, old Tingleys, middle aged Tingleys and young Tingleys, Tingleys with snow white whiskers and Tingleys too young to think of a "wind-provoker."

ON THE WAY TO THE RE-UNION.

o'clock and kept arriving until afternoon.

In front of the old fashioned farm house, which has belonged to the Blackford family for 165 years, large tables were set under the horse-chestnut trees. These were filled with palatable dishes prepared and brought along by the Tingleyites.

The first thing done after a majority of the guests had arrived, was to eat. After all had eaten their fill, the old men gathered in groups and talked over old times, while the women folk cleared the table. The children meanwhile played under the trees.

In front of the kitchen door genial John Tingley had erected a stand where he disposed of ice cream and peanuts. He was well patronized.

The first re-union of this staid old family was managed by John Tingley, but it was devised by an estimable southern lady, Mrs. William Tappan, a sister of the Tingleys, who lives at White Plains, Georgia. She was visiting her sister, Mrs. David Blackford, and suggested that, before her return home, members of the family be invited to meet together.

The suggestion was carried into effect, and the first reunion was such a success that it was unanimously agreed to hold them every year on the last Wednesday in August. The Blackford farm was chosen as the meeting place because it had been owned by the family longer than any other property in the vicinity.

The first Tingleys to settle in New Jersey located just back of Washington Rock before the Revolutionary War. They lived there many years and founded what was known as Tingleytown. From this settlement only two Tingleys survived the two Tingleys located in this part of the country. They were Joseph and Abraham and were half brothers.

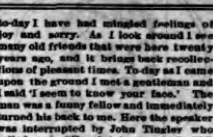
The latter is still living at South Branch but is very feeble. Joseph is dead. He had nine children, six of whom were at the re-union yesterday, with their children and children's children.

The six present were: Ebenezer, Mrs. David Blackford, George, from Summit; Charles, from Dunellen; and William, from New York. Those absent were: Mahlon, who lives in Illinois; Mrs. Mary Smith, of Missouri; and Mrs. Pheobe Tappen, of White Plains, Georgia.

The Rev. Mr. Cox, former pastor of the old Samptown Baptist church, was called upon to make a speech. He said in part:

"Indeed I didn't expect to make a speech here to-day. I came to see my old friends and eat a big dinner. A few minutes ago someone told me they wanted a little speech, and some how the donnie is always expected to do the talking. Since I have been among you to-day I have had mingled feelings of joy and sorry. As I look around I see many old friends that were here twenty years ago, and it brings back recollections of pleasant times. To-day as I came upon the ground I met a gentleman and I said 'I seem to know your face.' The man was a funny fellow and immediately turned his back to me. Here the speaker was interrupted by John Tingley who called out, "He aint here now." "All right John," said Mr. Cox and everyone knew who was the funny man the minister had met.



ALSO GOING TO THE PICNIC.

"I have had," continued Mr. Cox, "no pastorate since I left you, 20 years ago, that I have felt as at home as I did among the good old people of Samptown. Since those times two old faces are missed from among you. They are good old Deacon Joseph Tingley and wife.

They were the best friends I ever had. "I well remember when I brought among you my wife a blushing bride; how you gave us $20 for a wedding present; how you built us a comfortable parsonage, and how Uncle Jerry Blackford prayed on Friday night at prayer meeting, 'Lord, wilt thou bless the pastor just gone housekeeping.'

Mr. Blackford, how Uncle Jerry came to me and said: 'I wouldn't agitate the moving of the church if I was you.' I took his advice and said nothing about changing it to South Plainfield, where I believe it now is. Back of this spot we used to baptize people in the brook, which I was told the Railroad Company has moved. Railroad companies, it seems to me can move anything but a well. Then, too, at this very place I see married people whose parents I joined together in holy wedlock.

"Time is going to leave here twenty years ago, one of my congregation said to me, 'Bro. Cox, you ought to be whipped for leaving.' I believe I ought to have been, for I have had no better time than when I was here with you. You are such a homelike sort of people, and such a warm grasp of the hand every time one meets you is not to be scoffed at.

"These re unions are grand things, for it makes the old feel young.

"I am proud to day as one old friend, but I am also a relative of the Tingleys. Years ago there was a good man living in Plainfield who was my brother-in-law. His wife died and he married a Tingley. Now, that is where I claim a relationship."

As Mr. Cox finished, Mr. John Tingley called out from his soda water stand: "Well that's the queerest relation ever I saw."

The Rev. Mr. Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, was next introduced and made a brief speech.

R. D. Wrenn is the Tennis Champion.

The great all-comers' tennis tournament, at Newport, is over and R. D. Wrenn is the national champion for 1893. Yesterday morning he defeated F. H. Hovey three sets to one, thereby winning the new trophy cup. This becomes his permanent property after he has won it three times, though not necessarily in succession. The former champion, O. S. Campbell, retired on his laurels this year, letting his title go to Wrenn by default.

THE FIREMEN'S CONTEST

THE ACTIVITY OF THE FRIENDS OF THE LEADERS YESTERDAY.

No More Coupons to be Received after Six O'clock To-Night—The Result to be Known To-morrow.

BELOW is given the record of votes as it stands at noon to-day.

The Bremen's contest ended with yesterday's edition of THE NEWS. The final counting of the coupons will begin this evening at six o'clock and all coupons will be received after that hour. The final counting will be conducted, at our request, by a committee selected by the two leading men in the contest.

The result of the count will be given to morrow, and judging by the activity yesterday of the friends of the two leading contestants, there will be a very large vote.

"DIDN'T BREAK IT MUCH."

Mr. Reed Likens Mr. Rice to the Seventh Days.

Yesterday Col. Moore of Fanwood brought suit against Mr. Charles P. Rice for blackmailing him. It seems that at the conclusion of the trial before Justice Mosher, yesterday afternoon, the two men had an argument over the matter, and Mr. Rice, becoming excited, called the Colonel names. Judge Coddington received his decision. Mr. Craig A. Marsh appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Chas. A. Reed was counsel for the defendant.

Mr. Reed said his client had called Mr. Moore a "d— scoundrel" and that he couldn't see where there had been so much profanity about that. That breaking of the ordinance was like one of the late Phillips Brooks' sayings, in regard to the Seventh days, when Mr. Reed quoted as follows:

"Their numbers are such,
If they do break the sabbath
They don't break it much."

This Mr. Reed thought was like Mr. Rice. If he had broken the ordinance he hadn't broken it much.

IN THE CITY COURT.

Several Cases Disposed of by Judge Coddington.

Several cases were tried by Judge Coddington this morning.

In the case of Patrick Keely and Michael Welsh, for fighting, the former pleaded non vult, and the latter pleaded guilty. The Judge fined Welsh $5 but deferred sentence on Mr. Keely.

Charles Somacher, who was arrested for beating his wife, was discharged as his wife failed to appear against him.

Saturday night a colored woman named Springz was arrested on complaint of another colored woman named Robertson, who said the former had struck her. Mrs. Springz was fined $5.

Mr. Edward Marshall was tried for interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty. The Judge reserved his decision after reprimanding him.

ABOUT NEW JERSEY.

HOW SHE COMPARES WITH OTHER STATES.

In the Matter of Population to the Square Miles, New Jersey Rates with the Most Crowded States.

HERE are only eight of the forty-seven States and Territories in the United States in which the population exceeds 90 to the square mile. They are New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, and Rhode Island.

There are only four States in which the population is over 45 and under 90. These are Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, and Delaware.

In 17 States the population is between 18 to 45 to the square mile. These are Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin, and it is a circumstance to be expected that all these States border on the more populous ones.

In six States the population ranges from 6 to 18 to the square mile. These are California, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota; and Florida.

In six States and territories the population is from 2 to 6 to the square mile. These are Colorado, Utah, Oregon, Washington, North Dakota and South Dakota, and in Arizona, New Mexico, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, and Wyoming the population is less that 2 to the square mile.

THE STATE FAIR.

Special Reduction and Attractions for Labor Day.

The thirty-fifth annual exhibition of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society opens on Saturday, and on Monday everything will be in order so that the patrons will have opportunity to see all the exhibits. It being Labor Day the managers have decided to reduce the admission for Monday to twenty-five cents, and have arranged a programme of special attractions, to include new trapeze performance, Miss Valdis in her thrilling dive from an 80 foot tower, etc. In all the departments the entries indicate a great display, and the fair is likely to be one of the most successful ever held in the history of the society.

Among the leading exhibitors in the live stock department are Ewing O. Craft and J. M. Quivey & Co., Pennsylvania; Freeman & Button, Colton's, N. Y.; D. B. Couter, Hilton; George Evans, La Otta; A. M. Jones, Monsteon, Penn.; William Lindsley, Elizabeth; James Gurney, Woodbull, N. Y.; John E. Holcomb, Keeville, N. J.; J. O. Magie & Son, Elizabeth; R. Silvison, Allumutchee, Penn.; Dr. Trimmer, Hackettstown; W. C. Mills, Delaware; A. W. Mellor, Mount Herman; James Seeley, Geneva, N. Y.; E. E. Bergen, Newark; George Willikin, Youngstown, Ohio; R. E. Watson, Ohio, and George Lamond, Bound Brook.

BOWLING WILL SOON REVIVE.

Prospects of a Lively Season this Winter.

With the revival of bowling comes talk about the Journal League, in which every bowler in Union county is interested. When the season closed last Spring with the clean record made by the Y. M. C. I. A. the genuine spirit of sport prompted the other clubs to determine that this coming season last season's champions could not have such an easy thing of it. The Y. M. C. I. A. will be weakened this year by the absence of Charles Sauer, but the team will make a good fight for the trophy. The Field Club, the club to race next it is understood that the E. A. C. and Westfield A. C. will join the League and possibly Fanwood, while the Crawford Casino boys may also be of the group. The Alcyones and Arthur Kulls too, will have their teams in the race again, as well as the C. Y. M. I. of Plainfield. The Pioneers too may be represented. The Plainfield Crescents have abandoned the league but their bowling team may be in the field again. Altogether the prospects of a lively season are very brilliant.—Journal.

Base Ball Notes.

The New Jersey Athletic Club team are the recognized amateur champions and claim to be the superior of any club in the State.

Keenan will pitch for the Crescents Saturday, in the game against the New Jersey Athletic Club team, and a new man will cover second base.

The officials of the foot race between the players of the Crescent ball team next Monday, will be J. Hervey Doane, starter, and Messrs. J. J. Kenney and James Davis, judges The race will be started at 9.45 a. m.

—A meeting of the New Jersey Division of the American League of Amateur Photographers, of which Mr. Oscar S. Teale of this city is president, has been called for Friday evening, September 1, at eight o'clock sharp, in the rooms of the Newark Camera Club, 828 Broad street, Newark. This is the first meeting of the season and a large attendance is desirable, as matters of interest are to be discussed and the Fall campaign opened.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Labor Day.

It is rather a peculiar labor celebration in the United States this September. In New York city alone 100,000 workingmen are out of employment and a proportional number in the smaller cities. What a parade these men could make on Labor day! In city and village benevolence is taxed almost to its utmost to provide for the hungry. Farmers have been levied on for food and have responded generously. If Labor day celebration cause in Great Britain at the same time with ours, the situation there would not be much better, for the opening of September sees the melancholy results of a strike which has kept 800,000 miners idle a month and many others longer than that. There was no real suffering for lack of coal, and various industries were paralyzed for weeks.

Thus somewhat grimly Labor day dawns. Nevertheless let it be celebrated with music and the display everywhere of our national flag from windows, doorposts and in processions. These hard times cannot last much longer. The thousands of unemployed workingmen who will parade the streets with music and many banners of strange device will be an object lesson millionaires may well remember. It is not their fault directly that poor people are hungry, but it is their fault directly that they do not study economic science and that they care for nobody except themselves. It looks not well just now to see a many millioned man building a pleasure yacht whose gorgeousness exceeds that of Cleopatra on the Nile. Millionaires more than poor people need to remind themselves constantly of that brave motto adopted by the Knights of Labor, "An injury to one is the concern of all."

In connection with Labor day parades it is interesting to know that among the marshals for the occasion in New York city are said to be three noblemen—a duke, a baron and a count who work for their living in a riding academy there in various capacities, from that of groom to instructor. They went on strike for higher wages some time since and won; therefore are they fitting martyrs and leaders for the labor cause, although ordinarily labor would scorn to associate with them.

During labor week, too, the world's profit sharing congress holds its meeting in Chicago. Those who think they have thought out a plan for relieving poverty by enabling workingmen to share in the profits made for employers will lay the result of their study before the people. Among them is that fine, ever youthful enthusiast of 70, Dr. E. E. Hale of Boston. Eminent economists from France and from England will also speak. If they can furnish even a partial solution to the situation, they will be welcome. They are welcome anyhow, because they have tried to do so.

The Real Questions of Finance.

A celebrated modern thinker, in answer to a young man who asked for a list of books on political economy worth reading, advised him to read little and think much. Here are a few of the knotty questions lying at the base of our present financial issue, which will supply ground for the exercise of one's intellectual faculties:

Is the apparent fall of silver real, or is it due in whole or in any part to the appreciation of gold?

Would the free coinage of silver arrest the decline in its value?

Would free coinage establish silver as our single standard and drive gold out of circulation?

What would be our disadvantages in making exchanges with the civilized world if we should abandon the gold standard?

Has the fall of prices during the past 20 years been the result in any degree of the demonetization of silver?

Does dear money produce low prices?

Does cheap money produce high prices?

Is either silver or gold, or both, under any system of bimetallic coinage an infallible measure of values?

Why would a coinage ratio determined by international agreement be more desirable than a ratio established by one country alone?

The most singular situation presented itself recently in financial circles. Scarcity of gold is one of the causes that precipitated the hard times, said the experts, yet here was paper money at a premium over gold. Overabundance of silver—its consequent depreciation—was another cause of the trouble, said the experts. Yet the fact was presented in exchange markets that even silver was at a slight premium over gold. The reason in both cases was the scarcity of paper and silver. Gold could not be used for small change in business transactions.

The greatest speed on record attained by a projectile was that made by a shell from the Brown segmental wire gun at Sandy Hook recently. Twenty pounds of smokeless powder sent an elongated projectile weighing 60 pounds from the mouth of the wire gun at a velocity, when first fired, of 2,865 feet per second. If the rate did not diminish, the projectile would thus travel more than a mile in two seconds.

Some people may not be habitual falsifiers exactly, but they have unquestionably vivid imaginations.

SHERMAN FOR REPEAL.

Attacks the Law Which Bears His Name.

TELLER ARRAIGNS THE BANKERS.

He Charges Them With Bringing About the Present Financial Trouble—Voorhees Will Hold the Senate to the Silver Question—Tariff Hearings to Be Begun.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The speech of Mr. Sherman of Ohio was the feature of the day in the senate. Mr. Sherman held the close attention of the senate and of a large audience in the galleries for over two hours as he set forth in terse and vigorous language—very rapidly delivered—the reasons why he supported the bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the act of July, 1890, and why it should be passed with as little delay as possible.

Incidentally he recommended giving authority to the president or the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds bearing not over 5 per cent interest in order to procure gold with which to maintain a sufficient reserve, and he commented upon the fact that while he had proposed such a measure at the last session the opposition to it came from Democratic senators, although it was to their own administration that power was to be confided.

He also alluded to the remarkable attitude of Democratic senators in opposing the repeal of the act of July, 1890, although they had voted for it and still do denounce it, while the Republicans, by whose votes exclusively that law was passed, were now anxious to vote for its repeal.

Voorhees Will Press the Bill.

When he had concluded, the repealing bill (on which he had spoken) was laid aside, and the national bank circulation bill was taken up to allow Mr. Teller to finish the speech which he had begun Tuesday. Mr. Voorhees gave notice, however, that after the morning business on Thursday he would ask the senate to take up the repeal bill and would do so from day to day, subject of course to his desire to accommodate senators.

Mr. Stewart then suggested that there was no quorum present, and the roll was called.

Fifty senators—more than a quorum—having responded to their names, Mr. Teller proceeded with his speech.

He assumed from newspaper articles which he quoted that a scheme had been organized early in the season in New York for the purpose of creating a financial panic that would compel at an extra session the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. He would not have any one infer that the bankers had intended to create the condition of affairs that now existed, but he did believe that a few had intended to create distrust that would compel the president to call congress in extraordinary session and thus secure action—first on the repeal of the purchasing clause and then on the question.

The repeal of the purchasing clause is only a step in the direction of free coinage of silver. Repeal of the purchasing clause and free coinage would give the same relief. Both would restore confidence. Both would bring out the hoarded gold. Both would enable the country to resume specie payments. Both would relieve the money stringency. Both would relieve the business depression. Both would relieve the people from the distress they are suffering. Both would relieve the government from the embarrassment it is now under. Both would relieve the treasury from the deficiency which is threatened. Both would relieve the country from the danger of a silver basis. Both would relieve the country from the danger of a depreciated currency. Both would relieve the country from the danger of a debased currency. Teller Attacks the Bankers.

He attacked the national banks, declaring that as banks of issue they had been as great failures as they had shown themselves to be as banks of deposit and banks of exchange. He was opposed to the extension of the banking system. If the conduct of the banks recently could be taken as a criterion of what they would do in the future, he was opposed to the extension of the system for any purpose.

The control of the paper money of the country should not be lodged in any corporation or any individual. It was the prerogative of the United States to issue its own currency, and this was a good time to inform the banking system. He would not by his vote put any more power into the hands of the banks of the country. He would not enable them any longer to paralyze the business of the country as they were doing today. If he had a fair opportunity to wipe them out, he would wipe them out as quickly as he could. He was opposed to the present system. He desired to withdraw from the banks the privileges they now possessed.

At the conclusion of Mr. Teller's speech the senate adjourned.

The session of the house was devoid of interest. The proposed code of rules was debated pro and con both under the hour rule and the five minute rule, but the passage of arms of Tuesday between Speaker Crisp and ex-Speaker Reed was in no regarded not only as the opening of the fight, but as the culmination of it, and little attention was paid to the speeches made. Without disposing of the rules the house adjourned.

Risser, West Leesport; S. M. Geist, Worthville.

Tariff Hearings Begin Monday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The first applicant to the ways and means committee for a hearing was James M. Swank, manager of the American Iron and Steel association. It was suggested that notice be sent to Mr. Swank to appear next Monday, but it was finally decided to leave the date open to hear whoever might be present in case Mr. Swank was not here. The committee voted, in accordance with its determination to hold hearings, to meet at 10 a. m. Monday, Sept. 4, and daily thereafter at the same hour until the hearings shall have been concluded.

BIG STRIKE EXPECTED.

Fall River Spinners and Weavers Urged to Resist a Cutdown.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 31.—In an interview Secretary Howard of the Spinners' association said that the members of the executive committee used very strong language in discussing the proposed cutdown. They said they could not understand why such a reduction should be thought of when only a month or six weeks ago the published reports showed great earnings in the mills last quarter. They ask why it is that the Fall River manufacturers are the first to talk of reducing wages and the last to increase them.

The manufacturers could not see any good to come to the trade by curtailing the purchasing power of the people. Even if a cutdown was accepted quietly manufacturers could not or would not proceed to run their mills.

If the men feel Friday night like resisting a reduction, the committee will not oppose such action. In viewing the situation they found that half their men are idle and without wages. They are not receiving a farthing of support, and if a strike results they will go under pay from the funds of the union. The idle men will come forward and vote to strike in order to receive some benefit. The committee think a vote for a strike will be the best thing to do at Friday night's meeting.

In conclusion the committeemen say that if in the wisdom of the association it is decided to add their recommendation and strike they will give every assistance possible to carry the strike out to a successful end.

Manufacturers are not much frightened at the strike talk among their employees. They say they will have to reduce wages if they continue to run their mills, and, falling in that, they will have to shut them up. It is understood that spinners and weavers will be asked to assist in conducting the resistance to the reduction.

The executive committee of the weavers decided at its meeting Tuesday night, after much talk, to have a meeting this week. Other operatives throughout the city would be unjustly dealt with by the manufacturers in case the reduction of 10 or 12½ per cent should be allowed to go into effect. For this reason, as a committee, a vote to strike was unanimously passed. A special meeting will be called for next Tuesday night to take action.

New Bedford Will Assist.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 31.—The textile operatives of this city show a disposition to resist the cutdown of 10 per cent in wages which the manufacturers have notified them will go into effect Sept. 10, but the present time it is impossible to tell whether New Bedford or Fall River will be chosen by the spinners for their battleground, but it seems likely that the resistance will be made in the latter city, and that the operatives in this city will remain at work and contribute toward the support of their idle brethren. It is possible that a strike may occur in both cities simultaneously.

The Old Guard Burned Out.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The building on the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street, made famous because it has been for many years the home of the Old Guard, was nearly gutted by fire. The total loss is estimated at $87,000. So dense was the smoke from the blaze that it was carried eastward in volumes, and made as if it found its way into the Star theater at Broadway and Eighteenth street. The audience became alarmed, and a panic was narrowly averted.

VICTIMS OF THE STORM

Seventy Dead Bodies Recovered at Port Royal, S. C.

A SHIP WRECKED, BUT ALL SAVED

The City of Savannah Lost and Her Passengers Rescued by Her Sister Ship—Spectacular Recovering From the Night-mare—The Kearsarge Not Lost.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 31.—News from the storm swept region of Port Royal and Beaufort is still very meager. There is no telegraphic communication with these places, the only news obtainable being by mail. News received by The Chronicle brings the startling intelligence that 70 dead bodies were taken from the Coosaw river by searching parties.

Not one half of the horrors of the storm has yet been told, as messengers from surrounding sections are arriving hourly, bringing reports of deeper, more terrible havoc caused by Sunday night's gale. The result of the work of relief puts the number of missing at over 100, but owing to the poor means of communication the correct lists of the dead cannot be obtained.

In several places along the Coosaw river were found eight or ten bodies lying on the shore together. Graves are being hastily dug near the places of discovery of the bodies, and without ceremony the storm victims were placed beneath the earth. Many of the dead bodies were so far advanced in decomposition that the sight was sickening and revolting.

Suffering in some localities among the negroes is reported as being distressing; in some cases there being only one or two left out of whole families of 10 or 15. To the extent of their ability the people of Beaufort and Port Royal are rendering all the assistance in their power to stricken families who lost all in the flood. Provisions and clothing which are being liberally distributed so those most needy.

No news of a definite character has been received from St. Helena and other surrounding islands, but it is feared that the most part are thickly populated, and it is feared the loss of life has been very great.

Wreck of the Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 31.—The steamship City of Birmingham, which sailed from New York on Saturday last and for whose safety fears were also expressed, arrived here safely. As soon as she was sighted a crowd gathered on the piers, and when the vessel swung up to her dock there was a cheer for Captain Charles S. Berg, who was on the bridge.

The City of Birmingham had on board the passengers and crew of the Savannah. The scene on the dock when the gangplank had been put ashore and the passengers were permitted to land was one of great joy. Both vessels had been overdue for many hours, and anxious friends had waited all through the day.

The story of the wreck of the Savannah and the rescue of the score of passengers and the crew is replete with thrilling incidents. The Savannah was caught in the storm and driven on Frenchtown Island.

The City of Birmingham hove in sight in the nick of time. The signals of distress were promptly answered, and in a storm tossed sea the boats were lowered and sent to the struggling sister ship. The passengers were taken off first. The women believed hopeless when the last boatload had been hoisted on board the Birmingham she steamed away. The Savannah appeared to be breaking up when last seen. She may prove to be a total loss.

Charles on Its Ruins.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 31.—This city has started to repair the damage done by the cyclone. The city is almost in ruins, and the docks are piled with wreckage. Many churches are unroofed, and almost every residence in the city is more or less injured. A rough estimate places the losses at something over $1,000,000. There are no lights in the city, both gas and electricity having given out, and there has been no railroad communication south of us. The total loss of life is six people.

Kearsarge and Nantucket Safe.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Apprehension for the safety of the United States steamship Kearsarge and the old monitor Nantucket was removed by the receipt of a telegram from Commander Crowninshield, commanding the Kearsarge, stating that both vessels had arrived at Fortress Monroe, Va.

CHICAGO'S IDLE MASSES.

No More Meetings on the Lake Front Will Be Allowed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—A meeting under the auspices of several labor organizations was held on the Lake front. The object was to demonstrate how vast a number of idle men are in the city and to induce the authorities to push work on the drainage canal, the parks and other local works. The meeting, which had been extensively advertised, was held by permission of Mayor Harrison and was orderly throughout. Fifteen thousand persons were in attendance. Addresses were made by Henry George, Dr. McGlynn, Bishop Fallows and Samuel Gompers.

Mayor Harrison after the meeting instructed Chief of Police Brennan to allow no more speechmaking on the lake front, and if the men who have been congregating there continue to make trouble to clear the place and keep it clear.

Chief Brennan intends to have enough policemen in the park before the crowd begins to gather to enforce the order he received from the mayor.

To the finance committee appointed by the mayor to raise funds for the needy unemployed were added all the presidents of the railroad companies, all the brewers and all the bankers. The committee now numbers nearly 500 persons. Action was taken at the meeting of the drainage board by which from 1,200 to 1,500 laborers can be put to work on the drainage canal within the next two weeks. It is proposed that the men to be employed upon the works shall be citizens of Chicago and heads of families.

"SOONERS" IN HIDING.

They Live Underground on Town Sites in the Cherokee Strip.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Aug. 31.—There is likely to be trouble over the Cherokee allotments after the strip opens. When the allotments were made, the Cherokees picked them out of protected county seats. The location of county seats was then changed by the department to circumvent them.

The "sooner" situation is very serious. A cattleman who rode through the strip from Oklahoma says there are thousands of "sooners" along the eastern border. He saw their hiding places out on the open prairie. They have gopher holes on many of the town sites.

These are holes covered with boards, on which sods are nailed, and furnished with breathing holes. The woods are full of them. The entire cavalry would not be able to discover them.

There is a body of men here who have exhausted their right to enter and claim land and who openly declare they will enter the strip, locate and demand relinquishment money from the contending settlers. The "sooner" question is more serious than at the Oklahoma opening, and as the honest settlers are determined to have their right bloodshed is sure to ensue.

Married Her Own Brother.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 31.—Violet Buckingham, a young Irish woman, came to Canada some years ago, locating in London. STATEMENT OF DR. BRYANT TODAY

A Friend of Mr. Cleveland Says That Two Unsound Teeth Were the Basis of the Story—Dr. Hasbrouck Retracts a Little. Contradictory Reports.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—A part of a three column article in The World today concerning President Cleveland's health consists of this letter:

The following was sent yesterday by L. Clark Davis of The Public Ledger of Philadelphia from Marion, Mass., to George W. Childs, proprietor of The Ledger, in Philadelphia:

"Holland's story of the president's ill health has a real basis of a toothache. If it has any other, Mr. Cleveland's friends do not know it.

"I have seen the president at frequent intervals since he first came to Buzzards Bay this summer, passing hours and days in his house and in the boat fishing with him. I passed all of last Monday with him fishing, and I have never seen him in better health, never stronger physically or mentally, and I consider him in both respects the healthiest man I ever knew.

"Any statements to the effect that the president is a very sick man are absolutely without any basis of truth. He is, in fact, a particularly well man, eating, sleeping, working and thinking and taking recreation in a wholesome, vigorous fashion.

"That he was a tired man when he came to Buzzards Bay is true. That he needed rest from the great physical and mental strain that was put on him after the 4th of March is also true, but that he is suffering from any serious or malignant disease is not true. To his present strength, health, vigor, good spirits and cheerfulness I can certify of my own personal knowledge. The president would have left Gray Gables on Tuesday for Washington in Mr. Benedict's yacht had he not been storm stayed.

"It is quite safe to say that all the statements made about his ill health at this time are calculated and are probably intended to add to the public distress and are either pure inventions of enemies or Mills, unconsidered gush. The president is in excellent health."

Dr. Jones Denies Positively.

The same paper also prints a dispatch from Greenwich, Conn., containing an interview with Dr. Jones of that place, whom Holland, or E. Jay Edwards, gave as his authority for the story about the operation. In the interview Dr. Jones is quoted as saying:

"I never met Mr. Cleveland professionally, nor was I called in consultation, nor was any advice asked for in any way, and I have not met Mr. Cleveland more than two or three times. Then I barely exchanged a few words with him. I was not on the steam yacht Oneida at the time of the operation and I never heard a word from the physicians who were there, nor did I ever speak to Dr. Bendict."

The Sun prints the following on the subject: Dr. Ferdinand Hasbrouck, who assisted Dr. Bryant and Dr. Keen in the operation performed on the steam yacht on President Cleveland, had a talk yesterday morning with Dr. Erdmann of 141 West Thirty-fourth street, who is Dr. Bryant's assistant.

By Dr. Erdmann's advice Dr. Hasbrouck announced that he would make no further statements regarding the operation until Dr. Bryant had returned to the city or made known his wishes.

Dr. Hasbrouck said last evening that the published account of the operation on Mr. Cleveland had been exaggerated.

Afraid He Has Talked Too Much.

"I am afraid I have been talking too much," he added with a smile. "I do not of course wish to place myself in a false position. The right to decide whether the details of the operation shall be published belongs naturally to Dr. Bryant, who was the physician in charge. The operation took place on the yacht Oneida on the day after leaving this city. My part of the work was to administer the gas and extract the teeth.

"It has been reported that I remained on the yacht and spent several days at Gray Gables. This is not so, as I did not accompany the party as far as Buzzards Bay."

"Is it true that you refused to answer the question whether the operation included the removal of a cancerous growth?"

"Yes," replied Dr. Hasbrouck. "I have neither affirmed nor denied that statement."

Dr. Hasbrouck refused to discuss the matter further. He referred the reporter to Dr. Erdmann and said that it was probable that a statement would be made by him this morning. Dr. Erdmann said that he had received a letter from Gray Gables saying that Dr. Bryant would arrive in this city at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council have fixed the Thirty-first day of August, A. D., 1893, at eight o'clock p. m., and the Common Council Chamber, No. 109 Park avenue, in the City of Plainfield, as the time and place for the Freeholders of McDonald, William M. Stoddard and Howard C. Mulford, to be appointed and named by the Common Council pursuant to the ordinance entitled, "An ordinance to widen Madison avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the northeasterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey," approved June 5, 1893, to meet. The street proposed to be widened and laid out is described as follows: Beginning at a point in the northeasterly line of West Front street to the northeasterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, as the same is now laid out, and to be used for the purpose of widening Madison avenue so that the same shall be of the uniform width of seventy-five feet on each side of the center line thereof, which centre line is described in said ordinance, and shown on a map on file in the office of the City Clerk entitled, "Assessment map for the widening of Madison avenue from West Front street to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, City of Plainfield," dated May 15, 1893, and made by F. A. Dunham, civil engineer."

The lands and real estate intended to be taken for said purposes are all that come within twenty-five feet of either side of said centre line between the northeasterly line of West Front street, and the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, as shown by said map and said ordinance, to which reference is hereby made for further description.

By order of the Common Council.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE AMERICAN HOME LOSING ITS HOLD UPON THE GIRLS!

Books to Read Aloud to Children—Mrs. Youngbusband's Marketing—Making a Dainty Looking Room—Cleanliness Is Very Important—Help For Tired Brains.

That an eccentric young lady should occasionally leave her father's comfortable home and take to the woods need not cause surprise or awaken deep reflections. But when we get accounts, as we have been getting them lately from widely separated portions of the country, of young ladies who are impelled by some inscrutable impulse to abandon the protection and comforts of respectable homes with no other apparent motive than an irrepressible desire for freedom one begins to wonder if, after all, these abandoned homes are what they ought to be to young women.

It seems hardly credible that a girl nurtured in love and tenderness, whose sense of duty has been kept equal to her sense of freedom and whose affections are grounded in wholesome objects, will abandon all that is best and most enduring in her life and character at the bidding of a vagrant impulse.

It is just possible that some of our girls, whose parents are irreproachable, have had more liberty than is good for them. It is conceivable that there are reputable homes which are little better than prisons; that young ladies educated out of their corsets at Vassar return home to find that a moral imprisonment is waiting for them; that a course of Rider Haggard and Zola and Bourget at school is not compatible with a course of "Timothy Titcomb" and Boyesen and watered milk at home. It is quite comprehensible that girls who have tasted of the forbidden fruit of literature will be dissatisfied with the dried apples and prunes of the paternal establishment.

It is not unwarrantable to assume further, when an intelligent young lady suddenly abandons her home without obvious cause, that there is either something wrong in the young lady or something wrong in the home. Certainly that home ought to hold her in sacred bonds until such time as she can be handed over either to a home of her own or to some worthy ambition that will engage all her mature impulses. It is too many cases it does not appear to be able to do so. It has either allowed the daughter to develop a mental profligacy and an emotional irresponsibility that are fatal to her, or it has crushed with narrowness and bigotry the worthy activities that have been born into a new sphere of possible usefulness.

It would be very interesting to inquire how far the restlessness and aimless yearning of our times have infected those sacred centers where society thought it was preserving its vestals. It is perhaps too large an inquiry for a newspaper. But the subject presents itself upon every occasion whether he will or not, through the irrevocable news columns. Even the casual reader has to stop and look himself if the American home is losing its grip on the American girl.—New York World.

Books to Read Aloud to Children.

Among the very best books to be read aloud to boys from 10 to 20 years old, besides the works of Dickens and Scott, Thackeray, out Shakespeare, are "Lorna Doone," "Westward Ho!" the two Tom Brown books, "Ramona," Mrs. Jane G. Austen's "Standish of Standish," Mr. E. A. Dix's "Midsummer Drive Through the Pyrenees," "Rodder Grange," "Piccola," "Heidi," Mrs. Burnett's stories for young people, "Little Women," "Little Men" and "An Old Fashioned Girl," Mr. Mabie's "Norse Stories," the "Zigzag Journeys," the "Bodley Books," "Family Flights," "In His Name" and other of Dr. Hale's books, Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," Hawthorne's "Wonder Book" and "Tanglewood Tales," the Lewis Carroll stories, Sidney Lanier's "Professor" and "King Arthur," Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller's and other books about birds and animals, Du Chaillu's books, Stanley's, and always the dear old Rollo and Franconia stories, which will never lose their charm.

Then there are Irving's tales and histories, Mr. Charles Dudley Warner's books, "Bimbi" and "The Prince Rose," Mr. Burroughs' books, Mrs. Gaskell's "Life of Charlotte Bronte," "The Children's Crusade," Schultz's "Case," "The Exiles of Siberia," Mrs. J. H. Ewing's stories, "Hans Brinker" and others by the same authors or equally good ones. Do not neglect the poets in your selections. There are few long poems which will keep the interest of the young night after night, but Scott's ringing verses always please them.

Mrs. Youngbusband's Marketing.

"How much are your red raspberries a quart?"

It was a young wife who made the inquiry at one of the stores where fruit is sold in great variety and abundance. She had just begun to master the intricacies and vexations of housekeeping, having recently returned from her wedding tour, and was therefore doing her marketing in person. She had heard what was something of the way merchants do marketing—over the telephone, without regard to price, quality and often quantity—and she had wisely concluded that if Harry made Harry's salary furnish the pantry, the cabbin, the clothespress and the roof for their heads, she had better do the buying, and it was on one of these unpublished days she asked the fruit dealer how much the red raspberries were a quart.

"Fourteen cents, and they are very fine ones," he replied briskly. "How many will you have?"

"I'll take a quart, please, and you may pour them right into my basket," she replied as she took the wrapper from a little parcel she held in her hand and which proved to be a new quart cup.

The dealer said never a word as he put the contents of the two so called quart baskets, with the exception of a little handful, into the quart cup and rang up 14 cents on the cash register. But after the wise little woman left the store the sign on the red raspberries was changed to read "14 cents a box."—Utica Observer.

Making a Dainty Looking Room.

To be dainty does not mean to be extravagant. Even in the humblest of the neatest and freshest homes are furnished at a minimum of cost that would astonish any one who was not in the secret. In this era of white quilts and white furniture any girl may have a charming bedroom if she chooses to take a little trouble. In the first place, collect together all the furniture of your room in the attic, no matter how motley the array. It will all become harmonious with several coats of white paint. Have you ever tried painting furniture? It is great fun. Put on some old dress that is beyond all harm and place each article to be painted on some newspapers to protect the floor, as the paint even in the hands of a neophyte is apt to spatter and drip in the most unexpected fashion.

Get stiff white lead and dilute only with turpentine for the first coat, putting it on as thick as possible. After this is dry put on the second coat with white "interior finish" paint, which comes already mixed in pound cans. For your third and last coat use either the same paint, or, what is better, but a little more costly, white enamel. Nothing is prettier than white furniture for the bedroom of a young girl, and it is quite delightful to see hopeless looking old desks, chairs and tables turn out most desirable articles under the magic touch of the brush. Charming muslins, and other thin materials may be had for 15 cents the yard.—New York Tribune.

Cleanliness Is Very Important.

"There is much talk nowadays," said a trained nurse recently, "about surgical cleanliness, but it seems to be entirely confined to the hospitals. The average woman, even the average intelligent woman, does not appear to realize that she can use some of the light in her own home, and particularly in the sickroom of her home if that apartment comes into existence.

"I have had occasion recently a surgical case where an open wound was under treatment. Temporarily needing a softening ointment, I asked for some and had brought to me a small covered box of vaseline, thick with dust, which I was told would not do any harm, as it was merely 'air dust.' The speaker meant, I suppose, by this, that it was the dust that had gathered by exposure to the air rather than under the active operation of sweeping, but that it was fairly criminal in any case to use a remedial agent she had not the slightest idea.

"It is this thoughtless ignorance that often makes the household medicine chest a direct evil, and I have thought lately that a few lessons upon family surgery, particularly that branch of it which teaches absolute and chemical cleanliness, would not be a bad thing to include in the curriculum of girls' colleges and schools."—New York Times.

Help For Tired Brains.

Worried housekeepers, with more to do than you have time or strength, did you ever try using a helpful little list and letting that slip of paper save a lot of wear and tear on your overworked brain and relieving it from so many "I must thats" you would otherwise have failed in if memory alone were to be depended upon?

You know how often you get up in the morning and think, "I must do so and so today," but when you lie down again at night you realize that in the pressure of other duties that one necessary thing to be done has been forgotten. Suppose now you have a little slate, a tablet or a bit of paper hanging in some convenient place where you can jot down as they occur to you the little things that are so necessary to be done, yet which, so easily slip out of your memory. Then at a leisure to be stopped, the roofer should be notified of the small leak before another rain comes on, that spot to be cleaned off of husband's vest, and a dozen and more trifles if noted on the list will be accomplished, and you will not be one whit more tired when they are done, and the sense of pleasure at having attended to the right thing at the right time will be a continual source of gratification.—Philadelphia Times.

A Message to Girls.

Mr. Albert Dawson has been interviewing Mrs. Josephine Butler for The Young Woman. He asked her for a message for the girls of Great Britain, and this is its: "The one thing I feel is the lack of dignity, to foll a their example in order to avoid many of the ills that are the direct results of indiscretions or irregular eating.—St. Louis Republic.

The Paper Wedding.

The paper wedding, which may be observed on the second anniversary of one's marriage, can now be made a very charming fete. At one not long ago the bride and guests wore dresses and flowers of paper. The house was decorated with marvelous paper flowers and the plates and napkins were of paper. The guests were requested to come without gifts, but if they chose or otherwise so many beautiful things can be fashioned out of a little crape paper that it is no grievous tax on one's friends. Lamp shades, articles for the dressing table and table spreads are pretty gifts. Choice photographs, etchings, books and a subscription for a magazine would give a more enduring pleasure at no very great outlay.—Exchange.

When to Discard Low Cut Gowns.

The woman who has passed middle age should appreciate the fact that her day for low necked gowns has gone by. Possibly she will tell you with pride that she was always noted for the plumpness and beauty of her neck and arms. Undoubtedly that was true, when you were 19 or 20 years ago). Now, even if she has gained in adipose tissue, the flesh seems to have shrunk away from under the skin, leaving this to lie in loose folds that are only seen by the unpitying eye of constitution. Men are never so occupied that they cannot take the requisite time for fine-tooth, and they eat sensibly when they do eat, and like their middle meal. No frozen delicacies or indigestible leftovers for them. Their meal is such that it nourishes and sustains them during the trying duties of the day, and it believes a woman

EDSALL'S.

In order to reduce stock before moving to the new Babcock building we will offer at greatly reduced prices, about 250 articles of

FOOTWEAR.

All good reliable goods, on which we give the same guarantee as if you paid full value for them. Most of these goods we have marked down to the cost of manufacture or below. This is the first opportunity we ever offered in Plainfield to buy good reliable goods at such prices, but we take this method of reducing stock, as we prefer the cash to moving goods.

A FEW HONEST SUGGESTIONS!

WHICH SHOULD BE APPRECIATED.

All tooth powders practically contain the same ingredients, namely: chalk, Castile soap, etc., with various flavoring. We use in the manufacture of Royal Tooth Powder the best English prepared chalk, the finest English Castile soap, delicately flavored. Your dentist will tell you these substances are perfectly harmless and accomplish all that is to be claimed for them from a tooth powder. A full pound of this unequaled article, (same as is usually sold for 25c. under other names, but which we retail for ten cents) will be given with each one dollar purchase and upwards. People of correct ideas will appreciate this offer, but some will say, "We never use tooth powder." Those who do use it, however, can be distinguished from it one who don't, as the rose can be distinguished from the dandelion. This will seem cruel to some, but duty compels us to speak plainly. The "Royal" is being received everywhere, and jobbers compelled us with their duplicate orders.

A TRIAL OF ROYAL TOOTH POWDER WILL DELIGHT YOU!

Mary Understood.

"Mary," said her mistress, "I understand you had two visitors last night."

"Yes, mum," replied Mary, with an upward inflection and a smile.

"Was either of them the young man who called last week, Mary?"

"Oh, no, mum."

"Or the one that came last Sunday?"

"No, mum—nor him neither."

"Well, who was it, Mary?"

"Jes' two boys from home, mum—Tommy Kennedy an Willie Murphy."

"It seems to me you have a great many beaux, Mary?" severely.

"Sure, thim's not me beaux at all, mum," replied Mary with docility.

"And what do you call them, then, Mary?"

"Jes' boys, mum. Sure, if they was beaux, mum, would it be havin them come two at a time, mum?"

At this evidence of Mary's sagacity, her mistress retired from the field.—Eleanor Kirk's Idea.

How Nicefello Got Even.

Irate Father—I found my best coat hanging on the fence, with the tail torn all to pieces.

Daughter (quietly)—You shouldn't have left it in the hall.

"Why shouldn't I?"

"Most likely Mr. Nicefello put it on over his other last night. It was a little cool, and—er—I presume you forgot to tie up the dog."—New York Weekly.
